Esther and to Harbocheus the Jewe: Behold, I have given Esther the house of Haman, who they have hanged upon a tree, because he layed hand upon the Jewes. Write ye also for the Jewes, as it is written in the kynges name, and seale it with the kynges rynge, (for the wytynges that were written in the kynges name, and sealed with the kynges rynge, durst not be disannulled.) Then were the kynges scribes called at the same tyme, euen in the thirtieth moneth, that is the moneth of Siuan, on the xxiij. daye.

D And it was wytten (accordinge to all as Harbocheus commaunded) vnto the Jewes and to the princes, to the deputies and captaynes in the lades which are from India vnto Ethiopia namely on hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto every one accordinge to the wytynges therof, and to every people after theyr speache, and the Jewes accordinge to theyr wytynges and language.

And he wrote in the kynges Thasuerus name and seale it with the kynges rynge. And by postes that rode vpon horses, and swifte pounge mules sent he the wytynges wherein the kyng graunted the Jewes (in what cyties soeuer they were) to gather them selues together, & to stand for theyr lyfe, and for to roote oute, to slaye and to destroye al the power of the people and lande that wold trouble them with chylzen and women, and to spore theyr good vpon one daye in all the landes of kyng Thasuerus, namely, vpon the thirtieth daye of the twelvethe moneth, wherof is the moneth of Adar.

E The summe of the wytyng was, how there shoulde be a commaundment given in all landes, and published amonge all people, and that the Jewes shoulde be readye agaynst that daye, and to auenge them selues on theyr enemyes. And so the postes that rode vpon the swifte horses and mules made haste with all speede, to execute the kynges woorde: and the commaundment was obeyed in Susa the chiefe cytie.

F And Harbocheus went oute (from the palace) from the kyng in roiall apparell of pelowe and whete, and with a great crowne of golde, beinge straped with a garment of sylke and purple, and the cytie of Susa reioysed and was glad, and vnto the Jewes there was come (a newe) lyght and gladnesse, ioye and woxypp. In all landes and cyties, into what place soeuer the kynges woorde and commaundment reached, there was ioye and myght, prosperite and good dayes amonge the Jewes: in somuche that many of the people of the lande became of the Jewes belefe, and the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

¶ The ix. Chapter.

¶ At the commaundment of the kyng, the Jewes put theyr enemyes to death. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kept a feast daye in remembrance of theyr deliuerance.

A the twelvethe moneth, that is the moneth of Adar, vpon the thirtieth daye of the same, when the kynges woorde and commaundment shoulde be done, euen vpon the same daye that the enemyes shoulde have destroyed the Jewes, to haue oppressed them, it turned contrary wyse, euen that the Jewes shoulde subdue theyr enemyes. For they gathered the Jewes together in theyr cyties within all the landes of kyng Thasuerus, to lay hand on suche as wold do them euill, and no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come vnto all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and princes and deputies & officers of the kyng, promoted the Jewes, for the feare of Harbocheus came vpon them. For Harbocheus was great in the kynges house, and the report of him was noised in all landes, how he increased and grew.

Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemyes with a soyle slaughter, and slue and destroyed and dyd after theyr wyll vnto suche as were theyr aduersaryes. And at Susa the chiefe cytie slue the Jewes, and destroyed fyue hundred men, and slue Pharandatha, Dalpho, Asphatha, Pharacha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharnastha, Arisai, Tadi and Gaizatha the ten sonnes of Haman, the sonnes of Haman the enemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the kyng certified of the nombre of thole that were slayne in the cytie of Susa. And the kyng sayd vnto quene Esther. The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundred men in the cytie of Susa, and the ten sonnes of Haman, what haue they done (thyngelste thou) in othere landes of the kyng? And what is thy petition, that it maye be given the? What requestest thou moze to be done? Esther answered: If it please the kyng, let hym suffice the Jewes to increase also to do accordinge vnto this dayes commaundment, that they maye hange Haman ten sonnes vpon tree. And the kyng charged to do so, and the commaundment was deuysed at Susa, and they hanged Haman ten sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Susa gathered them selues together, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth of Adar, and slue the hundred men at Susa, but on theyr goodes they layed no handes: As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges lades, they came together, and stode for theyr lyues, that they myght haue rest fro theyr enemyes: and slue of theyr enemyes fyue & seuen thousande: howbeit, they layed no handes on theyr goodes. This they dyd on the thirtieth daye of the moneth of Adar, and on the fourteenth daye of the same moneth rested they: which day they helde with feastyng and gladnesse. But the Jewes that were at Susa came together, both on the thirtieth daye, and on the fourteenth, and on the fiftieth daye of the same they rested, and helde that day with feastyng and gladnesse. And therefore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and vnto walled townes, helde the fourteenth daye of the moneth of Adar, with gladnesse and feastyng, and kept holy daye, and euerie one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Harbocheus wrote these actes, & sente the wytynges vnto al the Jewes that were in all the landes of kyng Thasuerus, both ny and far, that they shoulde make a lawe amonge them selues, and holde the fourteenth, and fiftieth daye of daye of the moneth Ihar, as the dayes wherein the Jewes came to rest from theyr enemies, and as a moneth wherein they payne was turned to ioye, and they ioyed into an holpe daye, and that in those dayes they shoulde make feastes, and gladnesse, and one to sende gyften vnto an other, and to distribute vnto the poore.

E And the Jewes were content with it that they had begonne to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Haman the sone of Hamath the Jewes enemy, had dryed agaynst the Jewes, how he myght destroy the, and caused to cast whur (that is a lot) for to put them in fear, & to bypne them to nought, and how Esther went and wrote to the kynge, that sheweth letters his wycked deuyse (whiche he imagined agaynst the Jewes) might be turned vpon his owne heed, and how he and his sonnes were hanged on tree. For the whiche cause they called this daye whurim, bycause of the name of the lot, and bycause of all the woordes of this wyspyng: and what they them selues had done, and what had happned vnto them.

E And the Jewes sette it vp, and toke it vpon them and theyr seide, and vpon all suche as sopened them selues vnto them, that they wolde not misse, but obserue those two dayes yere, accordinge as they were wyspyten and appoynted: how that these dayes are not to be forgottē, but to be kept of chyldren chyldren amonge all kynredes in all landes and ctyens. They are the dayes of whurim, which are not to be ouerspyt amonge the Jewes, and the memorie of them ought not to perishe from theyr seide.

And Quene Esther the daughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with all auctoritie (to confirme the seconde wyspyng of whurim) and sent the letters vnto al the Jewes in the hundred and seuen and twenty landes of the empyre of Abasuerus, with frendly & sayedful woordes, to confirme these dayes of whurim in theyr tyme appoynted, accordinge as Mardocheus the Jewe and Esther the Quene hadde appoynted them. And they bounde theyr soules and theyr seed to fastyng and prayer. And Esther stablyshed the woordes of these letters, as it is wyspyten in the booke.

E And the kynge Abasuerus layd tribute vpon the lande, and vpon the ples of the see. And all that he dyd by his power and auctoritie, and the great wysdome of Mardocheus, whiche the kynge gaue hym, be they not wyspyten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Media and Persia: For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde next vnto kynge Abasuerus, & great amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of his brethren, as one that seketh the welth of his people, and speaketh the best for all his seide.

E The ende of the booke of Esther.

The booke of Job.

The first Chapter.

E Job is placed of God by the will of his goodnes and clemency.

In the lande of * thus there was a man whose name was Job: and the same was a perfect and iust man, suche one as feared God, and eschewed euill. And he hadde seuen sonnes, and thre daughters. * his substance also was seuen. Q. There, and thre. A. camels, syue. C. yoke of oxen and syue hundred she asses, and a verpe gerate household, so that he was one of the moost principall men amonge all men of the East countrie. And his sonnes went and made bankettes: one daye in one house, an other daye in an other, and sent for theyr systers to eate and drynke wth them. And it fortuned, that when they had passed ouer the tyme of theyr bankettyng rounde about, Job sent for them, and sanctified them, and gat vp early, & offered for euery one a burnt-offryng: For Job sayde: lest peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence: and haue ben vnthankfull to God in theyr deetes.

E Thus had Job euery daye: And vpon a daye * when the chyldren of God came and stode before the Lorde, it fortuned that Satan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: From whence comest thou? Satan answered the Lorde and sayd: * I haue gone about the lande, and walked thowowt it.

And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: Hast thou not consyded my seruant Job, how that there is none lyke hym in the lande: a perfect and a iust man: suche a one as feareth God, and escheweth euill. Satan answered, & sayd vnto the Lorde. Woth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not perserued hym & his house, & all that he hath on euery syde? Thou hast blessed the woiknes of his handes, & his possession is increased in the land. But lape thine hande now vpon hym, & he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: lo, al that he hath, be in thy power: onely vpon hym selfe, se that thou lay not thy hand. And Satan went forth from the presence of the Lorde.

And vpon a certayne daye, it fortuned that his sonnes and daughters were eating & drynkyng wyne in theyr eldest brothers house, and there there came a messenger vnto Job, & sayd: whyle the oxen were a plowynge, and the asses goynge in the pasture besyde them, the Sabeans came violently, & toke them away: yea they haue slayne thy seruantes with the edge of the swerde: and I onely ranne my waye to tell the.

Whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayd: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, and hath burnt vp all thy shepe and seruantes, and consumed them: and I onely ran awaye, to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayd: The Caldees made three armies, and fell in vpon the camels, and haue carped them away: yea & slayne thy seruantes with the swerde: and I onely am gotten awaye to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayd: Thy sonnes and thy daughters were eatynge and dyncynge wyne in thys eldest brothers house, & beholde, there came a myghty great wynde out of the south, & smote the foure corners of the house which fell vpon thy chyldren, and they are deed: and I am gotten awaye alone to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, and rent his clothes, and shaued his heed, fell downe vpon the grounde, worshyped, and sayde: * Rashed came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I tourne thither agayne. The Loyde gaue, and the Loyd hath taken awaye, as it hath pleased the Loyde, so it is come to passe: blessed be the name of the Loyde, * In all these thynges dyd Job not offende, nor murmured foolishly agaynst God.

The ii. Chapter.

Job is plagued with sore byles, and afterwarde is moued of his wyfe. His frendes visite hym, and haue compassion on hym.

And the chyldren of God came and stode before the Loyde, and Satan came also amonge them, and stode before the Loyde. And the Loyde sayd vnto Satan: From whence comest thou? Satan answered the Loyde, and sayd: I haue gone about the lande, and walked thowder it.

And the Loyde sayde vnto Satan: hast thou not conspyed my seruant Job: for there is none lyke hym in the lande. For he is a perfecte & iust man: suche a one as feareth God, and eschuerth euyl, and cōfirmeth hym in his godlynesse. And thou mouedst me agaynst him, that I wuld punyssh hym for nought. And Satan answered the Loyde, and sayd: Whyne for sayne: yea a ma wyl gyue all that euer he hath for his lyfe. But laye thyne hande now vpon hym, and touche ones his bone and flesch, and he shall curse thet to thy face. And the Loyde sayde vnto Satan: lo, there hast thou him in thy power, but spare his lyfe.

B So went Satan forth from the presence of the Loyd, and smote Job with maruailous soze byles, from the sole of his foote vnto his crowne: so he laye vpon the grounde, in the ashen: and scraped the spith of his sozes with a postharde.

Then sayd his wyfe vnto hym: * Woeist thou cōtinue yet in thy perfectnesse? curse God & dye. But Job sayd vnto her: thou speakest lyke a foolish woman. Shall we receyue prosperitie at the hande of God, and not receyue aduersitie? In all these thynges dyd not Job syn w his lyppe.

Nowe when Jobs frendes hearde of all the trouble that happened vnto him, there cam thre of them, euery one from his owne place, namely Eliphaz the Themanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Jophad the Ramathite.

And they were agreed togyther to come to see the thyng compassyon vpon hym, and to comfort him. So when they lyft vpon they eyes a far of, they knewe hym not.

Then they cryed and wept, and curre out of them rent his clothes, and synkied dust vpon theyr heedes in the ashe. They sat them downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes, and seuen nyghtes. Apyther was there any of them that spake one worde vnto hym: for they sawe, that his payne was very great.

The iii. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherein he declareth that this present lyfe is myserable, and that the death of the righteous is sayous and iustitiable.

After this opened Job his mouth, and cursed his daye. And Job answered, and sayd: lost be that daye, wherein I was bozne: and I nyghte in the whych it was sayd: there is a man chyldre conceived. The same daye he turned to darknesse, and not regarded of God from aboue: neither let him shyne vpon it with light, but let it be stayned with darknesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the bymme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be lapped in with sorrow on the daye time. Let the darke storme overcome that nyght, and let it not be ioynd vnto the dayes of the yere, nor counted in the monethes.

Desolate be that nyght, and withoute gladnesse, let them that curse the daye, and that be redy to prayle vpon mournynge, gyue it also theyr curse. Let the starres of that nyght be bymme, thowder darknesse of it. Let it loke for lyghte, but let it se none: neyther the epyngne vpon of the saye moynynge, because it shal not vpon of wombe that bare me. For then wuld the sozowes haue bene byd from myne eyes.

Alas * why dyed I not in the byrth? why dyd not I perishe as soone as I came out of my mothers wombe? Why let they me vpon they knees? why gaue they me souke wyth they breasts? Then wuld I now haue spen styll, I wuld haue slept, and ben at rest, lyke as the knynges and lordes of the earth, whych haue buylded the selues special places: Or as princes shal haue had great substance of gold & their houses ful of siluer. Or why was I not byd, as a thyng bozne out of tyme, eyther as yonge chyldren, whych neuer sawe lyghte? There must the wicked cease from theyr tyranny, and there suche as be overlaboured be at rest: there are those let out free, whych haue bene in bysion, so that they heare nomore the voyce of the oppressour. There are smal and great: and the seruante is free from his master.

Wherfore is the lyght gyuen to him that is in myserie? and lyfe vnto them shal haue ben byrted? Which longe for death, and thowgh it com not, wolde byp it out of his places, which also wolde be exceeding glad and reioyse, if they coulde fynde they graue any where. That shoulde be tope to that man whose tope is hynde, and God heperth it backe from hym. For my synnes come before I ate, and my synnes sal out lyke the water. For the thyng that I feared is come vpon me: and the thyng that I was afrayed of is happened vnto me: was I not happye? had I not quietnesse? was I not in rest? And nowe commeth suche myserie vpon me.

The.iii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended of impietie and blindness, and of the presumption of his owne righteousness.

Ad Eliphas the Themanite answered, and sayde: If we begyn to commune with the, wilt thou be discontent? But who can withholde him selfe from speakyng? Beholde thou hast ben a chasterer of many, and hast comforted the wepye bandes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But nowe that the plage is come vpon the, thou arte grieved: now that it hath touched thy selfe, thou arte saynte hearted. * Is not this thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy patience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consydre (I praye the) who cure perished being an innocent? Or when were the godly destroyed? For (as I haue proued by experience:) they that plowe iniquitie, and so we wretchednesse, reape the same. With the blaste of God they perishe, and with the breath of his wrath they are consumed awaie. The cry-nyng of the lyon, and the voyce of the lyon, and the teeth of the lyons whelpes are pulled out.
The lyon perissheth for lacke of praye, and the lyons whelpes are scattered abrode.

And to me came the worde secretly, and myne care hath receyued a lytle thereof. In the thought-es and visions in the nyght (when slepe cometh on men) feare came vpon me, and drede whyche made all my bones to quake. The wynde passed by, before my presence, and made the heeres of my flesh to stande vp. He stode there, & I knewe not his face: an ymage there was before myne eyes, and in the stillnesse herde I a voyce. * What man be more iust then God? Or shall a man be purer then his maker? Beholde, he founde no truthe in his seruantes, and in his anngelles there was folye: how moche more in them that dwell in houses of claye, and whose foundacyon is but dust, whiche shalbe consumed as it were with a moth. They shalbe smytten from the moynynge vnto the euenynge: pea, they shal perish for ever, when no man thynketh thereon. Is not this? roialtie gone awaie with them: they shal dye truly: and not in wylsome.

The. v. Chapter.

The ende of a fable. The righteousness of God, the Lorde is shewed by, and he punisheth them awaie.

Eye (I praye the) if happily there be any that wil answer the, & loke thou vpon any of the holy men. As for the follye man, displeasure hyl-eth hym, & anger sleeth & ignorancie * I haue sene my selfe, when the solis was depe rooted, and sodaynly I curst his habitacyon.

His children were without prosperitie, and they were slayne in the gate, and there was no man to deliuer them. * His haruest was eaten vp of the hunger, and the weaponed man spoiled it, and the thyrtie ranke by theyr laboure. It is not the earth that byngeth forth iniquitie: neither commeth sorowe oute of the grounde, but man is borne vnto labour, lyke as the sparkes flye vp out of the hole coles.

But I wyll aske counsaile at the Lorde, and wyll talke with God: which doth thynges that are vnsearchable, and maruils without number. * He gyueth rapine vpon the earth, and poureth water vpon the streets, to set vp them that be of lowe degree, and that those whiche are in heynesse, may come to prosperitie. He destroyeth the deuyles of the subtilie, so that they bandes are not able to perforce any stedfast thyng.
* He compasseth the wyse in theyr owne craftynesse, and ouertroweth the counsaile of the wycked. In somoche, that they run vnto dark-nesse by layze daye, * and grope aboute them at the noone daye, lyke as in the nyght.

He shall deliuer the poore from the swerde, & fro the threatnynges of the vngodly, & from the violence of the mighty. He is the hope of the poore: and the mouth of the wycked shal be stopped.

Beholde, * happye is the man whome God punyssheth: therfore refuse not thou the chastenyng of the almyghty. For: though he make a wounde, he gyueth a playster: though he smyte, his hande maketh hole agayne.

He shall deliuer the in synne troubles, and in the streyns there shal no euill come to the. In hunger he shal saue the from death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swerde.

Thou shalt be kept from the euill tonge, and wher trouble cometh, thou shalt not nedde to feare.
In destruction & deth thou shalt be merie, and * shalt not be afrayd of beastes of the earth. For the stones of the land shalbe confederate with the and the beastes of the felde shal gyue the peace.

And thou shalt knowe, that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest, and thou shalt go & beholde thy habitacion, and shalt not synne. Thou shalt se also, that thy seed shal increase, and that thy posteritie shal be as the grasse vpon the earth.
Thou shalt com also to thy graue in a sayze age like as wher they take vp a coyne of the in dur son. Lo, this we our selues haue proued by experience, and enen thus it is. Herken thou to it also, that thou mayest take hede to thy selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

Job answereth, that his payne is more gurnous then his fault, yet notwithstanding he belereth theron.

Ad answered also, and sayde: O that the displeasure which I haue deserued were truly weyed, and my punishment layde in the balauces together: for nowe is it heuier then the sande of the see. And this is the cause that my wordes are so sorowfull.
For the arrows of the almyghty are rodd about me, whose indignacion hath byrth vpon my spirite and terrible feares of God are set agaynst me.

And in the meane tyme am I full of sorowes woymes and dust of the earth: my shynne is withered, and become horrible, & my dayes passe ouer more speedely then a weauer can weue out his web, and are gone as I am a ware. I remembre that my life is but a wnde, and that myne eye shal nomore se pleasures therof: yea, and none other mens eye shal se me any more. For if thou fasten thynne eye vpon me, I com to nothing. The cloude is consumed and vanisshed awaye, euen nomore vp, nor tounce agayne vnto his house: neither shall his face knowe hym any more.

Therefore I will not spare my mouth, but will speake in the trouble of my spirit, & muse

Why goest thou not from me, nor leavest me alone, so longe tyll I maye swallowe downe my spittle: I haue offended, and what shal I do vnto the, O thou preseruer of men! Why hast thou made me to stande in the waye, and am so beuie a burthen vnto my selfe: Why dost thou not forgive me my sinne: Wherefore takest thou not awaie my wychednesse? thy soimes spynned agaynst hym, byd not be punysht them for they wychednesse / If thou wol-dest now resorte vnto God by tymes, and make thyne humble prayer to the almyghty, if thou wouldest lyue a pure and a goodly lyfe, shulde he moche, that wherein for neu thou haddest lyttle but a very shadowe. Shall not they shewe the and tell the pece, and gladly confesse the same?

Way a rushe be grene withoute moystnesse?
Or may the grasse growe withoute water? No, but (or euer it be shot forth, and or it be gathered) it wythdereth before any other herbe. Euen so gorth it wyth all them that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to nought, his confidence shall be destroyed, and his trust shall be a hyders webbe. He shall leane vpon his house, but it shall not stande: he shall holde hym fast by it, yet shall it not endure. It is euen as a grene tree before the sunne, and woterth forth the branches in his garden. It taketh many rootes by a well syde, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones. But yf it be taken oute of his place, euerie man denreth it, sayinge: I knowe the not. Lo, thus is it wyth hym, that re-topfeth in his owne doinges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth.

Beholde, God will not cast away a vertuous man, neyther wyll he helpe the vngodlye.
Thy mouth shall be full wyth laughyng, and thy lippes wyth gladnesse. They also that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwelling of the vngodly shall come to nought.

The .ix. Chapter.

Job declareth the benefites of God, and that mane ryghtousnesse is nothinge.

JOb answered, and sayde: I knowe it is so of a truthe. How maye a man (compared vnto God) be iustified?
Yf he wyll argue wyth hym, there is not one amonge a thousande that can answer hym. Concernyng suche as be wyse of herte, or myghty in strength, who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynste hym? He translated the mountaynes: or euer they be aware. It is he that ouerthroweth them in his wrath. He remoueth the earth out of her place, that the pillars thereof shake withall. He commaundeth the sunne, and it riseth not: he closeth vp the starres, as it were under a signet. He hym selfe alone spredeth out the brauens, and gorth vpon the waters in the see. He maketh the waues of heauen the O-cion, * the seven starres, and the secreete places of the south. He doth great thynges, such as are vnscearceable: yea, and wonders wout nōbye.

Lo, when he gorth ouer by me, I shall not se hym. And when he depaereth by me, I shall not loke vpon hym, I shall not perceyue hym. Yf he be hasty to take any thyng awaye, who wyll make hym restore it agayne? Or who wyll saye vnto hym: * what dost thou? He is God, whose wrath no man maye withstande, but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder hym. How shulde I then answer hym? Or what wordes shulde I fynde out agaynste hym? Yea, though I were ryghtous, yet mighte I not gyue him one word agayne, but meke ly submyt my selfe to hym as my iudge. Yf I had called vpon hym, and he had answered me: yet wolde I not beleue, that he derde my voyce: he troubleth me so with the typse, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He wyll not lette my hyppite be in rest, but fylleth me with bytternesse.

Yf men wyll speake of strengthe, lo, he is stronger: Yf men wyll speake of ryghteousnesse, who dare be my recorde? Yf I wyll iustifye my selfe, myne owne mouth shall condemne me: yf I wyll put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall reprove me a wyched doer. For though I be an innocent, and my conscience cleare: yet am I werpe of my lyfe.

One thyng it is, and therfore I sayde: he destroyeth both the ryghteous and vngodlye.
And though he lay sodenly with the scourge, yet wyll he laugh at the punishment of the innocent. As for the wyche, it is gyuen ouer into the hande of the wyched, and he shall couer the faces of the iudges thereof. Is it not so? where is there any, but he is suche one.

* Wy dapes are more swifte then a runner: they are gone, and haue leue no good thyng.
They are passed awaye as the wyppes that be good vnder sayle, and as the Egles that flyeth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynyng, to leaue of fro my wrath, and to comforte my selfe, then I am afrayed of all my sorrowes: for I knowe that thou wilt not iudge me innocent. Yf I be then a wyched doer, why laboure I in vayne? Yf I washe my selfe wyth snowe water, and make my handes neuer so cleane as the wel, yet shalt thou dyppe me in the myre, and myne owne clothes shall despile me.
For he that I must gyue answer vnto, and to whom I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any daynman to laye his hande betweene vs: Let hym take his robbe awaye fro me: yea, lette hym make me nomore afrayed of hym, and then shall I answer hym without a nye feare: for as longe as it is thus, I can make no answer.

The .x. Chapter.

Job is trespasse of his lyfe, and secret out his fragility before God. He despayeth the tyme to repent.
A description of death.

I greued my soule to lyue: I wyll make my complayne, and wyll speake out of the very benyngnesse of my soule I wyll saye vnto God: O do not condemne me, but shewe me the cause wherefore thou contendest so with me? Thinkest thou it well done to oppresse me, to calte me of, (being the wozhen of thy handes) and to mayn-tayne the counsaile of the vngodly? Hast thou sele eyes? or dost thou loke as a man lo-keth? Or are thy dayes as the dayes of man, and thy yeares as mannes yeares? That thou makest suche inquisicion for my wychednesse, and searcest out my synne? Where as (not with-standyng) thou knowest that I am no wyched person, and that * there is no man able to deli-uer me out of thy hande.

* Thyne handes hath made me, and lastyned me all together rounde aboute, wyte thou rye many are the plagis that I am in. * Whtdeath: yea, into the darke cloudy lande and dead lyr shadowe, where as is no order, but terrible feare as in the darkenesse.

C The xi. Chapter.

Job is vniuſly reprehended of Sopha. God is incomprehensible. He is mercifull to the repentant.

J Then answered Sopha the Naama-thite, and sayd: Shulde not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shulde he that babbleth muche be commended therin? Shulde men geue care vnto the onely? Thou wylt laugh other men to scozne, and shall nobody moke the haue no nede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy myscepe, and that runne by. Then shouldest the resydue of thy lyse be as cleare as the noone daye, and spyng

The xlii. Chapter.

Job reproueth his frendes with theyr sturp fapnges, and contemnyth spacy lye.

I O, all thys haue I sene with myne eye, heard with myne eare, & vnderstande. Loke what ye know, that same do I know also, neither am I inferiour vnto you. Heerthelesse, I talke with the Almighty, & my desyre is to comen with god. As for you ye are wozhmasteres of lyes, & vnproffitable pdisicions alfogether. wolde god ye kept your tonge, for then myght ye be taken for wyse men. Howe heare my chylde, and ponder the sentence of my lippes.

Wo ye speake iniquitie agaynst god, & talke agaynst hym with dysceite. Wyl ye not accept the person of hym? Or wyl ye contende w god? Shall that helpe you when he calleth you to recknyng? For as one ma mocketh an ocher, so do ye moche hym. he shall punyssh you, & reproue you, yf ye do secretly accept any persone. Shall he not make you asrayde, when he sheweth him selfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you, your remembraunce is lyke vnto a sparke, and your bodies lyke the claye.

Holde your tonges, for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sorowe shalbe the lesse. Wherfore do I beare my selfe in my teth, & and put my soule in mine bades? Lo, though he slay me yet wyl I put my truste in hym. But I wyl reproue myne owne wayes in his syght he shall make me whole, & there maye no ppyete come before hym. heare my wordes, and ponder my saynges with your eares. Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgement, & knowe that I shal be founde ryghteous. What is he, that wyl go to lawe with me? (Let hym come) that I maye nowe holde my tonge, and dye. Heerthelesse, graunte me two chylde, and then wylle I not hyde my selfe from the.

Wherfore shal I take my hande from me, and let not the fearfull dze of the make me asrayde. And then call me, and I wyl answer: or els let me speake, and geue me thou an answer. Howe many are my mysdoes & synnes: Let me know my transgressions and offences. Wherfore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne enemy? Wylte thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a syenge lease, and soloth vpon dysp stubble? for thou layest tharpely to my charge, and punyssh me: for the synnes of my yowthe. Thou puttest my fete also in the stocke: and lokest narrowly vnto all my pates, and markest the stepes of my fete where as I (not withstandinge) muste consume lyke as a soule carpon, and as a clothe that is moth eaten.

Job rebuketh the lyfe of man, and prophesyeth of the resurrection. Heo sheweth the goodly, yf they obteyne that they lye for.

In that is born of woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is fulle of myserie. he cometh vp, and is cut downe lyke a flowre. he flyeth as it were a shadowe, & neuer continueth in one state. Wilt thou open thine eyes vpon such one, and dysngest me in thy iudgemente? Who can make it cleane, that cometh of an vn-cleane thyng? No bodye. The dayes of mā lyf are determyned, the nombre of his monethes are knowen only vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his boundes, which he can not go beyonde. So teld hym that he maye rest (a litle) vntill his daye come: whiche he loketh for, like as an hyrlinge doeth.

If a tree be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyl sproute, and shote forth the boughes agayne. For though I rote of it be warden olde, and the stocke therof be dead in the grounde yet when it getteth plenty of water, it wyl bud, and dyspunge forth the bowes, lyke as a tree that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perished and consumed away, what becometh of him?

The cloudes when they be dysped vp, and fyll uers when they be emptye, ar fyllid agayne to rowe the flowynge waters of the sea, but when man slepeth he ryseth not agayne (of his owne strength) vntill the heauen veryfy: he shal not wake vp, nor ryse out of his slepe. What thou woldest hepe, and hyde me in the hell, vntill thy wrath were spyled, and to appoynte me a tyme wherein thou myghtest remembre me. Wape a deade man lyue agayne? All the dayes of my lyf wyl I wape tye, till my chaungyng shal come. Thou shalte call me: and I shal answere the, & dyspyle not thou the woyle of thine owne handes.

For nowe thou nobrest all my goynges, yet be not thou to extream vppon my synnes. My iniquitie is filled vp, as it were in a bagge: but be mercifull vnto my wyckednes. The moystaynes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are remoued out of theyr place, & waters pearce thorow the very stones by lye & lye. Cloudes washe a waye the gravell and earth. And destroyed is the hope of mā. Thou preyntest still agaynst hym. so that he paryeth awaye: thou chaungeth hys state, and puttest hym from the. And whether his chyldren come to woshypp or no, he can not tell. And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyeth: hys fleshe must haue crannyle, and whyle the soule is in hym: he must be in sorowe.

The xlv. Chapter.

Eliphaz rebuketh Job because he ascribeth his thowme and pynnyll to hym selfe. He rebuketh the cyle that lye lyth on the mychard, rebuking Job to be one of the number.

woyld, and speake the thynges: whyche can do no good: As for shame, thou hast set it aside, els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God, but thy wychednesse teacheth thy mouth and so thou hast chosen a crasty tounge. Thyne owne mouth condeynerth the, & not I. yea, thyne owne lippes shalpe an answer agaynst the.

Yete thou the fyfthe mō, that euer was boyn: O walt thou made before the hyls: haste thou herde the secrete counsell of God that all wyse-dome is to lytle for the: What knowest thou? we knowe not: And what understandest thou but we can the same: With vs are both olde and aged men: yea, suche as haue lpyued longer then thy father.

B Thynekest thou it a small thyng of the consolacions of God: With the is a lvyng word. Why both thyne deit so bewiche? And wherefore wynehest thou wryth thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so putt up agaynst God, & lettest such wordes go out of thy mouth: What is mō, that he shuld be cleane: what hath he (which is bozne of a woman) wherby he myght be pyghterous?

 Beholde he doth not trust his saintes: yea, the very heauens are not cleane in his syght. Howe much more then an abhominable and vyle mō, whych dzyneketh wychednesse lyke water: I wil tell the, heare me: and I wil shewe the: I haue sene: whiche wyse men haue tolde, and haue not ben hyd from the: fathers vnto whome only perty was geue: & no strainger went among the.

C The vngodly sojoweth all p dayes of hys lyfe as it were a woman with a chyld, and the nombze of a tyzantines yeaues is vnkowen. A fearfull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He beleneth neuer to be deluyered oute of darkenesse, for the swerd is alwaye before hys eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lpyung, he seeth playnlye p the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sorow and carefulnesse wyl make him afraide, & compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a lvyng wch boste ready to the batayle. For he hath lretted out his hande agaynst God, & armed him selfe agaynst the almyghty. He runneth proude lyke vpon hym, and wryth a styffe necke sygherth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth hys face wryth fastenesse, and maketh hys body well lpyng.

D Therefore shall his dwellyng be in desolate cyties, and in houses which no man inhabyterth, but are become heapes of stonys. He shall not be ryche, neyther shall his substance contynue, nor encrease vpon earth. He shal neuer come oute of darkenesse, the flume shall dype vpon hys bzynches: with the blast of the mouth of God, shal he be taken awaye. He beleneth not that he is in vanitie, and yet is he out of the waye, & vanyte shal be his recompence.

He shall perpyche, afoze hys tyme be twome out, and his bzynche shal not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vntimely grape frō vpyne: and shall let his floure fall, as the olyue doth. For the congregacyon of vycepytes shal be desolate and vnfertyll, and the fyre shall consume the houses of su: he as are grede to receyue gyl-tes: & he conceyuerth transyle, and beareth vanyte, and thep: bodye byngeth forth decepte.

C The. xvi. Chapter.

Job sayeth vnto his wyfe: I sayeth that he suffereth more then hys wychednesse hath deservyd.

Ob answered and sayd: I haue offymen herde suche thynges, myserable geuerys of comfozte are ye, all p sozte of you. Shall not vayne wordes yet come to an ende?

O hast thou yet any more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God that your soule were in my sonkes stede: then shoulde I heape vpon wordes agaynst you, & shake my hed at you. I shoulde comfozte you with my mouth, and release your payne with the talking of my lippes. Job. xvi. 21. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorowe wylle not ceasse: and though I hold my tounge, yet wyl it not departe from me. But now that God hath set me aduersitie, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon.

And that thou hast lyled me wryth wyneles, my fleshe is recozd, and my leaneleth clyeth vpon agaynst me, & beareth wytnes agaynst me. He is angyre at me, he batesth me: and gnaweth vpon me wryth hys teeth. Thyne enemye saouletth vpon me wryth hys eyes.

C They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpon me, & smytten me vpon the cheke de spytful lye, they gather them selues together agaynst me. God hath put me in pteace wryth the vngodlye, and deluyered me into the handes of p wyched. I was in wrych, but he hath bzought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and sette me as a marke for bynseife. Hys archers compassse me rounde about: he wound my loynes, and doth not spare. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gyaunte. I haue sowed a sackcloth vpon my shynne, and lye wryth my heare in the duste.

D My face is swollen wryth weppynge, & myne eyes is the shadowe of death. Howbeit there is no wychednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my bloode, and let my cryng synde no rowne.

For lo, my wytnesse is in heuen: and he that knoweth me is aboue in the dryghet. My fren des gyue me many wordes to scozne: and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a bodye myght please wryth God, as one man doeth wryth another: yet the nombze of my yeaues is come, and the waye that I must go is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

C The. xvii. Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth awaye, and yet doeth patientlye abyde.

My breathe synketh, my dayes are shortned. I am harde at deardes dize. Kroward men are wryth me and myne eye must contynue in p bytternes of the. O deluyere me, & loke out one to be my surety: thy sight, what is he? knoweth who wil ymes for

B me: For thou hast withheld thys harted from understandynge: therefore shalt thou not see (them) up on hys. He promysed hys frendes parte of hys good, but hys owne chyldren spende it. He hath made me as it were a bywoide of the people: where as a foze I was theyre ioye. Myne eye is bymme for verpe heuynesse, and all my strength is become lyke a shadowe. Verruouse men therefore shal wel consyder this, and the innocent shal take parte agaynst the pprophete.

E The ryghteous also wyll kepe hys waye, & he that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I praye you) for I can not fynde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are past and my counsailes and thoughtes of my harte are vanyshe a waye, chaungynge the nyghte in to daye, and the lycht into darkenesse. Though I tary neuer so much, yet the graue is my house and I haue made my bed in the darke. I cal cor-ruptyon my father, & the wormes call I my mother and syster. What helpe shal I haue longe ta-ryenge? Who hath consydered the chyng, & I loke for? All that I haue shal go downe into the pyt, and lye wyth me in the dust.

E The. xviii. Chapter.
Chyldehetherforthe the paynes of the paynful-full and wyched.

B Then answered Bildad the Shubite & sayde: when wyl ye make an ende of your woordes? War he well, and then we wyl speake. Wherefore are we counted as bestes, and reputed to vyle in your syghte? He destroyeth hym selfe wyth hys anger: shal the earth be forsaaken, or any stone remoued oute of hys place, because of the? Pea, the lycht of þe vngodly shal be put out: and the sparke of hys fyre shal not burne. The lyght shal be darke in hys dwellynge, & his can-dell shal be put out wyth hym. hys presumptuous goynge are kepte in, and his owne counsel shal cast hym downe. For hys feete are taken as it were in the net, and he is at hys wyttens ende. hys foete shal be holden in the snare, and he shal catche them that be thysyde of blood: The snare is layde for hym in the grounde, and a pyssal in the waye.

E Fearfulnesse shal make hym asfayde on eu-ry syde, that he shal not know, where to get out hunger shal be hys strengthe: my fortune shal hange vpon hym. He shal eate the strengthe of hys owne shyne, euen the fyrst doine of deathe shal eate hys strength. hys hope shal be rooted out of hys dwellynge, verpe fearfulnesse shalle byngge hym to the kyng. Other men shal dwel in hys house (but shal be none of hys) and bym stone shal be scaetred vpon his habytacyon. hys rootes shal be dyed vpon hym, and aboute shal his byaunche be cut downe: hys remembraunce shal peryshe from the earth, and he shal haue no name in the strete: they shal byrne hym fro the lyghte into darkenesse, and cast hym cleane out of the woide. He shal neither haue chyldren nor kynfolkes amonge hys people, no, nor any po-steryte in his dwellynge. They that come after hym, shal be asfayde at hys daye, and they that go before, shal be asfayde. Suche are now the dwellynges of the wyched, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

E The. xix. Chapter.

Chyldehetherforthe hys myghtes and greuous paynes. He shal sheweth of the generall curietyon.

I Ob answered, and sayd: howe long wyl I ye were my soule, and trouble me wyth woordes? I o, ten times haue ye reproued me: and are not ashamed for to laughe me so to scorne: If I go wylonge, I go wylonge to my selfe But if ye wyll endauance your seluen agaynst me, & accuse me to be a wyched person, because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe thys then, that it is god that hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute wyth his net. If I complayne of the violence done vnto me, I can not be heard. And if I cry, there is no sentence geuen with me. He hath dedged vpon my voyses, that I can not passe, and he hath set darkenesse in my pathes. & he hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the crowne away fro my heade. He hath destroyed me on euery syde & I am vndone: my hope hath been taken away fro me, as it were a tree plucked vs by the roote. hys wyath is kyndled agaynst me: he taketh me as though I were hys enemye.

B hys men of warre came togyther, whyche made they way ouer me, and besieged my dwellynge rounde about. & he hath put my byrthen farre away from me, and such as were of myne acquaintaunce, are become strangers vnto me & hys owne kynfolkes haue forsaaken me, & my frendes haue put me oute of remembraunce The seruauntes and maydens of myne owne house, toke me for a stranger: and I am become as an aleaunt in theyr syghte.

E I called my seruaunt, and he gaue me no an-swere: no though I prayed him wyl my mouth hys owne wyse myght not abyde my breath I was fayne for to speake saye for the chylde of myne owne body. Pea, the chylde despyed me. And when I was gone fro them, they spake euill vpon me. All suche as were my moste familyers, abhorred me: and they whome I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my shyne, and my fleshe is a way, only ther is left me the shyne about my tethes. hant vprie vpon me, haue pte vpon me, (O my fren-des) for the hnde of God hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God doth, and are not satisfied of my fleshe.

D That my woordes were nowe wyrtten: & that they were put in a booke: wolde God they were grauen wyth anyon penne in leade, or in stone to contynue. For I am sure, that my rede meriteth, and that I shal ryle out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shal be clothed agayne wyth thys shyne, and le God in my fleshe. Pea I my selfe shal beholde hym, not w other, but wyth these same eyes. My reynes are consumed wythyn me, hys not ye saye: why doeth he suffer persecutyon? Is there founde an occasion in me But beware of the sword, for the sword wyl be auri-

be auenged of wychednesse: & before, that there is a Judgemente.

The. xx. Chapter.

Jobber sayeth, that the unspychfull, the wretched, and the wyched shall haue a worse case.

Job answered Jobbar & Naama-rite, and sayde: For the same cause domy thoughtes compell me to an-swere. And why my mynde is rea-dye wrythin me. I haue sufficiently hearde thy cheeping and repose, therefore am I purposed to make answer after mine vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not thyss, namelye, that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creatyon of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of y^e vngod-lye hath bene woite, and that the ioye of y^e p^{ro}phetes continued but the wyllyng of an eye?
Though he be magnified vnto the heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he is persyshed for euer, in so moche y^e they which haue sene hym, shall saye: Where is he?
He shall vanishe as a dreame: so that he can no-moze be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vision in the nyght. So that y^e eye which sawe him before, shall haue no moze syght of hym, and his place shall knowe hym no moze. Hys chyldren shall be sayne to agree wth the poore, and hys handes shall restore theyr goodes.

From hys yowth hys bones are full of pleasures, but now he shall lye downe wrythin hym in the earth. Whylt wychednesse was sweete in his mouth, he y^e it vnder hys tonge. That he sauoured, that woulde he not forsake, but kepte it close in hys throte. The breade that he y^e eate, is turned to the popson of the serpentes, wrythin his body. The y^echelle that he deuoured, shall be paralyse agayn, for God shall drawe them out of hys belly, he shall suche the gall of serpentes, and the adders tonge shall slay hym: so that he shall nomoze se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter. The thynge that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp.

Greate trouayle shall he make for y^echelle, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poze, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and n^o buylded them. His belly coulde neuer be fylled, therefore shall he persysh in hys couetousnesse. There shall none of hys meat be lefte behynde, therefore shall no mā loke for his prosperitie. When he had plenteousnesse of euerye thyng, yet was he poore, though he was helped on euery syde.

For though the wyched haue neuer so moche to fylle hys belly, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to rapyne ouer hym: so that yf he shal the yron weapons, he shall be shot wth the stele bowe. The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of y^e quayer, and a gyfteryng swearde shalowe the gall of hym, fear shall come vpon him. There shall no darnesse be able to hyde hym. An vnyndlyd sye shall consume hym, and loke what remaineth in hys house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare hys wychednesse, & the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The substance that he hath in hys house, shall be taken awaye and persysh in the dape of the Lordes wrath. * This is the poze vpon that the wyched man shall haue of God, & the herpyng that he maye loke for of God: by cause of hys wordes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Jobber sayeth the prosperitie of the wyched, and after describeth theyr lobayne curys and delectacyon.

Job answered and sayde: O deare my wordes, and that shall be my com-forte of you. Suffer me a lytle, that I maye speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorn. * (yt is lyke you.) Iste lo-mannes sake that I make hys dysputacyon?
Whiche yf it were so, woulde not my spere be then soze in trouble? Marke me well, and be a bawled, and laye your hande vpon your mouth For when I consider my selfe I am afrayde, & my selfe is smytten with feare. * Wherefore do wyched men lyue in helth and prosperitie, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches: Theyr chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes. Theyr houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them. Theyr bullocke gendereth, and that not out of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not unfructfull.

They sende forth theyr chyldren by flockes and theyr sonnes lode the daunce. * They beare wth them tabrettes and harpes, and haue in-strumetes of musycke at theyr pleasures. They spende theyr dayes in welthyngnesse: but lobaynly they go downe to hel. They saye also vnto God, go from vs: we despyse not thy knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghtye, that we shalde sene hym? And what profyte shalbe we haue to submyt our selues vnto hym? For there is vterlye no goodnesse in them, therfore I will not haue to do wth the counsaile of the vngodly. I sawe ofte that the candle of the wyched be put out: howe oft cometh theyr delectacyon vnto them? O what sorow shall God gyue them for theyr part in his wrath? Yea they shal be cut as haye before the wynde, and as chaffe that he shall carpe the awaye.

And though God saue theyr chyldren from such sorow, yet wylle he so rewarde them sel-ues, that they shall knowe it. Theyr owne destruction and myserie shall they se wth theyr eyes, and bypne of the fearful wrath of the Al-myghtye. For what careth he what becometh of his household after hys deathe, when the nombre of hys monethes is cut short? In as moche then as God hath the vycke power of all, who can teach him any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtye, and at hys best ryche, and in prosperitie, euen when his bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of marve. An other dyeth in sorow and heynesse, and neuer hadde good dayes. They shall slepe bothe alpe in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. Beholde, I know what pethynke, yea: and the subtiltye that ye ymagyn agaynst me. For ye say: where is the pynces palace? & where is the dwelling of the

of the vngodly: haue ye not asked them that go by the way? Doubtlesse, ye can not denye these tokens, that the wyched is kept vnto the day of destruction, and that the vngodly shall be brought forth to the daye of wrath. Who darre reproue hym for his waye to his face? Who wyl rewarde hym, for the vngodlynesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to by a graue, and dwel amonge the heape of the dead. Then shall he be sayne to be buryed amonge the stones of pplayne. All men also must folow hym, and there are innumerable gone before hym. How maye then be the comforte that ye geue me? Doth not saluacion remayne in all pour answere?

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vngodlynesse.

Eliphaz the Themanite gaue answer, and sayd: May a man be profytable vnto God, as he is? Is wyle maye be profytable to hym self? Is it any auauntage vnto the Almyghty, that thou arte ryghteous? Or shall it profyte hym, that thou makest thy wayes payte? Is he a frayde to reprove the, and to stepp forth with the in to iudgement? Is not thy wyche dwelle great, & thyne vngodlynesse dedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for nought, and robbed the naked of thei clothyng: To suche as were wery, hast thou gyue no water to drynke, and haste withdrawen breade from the hongry. Shulde such one the as vseth violence wronge and opprellion (doynge all thynges of parcialite, and hauing respect of persons) dwel in the lande? Thou hast sent wydowes a waye emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Job. xlii. b.
Job. xlii. b.

Therfore arte thou compassed aboute wth snares on euery syde, and suddenly vexed wth feare: Shuldest thou the se no darknesse? Shuldest not the waterfoude runne ouer the? How cause that God is hyer then the heauens, and because thou seest that the starres are so hye, writ thou therfore saye: Tush, how shuld god knowe doth his dominion reach beyonde the cloudes? Tush, the cloudes couer hym that he maye not se, and he dwelleth aboue heauē. Doest not thou hepe the olde waye that wayne men haue gone? Which were cut downe out of tyme, and whose foundacyon was as a runnyng water whyche sayd vnto God: go from vs, and what did the Almyghty wth them? he fylled thei houses w good thynges. But the counsaile of the vngodlye is farre frome. The ryghteous sawe it, and were glad, & the innocent laughed hym to scozne. Is our encrease betwen downe? Is for the remnant of them, the fyre hath consumed it.

Job. xlii. b.

Therfore reconyle the vnto God, & be content, so shall all thynges prosper with the ryght well. Receyue the lawe at his mouth, and laye by his wordes in thyne harte. For if thou wylt turne to the Almyghty, thou shalt stande fast, and put al vngodlynesse from thy dwel linge: Thou shalt make golde as plentyfull as the duste, and the golde of Ophir as the syntes of the ryuers. Yea, Almyghty God bys owne selfe shall be thy defence, and thou shalt haue preserye of synes. Then shalt thou haue thy desire in the Almyghty, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto hym, & he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promyses. Then loke what thou takest in hand, he shall make it to prosper with the: and the ryght shall thine in thy wayes. For who so vbieth hym selfe, hym shall he set vp: and who so lotheth mekely shall be healed. If thou be innocent, thou shalt deliuer the country, because of the vngodly synes of thy handes.

Job affirmeth that he hath knowledge of himselfe, and knoweth that he hath made his in bys ryghteousnesse.

Job answered, and sayde: My sayinge is yett this daye in bytternesse, and my hande keep, because of my groyng. O that I myght see him, and fynd hym. O that I myght come before his face to pde my cause before him, and to syl my mouth wth argumentes. That I myght knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: and that I myght vnderstand what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he please agaynst me wth his greater power and strengthe? No, but he wyl make me the stronger. He that is iust, shall nere disputacion wth hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for euer. He holde, though I go before, I fynde hym. If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of hym. If I go on I left syde where he doth, he wyl the I can not attayne vnto hym. Agayne If I goe on the ryght syde, he bydeth hym selfe, that I can not se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it and & trespeth me as the golde in fyre.

Job. xlii. b.
Job. xlii. b.

My foot doth kepe his pathe, bys hye waye haue I holden, and wyl not go out of it. I wyl not forsake the commaundment of his lypes but loke what he charged me wth bys mouth, that I haue put vp in my harte. He is styll at one poynt, and who wyl turne hym backe? he doeth as hym lysteth, & byrnyeth to passe what he wyl. he persoumeth the thynges that is appointed for me, and many such thynges doeth he. This is the cause that I bypne at his presence, so that when I cōsider hym, I am afrayd of hym. For in so much as he is God, he maketh my harte softe: and sepyng that he is Almyghty he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darkenes, neyther hath he couered the cloude from my face.

Job describeth the wickednesse of men, & sheweth what in se belonged to the wyched.

Only derpyng the, & ther is no time byd fro the almyghty, howe happye meth it, & they whyche knowe hym, do not regard his dayes: For some remember be, & remoue other lande markes: & robbe them of thei cattel and kepe the same for thei owne: that bypne a waye passe of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes ore for a pledge: that thrust & poore out of the waye and oppresse the symple of the world together. Beholde, cum as the wyche alleis in the deserte go they forthe to thei waye: & eple by tymes to spople

Job. xlii. b.
Job. xlii. b.

So spyle: yea, the best wyldemess ministreth foode for theyr chyldren. They reape the cozne felde that is not theyr owne: & let the vineyard of the vngodlye alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauinge no clothes to couer them, & to kepe them from cold so that when the howes in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, & they be al wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

C They spyle the suckyng fatherlesse chyld, and take the pledge from the poore. In so much that they let hym go naked without clothyng and haue taken awaye the sheafe of the hungry.
The poore are sayne to labour in their oyle mylles: yea, and to treade in their wynepresses, and yet to suffer theyr. The men of the Citie crye to the Lorde with syghinge. * the soules of the flayne also make theyr complaint. But God be-strooeth them not for al this, where as they (not withstandyng) are conuersant amonge them, that abhorre the lycht: they knowe not his way nor contynue in his pathes. * Tymely in smoz-nyng do they crye, to murder the symple and poore: and in the nyght they go a slepyng.

The eye of the aduoutree wayteth for y dar-kenes, and sayeth thus in hym selfe Tyl, there shall no eye se me: and so he dysguyseth his face.

In the nyght season they search y houses and hjde them selues in the day tyme, but wyl not knowe the lycht. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadow of deathe cometh vpon them and they go in horrible darknes. The vngodly is swifter then the water: theyr poore shal be curled in the earth, and he shall not beholde the waye of the vineyardes. O that they (for the wyckednes which they haue done) were dyade to the hell, sooner than snow melteth at y dround and heate. O that al compassion vpon them wer forgotten: that theyr deputies were wormes, y they were cleane put out of remembraunce, and vngodlynesse utterlye betwen downe lyke as a tree. He hath oppressed the barren, that he can not beare, and vnto the wyddowe hath he done no good. He drew the myghtye after hym with his power, and when he was gotten vp, no ma was without feare, as longe as he lyued. And though they myght be safe, yet they wyl not receyue it, for theyr eyes looke vpon theyr owne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerty, and taken out of the waye: yea, and vnto the place of, as the eares of cozne. Is it not so? Who wyl then repproue me as a lyar, and say that my wodes are nothyng worth.

The xxv. Chapter.

E Eldad sheweth that no man is cleane and without synne before God.

I When answered Eldad the Shubite, and sayde: Is there power and feare with hym about, that maketh peace syttynge in his wyldemess, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose lycht aryseth ouer all? But howe may a man compared vnto God? he is mistyfed: O how can he be cleane, that is borne of a woman? Be. holde the Moone syneth nothyng in compa-yson to hym, and the starres are vncleane in his lyght. Howe muche more then man: that is but corruptyon: and the sonne of man, which is but a woyme.

The xxvi. Chapter.

E Job sheweth that man can not helpe God, and showeth it by his myracle.

I When answered, and sayd: whom hast thou helped? hym that is withoute strength? What coforte gyuest thou vnto hym that hath no strength?
Where is the counsaile that shouldest gyue hym, whyche hath no wysdome? Hast thou shewed the waye of ryghte lyuynge? To whome hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made the breath to come out of thy mouth? Are not dead thynges shapen vnder the waters: and thynges by y waters spede? he is naked before hym, and the very destruction it self, can not be hjd out of his syght. He stretcheth out y north ouer the empyre, and hangeth y earth vpon nothyng. He byndeth the waters in his cloudes and the clowd is not broken vnder them. he holdeth backe his fole, that it cannot be sente: and spredeth his clowde before it.

He hath compassed the waters with certapne boundes, vntill the daye and nyght come to an ende. The very pylers of heauen tremble and quake at his reproche. * he spillet the sea, with his power, and thowome his wysdome, smyteth he the strength therof. His sperte hath garnished the deuens, and his hande hath made the rebellyous serpent. Lo, this is now a woyme summe of his wayes. But who is able suffycently to reuerse his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstande the thundre of his power?

The xxvii. Chapter.

E Job continueth and perfecteth of Job, and the power of the vngodlye wyls God.

I When Job proceeded & went forth in his communication, sayeng.
As truly as God lyueth (which hath taken awaye my iudge-ment) and the almyghtye that hath veyed my mynde: My lippes shal talke of no vanptrye, & my tongue shal speake no dyscrepte, whyle my breath is in me, and as longe as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrilles.

God forbyd, that I shuld graunt your cause to be ryght. As for me, vntill myne ende come wyl I neuer go fro myne innocency. My rygh-tuons dealinge kepe I fast, wher he I wyl not forsake: my harte shal not repproue me of my dayes. Therefore myne enemye shalbe found as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vngodly. For what hope hath y pocrite though he hath grete good, & though God gyue hym ryche after his hartes desyre?
Doeth God heare hym the sooner, when he cryeth vnto him in his necessitie? hath he such pleasure and helpe in the Almyghtye, that he darre alwaye call vpon God? I wyl teach you in the name of God, and the thyng that I haue of the Almyghtye

Almyghyte, wyl I not kepe from you. Behold pe stande in your owne conceyte, as though pe knewe all thynges. Wherfore then do ye go a-bounte wth luche wayne wordes, sayinge: * This is the poyson that I dyched shall haue of God and the heritage that I ysauntes shall receyue of the Almyghyte. If he get many chyldren, they shall perylye wth the sworde, and hys poste ritye shall haue scarcenes of bread. Like whom he leueth behynde hym, they shall dye & be buryed: and no man shall haue pitye of hys wyddowes. Though he had as muche monye as the dust of the earth, and rayment as readye as the clay, he maye well prepare it: but the godly shal put it vpon hym, and the innocet shal deale out the money. Hys house shall endure as the mory, and as a boote that the watchman maketh.

Job. xlii. c.

When the speche makyth, he carpeyth nothyng wyth hym: he is gone in the tynnyng of an eye: and hath nothyng. Destruction taketh hold vpon him as a water floode, & the tempest stealeth hym awaye, in f nyght season. I vehement cast wynde carpeyth hym hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh hym out of hys place. It rus-sheth in vpon him, and spareth him not, he may not escape from the power thereof. The clappeth theyr handes at hym: pea and is it of hym: when they loke vpon hys place.

The xxviii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that the wyddome of God is unsearchable.

HERE is a place: where syluer is brought oute of, and where golde is tryed: where pions digged out of the grounde, and stoness resolued to metalle. The darkenesse shal ones come to an ende: he can seke out the grounde of all thynges, the stoness, the darke, and the wabowe of deathe. Wth the ruuer of water parteth he a sonder the straunge people, that know no good neighbourhede: luche as a rude, vn-manerly and boysterous. he byngeth food out of the earth, and that wyche is vnder, consumeth he wyth fyre.

There is founde a place, whose stoness are all cleane Sapphys, and where the cloytes of the earth are all golde. There is a way also that the byrdes know not, that no vulture eye hath sene wher in the Lyons whelpes walke not, & wher no Lyon cometh. There putteth he his hande vpon the stonpe rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe out of the rockes and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it.

Out of byrppes byngeth he greates floudes to-gyther, & the thyng that is byd, byngeth he to lyght. Howe cometh a man then by wyddome

Wher is the place that men finde vnder stan-dynge? Cleerly no man can tell howe woethy a thyng he is, neyther is the founde in the lande of them that lyue. (at theyr some pleasure)

The depe sayeth he is not wth me. * The se sayeth he is not wth me. He can not be gotten for: (the most pure) golde, neyther may I pryce of her be bought wth any syluer: no wedges of

Job complayneth of the prosperite of the tyme past, & relyng vpon hys tenneth of misery, because they sayd that Job had accorde to hys deservynge.

Job proceaded and wente forth he in hys communication, sayng: O that I were as I was in f monethes by past, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shyned vpon my deade, when I wente after the same lyght and shynynge euen thowgh the darkenesse. As it good wth me when I was younge: when God prospered my house: when the Almyghyte was wth me: when my chyldren stood aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer wth butter, and when I stope rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle, when I wnt thowgh the cite vnto the gate, and when they set me a chapye in the strete: when they ponge me (as sone as the fawe me) byd them selues, and when the aged arose, & stode vpon me, when the byrppes leste of theyr talkynge, and layde theyr hande to theyr mouth: when the myghtye kept theyr voyce, and when theyr tonge cleaued to the roofe of theyr mouth. When all they that heard me, called me happye: and when al they f sawe me, spake good of me. For I deluyered f poore when he cryed, and so byd I the fatherles, and hym that had none to helpe hym. He that shuld haue bene lost, gaue me a good word and the wyddowes hart praysed me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnes, whych couered me as a garment: and equytye was my crowne. I was an eye to the blynde, and a foote to f lame: I was a father vnto the poore: & when I knew not f cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake the chaunces of the vngyuous mde, and pluckt the spoyle out of hys tery.

Therefore, I thought verely, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes shoulde haue bene as many as the landes of the see. For my roote was spped out by the water syde: and the delue laye vpon my corne. My honoure en-creased moze and moze, and my bowe was curre stronger in myne hand. Vnto me men gaue ryed for my countenance. If I had spoken, they would have it none other waies, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They wayped for me, as for the rapne: and gaped vpon me as the grounde doeth to receyue the latter shoure. While I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest. And the lyghter of my countenance wolde they not put out. When I agreed vnto theys waie, I was the chefe, and lat as a hyng wth his enemye aboute hym. And when they were in heuyness, I was theys comfortour.

The xxx. Chapter.

The great despayre of man, and curse of Job that Job suffereth.

IT is now they that are ponger then I haue me in derision: yea, euen they whose fathers I wold haue thought scozne to haue let wth the dogges of my cattell. The power & strenght of theys handes myght do me no good, for y time is but lorde amonge them. For very misery and ponger they fled into y wyldernes, a darke place horrible and wast, plucking vp nettles amonge the bushes, and the sunnys rotes for theys meate. And when they were dyspued forth, men cryed after the, as it had bene after a thefe. Theys dwellinge was helye de soule broken: yea in the caues and denues of the earth. Amonge the bushes went they aboute cryng: and vnder the thornes they gathered them selues together. They were the chyliden of foolles and vplaynes whych are vexed out of the world. Howe am I theys song and am become theys ielounges scoke: they abhorre me, and fye face from me, and skayne my face wth spelle. For the Lorde hath loosed the strenght of my bodye, and brought me lowe: The byble haue they cast out of my syght. Altho my ryght hande ryse the yong men agaynst me, they haue hurte my fete treachynge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they wold destroy. My father haue they cleane marred. It was so calpe for them to do me harme, that they neded no ma to helpe them. They fell vpon me as it had bene the breakinge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me.

Myne honoure vanquished a waye more: I stoppily then the wynde, and my prosperite departed hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my mynde poured full of heuynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are peacede thowowe in the nyght season, and my senewes take no rest. For the beuementye of sorowe is my garment chaunged and accorpyng to the dyspues of heuyness, am I gyrded wth my coote. He hath call me into the myre, and I am become lyke ashyes and duste. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me, and thoughte I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemye, and wth thy violence hande thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou byddest let me by on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but now hast thou gyuen me a very soze fall. Sure I am that thou wilt deliuer me vnto death: euen to y lodgyng that is due vnto al men lyuyng. Howe vnto men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed already, but where hurt is done, there vnto they to helpe. Wold not I wepe wth hym y was in trouble? had not my soule compassion vpon the pooze? Yet neuerthelesse, where as I looked for good, euil happened vnto me: and where as I wayped for lyght, there came darkenesse. My bowels serth wth me, and take no rest, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Wherely and lowly came I in: yea, and without any displeasure, I stode vp in the congregacion and communed wth them: But nowe I am a companion of dragons, and a fellowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to blacke, & my bones are dysent wth heat: my barte is turned to sojowe and my pype to wepyng.

Job requyeth the innocency of his troupe, and moweth of his derision.

I made a covenatunt wth myne eyes: that I wold not loke vpon a damnell. For howe great a porcion shall I haue of God: and what inheritance shal the almyghtyge on hye. As for the vngodlye & he that loyeth him selfe to the company of wyched doers, shall not destruction & misery come vpon hym: & wold not be se my wayes & tell all my gorynges. If I haue walked in vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceyue, let me be wayed in an euen balaunce, that God may se myne innocencye. If so be y I haue wythdrawen my fete out of the ryght waye, & yf my hart hath folowed myne eye syght: If I haue stained or defyled my handes, thal shall I sowe, & an other eat: yea, my generacio & posteritie shal be cleane rooted out. If myne barte hath lusted after my neyghbours wyfe, or yf I haue layed wayte at his doore. O then let my wyfe gronde vnto an other man, and let other m ly wth her. For this is a wychednes and sinne, that is worstye to be punished: yea, a sye that vnterlye shuld cōsume & roote out all my substance. Wold I curse thynke scozne to do ryght vnto my seruantes & maydens, when they had anye matter agaynst me? But leting that God wyl lye in iudgement what shal I do? And for somuch as he wyl nedes vnto me, what answer shall I geue hym? he that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not hym allor were we not both shapen a lyke in our mothers bodies? When the pooze despyed any thyng at me, haue I denyed it them? haue I caused the wydowe to stande waytyng for me in waynes? haue I eaten my porcion alone, that the fatherles hath had no part wth me? for mercy grewe vp wth me fro my yowth, & compassion from my mothers wombe. haue I sent anye man perpyth thowow nakednesse, & want of clotinge? Or any pooze man for lacke of rayment, whose sydes thanked me not, because he was warmed wth the woll of my sheper?

Wold I ever lyfte vp myne hand to hurt y fatherles? yea in the gate where I sawe my leise to be in ancthouste, then let myne arme fall fro my shulder, and myne arme holes be broken fro the the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeance and punishment of God, and knawe very wel, that I was not able to beare hys burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced because my power was great, and because my hande gat so muche? Or dyd I euer regarde greatly the eyfynge of the Sunne? Or had I the gorgye downe of the Moone in greate reputation? Hath my hart medled pynelye with any deccyter? Or dyd I euer kysse myne owne hande? that were a wychedneſſe woorthye to be punished, for then shoulde I haue deuyed the God that is aboue.

Deut. 32. 1. and 33. 1. Chap. 33. 1.

Job. 33. 1.

Haue I euer reioyced at the burte of myne enemy? Or was I euer glad, that anye harme happened vnto him? Or no: I neuer suffered my mouth to do such a synne, as to wyspe hym euil. Dyd not the men of myne owne householde saye: who shall let vs to haue our hely ful of hys flesch? I haue not suffered a straunger to lye without, but I opened my doore vnto hym, that went by the waye. Haue I kept secret my synne, and hyde myne iniquitie, as Adam dyd? Haue I feared any greut multitude of people? Or yf I had bene dyspyssed of the synple, Or then shoulde I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quietly spent my lyfe, and not gone out of the doore: Or that I had one wyche wolde heare me. Lo this is my cause. In the wyche the almyghtye shall answere for me: though he that is my contrarpe partye hath wyrtten a booke agaynst me. Yet wyll I take hym vpon my shulder, and as a garlande aboute my heade. I wyll tell hym the nombre of my goynge, and go vnto hym as to a pynce. But yf calke be, that my lande crye agaynst me, or that the sozowes therof make any complaynte: yf I haue eat the frutes therof unpayed for: yea, yf I haue greued any of the plowmen: the let thyfles growe in steade of my wheate, and cockle for my barlye.

There ende the wordes of Job.

Elihu after the other had synned they communication reioyced them of theyr synne. Age maketh not a man wyse: but the sperte of God

Of these thre men wolde styue nomore with Job, because he heide hym selfe a ryghteous man. But Elihu sonne of Barachel, the Bussite of the kynred of Ram, was verpe soye dyspleased at Job, because he called hym selfe iust before God. And so Jobs thre frendes he was angry also because they had found no resonable answere to overcome Job. Nowe tarped Elihu, tyll they had ended theyr communication with Job, for why? they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job answere: he was miscontent. Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite answered hym selfe, and sayd, & Considerynge that I am yonge, and ye be men of age: I was afrayed and durst not speche forth my mynde. For I thoughte thus within my self. It becometh olde men to speake, and the aged to teache dyslonie. Every man, (no doubt) hath a mynde, but it is the inspiration of the almyghtye that giveth understanding. Greute men are not al-waye wyse, neyther doch every aged man under-stande the thyng that is lawfull. Therefore wyll I speake also (heare me) and I wyll shewe you also myne understanding. For whil I had way-ted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge, and hearde youre wysdome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde, I founde not one of you ymade any good argument agaynst Job, that directlye coulde make answere vnto hys wordes: lest ye shoulde saye: We haue founde out wysdome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. Ye hath not spokt vnto me, and I wyll not answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answere, nor speake one worde) but in so much as ye wyll not speake, standynge tyll I ke dommenen, & makynge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte, to shewe hym an answere, and to shew hym my meaning: For I am full of wordes, & the sperte that is within me compelleth me.

Beholde, my braye is as the wyne, wyche hath no vent, and bursteth the newe vesselles in sunder. Therefore wyll I speake, & I maye haue a vent: I wyll open my lippes, and make an-swere. I wyll regarde no maner of personne, no man wyll I spare. For yf I wolde go about to please men, I knowe not howe soone my maker wolde take me awaye.

Elihu sheweth wherein Job offended: for he sayd we not styue: nor curiously seache out hys wordes.

Therefore, heare my wordes (O Job) and heke vnto me al that I wyll saye: Beholde I haue nowe opened my mouth, my tonge hath spoken in my throte: My harte dothe orde my wor-des a right, and my lippes talke of your pure wysdome. The sperte of God hath made me, and the breath of the almyghtye hath geuen me lyfe: yf thou canste, then gyue me answere: prepare thy selfe to stande before me, face to face. Beholde, before God I am euen as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same molde. Therefore, thou nedest not to be a-frayed of me, neyther nedest thou to feare that my authoritie shalbe to denye for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any faute, I am innocent, & there is no wychedneſſe in me.

But lo, he hath pyched a quarel agaynst me and taked me for hys enemye: he hath put my foote in the stoches, and loketh narrowlye vnto all my pathes: Beholde, in this haste thou not done ryght. I wyll make answere vnto the that God is more then man. And why dost thou the stryue agaynst hym: for he shall not geue the accountes of all hys wordes.

For when God doth once comaunde a thyng there shoulde no man be curyous to seache whether it be ryghte. In dreames and visions of the nyght (when slombynge cometh vpon men, that they fall asleepe in theyr beddes) he robbeth them in the eares, he inuolunteth them, and sheweth them playnly that it is he, whiche with dyaweth man from euill, deliuereth hym from payde, keepeth hym from the graue, and his lyfe from the sweete.

D he chasteneth hym with synneth, and byn-geth hym to his bed: he layeth soke punishment vpon his boones, so that his lyfe maye awaye wyth no byerd, and his soule abhorreth to eate any dayntie meate: in so moche that his bodye is cleane consumed awaye, and his boones appeare nomore. his life dyaweth vnto the graue, and his lyfe to death. Nowe if there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe hym the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercifull vnto hym, & sayeth: he shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconceyted.

Then shall his fleshe be as well lympe as it was afore, and shall be as it was in his youth. For if he submyt hym selfe vnto God, he shall be gracious vnto hym, and shewe him his countenance to fullpe, and rewardeth man for his ryghteousnesse. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therefore, let a man confesse (and saye) I haue offended: I dyd vnyghtously, and it hath done me no good. Yea, he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe shall be the lyght. So, thus worketh God alway with man that he keepeth his soule from perishing, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lympe.

Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, and I will speake. But if thou hast anye thyng to say: then answer me, and speake: for thy answer pleased me. If thou hast nothyng, then heare me, and holde thy tounge: so shall I teache the wysedome.

The xxxiii Chapter.

Elisu prayeth the iudges of God, which iudged the wyse and gouerneth all

Job. xlii.

I Libu procedyng forth in his answerre, sayde: heare my wordes, (O ye wyse men) hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandyng. For the care psoneth and discerneth the wordes, & the mouthe tasteth the meates. As for iudgement, lette vs seke it oute amonge oure selues, that we maye knowe what is good. And wher Job hath sayd I am ryghteous, but God doeth me wronge, I must nedes be a lyer, though my cause be ryght, and byolentye I am plagued where as I made no fault, where is there suche a one as Job, that bynkehth vpon scoynfulnesse lyke water: whiche goeth in the companie of wyched doers, and walketh wyth vngodly men: for he hath sayd: though a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therefore hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandyng.

B farre be it from God, that he shal be meddle wyth wychednesse, and farre be it from the Al-myghtye, that he shoulde medle wyth vnyghtous dealinge. * For he shal reward the wof-kes of man, and cause euery man to fynde accor-dyng to his waye. For sure it is, that God condempneth no man wrongfully, and the iud-gement of the almyghtye is not vnyghteous.

Who ruleth the earth in his stede? O whome hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde. To whom hath he gyuen his herre, for to dyawe his spyrte and breath vnto hym? All flesch shal come together vnto nought, and all men shal come agayne vnto dust. If thou nowe haue vnderstandyng, heare what I saye, and hearken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be a ruler, that loneth no ryght? O maye he that is a very innocent man do vngodlye? Is it reason that thou shouldest saye to the hyngre: Thou arte wyched, or thou arte vngodlye, and that before the princes? * He hath no respecte vnto the personnes of the lordlye, and regardeth not the ryche more then the poore. For they be all the worke of his handes. In the tynhelinge of an eye shall they dye: and at mydnyght when the people and the tyrannous rage, then shall they perishe, and be taken awaye wythoute handes. And wher? * His eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth al his goynges. There is no darkenesse nor shadowe of death, that can hyde the wyched doers from him. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgement with God.

Manye one: yea, innumerable doeth he punyssh, and setteth order in theyr stades. Therefore shall he declare theyr workes, he shal turne the nyghte, and they shalbe destroyed. They that were in the stede of beares deale lyke vngodlye men: and therefore he punysshed them, because they turned backe from hym, and wolde not consydre all his wayes. In so moche, that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and nowe he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in trouble.

If he graunt pardone, who will condemne? And if he hyde awaye his countenance, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people, or to any man, thus wyll he do. For the vngodlynesse of the people, doth God make an pprocrite to rapyne ouer them. For so moche then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyll not hynde the. If I haue done anyse, enfourme thou me: If I haue done wronge, I wyll leaue of. Can he do nothyng wythoute the? For thou hast reponed his iudgement. Thou also hast thynne owne mynd, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandyng tell me, and let a wyse man hearken vnto me. As for Job, he hath neuer spoken to the purpose, nor wyselye. O father, lette Job be well tryed, because he hath answered for wyched men: yea, about his synne he doeth wychedlye: triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplyeth his wordes agaynst God.

The xxxv Chapter.

O. H. Elisu

2 Lihu spake moze ouer, and sayde: Thynkest thou it ryght, that thou sayest: I am righteous before God? For thou sayest: What advantage wyl it be vnto the, and what profyte shal thou haue of my syn. Therfore wyl I geue answer vnto the, and to thy companions with the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyder the cloudes, which are byer then thou.

3 If thou hast synned, what hast thou done agaynst hym? If thyne offences be manye, what hast thou done vnto hym? If thou be ryghteous, what greeueth thou him? Or what wil he receyue of thyne hande? Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pyledest to be: ther is a great crye and complaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea, euery man complayneth vnto the cruelte of tyrannutes.

C For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? and that greeueth vs occasion to prayse hym in the nyght? Whiche greeueth vs moze vnderstandyng then he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs moze then he doeth the fowles of heauen.

D If anye suche complayne, no man greeueth answer, and that bycause of the wychednesse of poudre tyrannutes. But if a man cal vpon God, both not he heare hym? Doeth not the Almyghtye accepte hys crye? When thou speakest then, shuldest not be pardoned the, if thou open thy lyfe before hym, & put thy trust in hym? Then vyleth he no violence in his wrath, neyther hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisitiones. Therfore doth Job open his mouth but in vayne, and folowly doth he make so many wordes.

The xxxvi. Chapter.
Celiu sheweth vnder what God punyeth and correcteth.

1 Lihu proceeded forth in his talkyng, and sayd: holde the styl a lytle, and I shall shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wyl open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderstandyng, and proue my matter ryghteous. And truly my wordes shal not be vayne, seinge he is with the that is perfyte in knowledge, behold: the great God calseth awaye no man, for he hym selfe is myghtye in power and wysedome.

As for the vngodly, he shal not prester hym but shal helpe the poore to theyr ryghte. he shal turne hys eyes awaye from the ryghteous, but as hynges that they be in theyr tione: he shal stablysh them for euer, and they shal be exalted.

But if they be layed in pryson and chapyes or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wyl he shewe them their worke and the synnes wherewith they haue vsed cruel violence.

25 he with punyng and nuryng of them roddeth the in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from theyr wychednesse, and to amende. * If they now wyl take hede and serue hym, they shal were out theyr dapes in prosperite, & theyr peaces in pleasure and ioye. But if they wyl not hearken, they shal go thorow the swerde, and peryshe: or euer they be a warr. As for suche as be fained poudres, they shal heap by wyath for the seiers. for they cal not vpon hym, though they be his prysoners. Thus shal they soule peryshe in foolysheesse, and theyr lyfe shal be condemned amonge the fornicatours. The poore shal be deliuered out of his affliction, and rounde them in the eare when they be in trouble. Euen so shal he hepe the (if thou wylt be content) fro the bottomlesse pye that is beneth: and if thou wylt holde the quyte, he shal fyll thy table with plenteousnesse.

For then shal not thy cause be styllled with cruelte, nor pacified with many gyftes. Thynkest thou, that he wyl regarde thy rychedes? he shal not care for golde, nor for all them that excell in strength. Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy stede. But beware that thou turne not aspyde to wychednesse and synne, whiche bytherto thou hast chosen moze then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghtye power: Where is there suche a guyde and lawe gyuer as he? Who wyl reproue hym of his waye? Who wyl saye vnto hym: thou hast done wronge.

D consyder howe great & excellent hys wordes be, whome al men loue and prayse: yea wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but a farr of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth oure knowlege, neyther are we able to come to the experyence of hys peaces. * he turneth the water to small droppe, he dypereth his cloudes to gydder for to rayne, so that they poure downe & droppe vpon men. he can spede out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys Tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the bottom of the see. By thys thyng: gouerneth he hys people, and greeueth them aboundaunce of meate. With the cloudes he hyddeth the lyght: & at hys commaundement it cometh agayne. Therforinge by therof sheweth he to hys frendes, and to the cattell.

The xxxvii. Chapter.
Celiu proueth that the wysdome of God is vnteachable.

A This my deere is astonied, and moved out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, & the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. he gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, & hys lyght teacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. I crynge voyce foloweth hym: for hys gloriouse maiestye greeueth suche a thondre clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It greeueth an horryble sounde when God sendeth out his voyce: greate thynges doeth he whiche we can not comprehend. * When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he greeueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the howers haue theyr strength, and fall downe.

he sendeth fraie vpon euerye man, that they myght knowe thei owne wothes. The beastes crie into thei denmes, and take thei rest: out of the South cometh the tempest, and coulede out of the North.

At the breathe of God the froste cometh, and the waters are fied abrode. he maketh the cloudes to do thei labour, in geyng mofstnesse, and agayne with dislyghte he dymeth a waye the cloude. he distributeth also on euerye syde, accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale out his wothes: that they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them: thei owe the whole woide whether it be to punyssh any land, or to do good vnto them that like hym.

C Herken vnto this (O Job): stand still, and consyde the wonderous wothes of God. Arte thou of counsaile with god, when he doth these thynges? When he causeth the lyghte to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsaile, when he spredeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledg of hys wonders? And howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styll thei owe the South wynde? Hast thou helpe hym to spredde out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were cast out of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shal saye vnto him, for we are vnnere by cause of darkenesse. Shall it be tolde hym what we saye. Shulde a man speake or shoulde he hepe it backe? For euerye man seeth not the lyghte that he heareth cleare in the cloudes, whych he cleneth when he maketh the wynde to blowe: Golde is brought out of the north, but the payle and honour of Gods feare cometh from God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, cuntyng and myghtynesse: he is hys then can be expessed. Let men therfore feare him, for ther shal no man le him, that is wyle in his owne conceyt.

When answered the Lorde vnto Job, out of the storme, & sayd: what is he? hideth his mynde with foolyshe wothes? * Spyd vpon thy loynes lyke a man, for I will questyon with the: see thou geue me a direct answer. Where wast thou when I layed the foundations of the earth? Tell playnely, yf thou hast vnderstandyng. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or who hath spred the lyne vpon it? Where vpon stande the pylers of it? Or who layed the corner stone therof? Where wast thou when the moonyng starrs played me to gyther, and all the chyldren of God reioyced triumphantly? * Who shut the sea with doores, when it brake forth as a chyld out of hys mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a coueryng for it, and swaddled it with the darke? When I gaue it my commaundement, makyng doores and barres for it, sayeng: hys ther shalste thou come, but no farther, and here shalte thou laye downe thy ponde and hys waues. Hast thou gyuen the moonyng his charge (as thou wast bozne) and thewed the dape spryngge hys place, that it myght take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly myght be shakken out? They tokyngs and weapons are touned lyke clape, and set vpon agayne: as the chaungyng of a garment. The vngodly shalbe dysapoynted of thei lyght: and the arme of ppynd shalbe broken. Camest thou euer into the groud of the sea? Or walkedst in flowe corners of the depe? haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doores of the shadow of death? Hast thou also perceyued howe brode the earth is? Yf thou hast knowledg of all thes then shewe me where lyght dwelleth: and wher darkenesse is: that thou mayest byngge vs vnto thei quarters, yf thou canst tel the way to their houses.

Knowest thou? (as thou wast bozne) howe olde thou shouldest be? Wenest thou euer into the treasuries of snowe? Or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, whiche I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of battayle and warre? By what waye is the lyght parted, and into what lande breaketh the east wynde? Who demureth the aboundance of waters into ryuers? Or who maketh a waye for the lyghtenynge and thundre, that it watereth and mofsteth the dryp and barren grounde to make the grasse growe, in places where nobody dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no man remayneth? Who is the father of raynes? Or who hath begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yle? Who hath genoyred the coulde of the aprie, that the waters are as harde as stones: and lye congeled aboue the depe? Wylste thou hynde the swete influences of the seven starrs? Or arte thou able to breake the cyrcle of beauen.

Canst thou bringe forth the moonyng starrs, or the eueryng starrs at conuenient tyme, and conueye them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of beauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordynance therof vpon the earth? Hozeouer, canst thou lft vpon thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye pouer downe a grete rayne vpon the? Canst thou thundre also that they maye go thei waye, and be obedyente vnto the, sayyng: Lo, here are we? Who gyueth sure wysedome, or stedfast vnderstandyng? Who nombzeth the cloudes in wyldome? Who stypleth the vedemte waters of the beauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes agayne? Wylste thou hunte the praye from the lyon, or fede his whelpes lpyng in thei denmes, and lurkyng in thei couthes? Who * prouderth meate for the rauens, when his poyngones crye vnto God and aspe about for lacke of meate?

The xxxix. Chapter.

C God speaketh vnto Job, shewyng hym by the examples of hys wothes: that hys myghtynesse is vnsearchable.

Wilt thou knowest

Handwritten notes in a cursive script, likely a later addition or commentary on the text.

Job humbleth hym self: unto God, the descriptyon of Behemoth and Leuiathan.

Knowest thou the tyme when the wyld geestes, bynge fouthe theye younge amonge the stonye rockes?
Or layest thou waste when the hyndes be to fawne: reckenest thou if monettes after they engender that thou knowest if tyme, of theye bearyng? Or wyl they lye down when they cast theye yongones, and when they are deliuered of theye trauayle and paine? how theye yongones growe vp, and waxe greatte thoowe good fedynge? When they go forth and returme not agayne vnto them: who letteth the wyld ass go free, or who looseth the bondes of the mule? Euen I which haue giuen the wyld be-nest to be theye house, and the vntylled land to be theye dwelling place. That theye maye gyue no force for the multitude of people in the cities neither regarde the cryenge of the dyuer: but let the theye pasture aboute the mountaynes, and folowe the grene grasse. Wyl if vnicorne be so tame as to do the scrupce, or to abide still by the crybbe? Canst thou bynde the yoke about the vnicorne in thy fozowe, to make hym plowe after the in the valleyes? Wylst thou trust hym, (because he is stronge) or commyte thy laboure vnto hym? Wylst thou beleeue hym, that he wyl bringe home thy corne, or to cary any thing vnto thy barn? Savest thou the saye wynges vnto the percoches, or wynges and fethers vnto the stokes? For he leaueth his egges in the earth and layeth them in the dust. He remembereth not that theye myght be troden with fete, or broken with some wyld beast. So hard is he vnto his yongones, as though they were not his, and la-boureth in vayne without anye feare. And that because God hath taken wyse dome from hym, and hath not giuen hym vnderstandynge. Wyl his tyme is that he flyeth vp on hye, he careth neither for horse nor man.

Hast thou giuen the horse his strength, or let-ted hym to bowe downe his necke wth feare, that he letteth hym selfe be daryn for the lyke a grethopper, whereas the stoute neynges that he maketh, is fearefull? He breaketh the grounde with the hooves of his fete chearefullye in his strength, and runneth to mete the darrest men.
He layeth asyde all feare, his stomache is not a bated, neither starteth he abacke for any sword.
Though the quyers cattle vpon hym, though the speare and wyld glystereth, yet russeth he in feare, and brasteth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tush (sayth he) for he smelleth the battayle a farre of the noyse of the captaignes, and the shourynge.

Commeth it thoowe thy wyldome, that the gothauke flyeth towarde the south? Doeth the egle mount vp and make his neste on hye at thy commaundement? He abideth in the stonye rockes and vpon the hye toppes of the harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence seleth he his pray, and loeth far aboue with his eyes. his yongones are fed with bloode: and wher anye dead body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Canst thou speake with the almyghtye, be at rest?
Shuld not he which disputeth with God, gyue him an answer?
Job answered the Lord saying Beholde, I am to vile a person to answer the, therefore wyl I laye myne hand vpon my mouth. Once or twyle haue I spoken, but I wyl saye nomore.

Then answered the lord vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayd: gyd vp thy loynes now lyke a man, and telle me the thynges that I wyl aske the. Wylt thou disanul my iudgement? Or wylt thou contempne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous? In thy power then lyeth the power of God: Maketh thy voyce such a sounde as his doth? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power: vp, decke the in the iolye a-raye, poure out the indignacion of thy wrath: se that thou cast downe all the pious, loke wel that thou makest such as be stubborn to obey: tread downe all the vngodly in theye place, cast them downe into the dust, and couer theye faces with darkenesse: Then wyl I confesse vnto the also, that thyne owne right hande shal saue the.

Beholde the beast Behemoth (whome I made with the) which eateth haye as an ox: so howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauill of his bodye. He speareth out his tayle lyke a Cedar tree, as hye devnes are styffe. His synners are lyke pyres of brasse, his rydges bones are lyke stauces of yron.
Asyste, when God made hym, he ordayned the wyldernes for hym: that the most capnes shuld gyue hym grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take theye pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the molles, the fenues byde hym wth theye shadowe, and the wyllowes of the brooke couer hym rounde about. So withoute anye laboure myghte he drynke oute the whole floude, and sup of Jordan without anye trauayle. Who darre laye hande vpon hym openly, and vnder-take to catche him? Or who darre put an hook thoowe his nose, and laye a snare for hym?

Darrest thou draw out * Leuiathan with an angle, or bynde his tongue with a snare? Canst thou put a ryng in the nose of hym, or boze hym chaue thoowe with an aule? Wyl he make ma-nye saye wordes with the, (thyngest thou) or flaete the: wyl he make a conuenaunt with the?
Or arte thou able to compell hym to do the continuall seruice? Wylt thou take thy pastyme with hym as a byrd, or gyue him vnto thy may-dens, that thy companions may make reflecty-on of hym, or that he maye be parted amonge the machaut men? Canst thou fyl the basket wth his synne, or the fyshpanper with his dead?
Darrest thou laye hand vpon hym? It is better for the to consider what harme myghte happen there

there thowme, and not touche hym. For when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon hym, he shall begyle the.

¶ The xli. Chapter.

Of the same kind as the first chapter is mentioned in the Chapter of Job.

Noman is so cruell that is able to sty: hym vp. * Who is able to stande before me? Who hath geuen me any thyng afoze hande, that I maye rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne: I feare hym not wyther he threaten o: speake saye. Who lyfeth hym vp, o: stryppeth hym out of his clothes, o: who taketh hym by the byrte of his byble? Who openeth the dooze of his face? For he hath horrible teeth rounde aboute. His bodye is couered with scales, as it were with sheldes lockte in, kepte and well compacte together.

BOne is so ioyned to another, that no aye can come in: yea, one hangerth so vpon another, and styketh so togyther, y they can not be sondred. His nelynge is lyke a glysterng fyre, and his eyes lyke the moonyng syne. Out of his mouth goeth toches, and out of his nostrilles there goeth a smoke, lyke as oute of an hore se- thyng pot. His breath maketh the coles buene, and the flamme goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remaineth strenght, and nothyng is to la- bouous for hym. The members of his bodye are ioyned so strypte one to another, & cleaue so faste togyther, that he can not be moued.

CHis herte is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the stycke that the smyth smytheth vpon. When he goeth: the myghthe are strypte, and feare troubleth them. If any man drawe oute a swerde at hym, it shall not hurt hym: there may neyther speare, launcynge nor byest plate abyde hym. He setteth as muche by a strawe as by yrb, and as muche by a rotten Roche as by brasse. He starteth not a way for hym that bendeth y bow and as for synge stones, he careth as muche for stubble as for them. He counteth the darteres no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scoone that shaketh the speare: he treadeth the golde in the myse, lyke the herbe potwerdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and styreth the see togyther lyke an oynment. He maketh a pache to be sene after hym, the deepe is his walkynge place. vpon earth he is there no power lyke vnto his: for he is so made that he feareth not yf a ma- wyl consydre all hye thynges, thys is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

¶ The xlii. Chapter.

The repentance of Job. He prayeth for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

When Job answered the Lorde, and sayde: * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thought hidde vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsaile so secrete, but it shall be knowen? Therefore haue I spoken that I vnderstand not, the thynges that are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandynge. Dherken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: as I were vnto the thyng that I wyl aske the. I haue gyuen dygent care vnto the, and nowe I se the wyche myne eyes. Wherefore I gyue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentance in duste and ashes.

Nowe when the Lorde had spoken these wo: des vnto Job, it fortuneth, that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased wyth the, and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thing that is ryght: lyke as my seruante Job hath done.

Therfore, take you now seuen oren and seue rammes, and go to my seruante Job, and offer vnto your selues a burnt offering: and my seru- nant Job shall praye for you. hym wyl I ac- cepte: and not deale with you after your foolyshe- nesse: in that ye haue not spoken y thyng which is ryght, lyke as my seruante Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, and Bil- dab the Shubite, and Sophar the Naamathite wt thei: waye, and byd accordynge as the Lorde commaunded them. * The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde turned the captiuitie of Job, when he prayed for his frendes: yea, the Lorde gaue Job: & twyle as muche as he hadde afoze.

And then came there vnto hym all his bre- thren, all his systers, and all they that had bene of his acquaintaunce afoze, and bydeate bread wyth hym in his house, wondrynge at hym, and comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Every man al- so gaue hym a certayne summe of moneye, and a seuell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was befoze: for he had fourtene. ¶ Oxen, fyre. ¶ Camels, a. ¶ yoke of oxen, and a. ¶ asses. He had seuen sonnes also, and thre daughters. The fyrt daughter called he Jemina, the seconde Ke- zia, and the thyrde Kezenhabuch. In all the land were no women founde so saye as the dought- ers of Job: and they: father gaue them ende- cytaunce amonge they: brethren. After this lyued Job an hundred and four- ty yeres, so that he sawe: & his chyldren, and his chylders chyldre into the fourth generacyon. And so Job dyed: beynge olde, and of a perfect age.

The psalmes of David.

The first psalme.

BEATVS VIR QVI NON HABIT.

Blessed is that manne þat hath not walked in the counsaill of the vngodly, nor stode in the waie of synners, and hath not sit in the seate of the scornfull. But his delite is in þe lawe of the Lozde: and in his lawe wil he exercise hymselfe day & night. And he shalbe like a tree planted by the water side that brynge forth his frute in due season. His lea falso shal not wither gloke whatsoeuer he dooeth, it shal prosper. As for the vngodly, it is not so with them: but thei are like the chaffe whiche the wynde scattereth awaie. Therefore the vngodly shal not be able to stande in the iudgement, neither the synners in the congregacion of the righteous. But þe Lozde knoweth the waie of þe righteous, & the waie of the vngodly shal perishe.

The seconde psalme.

QVARE TREMERVNT GENTES.

Why doo the heathen so furiously rage together: and why doo þe people imagine a vaine thyng? The kynge of the earth stode vp and the rulers take counsaill together against þe Lozde, and against his anoynted. Let vs breake their bondes a sunder, and cast a waie their corderes fro vs. He that dwelleth in heauen shal laugh them to scorne: the Lozde shal haue them in derisio. Then shal he speake vnto them in his wrath, and vexe them in his soze displeasure. Per haue I sette my hyng vpon my holy hill of Sion. I will preache the lawe, wherof the Lozde hath saied vnto me.

* Thou art my soome, this daie haue I begotten the. Welier of me, and I shal grue the the heathen for thyne inheritaunce, and the vniuersall partes of the earth for thy possession. * Thou shalt bryde them with a robde of yron, and breake them in peces like a potters vessel. Bee wise now therefore, O ye kynge, bee learned, ye þe iudges of the earth. Serue the Lozde in feare, and reioyce before hym with reverence. Kysse the soome lest he bee angry and sa pe perishe from the synners waie, if his wrath bee kindled (yea but a litle) blessed are all thei that put their trust in hym.

The thirde psalme.

DOMINE QVID MULTIPLICATI.

A psalme of David when he fled from the face of Absalon his soonne.

Lorde, how are thei increased, that troubled me: Many are thei, that rise against me. Many one there bee that saie of my soule: there is no helpe for hym in God. Dela.

But thou Lozde, art my defender: thou art my wooshippe, and the lifter vp of my bedde. I did call vpon the Lozde with my voyce and he hearde me out of his holy hill. Dela. I laied me downe and slept, and rose vp again, for the Lozde sustained me. I will not bee asrayde for tenne thousandes of the people that haue sette them selues against me rounde aboute.

Up Lozde and helpe me, O my God, for thou smitest all myne enemies vpon the cheke bone, thou hast broken the teeth of the vngodly. Saluacion belongeth vnto the Lozde, and thy blessing is vpon the people. Dela.

The fourth psalme.

CVM INVOCAREM.

To hym that excelleth in musike. a psalme, of David.

Care me, when I call, O God of my righteousness: thou hast sette me at liberty, when I was in trouble: haue mercy vpon me and hearken vnto my prayer. O ye soones of menne howe long will ye blaspheme myne honour: and haue such pleasure in vanite and scie after leasping? Dela. Knowe this also, that the Lozde hath chosen to hymselfe the mane that is godly: when I call vpon the Lozde, he will heare me. Stande in a dre, and synne not: commen with your owne hearte, and in youre chamber, and be still. Dela. Offer the sacrifice of righteousness, and putte your trust in þe Lozde.

There bee many that saie: who will shewe vs any good? Lozde lift thou vp þe light of thy countenance vpon vs. Thou shalt putte gladnes in my heart, lence the tyme that their cozne and wyne, and theye increased. I will laie me downe in peace, and take my rest: for it is thou Lozde onely, that makest me dwell in safetie.

The v. psalme.

VERBA MEA AVRIBVS.

To hym that excelleth in songes of musike, a psalme of David.

Under my woordes, O Lozde, consider my meditacio. O hearken thou vnto the voyce of my calling, my hyng and God, for vnto the will I make prayer. My voyce shalt thou heare by tymes, O Lozde, early in the morning will I directe my prayer vnto the, and will loue vp. * For thou art þe God that hath no pleasure in wickednes neither shall anye euill dwell with the. Suche as bee folowre, 234. Will shall not stande in thy sight. for thou hatest all them that wooshe vanitie. Thou shalt destroye them that speake leasing. thou shalt saye: whye will abhorre worbe the blooddrinker. and discretful manne. But as for me I will come into thy house even vpon the multitude of thy mercie, and in thy freer will. I will worshippe towarde thy holy temple. Leade me, O Lorde, in thy righteousness because of myne enemies: make thy waye plain before my face. For there is no faithfulness in his mouth: their inward partes are verie wickednes.

Psalm. vii. viii. ix.

Roma. iii. i.

3 Their throte is an open sepulchre: they flatter with their tog. Destroye thou them O God let them perishe the more their owne imaginations, cast them out in multitude of their vngodlynesse: for they haue rebelled against thee. And let all them that put their trust in thee, reioyce: they shall curte be geuyng of thanks, because thou defendest them: they that loue thy name shall be ioyfull in thee. For thou Lorde wilt geue thy blessing vnto the righteous: and w thy sauourable kyndenes wilt thou defende hym, as with a shield.

The. vi. Psalme.
DOMINE NE.

To hym that excelleth in musike, vpon the instrument of eight stringes, 3 Psalme of Dauid.

Psalm. vii. viii. ix.

Q Lorde, rebuik me not in thyn indignacion: neither chasten me in thy displeasure. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde: for I am weake: O Lorde heale me: for my bones are vexed: My soule also is troubled: But Lorde howe long wilt thou punishe me? Turne the, O Lorde, and deliuer my soule: O haue me for thy mercies sake.

Chap. vii. ix.

Psalm. vii. ix.

Psalm. vii. ix.

3 For in death no manne remembreth the: who will geue the thanks in the pitte? I am weary of my groynng, euery night wathe I my bed, and water my couche with my teares. My beweping is gone for deere trouble, & wome a wate because of all mine enemies. I wait from alpe that wooshe vanitie: for I Lorde hath heard the voice of my wepyng. The Lorde hath hard my petition, & Lorde will receiue my prayer. All mine enemies shall be confounded & soze vered, they shall be turned backe and put to shame sodenly.

The. vii. Psalme.
DOMINE DEVS MEVS.

3 Signation of Dauid whiche he sang vnto the Lorde in the bulins of Chus the sonne of Iemini.

Psalm. vii. ix.

Q Lorde my God, in the daye I putte my trust: saue me from all them y persecute me, and deliuer me: Least he deuoure my soule like a Le, and teare it in peeces: while they is none to helpe. O Lorde my God, if there bee any wickednes in my handes: if I haue rewarded euill vnto hym that dealt frendely with me, yea, I haue deliuered hym, that without any cause is myne enemy. Then let myne enemy persecute my soule and take me: yea, let hym treade my life downe vpon the earth, and laie myne honoure in the dust. And thou O Lorde, in thy mercy: and lift up thy self, because of the indignacions of myne enemies: arise up for me, in iudgement that thou hast commaunded. And so shall the congregacion of the people come about, for their sakes: therefore lift up thy self again.

The Lorde shall iudge the people, geue sentence vnto me O Lorde, accordyng to my righteousness, and accordyng to the innocencie that is in me. O let the wickednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but gyde thou the iust. For righteous God trieth the verie heartes and reins. My hely chyneth of God, which pfectureth them that are true of heart. God is a righteous iudge, & strong and patient, and God is prouoked euery daie. If a manne will not turne, he will whet his sword, he hath bent his bowe & made it ready. He hath prepared hym self instruments of death: he ordeineth his arrows against the persecutours. & holde, he traualleth with my schiele, he hath concerned for me, and brought forth vngodlynesse. He hath grauen and dygged up a pitte, and is fallen hymself in to the destruction that he made for other. For his trasaille shall come vpon his owne bedde: & his wickednes shall fall vpon his owne pate. I will geue thanks vnto the Lorde accordyng to his righteousness, and will praise the name of the Lorde the more highly.

The. viii. Psalme.
DOMINE DOMINVS NOSTER.

To hym that excelleth in Sistrich, a Psalme of Dauid.

Q Lorde our gouernour how excellent is thy name in all the world, thou that hast set thy glorye above the heuens. Out of the mounthe of verie babes and suckynges hast thou ordeined strength because of thyn enemies, that thou mightest kill the enemye and the auenger. For I will confesse thy heauens, even the woorkes of thy syngers: the moone and the starres whiche thou hast ordeined. What is manne, that thou art mynde full of hym: and the loonne of manne, that thou visitest hym? Thou madest hym lower then angels, to crowne hym with glorye and worship. Thou makest hym to haue dominion of the woorkes of thy handes: and thou hast put all thynges in subiection vnder his fete. All shepe and oxen, yea, and the beastes of the felde. The foules of the aire, and fische of the sea, & what soeuer walketh vpon the pannes of the seas. O Lorde our gouernour, how excellent is thy name in all the world.

The. ix. Psalme.
COVITEBOR TIBI.

To hym that excelleth vpon Timothee Ladder, a Psalme of Dauid.

I will geue thanks vnto the, O Lorde, with my whole heart, I will speake of all thy maruailous woorkes. I will be glad, and reioyse in thee, yea, my synges wil I make of thy name, O thou moste moste hieft. While myne enemies are dryuen backe, thei shall fall, & perishe at thy presence.

For thou hast maintained my righte, and my cause is set in the throne that iudgeth righte. Thou hast rebuked the heathen, & destroyed the vngod-ly, & hast put out their name for ever & ever. O thou enemye, destructions are come to a perpetual ende: euen as the cities whiche thou hast destroyed, their memoriall is perished with them.

But the Lorde shall endure for ever, he hath also prepared his scat for iudgement. For he shall iudge the worlde in righteousnes, & ministre true iudgement vnto the people. The Lorde also wilbe a defence for the oppressed: & euen a refuge in due tyme of trouble. And thei that knowe thy name, will putte their trust in the: for thou (Lorde) hast neuer failed them since the. O praise of Lorde, which dwelleth in Shiloh, we people of his dooynge. For when he maketh inquisition for bloodde, he remembereth them: & forgetteth not the complaint of the poore. Have mercy vpon me (Lorde) consider the trouble whiche I suffer of them that hate me, thou that list test me vpon the gates of death. That I maie shewe all thy praises within the portes of the daughter of Shiloh, I wil reioice in thy saluacib.

The heathen are sounke downe in the pitte that thei made: in the same net whiche thei hyd piously, is their owne fote taken. The Lorde is knownen to execute iudgement: the vngodly is trapped in the booke of his owne lades. A consideracib. Sela. The wicked shall be turned vnto hell, and all the people that forgette God: for the poore shall not be alwaie forgotten, the pa-cients abiding of the meke shall not perishe for ever. Alas Lorde, and let no manne haue the v-pper hand, let the heathen bee iudged in thy sight.

But thei in feare (Lorde) of the heathen maie knowe them selues to bee but meene. Sela.

Psalm. xi.

VT QVID DOMINE.

Why standest thou so farre of (Lorde) & hidest thy face in fynesfull tyme of trouble? The vngodly for his owne lust, dooth persecute the poore: let them bee taken in the crafty willnes that haue imagined. For the vngodly hath made boast of his owne heartes desire, and speeth good of the conetious, whom God abhorreth. The vngodly is so proude that he careth not for God, neither is God in all his thoughtes.

His waies are alwaie greuous, thy iudgementes are farre aboue out of his sight, and therfore desireth he all his enemies. For he hath said in his hearte: tush I shall neuer be cast downe there shall no harme happen vnto me. His mouthe is full of cursing, and deceit & fraude vnder his tong is vngodlynes & vanitie. He spiereth lurking in the thorny corners of the trees, & piously in his lurking denes doth he mur-ther the innocent, his eyes are set against the poore.

For he lieth waiting secretly (euen as a Lid lurketh in his den) that he maie catch the poore. He dooth rauishe the poore, when he getteth hym into his net. He falleth downe & hum-bleth himself, that the congregation of the poore maie fall into the hande of his captaiues. He hath said in his hearte: tush, God hath forgotten, he hideth awaie his face, and he wil neuer see it. Arise (Lorde) and lift vp thyne hande, forget not the poore. The wicked shall blessed blasphemie God, while he dooth late in his heart: tush, thou God carest not for it: Surely thou hast sene it. For thou beholdest vngod-lines and wrong. That thou maist take matter into thy hande: the poore committeth hymself vnto the: for thou art the helper of the friendlesse.

Break thou the power of the vngodly and malicious, take awaie his vngodlines & thou shalt finde none. The Lorde is hyng for ever & ever, and the heathen are perished out of the lande. Lorde thou hast heard the desire of the poore: thou preparest their heart and thine care perkeneth thereto. To helpe the fatherles and poore vnto their righte: that the manne of the earth bee no more exalted against them.

IN DOMINO CONFIDO.

To the chaunter, a Psalm of David.

As the Lorde put I my trust: how safe is my soule: for he should be as a birde vnto your hill: For lo, the vngodly bendeth their bowe, & make ready their arrowes wthin the quier that thei maie pynche at them whiche are true of heart. For the foundations wil bee cast downe, & what hath the righteous doot? The Lorde is in his holy temple: the Lorde sitteth in heauen. His eyes consider the righteous, his eie hideth the child of meane. The Lorde aloweth the righteous: but the vngodly, & hym that delieth in wickednes, dooth his soule abhorre.

Vpon the vngodly he shall rayne snares, fire, and byrmstone storme and tempest: this shall be their porcion to drinke. For the righteous Lorde loueth righteousnes: his countenance wil be-holde the thyng that is iust.

To hym that excelleth vpon an instrumente of eight stringes a Psalm of David.

Elp me Lorde, for there is not one godly mane left. For the faithfull are minished from among the childre of me. Thei talke of vanitie euerp one with his neighbour, thei doot but flatter with their lippes & besemble in their double heart. The Lorde shall rote out all disceatfull lippes, & the tong that speaketh proude thin-ges. Whiche haue said: w our tong wil we preuaile: we are thei that ought to speake, who is Lorde ouer vs: now for the cofortles troubles saue of the nedp, & because of the depe sighing of the poore: I will vnclothe the Lorde, & will help euerp one, fro hym that dwelleth against hym & will set them at rest. The wordes of the Lorde are pure wordes euen as the siluer, whiche fro earth is tried & purified seven tymes in the fire.

Thou shalt kepe them (Lorde) thou shalt pelerne hym from this generation for ever.

¶ The. lxxviii. Psalme.
DELIGAM TE DOMINE.

¶ To the chaunter of David the seruant of p Lozde, whiche spake vnto p Lozde the wordes of this song (in the daie that p Lozde deliuered hym from the hande of all hys enemyes, and from the hande of Saule) and he sayed.

¶ I Will loue p O Lozde, my strength.

The Lozde is my stony roche, p my defence, my sauoure, my God, p my might, in whos I wil trust, my bucker p home also of my saluacion, p my refuge. * I will call vpon the Lozde whiche is worthy to be praised, so shall I be safe fro myne enemyes.

* The sorowes of death compassed me, and the ouerthrownges of vngodlinesse made me afraid. The paines of hell came aboute me, p snares of death ouertoke me. In my trouble will I call vpon the Lozde, p complain vnto my God. So shall he heare my voyce out of his temple, p my complainte shall come before hym, it shall entre eue into his eares. * The earth trembled p quaked, the very foundations also of the hilles shoke p were remoued, because he was wroth.

¶ There went a smoke out of his presence: p a consuming fier out of his mouth, so that coles were kindled at it. He bowed the heauens also, and came downe, p it was darke vnder his fete. He rode vpon the cherubyns, p did flie, he came flying vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darkness his secreete place: his pavilion rounde about hym w p dark water p thicke cloudes to couer hym. At the brightnesse of his presence his cloudes remoued, hailestones, p cooles of fire. The Lozde also thodded out of heauē, p the hiest gaue his thunder, hailestones and cooles of fire.

¶ He sent out his arrowes p scattered them, he cast forth lightnynges, p destroyed them. The springes of waters were sene, p the foundations of the round world were discovered at thy chydng, O Lozde, at p blasmyng of the birth of thy displeasure. He shall send downe fro the heigh to fetch me, p shal take me out of many waters. He shall deliuer me from my strongest enemye, p fro them which hate me: for they are to mighty for me. They p p uented me in p daie of my trouble: but p Lozde was my vpholder. He brought me forth also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, euen because he had a fauour vnto me. The Lozde shall reward me after my righteous dealing: accordyng to the clemmes of my handes shall he recompence me. Because I haue kept p waters of the Lozde: and haue not forsaken my God as p wicked dooth. For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes. p will not cast out his commaundementes fro me. I was also vncorrupt before hym: and eschued myne owne wickednes.

the pronde. Thou also shalt light my candell: p Lozde my God shall make my darkness to bee light. For in the I shall disconfite an hoste of men: p with the help of God I shall lepe ouer p wall. The waie of God is an undefiled waie

* the word of p Lozde also is tried in the fier: he is the defender of all them p put their trust in hym. For p who is God but the Lozde, p who hath any strength except our God? It is God p girdeth me with strength of warre p maketh my waie perfect. * He maketh my fete like deers fete: and setteth me vp on hye. p he teacheth myne handes to fight, p myne armes shal breake euē a bowe of stele. Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy saluacion: thy right hand also shall hold me vp, p thy louyng correccion shal make me great. Thou shalt make rouse inough vnder me for to go, p my footstepes shal not slyde.

I will foloe vpon myne enemyes, and ouertake them, neither will I turne again, till I haue destroyed them. I will smite them, that they shall not bee able to stande: but fall vnder my fete. Thou hast girded me with strength vnto the battail, thou shalt throw downe myne enemyes vnder me. Thou hast made mine enemyes also to turne their backs vpon me, and I shall destroy them that hate me. * They shal crye but there shal be none to help them: yea, euen vnto the Lozde shal they crye, but he shall not heare them. I will beate them as small as the dust before p wynde, I will cast them out as p clauie in p sterres. Thou shalt deliuer me from the steynges of the people: and p shalt make me the head of the heathen. A people whos I haue not knowen shall serue me. A sone as they heare of me they shall obey me: but the straunge chyldren shall dissemble with me. The straunge chyldren shall saile, and be afraid out of their p p sones.

The Lozde liueth: p blessed be my strong helper, p praised bee the God of my saluacio. Eue the God whiche seeth p I bee auenged: p subdueth the people vnto me. It is he that deliuereth me from my p enemies, and setteth me vp aboute myne aduersaries: thou shalt rid me from the wicked manne. * For this cause I wil geue thanks vnto the O Lozde, among the scitles and syng praises vnto thy name. * Create prosperite geueth he vnto his kyng: and therewith louyng hyndenes vnto Dauid his anointed, and vnto his seide for euermore.

My God: my God: as thou upon me why I hast forsaken me: and art so farre fro my health, and from the wordes of my complaint. O my God, I crye in the daie tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the night season also I take no rest. And thou continuest holp. O thou worship of Israel. Our fathers hoped in the, thei trusted in the and thou diddest deliuer them. Thei called vpon the, and were helped: thei put their trust in the, and were not confounded. But as for me I am a woyme and no manne: a very scoone of menne and the out cast of the people. * All thei that se me laugh me to scoone: thei shote out their lippes and waite the hee sayng: * he trusted in God: he would deliuer hym: let hym deliuer hym if he wil haue hym. * But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope when I hanged yet vpon my mothers breasts.

I haue been left vnto the ever sence I was borne: thou art my God euen from my mothers wombe. O go not from me, for trouble is hard at hand, and there is none to help me. Many oxen are come about me, fat bulles of Basan close me in on euery syde. Thei gape vpon me with their mouthes as it were a rampyng and rooyng Lion.
* I am poured out like water, and al my bones are out of ioynt: my heart also in the midst of my bodie is euen like melting waxe.

My strength is dried vp like a pottherd, and my tog cleueth to my gummies: and thou shalt byng me into the dust of death. For many dog ges are come about me and the counsaill of the wicked laie siege against me. Thei pearced my handes and my feet, I maie tell all my bones, thei stande skarpyng and lohyng vpon me. * Thei part my garments among them, and cast lot tes vpon my vesture. But see not thou farre fro me, O Lord: thou art my succour, haste the to help me. Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my dearlyng from the power of the dogge.

Haue me from the Lions mouth: thou hast heard me also from among the hornes of the vni cornes. I will declare thy name vnto my byer thyen: in the midst of the congregacion will I praise the. O praise the Lord ye that feare hym Magnifie hym all ye of the seed of Jacob, and feate hym all ye seed of Israel. * For he hath not despised nor abhorred the lowe state of the poore: he hath not hid his face from hym, but when he called vnto hym, he heard hym.

My praise is of the in the great congregaciō, & my my bowes wyl I perforce in the sight of the that feare hym. The poore shall eate, & be satisfied: they shal seke after the Lord: the poore shall saye: our heart shall be full of the Lord. All the kyned of the world shall remember the Lord: & be turned vnto the Lord, & all the kyned of the world shall saye: the Lord is our God. For the Lord is the God of the world, & he is the governour among the people. All suche as be set vpon earth, haue caten and worshipped. All they that go downe in to the dust, shall singe before hym, & no man hath quickered his owne soule: for the Lord shall serue and his testimonies. For thy names sake, O Lord, be merciful vnto my sinne, for it is great.

What man is he that feareth the Lord? him shall he teache in the waye that he shall chose.
His soule shall dwell at ease, and his seed shall enherit the lande. The secretes of the Lord are among them that feare hym: and he wyl shewe them his covenante. Mine eyes are euere looking vnto the Lord, for he shall plucke my feete oute of the nette. Turne the vnto me, and haue mercy vpon me: for I am desolate, and in miserie.
The sorowes of my heart are enlarged. O bring thou me out of my troubles. Loke vpon myne aduersyte and miserie, and forgiue me all my synne. Consydre myne enemies howe manye they are, & they beate a tiramous hate against me. O kepe my soule, & deliuer me: let me not be confounded, for I haue put my truste in the Lord. Let perfectnes and righteous dealing waite vpon me, for my hope hath bene in the Lord.
Iraell O God, out of all his troubles.

The. cxvi. Psalm.
IUDICA ME DOMINE.

A Psalm of David.

Be thou my iudge, O Lord, for I haue walked innocentie: my truste hath bene also in the Lord, therefore shal I not fail. O Examine me, O Lord, and proue me, trye out my reynes, & my hearte.
For thy louing kindnesse is before myne eyes, & I wyl walke in thy truth. I haue not dwelt vaine persones, neyther wyl I haue fellowship with the dysceitfull. I haue hated the congregation of the wicked, and wyl not syt among the vngodly. I wyl walke in my handes in innocence, O Lord, and so wyl I go to thyne auter. That I maye shewe the voyce of thankes.
Singing, and tell of all thy wonderful workes.
O Lord, I haue loued the habitation of thy house and the place where thyne honoure dwelleth.
O shut not vp my soule wth the synners, nor my lyfte wth the bloudie person. In whose han-des is wretchednesse, and theye ryght handes is full of gyftes. But as for me, I wyl walke in innocencie: O deliuer me, and be merciful vnto me. My foote standeth ryght, I wyl payse the Lord in the congregacions.

The xxxi. Psalme.
IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.
To the chaunter a Psalme of Dauid.

In the, O Lord, have I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion: deliuer me in thy righteousnesse. Dowe downe thyne care to me, make hast to deliuer me. And be thou my stronge roche, and house of defence, & thou mayest save me. For I am my stronge roche, & my castell: Be thou also my guyde, and leade me for thy names sake. Draw me out of the net & they have layed pryvely for me, for thou art my strengthe. * Into thy handes I commend my spirite: For I haue redeemed me, O Lord & God of truth. I haue hated the that holde of superstitious vanities, and my trust hath bene in the Lord. I will be glad & reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast conuersed my trouble, & hast knowen my soule in aduersities. Thou haste not put me vp into the hand of the enemy, but hast let my feet in a large roome. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lord, for I am in trouble, & mine eye is consumed for very heynesse, euen my soule and my body. For my lyfe is waken old wyth heynesse, and myne yeares wyth mourning. My strengthe faileth me, because of myne iniquitie and my bones are consumed. I became a reprove amonge all myne enemies, but specially amonge myne neighbours and they of myne acquaintance were afrayed of me, and they that byd le me without, conuersed them selues fro me. I am cleane forgotte, as a dead man out of mynde: I am become lyke a broke vessel. For I haue herde the blasphemie of I multiplye: & feare is on euery syde whyle they conspyre together agaynst me, and take theyr counsayl to take away my lyfe. But my hope hath bene in the, O Lord, I haue sayd: I am my God. My tyme is in thy hande, deliuer me from the hande of myne enemies, and from them that persecute me. Bewe thy seruaunte the lyght of thy countenance, & save me for thy mercies sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I haue called vpon thee: let I vngodly be put to confounde & be put to spylle in I graue. Let I lypng lypes be put to spylle, which cruelly, disdainfully & spylfully speake agaynst I righteous. O how plentyfull is thy goodnesse, wherby I haue layed vp, for the that feare the: and I thou hast prepared for the, that put their trust in the euen before the sonnes of me: Thou shalt hyde the pryvely by thyne owne presence fro the prouoking of all men, thou shalt kepe the secretly in thy tabernacle fro the styfe of toges. Thankes be to the Lord: for he hath shewed me maruelous great kyndnesse in a stronge cyrie. And whyle I made hast, I sayd: I am caste out of the syght of thine eyes. Nevertheless, thou herdest the voyce of my prayer when I cryed vnto the. O loue the Lord, al ye his sayntes, for I the Lord presterue the that are saydful, & plenteously rewardeth be the proude doer. * Be strong, and he shall stably the poure heart, all ye that putte your trust in the Lord.

BEATI QVORVM.
An instruction of Dauid.

Blessed is he, whose vngodlynesse is forgotte: & whose synne is couered. * Blessed is the man, vnto whom the Lord imputeth no synne, & in whose synne there is no gyle. For whyle I helde my longe, my bones consumed awaye the: and my daily chylapnyng. For thy hate is heyn vpon me daye and night, and my myghter is like the drought in Sommer. Wela. I will knowe my synne vnto the, and myne vngodlynesse haue I not hyd. I sayd: * I will couerle my synnes vnto the Lord, & so thou shalt gaue the wickednes of my synne. Wela. For this shall euery one that is godly, make his prayer vnto the in a tyme when thou mayest be founde, but in the greete waterfloodes they shall not come nre him. Thou art a place to hyde me in, thou shalt presterue me from trouble: I shall compasse me about w songes of deliuerance. Wela. I will enfourme the, & teach the in the way where in I shalt go: and I will guyde the wyth myne eye. Be ye not lyke horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandyng, whose mouthes must be hold with byt and bypale, lest they fall vpon the. Great plagues remaine for the vngodly, but whoso putteth his trust in the Lord, mercy embraceth hym on euery syde. Be glad, O ye righteous, and reioyse in the Lord: and be ioyful all ye that are true of heart.

The xxxiii. Psalme.

EXULTATE IVTI IN DOMINO.

Reioyse in the Lord, O ye righteous: for it becommeth well the iust to bee thankfull. * Praise I the Lord with harpe syngyng psalmes vnto hym with the lute and instrument of ten strynges. Syng vnto the Lord a newe song, syng prayles lute iye vnto hym with a good corage. For the word of the Lord is true, and all his wordes are saythfull. He loneth righteousnesse & iudgement, the earth is full of the goodnes of the Lord. * By the word of the Lord are the heauens made: and all the hostes of the by the bryth of his mouth. He gathereth the waters of the see together as it were vpon an hepe, and layeth vnto the depe as in a treasure house. Let all I earth feare the Lord: stande in awe of hym, al ye that dwell in the worlde. * For he spake, and it was done: he commaunded, and it stode fast. The Lord bynggeth the counsayll of the heathen to nought, and maketh the deuyles of the people, to bee of none effect: (and casteth out the counsayles of princes) The counsayle of the Lord shall endure for euer: and the thoughtes of hym hart from generation to generation. Blessed are the people, whose God is the Lord Iehouah, and blessed are the folke I haue chosen hym to be theyr inperptance. The Lord looked downe from heauen, & behelde al the chyldren of men: from the habyracion of his dwellynge, he conspyeth al them that dwell in the earth. He salponeth al the hartes of them, and vnderstandeth all theyr woordes. There is no hyng that can be saued by the multitude of an uered by muche strengthe. A host is counted hold, the eye of the Lorde is vpon them y fear hym, and vpon them that put their trust in his to fede them in the tyme of dearth. Oure soule hath patiently caried for the Lorde for he is our prync and our helpe. For our hert shall reioyse therof, & be glad. O praise the Lorde with me, and lette vs magnifye his name together. * I sought the Lorde, and he heard me: yea, he deli-uered me out of all my feare. They had an eye vnto hym, and were lightened, and their faces weren not ashamed. Lo, the poze cryeth, and the Lorde heareth hym, yea, & saueh hym out of al his troubles. * The aungell of the Lorde tar-yeth round about them y feare hym, & deliuereth the. O fast & se, how gracious y Lorde is, * blessed is the man that trusteth in hym. O feare the Lorde, ye that be his sayntes, for they that feare hym lacke nothing. The lyons do lacke, & suffre hunger, * but they whiche seke the Lorde shall want no maner of thyng y is good. Come ye chyldren and herchen vnto me, I will teache you the feare of the Lorde. * What man is he y Kepe thy tonge fro euyl, & thy lippes y they peace and ensue it. The eyes of the Lorde are ouer the ryghteous, and his eares are ope vnto their prayres. The countenance of the Lorde is agaynst them y do euell, to rote out the remebraunce of the from of y earth. The righteous to them y are of a contrite hert, & wyl saue such bles of the ryghteous, but y Lorde deliuereth hym out of all. He keperh all his bones, so that not one of them is broken. But misfortune shal sape the vngodly, & they that hate the ryghte-ous, shal be desolate. The Lorde deliuereth the soules of his seruantes: and all they y put their

Of Dauid.

I Leate thou my cause, O Lorde, with them that stryue with me, and fyghte tpon agaynst them that fyghte a-gaynst me. Laye hand vpon y wilde and buckler, and stande vp to helpe me. Wryng the speare, & stop the way agaynst them y persecute me: laye vnto my soule: I am thy saluacyd. Let them be confounded & put to shame y seke after my soule, let them be turned backe and brought to confusion, y ymagyne mischefe for me. * Let them be as the dust befoze y wind, and the aungell of the Lorde scatterynge the. Let they way be darke & slippery, and let the aungel of the Lorde persecute them. For they haue pysurly layd they net to destroy me without a cause, yea, euen without a cause haue they made a pyt for my soule. Let a sodayne destruccyon come vpon hym vnto wares: and his net that he hath layd pynely, catch hym selfe: that he may fall into his owne mischefe. And my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: it shal reioyce in his saluaci-on. All my bones shall saye Lorde, who is lyke vnto the: which deliuereth the poore from hym that is so stronge for hym: yea, the poore & hym that is in misery from hym that spyleth hym.

Falle witnesseth vnto the: they layd to my charge thynges that I knowe not. They re-warde me euil for good, to the greates dyscom-forte of my soule. Reuerthelike, when they were sicke, I put on sacke clothe: and humbled my soule with fastynge, and my prayer shall eourne into myne owne bosome. I behaued my selfe as though it had ben my frend or my brother. I went heuylie, as one that mourneth for his mother. But in myne aduersyte they re-ioysed and gathered the together: yea, y verpe abiection came together agaynst me vnto wares makinge mooves at me, and ceased not. Which the flatterers were busy mockers, whiche gnashed vpon me with they teeth. Lorde, howe longe wylst thou loke vpon this? O deliuer my soule fro the calamities which they bring on me, and my dearynge from the lyons. So wyl I geue the thanks in the great congrega-cyon I wyl praise the amonge muche people.

O let not them that are myne enemyes try-umphe ouer me vngodly, neyther let the winke with they eyes that hate me without a cause.
And why they chumnyng is not for peace but they ymagyne disceitfull wordes agaynst them that are quete in the lande. They gaped vpon me with they mouthes, and sayd: spe on the, spe on the: we wyll se it with oure eyes.

This thou hast seene, O Lorde: holde not thy tonge then, go not farre from me, O Lorde. Awake & stande vp to iudge my quarrell, auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lorde. Judge me, O Lorde my God, accordyng to thy ryghte ouerliffe, & let them not tryumphe ouer me.

Let the not say in their hertes, there, there, so wold we haue it: neyther let them say: we haue denoured hym. Let them be put to confusion and shame together that reioyse at my trouble let them be clothed with rebuke and dishonoure that boost them selues agaynst me. Let them be glad and reioyse that fauoure my ryghtous dealyng: yea, let the sape alwaye: blessed be the Lorde, whiche hath pleasure in the prosperite of his seruants. And as for my tonge, it shal be talkyng talking of thy righteousness, & of thy people, all the daye longe.

C The. xxxvi. Psalme.

DIXIT INIVSTVS.

To schalister of David the seruaunt of f Lozde.

I parte sheweth me the wickednes of the vngodly, & there is no feare of God before his eyes. For he flatereth hym self in his owne lyght, till his abhominable synne be found out. The wordes of his mouth are vngodly and full of dyscreit: he hath left of to behaue hym selfe wylfullye and to do good. He ymagyneth mischefe vpon his bed, & hath set hym self in no good way, neither doth he abhorre any thyng that is euill. Thy mercy O Lozde, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy saythfulnes vnto the cloudes. Thy righteousness standeth lyke f steepe mountaynes: thy iudgements are lyke the great depe. Thou Lozde shalt saue both man & beast. How excellent is thy mercy O God: and the chyldren of men shall put their trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. They shall be satisfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them dynke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For wyth the is the well of life, and in thy lyght, shall we le lyght. O continue forth thy louyng kyndnes vnto them that knowe the, & thy righteousness vnto the that are true of hart. O let not f foote of pryde come agaynst me: & let not the hande of the vngodly cast me downe. There are they fallen: & that doe the wickednesse: they are cast downe & shall not be able to stande.

C The. xxxvii. Psalme:

NOLITE EMVLARE.

A Psalme of David.

Ret not thy selfe because of the vngodly: neyther be f enuyous agaynst the euill doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse, and be withered out as the grene herbe. But thou thy trust in the Lozde, and do good: dwell in the land and verely thou shalt be fed. Delite thou in the Lozde, and he shall geue thee thy hartes desyre.
Committ thy way vnto the Lozde, and put thy trust in hym, and he shall byng it to passe. He shall make thy righteousness as cleare as the lyght, and thy iust dealing as the none daye.

Holde the styl in the Lozde, & abide patiently vpon hym: but geue not thy selfe at hym whose way doth prosper agaynst the man, & doth after euill counsailes. Leane off from wrath, and let go displeasure: fret not thy selfe, eis thou shalt be moued to do euill. Wicked doers shall be rooted out: & they that patiently abyde the Lozde, those shall enter the land. Yet a lytle while, and the vngodly shall be cleane gone: thou shalt loke after his place: & he shall be away. But the merry spirit that possesse the earth, & shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngod-ly seeth the couerall agaynst the iust, & gnaweth vpon hym with his teeth. The Lozde shall laugh hym to scorne, for he hath seene, that his day is commynge. The vngodly haue drawen out the sweard, & haue bled their bowe, to cast downe the poore & needy, & to slaye such as be of right conuersacion. They swearde shall go thorow their owne hart, and their bowe shall be broken.

A small thyng f the righteous hath, is better then great rychesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, and the Lozde vpholdeth the righteous. The Lozde knoweth the dayes of the godly, and they enduretaunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in the perillous tyme, & in the da-yes of death they shall haue ynough. As for the vngodly, they shall perishe: and the enemyes of the Lozde shall consume, as the fat of lamber, yea euen as the smoke shall they consume awaye.
The vngodly borroweth, & payeth not againe, but the righteous is merciful & lyberall. Such as be blessed of God, shall possesse the land, and they that be cursed of hym, shall be rooted out.

The Lozde ordynerh a good mans goyng, and maketh his waye acceptable to hym selfe.

* Though he fall, he shall not be cast away, for the Lozde vpholdeth hym with his hande. I haue bene young, & nowe am old: and yet sawe I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor his seede begginge the: because. * The righteous is euer mercyfull, and lendeth, and his seed is blessed. Ripe from euill, and do the thyng that is good: and dwell for euer. For the Lozde loueth the thyng that is right, he forsaketh not his that be godly but they are preserved for euermore: O f the vngodly, it shall be rooted out. The righteous shall endure the lande, & dwell therein for euer. * The mouth of the righteous is exercised in wysdome, & his tongue shall be talking of iudgements.

The lawe of f God is in f hart, and his goynges shall not slide. The vngodly seeth f righteous and seeketh occasion to slaye hym.

The Lozde will not leaue hym in f hande, nor condemne hym when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lozde, and kepe his waye, and he shall promote the, that thou shalt possesse the lande: wher the vngodly shall perishe, thou shalt se it. I my self haue sene the vngodly in great power, and floozyng lyke a grene bay tree: I wente by, and lo, he was gone: I sought hym, but f could no where be founde. Kepe innocency, & take hede vnto the thyng f is right, for that shall byng a man peace at the last. As for the transgressours they shall perishe together, and the ende of the vngodly is, they shall be rooted out at the last. But the saluacion of f righteous cometh off the Lozde, which is also their strengthe in the tyme of trouble. And the Lozde shall stande by them, and saue the: he shall deliuer them from the vngodly, and shall saue them, because they put thei trust in hym.

DOMINE NE IN FVRORE.

A Psalme of David for remembraunce.

thyne angre: neyther chasten me, in thy deuy displeasure. For thine arowes synke fast in me, and thy hande pelleth

Psal. xxxix. xl. xli.

preserveth me soze. There is no health in my flesh because of thy displeasure, neither is there any rest in my bones, by reason of my synne. For my wickednesse are gone over my head, & are lyke a soze burthen, to beaue for me to beare. My wordes synne & are corrupt, & as for my foolysheesse. I am brought into so great trouble and myscepe, that I go mourning all day longe. For my synnes are fylled wyth a soze displeaure, and there is no whole parte in my bodye. I am feble and soze smitt: I have rozed for the very disquietnesse of my hart. Lord thou knowest al my besyde, & my grownyng is not hyd from the. My heart panted, my strength hath fayled me, and the lycht of myne eyes is gone fro me.

C My louers & my neyghbours did stand looking vpon my trouble, & my kynsmen made a farre of. They also that sought after my lyfe, layed shames for me: and they that went aboute to do me euell, talked of wickednesse & ymagined disceyte all the day longe. As for me, I was lyke a deafe man and herde not: & as one that is domme, whiche doth not open his mouth. I became euen as a mule that heareth not: & in whose mouth are no repproues. For in the, O Lord, haue I put my trust, thou shalt answer for me O Lord my God. I haue requyred, that they shoulde not triumphe over me: for when my fote slippeth, they reioyced greatlye against me. And I truly am set in the plage, & my heynesse is euer in my sight. For I wyl confesse my wickednesse, and be soze for my synne. But myne enemies lyue, and are myghtye: and they that hate me wrongfully, are many in number. They also that reward euell for good, are against me, because I folowe the thyng that is good. For sake me not (O Lord my God.) Be not thou farre fro me. Hasten the to helpe me, O Lord: & my saluacion.

DIXI CUSTODIAM VIAM.

To the chaunter of Jeduthun, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Sayd: I wyl take hede to my wayes, that I offend not in my tonge. I wyl kepe my mouth (as it wer with a bydle) while the vngodly is in my sight. I helde my tonge, and spake nothyng. I kept silence: yea, euen from good wordes, but it was payne and greffe to me. My heart was hote wythin me, & while I was thus musyng, the fyre kindled: & (at the laste) I spake wyth my tonge: O Lord, let me knowe myne ende, & the nombze of my dayes: that I maye be certyfied howe long I haue to lyue. * Behold, thou hast made my dayes as it were a spanne longe, and myne age is euen as nothyng in respecte of the: and verely every man lyuyng is altogether vanyte. Helah. For man walketh in a vain shadowe, and disquieteth hym selfe in vayne, he heapeth vp rychesse: & cannot tel who shal gather hym. And now Lord, what is my hope? truly my hope is euen in the. Deliuere me from all myne offences, & make me not a rebuke vnto the foolish. I became domme, & opened not my mouth, for it was thy doyng. Take thy plague a way fro me: I am eue consumed by the meanes of thy deuy hande. Wylt thou with rebukes dost chaunge man for synne: thou makest his beaue to consume awaye, like as it were a moth fretyng a garment. Every man therfore is but vanyte. Helah. Heare my prayer, O Lord, and wyth thine eares conspyce my calling: holde not thy peace at my teares. For I am a stranger wylde, and a sojourner, as al my fathers were. O spare my a lytle, that I maye recouer my strengthe, before I go hence, and be nomore lene.

The xl. Psalme.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI.

I Waited pacifely for O Lord, & he inclined vnto me: & herd my calling. He brought me also out of horrible payne, out of the myxe and clay, & set my fete vpon rock & ordred my goynges. And he hath put a newe songe in my mouth, eue a thahelgeuyng vnto our God. Many shall feare, & feare: and shal put their trust in O Lord. * Blessed is the man, that hath set his hope in O Lord, & sourned not vnto the proude: & to such as go aboute to lyes. O Lord my God, great are thy wondrous doozhes, which thou hast done: like as bee also thy thoughtes which are to vsward: & yet there is no man that shoulde theim vnto the. If I would declare them, & speake of the, they shoulde be mo then I am able to expresse. * Sacrifice & meate offryng I wouldest not haue, but myne eares hast thou opened: burnt offrynges & sacrifice for synne hast thou not required. The said I: Lo, I come. In the volume of the booke it is writen of me, & I shoulde fulfyll thy wyl, O my God: I am content to do it: yea, thy law is with in my hart. I haue declared thy righteousnesse in the great congregacis: Lo, I wyl not restryne my lippes. O Lord, & that shal knowest. I haue not hyd thy righteousnes wythin my harte, my talking hath bene of thy trouth & of thy saluacion. I haue not hepte backe thy louyng mercy and trouth from the great congregacion. Wylt thou graue not thy mercy fro me, O Lord: let thy louyng kyndnes & thy trouth alway preserue me. For innumerable troubles are come about me my synnes haue take such hold vpon me, & I am not hable to loke vp: yea, they are mo in number then the beares of my head, & my heart hath fayled me. O Lord, let it be thy pleasure to deliuer me, make hast (O Lord) to helpe me. Let them be ashamed & confounded together & seke after my soule to destroye it: let the be dyuyn backwarde & be put to rebuke that wythe me euell. Let them be desolate & rewarded with shame & saye vnto me: sye vpon the sye vpon the. Let all those that seke the, be soful & glad in the: & let such as loue thy saluacion, say alway: the Lord be praysed. As for me, I am poore and needy, but the Lord careth for me. Thou art my helper & redeemer: make no long taryng (O my God.)

serue hym and kepe hym alme: that he maye be blessed vpon earth, and deliuer not ruill of me: whyle that he dyeth, & his name perishe.

And if he come to see me, he speaketh vanities, selte: and when he commeth forth, he telleth it.

All myne enemies wyshper together agaynst

EXAETER HEC GENTES.

Hearke this: all ye people: ponder it wth your eares, all ye þat dwell in þe world. He and lowe: rich, and poore, one wth another. My mouthe shall speake of wisdom, and my hearte shall muse of vnderstanding. I will encline myne eare to the parable, and the woordes myn dache speache vnto þe harpe. Wherefore should I feare in daies of wickednes: and when the wickednes of my heles compasseth me rounde aboute? Their bee some þat put their trust in their gooddes, and bothe them selues in the multitude of their riches.

But no manne maye deliuer his brother, nor make agremente vnto God for hym. For it coste moze to redeeme their soules, so þe muste let that alone for ever. Yea, though he lyue long and se not the graue. For he seeth, that wille menne also die, and perishe together: as wel as the ignoraunt & folishe, and leaue their riches for other. And yet thei thinke, that their houses shall continue for ever, and that their dwelling places shall endure from one generation to another, & call the landes after their owne names. Neuertheles, manne will not abyde in honoure: for he maye bee compared vnto the beastes that perishe: this is the waie of theim.

This is their foolishnes, and their postertie: praise their sayng: Delia. Thei lyue in bell lyke shepe, death gnaweth vpon them, and the righteous shall haue domination of theim in the morning: their brethre shall consume in þe sepulchre out of their dwelling. But God shall deliuer my soule fro the place of hel, for he shall receiue me. Delia. See not thou afraied though one bee made riche: or if the gloze of his house bee increased. For he shall cary nothyng a waie with hym when he dieth, neither shall his pope folow hym. For while he liued, he counted hymself an happy manne: & so long as thou doest well vnto thy self, menne will speake good of þe. He shall folow þe generations of his fathers, & shall neuer se light. Wane beyng in honour hath no vnderstanding, but is compared vnto þe bestes, þe perishe.

DEVS DEIORVM DOMINVS.

The Lorde, euen þe moste mighty God hath spokē, & called the world from the rising vnto the setting vnto þe going downe thereof. Out of Zion hath God appeared in perfect beauty. Our God shall not hepe silence: there shall go before hym a consuming fier, and a mighty tempest shall be steeled vpon rounde aboute hym. He shall call the heauen from above, & the earth þe maye iudge his people. Gather my saintes together vnto me, those that haue made a couenaunt with me with sacrifice. And þe heuens shall declare his righteousness: for God iudge hymself. Delia.

Hear, O my people: and I will speake, I myself will testifie against the, O Israel. For I am God, euen thy God. I will not reioyce the, because of thy sacrifices, or for thy burnt offerings, because thei were not alwaie before me.

I will take no bullocke out of thy house: nor he goates out of thy foldes. For all the beastes of the forest are myne, and so are the cattell vpon a thousand hilles. I know all the foules vpon mountaynes, and the wyld beastes of the felde are in my sight. If I bee hungry I will not tell the: for the whole world is myne, and all that therein is. Thynkest thou, that I will eate bulles flesh, and drinke the bloodde of goates?

Offer vnto God thankesguyng, & paye thy vowes vnto the moste highest. And call vpon me in the tyme of trouble, so will I hear the, and thou shalt praise me. But vnto the vngodly saied God. Why doest thou preache my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth? Alther as thou hatest to bee reformed, and hast caste my wordes behynde the. When thou sawest a thete, thou consentedest vnto hym, and hast been partaker with þe aduourers. Thou hast let thy mouthe speake wickednes, and with thy tong thou hast sette forth discrete.

Thou saitest and speakest against thy brother: yea and hast sleaundred thynne owne motheres loonne. These thynges hast thou dooen, & I helde my tong: & thou thou threst. I am euen such a one as thy self: but I will reioyce the, and let before the, the thynges þe thou hast dooen. Consider this ye þat forget God: lest I plucke you awaie, and there bee none to deliuer you. Who so offereth me thankes & praise: he honoureth me, & to hym þe ordyng of his conuerfacio righte, will I shewe the saluacion of God.

chief against every mannyer: shal be slain all þe forte of you: pre, as a totteryng wall shal ye bee, & like a broken hedge. Their defence is only how to putte hym out whom God will exalte. their delite is in lies: thei geue good wordes with their mouth, but curle with their hearte.

Bela. Reuerthelies, my soule waite thou stil vpon God, for my hope is in hym. He truly is my strenght, & my saluacion: he is my defence so that I shall not fall. In God is my health and my glory, the roche of my might, and in God is my trust. O put your trust in him alwaie, ye people, * powse out your heartes before hym, for God is our hope. Bela. As for the childe of menne, thei are but vain, the children of menne are disceitfull vpon the waites, thei are altogether lighter then vanite it self. O trust not in wyng and robbery, geue not your selues vnto vanite: if riches increase, let not your heart upon them. God spake once and twice: I haue also heard the same: þe power belongeth vnto God And that thou Lord art mercifull for * þe war-dest every manne a crosbyng to his woike.

DEVS DEVS MEVS.

CA Psalme of Dauid when he was in the wilderness of Iuda:

God, thou art my God, early will I seke the. My soule thirsteth for the, my flesh also longeth after þe in a dary & drye land, where no water is. Thus haue I loched for the in holynes, that I might beholde thy power and glory. For thy louyng kindnes is better then the life it self, my lippes shall praise þe. As long as I liue will I magnifie the on this manner, and lift vp my handes in thy name. My soule shal be satisfied, euen as it was with many & fatnes, when my mouth presenth the thy toyfull lippes. haue I not remembred the

the in my bed, & thought vpon the, when I was waking / Because thou hast been my helper, therefore vnder the shadow of thy wynges will I reioyce. My soule hangeth vpon the, thy right hande hath vpholden me. These also that seeke the hurt of my soule, they shall go vnder yeareth. Let them fall vpon the edge of the sword, that they make mee a porcion for foes. But the king shall reioyce in God: * all they also that swa-re by hym shall bee commended, for the mouth of them that speake lies, shall bee stopped.

EXAVDI DEVS ORACIONEM:

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

Eare my voice (O GOD) in my prayer, preserve my life fro fear of the enemy. Hide me fro the gathering together of the froward, and fro the inuention of wicked doers. Whiche haue whet their tog like a sword & shote out their arrowes, euen bitter wood-des. That they make prey vpon me, whiche is perfect: suddenly doore they hit hym and feare not.
They courage them selues in mischief, and co-men embolden them selues, how they make laie snares: and saie, that no manne shall se them.

¶ They imagine wickednes, & practise it: & they hope secretly among them selues, euery mane in the depth of his heart. But God shall suddenly shote at them with a swift arrow, & they shall be wounded.
Yea, their owne togges shall make them fall, in so muche as they so seeke them shall laugh them to scorn. And all menne that se it, shall saie: this hath God doone, for they shall perceiue that it is his worke. The righteous shall reioyce in the Lorde, and putte his trust in hym: and al they that are true of heart shall be glad.

TE DECEIT HIMVS.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme & song of David

Thou (O GOD) art praised in this vnto this day: & vowe be performed in (in Jerusalem) Thou shalt hearest & prayer vnto this day shall all flesh come. My misdeeds preuaile against me: O be merciful vnto our sinners. Blessed is the man whom thou choicest & receivest vnto thee: he shall dwell in thy court: & shall be satisfied with the pleasures of thy house, euen of thy holy temple. Thou shalt be we vnderfull thynges in righteousness.

(O GOD) of our saluacion, that art hope of al endes of the earth, & of them that remain in the sea: Whiche in his strength setteth fast the moun-taines, & is grieved about with power. Which stilleth the ragging of the sea, & the noise of his waues, & the madness of the people. They also that dwell in the uttermost partes (of the earth) shall be afraid at thy token, & that maketh out go-ynges of the morning & evening to praise thee.

¶ Thou visitest the earth, & bledest it: thou makest it very plenteous. The river of God is full of water, & prepareth their course: for so thou proudest for the earth. Thou waterest her furrowes, & send-est rain into the little valies thereof: thou makest it soft with the dropping of rain, & bledest the increase of it. Thou crownest the year with thy goodness: & thy cloudes drop fatnes. They shall drop vpon the dwellinges of the wilderness: & the little hilles shall reioyce on euery side. The foldes shall be full of hye, the valies also shall stande so thicke with coyne, that they shall laugh and syng.

IVBELTE DEO.

¶ To the chaunter. The song of a Psalme.

Berisopfull in God, all ye landes syng praises vnto the honour of his name, make his praise to bee glorious. Saie vnto God: O how won-derfull art thou in thy workes: tho-rowe & greatnes of thy power shall thyne enemies be founde liers vnto thee. For all the world shall worship thee, syng of thee, & praise thy name.
Sela. Come hither & beholde the workes of God, how wonderfull he is in his doing toward the children of men. * He turned the sea into drye lande: so they went thow the water on fote there did we reioyce thereof. He ruleth with his power for euer, his eyes beholde the people: and suche as will not beleeue, shall not be able to exalt them selues. Sela. O praise our God (ye people) & make the voice of his praise to be heard Which holdeth our soule in life, & suffereth not our feet to slip. For thou (O GOD) hast proued vs: thou also hast tried vs, like as siluer is tried.

¶ Thou broughtest vs into the snare, and laidst trouble vpon our loynes. Thou sufferdest men to ride ouer our herdes, * we went thow fire and water, & thou broughtest vs out into a welthy place. I will go into thy house with burnt offerynges, and will paye the my vowes * whiche I promised with my lippes, and spake with my mouth when I was in trouble. I will offere vnto thee, fat beastes sacrifices & the incense of rames I will offere bullockes & goates Sela. Come hither & hearken all ye that feare God: & I will tel you what he hath doone for my soule. I called vnto him with my mouth, & gaue hym praises with my tog. If I encline vnto my wickednes with my heart, the Lorde will not heare me.
But God hath heard me, & confided in the voice of my prayer. Praise be God which hath not cast out my prayer: nor turned his mercy fro me.

thy countenance: * (and be mercifull vnto vs) Sela. That thy wate make be known vpon earthe, thy sayunge healeth among all nations. Let the people praise thee: O let the nations reioyce and bee glad: for thou shalt iudge the folk righteously, & gouerne the nations vpon earth. Sela. Let the people praise thee (O GOD) lette all the people praise thee. Then shall the earthe bring forth her increase, and EXVOCAT DEVL.

To the chaunter, a psalm and song of David.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Let God arise, & let his enemies be scattered: let them also that hate him flee before him. Like as smoke vanisseth, so shall thou consume them away: & like as wax melteth at fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God. But let the righteous be glad, and reioyse before God. Let them also be merry and ioyfull. Oh sayng vnto God, and sayng praises vnto his name: magnifie him that rideth vpon the heauens, as it were vpon an horse: praise him in his name: pra, & reioyse before him. He is a father of the fatherlesse, & defendeth the cause of the widdowes: euen God in his habitation. He is the God that maketh menne to bee of one mynde in an house, & bynggeth the prisoners out of captivity: but letteth the renegates continue in scarcenes.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Psalm. lxxviii.

God, when thou wentest forth before the people, when thou wentest thorow the wilderness. Behold the earth shoke, & the heauens dropped at the presence of God: euen as Sinai also was moued at the presence of God: whiche is God of Israel. Thou O God sendest a gracious rain vpon thine inheritance, & refresheth it when it was weary. Thy congregations shall dwell therein: for thou O God hast of thy goodnes prepared for the people. The Lord gaue the word: & great was the company of the preachers.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Kynge with their armies disflour, & were discomfited: and they of the household divided & spoyle. Though ye haue liuen among spottes, yet shall ye bee as the wynges of a dove that is couered with silver wynges, & her feathers like golde. Woe the almighty scattered kynge for their sake, then were they as white as snowe in salmon. As the hill of Basan, so is God's hill euen on his hill as the hill of Basan. Why hope ye so, ye heuilles: this is God's hill, in which he pleaseth hym to dwell: Pra, the Lord will abide in it for euer. The charrettes of God are twenty thousand, euen thousands of angels: & the Lord is among them, as in the holy place of Sinai.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Thou art gone vp on high, thou hast led captivity captiue, & receiued giftes for menne: Pra euen for thine enemies, for the Lord God might dwell among them. Praised bee for Lord daily euen for God whiche helpeth vs, and poureth his benedictes vpon vs. Behold, he is our God, euen the God of whom cometh saluacion: God is the Lord by whom we escape death. God shall wound the head of his enemies, & the heere scalp of such one as goeth on still in his wickednes. The Lord hath saied: I will byng my people again as I did from Basan: myne owne will I byng again, as I did som tyme from the depe of the sea. That thy soke mate bee dipped in the blood of thine enemies, and that the tong of thy dogges mate bee redd thorow the same.

It is well sene, O God how thou goest, how thou, my God and kynge goest in thy sanctuary.

The syngers go before, the mynstrels folow after: in the mides are the damels playng with tymbrels. Gene thankes O Israel vnto God the Lord in congregacions, from the grofde of the hearte. There is little Benjamin their ruler and the princes of Iuda their counsaill, & princes of Zabulon, and the princes of Aserhod. The Lord hath sente for the strengthe, & stablished the thyng O God, that thou hast wrought in vs. For thy temples sake at Jerusalem: so shall kynge byng presentes vnto the.

When the compaignie of the spearmen, and multitude of the myghtie are scattered abrode among the brautes of the people (so the humbly byng preces of siluer) and when he hath scattered the people the delite in warre: Then shall the princes come out of Egypte, the Assyrians lande shall soone stretch out her handes vnto God. Sing vnto God O ye kynngdomes of the earth: O sayng praises vnto the Lord. Behold, whiche stretch in the heauens ouer all from the begynnyng: Lo he dooth sende out his voyce: pra, and that a myghtie voyce. Ascribe ye the power to God ouer Israel: his worship and strength in the cloudes. O God, wonderfull arte thou in thy holy places, euen the God of Israel: he will geue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed bee God.

The lxxix. psalm.

SALVVM ME FAC DEVL.

To the chaunter vpon Hosannim of David.

Sue me, O God: for I waters are come in cannt vnto my soule I sticke faste in the depe myre, where no grofde is: I am come into depe waters, so that I flounders rene ouer me. I am weary of crying, my throte is drye: my sight faileth me, for waiting so long vpon my God. They that hate me without a cause, are mothen the heares of my bedde, they that are myne enemies, and would destroye me gyltes are myghty: I passed them the thynges that I neuer toke. God thou knowelle my simplicitie, and my fautes are not hid from the. Lette not them that trust in the O Lord God of hostes, bee ashamed for my cause. let not those that seke the bee confounded thorow me, O Lord God of Israel.

And why for thy sake haue I suffered reproche: shame hath couered my face. I am become a straunger vnto my brethren: euen an aleaunt vnto my mothers children. For the zeale of thine house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of them that rebuke the are fallen vpon me I wept & chastened my self with fastyng, and I was turned to my reproche. I put on a sackcloth also, and they iested vpon me. They that sit in the gate, spake against me, and the dauntardes make songes vpon me. But Lord, I make my prayer vnto thee in an acceptable tyme. Heare me (O God) in the multitude of thy mercy, euen in the truth of thy saluacion.

Take me out of the myre, that I synke not. Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me and out of the depe waters. Let not the water floude floud by ome me: neither let the depe swalowe me vp, & let not y^e pitte her mouth vpon me. Dear me, O Loyde, for thy louyng kynde- nesse is conforstable: turne the vnto me, accor- dyng vnto the multitude of thy mercies. And bid not thy face from thy seruants, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and heare me. O haste me vnto my soule, and saue it: O deliuer me, be- cause of myne enemies. Thou hast knowen my reproche, my shame and my dishonour, myne ad- uersaries are full in thy sight.

E Thy rebuke hath broken my heart, I am full of heuenesse, I looked for some to haue pittie vpon me, but there was no manne: neither founde I any to confor me. * Thei gaue me gall to eate and when I was thursty thei gaue me bynegre to drynke. * Let their table bee made a snare to take theim selues with all, and let the thynges (that should haue been for their wealth) bee vnto theim an occasion of falling. Let their eyes bee blinded, that thei se not: and euer bowe thou downe their backes.

F Pour out thyne indignacion vpon theim, & let thy wrathful displeasure take hold of theim. * Let their habitation bee void and no manne to dwell in their tentes. For thei persecute hym whom thou hast smitten, & thei talke how thei maie vere theim whom thou hast woford. Let theim fall from one wickednes to another, and not come into thy rightousnes. * Let theim be wiped out of the booke of liuyng, and not to be wypten among the rightous. As for me, whē I am pooze & in heuenesse, thyne help (O God) shall lift me vp. I will praise the name of God with a song: and magnifie it with thankesge- uing. This also shall please the Loyde better the a bulloche, that hath hoynes and hoofes.

G The habile shall confesse this, & be glad: seke ye after God, & your soule shall liue. For y^e Loyde heareth the pooze, & dispiseth not his prisoners. Let heauen and earth praise hym, the sea, & all that moueth therein. For God shall saue Sion, and buyde the cities of Iuda, that menne maie dwell ther, and haue it in possession. The poste- rite also of his seruantes shall enderite it: and thei that loue his name shall dwell therein.

The lxx. Psalme.
DEVS IN ADIUTORIUM.

To the chaunter of Dauid to byng to reme- mbrance.

Ask the (O God) to deliuer me: make hast to helpe me, O Loyde. * Let theim bee shamed & confoun- ded, y^e seke after my soule: let theim bee turned backward, & put to con- fusion & wishe me euill. Let theim (for) their re- warde be some brought to shame, that crye ouer me, there, there. But let all those that seke the, bee ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delite in thy saluacion, singe alwaie: the Loyde be praised. As for me, I am pooze and in misery, haste the vnto me (O God.) Thou art my help & my redeemer: O Loyde make no long taryng.

The lxxi. Psalme.

Dearest O Loyde, haue I put my trust in thee: let me neuer bee put to confusion: but rid me and deliuer me in thy righte- ousnes: incline thyne eare vnto me, & saue me. Bee thou my strong hold (where vnto I maie alwaie resorte) thou hast promised to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence and my castle. Deliuer me, O my God out of the bande of the vngodly, out of the bande of the vngodly and cruell mane. For thou O Loyd God, art y^e thyng that I long for, thou art my hope euen from my youth. Thosowe the haue I been holden vpon euer sence I was borne: * thou art he that tolke me out of my mothers wombe, my praise shall bee alwaie of the.

I am become as it were a mother vnto many: but my sure trust is in the. O let my mouth be filled with thy praise: & I shall sing of thy glory and honoure, all the daie long. Cast me not awaie in y^e tyme of age, forsake me not when my strength faileth me. For mine enemies speake against me and thei y^e laie awaite for my soule, take their counsaill together, sayng: God hath forsaken hym, persecute hym, and take hym, for there is none to deliuer hym. So not farre fro me O God: my God, haste the to helpe me. Let theim bee confounded & perished, y^e are against my soul: let theim bee couered with shame & dishonoure y^e seke to doo: me euill. As for me I wil paci- ly abide alwaie, & wil praise the more & more.

My mouth shall daily speake of thy righte- ousnes and saluacion, for I know no ende ther- of I will goe forth in the strength of the Loyde God, and will make mencion of thy rightous- nes only. Thou O God, hast taught me from my youth vntill now, therefore wil I tell of thy wonderful wozkes. Forsake me not, O God in myne olde age, when I am gray headed: vntill I haue shewed thy strength vnto this ge- neration, & thy power to all them that are yet for to come. Thy rightousnes (O God) is very high, and great thynges are thei that thou hast doon (O God) who is like vnto the?

What greates troubles & aduersities hast thou shewed me: and yet diddest thou turne & refreche me: yea, & broughtest me from the depe of the earth. Thou hast brought me to greates honoure and conforst me on euery side. Therefore wil I praise the in thy faithfulness O God, playng vpon an instrumēt of musike vnto the will I syng vpon the harpe: O thou holp one of Israel. Thy lippes will bee saue when I syng vnto the: & so will my soule whē thou hast deliuered. My tong also shall talke of thy rightousnes all the daie long, for thei are confounded and brought vnto shame, that seke to doo me euill.

QUAM BONVS ISRAEL.

A Psalmc of Asaph.

Iuly God is louyng vnto Israel euen vnto such as are of a cleane heart. neuertheless, my fete were al-moste gone, my treadynges hadde become slippe. And why? * I was griued at * wicked, I doo so also the vngodly in such prosperite. For they are in no perill of death but are lustie and strong. They come in no misfortune like other folke, neither are they pla-ged like other me. And this is the cause * they be so holde with pride, & ouerwhelmed with crueltie.

B Their eyes swell for fatnes: * they doo euen what they lust. They corrupt other, and speake of wicked blasphemie: their talhyng is against the moste highdest. For they stretch forth their mouth vnto the heauen, and their tong gooeth forth as * world. Therefore shall the people vnto them, & therout such as they no small aduan-tage. * Thus (saie they) how should God preserue it: is there knowlage in * moste highdest?
Lo, they are the vngodly: they prosper in the world, & these haue riches in possession: * (saie they)

They haue I cleansed my heart in vain, & washed my handes in innocencie. All the daie long haue I been punished, and chastened euerie moynyng Pea, and I had almoste saied euen as they: but lo, then should I haue condemned the generation of thy children. Then thought I to vnderstande this, but it was to harde for me.

Until I went into the Sanctuary of God then vnderstode I the ende of these menne. Samely, how thou dost set them in the slippe places, and castest them downe and destroyest them. O how sodainly doo they consume, perish, and come to a feartull ende: * Pea, euen like as a dreame when one awaketh, so shall they make their image to vanishe out of the citie.
Thus my heart was griued, and it wente euen thow my rained. So foloweth was I ignorant, euen as it were a beast before the. neuer-theless, I am alwaie by the, for thou hast holde me by my right hande. Thou shalt guyde me with thy counsaill: and after that receiue me to glory. Whom haue I in heauen but the?

And there is none vpon earth, that I desire in comparison of the. My fleshe and my hearte faileth: but God is the strengthe of my hearte, * and my portion for euer. For lo, they that saie the shall perishe: * they haue destroyed all them that commit fornication against the. But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God to put my trust in the Lozde God and to speake of all thy workes: * (In the gates of the daughter Zion.)

VT QUID DEVS REPVLISTI.

An instruction of Asaph.

God, wherefore art thou absent from vs so long? why is thy wrath so hotte against the wepe of thy pastures? O thyne vpon thy congregation, who thou hast purchased and redeemed of olde. Thinke vpon the tribe of thyne emperadice and mount Zion wherein thou hast dwelt. Lift vp thy fete, that thou maist utterly destroye every enemy, * whiche hath doorn euill in the Sanctuary. Thyne aduersaries rooze in the middles of thy congregations: and set vp their banners for tokens. He that hewed tymber afase out of the thicke trees, was knowen to bring it to an excellent woork.

But now they breake downe all the carued workes therof with axes and hammers. * They haue set fire vpon the holy places, and haue defiled the dwelling place of thy name, euen vnto the ground. Pea, they saie in their heartes let vs make hauocke of them altogether: thus haue they bent vp all the houses of God in the lande. We se not oure tokens: there is not one prophete more, no not one is there among vs that vnderstandeth any more. O God how long shall the aduersary doo this dishonour? how long shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for euer? Why withdrawest thou thy hande? why pluckest thou not thy right hande out of thy bosome, to consume the enemy? For God is my hyng of olde: the help that is dooen vpon earth, he dooeth it by myself. * Thou diddest beuide

Psal. lxxv. lxxvi. lxxvij. lxxviii. Col. lxxij.

nyde the sea thoww thy power: thou brakest the heades of the dragons in the waters. Thou smotest the heades of * Leviathan in peeces, and gauest hym to be meat for people in wyldernes. Thou broughtest out fountaynes & waters oute of the harde rockes: thou dydest up myghtye waters. The daye is thine, and the nyghte is thine: thou hast prepared the lycht & the sunne. Thou hast set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made sommer and wynter.

Remembre this O Lorde, howe the enemye hath rebuked, and howe the foolish people hath blasphemed thy name. O deliuer not the soule of thy turtle doue vnto the multitude of synners: & forget not the congregation of the poore for ever. Loke vpon the covenante for all the earth is full of darkenesse, and cruell habitacions. O let not the synple goe awaye ashamed: but let the poore & needye geue praise vnto thy name. Arise, O God, mayntayne thine owne cause: remembre howe the foolish man blasphemeth the daye. Forget not the voice of thine enemyes: the presumptuous of them that hate the increaser of ever more and more.

CONFITEBIMUR TIBI.

To the chaunter: Desrope not

A Psalme and songe of Asaph.

Vnto the (O God) do we geue thanks: yea, vnto thy do we geue thanks. Thy name also is so myghty, & that do thy wondrous workes declare. When I recreate the congregacion, I shall iudge accordyng vnto ryghte. The earth is weake and all the inhabytours thereof: I beare vp the pylers of it, & I sayde vnto the foolen: deale not so madly: and to the vngodly, set not vp your home. Set not vp your home on hye, and speake not with a byneck. For promocioun cometh nether fro the east, nor from the west, nor yet fro the south. And why? * God is the iudge: he putteth downe one, and setteth vp another. For in the hande of the Lorde is there * a cuppe, and the wyne is red. It is full myghte, & he pouereth oute of the same. As for the dyegges thereof all synners of the earth shall drinke them, and luche them out. But I will talke of the God of Jacob, and praise hym for ever. All the hornes of the vngodly also will I breake: and the hornes of the ryghteous shall be exalted.

NOTUS IN IUDAEA.

To the chaunter in melodys, a Psalme and songe of Asaph.

A Jewry is God known, his name is greates in Israell. At Salem is his tabernacle, and his dwellinge in Syon. * There brake he the arrowes of the bowe, the wynde, the sword and bat-tayle. & I sayde. Thou arte of more honour and myghte then the helles of the robbers. The proude are robbed: they haue slept they slepe: & all the men whose handes were myghtie haue founde nothing. At thy rebuke O God of Jacob both the charret and horse is fallen. Thou enue thou art to be feared: and who may stande in thy lycht, when thou art angry? Thou dydest cause thy iudgement to be heard from heauen: the earth trembled and was still. * When God arose to iudgement, & to helpe all synners vpon earth. & I sayde. The fearfulness of man shall tourne to thy prayse: and the fearfulness of the thalke thou refrayne. Promyse vnto the Lorde pour God, and * kepe it all ye that be round about hym, byng presented vnto hym & oughte to be feared. He shall refrayne & spirite of synners, & is wonderful among synners of the earth.

VOXI MEA AD DOMINUM.

To the chaunter for Ierubum.

A Psalme of Asaph.

Euen vnto God will I crye with my voyce, and he shall hearken vnto me. In the tyme of my trouble, I sought the Lorde: my soule ranne and crasled not in the nyght season: my soule refused conforter. When I am in heynesse, I will thynke vpon God: when my heart is vexed, I will complaine. & I sayde.

Thou holdest myne eyes wakyng: I am so feeble, that I cannot speake. I haue consydered the dayes of olde, and the peeres that are past.

I call to remembrance my songe: and in the nyght I commune with myne owne herte, and searche out my spirytes. Will the Lorde abset hym self for ever? And will he be no more intreated. In his mercye cleane gone for ever? And is his promise come utterly to an ende for ever more? Hath God forgotten to be gracious?

And will he shutte by his louyng kynnesse in displeasure? & I sayde. It is myne owne infirmite: But I will remembre the peeres of the ryghte hande of the most myghty. I will remembre the workes of the Lorde, and * call to minde thy wonders of olde tyme. I will thinke also of all thy workes, and my talkyng shall be of thy daynges. Thy waye, O God, is holpe: who is so greates a God as thou? God. Thou art the God that doth wonders, and hast declared thy power among people. Thou hast mightely deliuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob and Joseph. & I sayde. The waters sawe the O God: the waters sawe the and were afrayed: the depthes also were troubled. The cloudes poured out water, the appes shon, and thine arrows went abrode. The voyce of thy thoudes was heard round about. & I sayde. I will thinke vpon the ground, the earth was moued & shoke withall. Thy way is in the sea, and thy pathes in the greates waters: and thy footestepes are not knowen. Thou leddest thy people by the hande of Moses and Aaron.

we have herd and knowen: and such as our fathers have tolde vs. That we should not hyde the from y children of the generacions to come but to shewe the honour of y Lord, his myghte, and wonderfull woikies that he hath done. he made a covenante with Jacob, and gave Israel a lawe: which he comaunded our forefathers to teache they children. That they: posterity the myghte knowe it, and the children which were yet unbozne. To thintent that when they came up, they myght shewe their children the same. That they myght putte they trust in God, and not to forget the woikies of God, but to kepe his commandementes. And not to be as their forefathers: a fayneble and subburne generacion: a generacion y set not they heart a right, and whole spiritie cleaved not sted-fastly vnto God. Like as y children of Ephraim, which beyng barnished and carping howes, turned them selues backe in the dape of battyle. They kept not the covenante of God, and would not walke in his lawe. But forgot what he had done, and the wonderfull woikies that he had shewed for them. Waruallous thin-ges dyd he in the syght of our fathers in y land of Egypt, euen in the felde of joan. He drayed the sea, and let them go thowowe: he made the waters to stande on an heape. In the day tyme also he led them with a cloude, and all the nyghte thowowe, with lyght of fyre. he claue the herde: rocks in the wyldernesse, and gaue them drinke therof, as it had ben out of y great depyte. he broughte waters out of the stony rocke, so that it gushed out lyke the riuers. Yet for all this, they sinned moze agaynst hym, and prouoked the most hyest in the wyldernes.
They tempted God in they: hertes: & requy-red meate for they: luste. They spake agaynst God also, sayng: Wal God prepare a table in the wyldernesse? he smote the stony rocke in dede, that the water gushed out, and y strems flowed withall: but can he geue breade also, or prouide fleshe for his people? When the Lord heard this: he was wroth: so the fyre was kindled in Jacob, and there came up benyng dyspleasure agaynst Israel. Because they beleued not in God, and put not they: trust in his helpe.
So he comaunded the cloude aboue, & opened the doores of heauen. he rained downe Mana also vpon the for to eat, and gaue the food from heauen. No man dyd eate aungels foode, for he sente them meate pnowgh. he caused the East wynde to blowe vnder the heauen, & thorogh his power he broughte in the southwester wynde. he rained fleshe vpon them as thicke as dust, and feredder foules lyke as the lande of the sea. he let it fall amonge they: tentes, euen rounde aboute they: habitacyon. So they dyd eate, and were well fylled: for he gaue them they: owne desyre. They were not dysapoynt-ed of they: luste. But whyle the meate was yet in they: mouthes, the benyng wyathe of God came vpon them, & slue the welchprest of them: yea and smote downe, the chosen men that were in Israel. But for all this, they spyned yet moze: and beleued not hym wonderous woikies that he had shewed for them. They daped dyd he consume in wa-nytie, and they: peeres in trouble. When he slue them, they sought hym: and turned the early, and requyred after God. And they remembered that God was they: strenght, and that the Lord was they: redeemer. After theselle, they did but flatter hym with their mouth, and dissembled with hym in they: tonge. For they:

herte was not whole with hym, neither conty-nued they stede fast in his covenante. But he was so merciful that he forgave they: mysde-des, and destroyed them not. Yea, many a tyme turned he his wyathe a waye, and wolde not suffer his whole dyspleasure to arse. For he considered that they were but fleshe, and that they were euen a wynde that passeth a waye, and cometh not agayne. Many a tyme dyd they prouoke hym in the wyldernesse, and greued hym in the deserte. They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel. They thought not of his hande, and of the day when he deliuered them from the hande of the enemy howe he had broughte his myracles in Egypt and his wonderes in the felde of joan. He four-ned they: waters in to bloude, so y they myght not drinke of the ryuers. he sent lycer among them, and deuoured the wy: and frogges to de-stroye them. he gaue they: frutes vnto the caterpillier, and they: labour vnto the greshopper. he destroyed they: vynges with hayle stones, and they: mulberry trees with the frost. he smote they: cattel also with haile stones, and they: flockes with hott thondre boltes. he cast vpon them the furyousnesse of his wyathe angre, displeasure, and trouble, & sent euil aun-gels amonge them. he made a waye to hym in bignaciou, & spared not their soule from death, but gaue they: life ouer to the pestilence. And smote al the fyrst borne in Egypt, the most princypal and mightiest in the dwellinges of Ham.
But as for his owne people, he led the forth lyke shepe, and carped them in the wyldernesse lyke a floshe. he broughte them out safely, that they should not feare: and ouerwhelmed they: enemies wyth the sea. And broughte them in the borders of his sanctuary: euen to this most taine which he purchased with his ryght hande. he cast out the heathen also befoze the, caused they: lande to be drayped amonge the for an heritage, & made the trespes of Israel to dwell in their tentes. So they tempted and dyspleased the most hye God, and kept not his testimonies. But turned they: backs: and fell away lyke they: forefathers, flarynge aspyde, lyke a broken bowe. For they greued hym with they: hyll alters, and prouoked hym to dyspleasure with they: ymagis. When God heard this, he was wroth, and coke foze displeasure at Israel.
So that he foysoke the tabernacle in Silo, rust the tent that he had pitched amonge men. he deliuered they: power into captiuytie, and they:
beautie into the enemyes hande. he gaue his people ouer also into the sword and was wroth wyth the enherptance. The fyre

ded them with a saythful and true herte, and ruled ed in the graue, or thy faythfulnesse in destruction? Shall thy wonderous workes be knowe Lorde is on euery syde. * Thou ruleste the ragynge of the see. Thou stilleste the waues thereof, when they aryse. Thou haste subdued Egypte & destroyed it, thou haste scattered thyne enemys alybode wryth thy myghtie arme. The heauens are thyne, the earth also is thyne: thou hast layde the foundacyon of the rounde world and al that therein is. Thou hast made & north and the south. Tabor and Harmon shall reioyce in thy name. Thou hast a myghtie arme, stronge is thy hande, and hys is thy ryght hand. Righte-ousnes and equyte is the habytacion of thy seate, mercy and trouth shall go before thy face.

Blessed is the people (O Lorde) that can reioyce in the: they shall walke in the lycht of thy countenaunce. Their delite shall be dayly in thy name and in thy ryghteousnes shall they make theyr boast. For thou art the glory of theyr strenght, and in thy louyng kynndnes thou shalt lyfte vp our hoznes. For the * Lorde is our defence. The holy one of Israel is our kyng. Thou speakest somtyme in visions vnto thy sanctes, & sadest: I haue layde helpe vpon one & is myghtie I haue exalted one chosen out of the people. * I haue founde Dauid my seruaunt, wryth my holy oyle haue I anoynted hym. My hande shall holde hym fast, and myne arme shall strengthen hym: The enemy shall not be able to do hym violence, the sonne of wychednesse shall not hurte hym. I shall smyte downe his foes before hys face, and plage them that hate hym.
My trouth also and mercy shall be wryth hym and in my name shall his hozne be exalted. * I will sette hys domynion also in the see, and his ryght hand in the floudes. He shall cal me: thou art my father, my God & my strong saluacion.
And I will make hym my fyrst hozne, bygger then the kynges of the earth. My mercy will I hepe for hym for euermore, & my councail shall stand fast wryth hym. His seide also will I make to endure for euer, and his throne as the dayes of heauen. But yf his chyldren forsake my lawe & walke not in my subgmyntes: * If they bryake my statutes & hepe not my commaundementes:

theyr synne wryth scourges. Auert thy face from hym, nor looke mynne to sayle. My counsaunt will I not bryake nor alter the thyng is gone oute of my lippes. I haue sware once by my holynesse, that * I will not sayle Dauid.
His seide shall endure for euer, and his seate is for euermore as the moone, and as the faythful wytnes in heauen. Hela. But thou hast abhorred and forsaken thyne anoynted, & art displeased at hym. Thou haste broken the councail of thy seruante, & cast his crown to the grounde.

* Thou hast ouerthrowen al his hedges & broken downe his stronge holdes. Al they that go by, spyle hym: and he is become a rebuke vnto hys neyghbours. Thou haste set up the ryght hande of his enemyes: and made al his aduersaries to reioyse. Thou hast taken awaye & edge of hys sword: & geuest hym no vyctorye in the battayle. Thou hast put out hys glazye, & cast his throne downe to the grounde. The dayes of his youth hast thou shortned: and conuerted him wryth dyshonoure. Hela. Lorde, how long wilt thou hyde thy self: for euer: and shall thy wrath burne lyke fyre? Remember howe thoue shortned my tyme is, wherefore haste thou made all men for naught? * What man is he that lyueth & shall not be death? & shall be deliuer his owne soule from the hande of hell? Hela. Lorde, where are thy olde louyng kynndesses, whyche thou swarest vnto Dauid in thy trouth? Remember (Lorde) the rebuke that thy seruantes haue, & howe I do beare in my bolome & rebukes of many people. Where wryth thyne enemyes haue blasphemed the, and slea under the footestepes of thyne anoynted. Pleased be the Lorde for euermore.

The xc Psalme. DOMINE REFGIVM.

A prayer of Dauid the man of God.
O Lorde, thou haste bene oure refuge fro one generation vnto another. Before the mountaynes were broughte forth, or euer the earth and the world were made, thou art God from euerlastyng and thynde wythoute ende. Thou turneste man to destruction. Agayne thou sayest: come agayn chyldren of men. * For a thousande yeares in thy syght are but as yesterdays. I praye that in past as a watche in the nyghte. As soon as thou scarest them, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly lyke the grasse. In the moornyng it is grene and groweth vp, but in the euenyng it is cut downe: & withered. For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, and art a fayde at thy wrathfull indignacion.
Thou hast set our misdeeds before the, & our secrete synnes in the lycht of thy countenaunce.
For when thou arte angrye, all oure dayes are gone: we bypnyng oure yeares to an ende, as it was a tale & is tolde. The dayes of oure age are the score yeares & ten: and though men be so strong that they come to four score yeares: yet is their strength the but labour & sorrowe: so soon passeth it awaye, & we are gone. But who regard the power of thy wrath, for euen thereafter as a man saith, so is thy displeasure. * O trach vs to nombe oure dayes, that we maye applye our hartes vnto thyldome. Turne the agayne, (O Lorde) at the last, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes. O satisfie vs wryth thy mercy and that soone, so shall we reioyse and be glad al the dayes of our lyfe. Comforte vs agayne, nowe after the tyme that thou haste plaged vs, & for the yeares wherem we haue suffered aduersitie.
Rede the thy seruantes thy woyle, and theyr chyliden thy glay. And the glorious maiestie of the Lorde our Godde vpon vs: prosper thou the woyle of our handes vpon vs: O prosper thou our handy woyle.

QVI HABITAT.

Who so dwelleth under the defence of the moste hest that abyde under the shadowe of the almyghtye. I will saye vnto the Loide: thou arte my hope, and strange holde: my God, in hym I will I truste. For he shall deliuer the from the snare of the hunter and fro synne some pestilence. He shall defende the under his wynges, and thou shalt be safe under his fetters: his sapientie shall be thy guide and buckler. Thou shalt not be afraide for any terror by night, nor for the arrowe that flieth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in the darkenesse, nor for the sykenesse that destroyeth in the none day. A thousand shall fall besyde the: and ten thousande at thy ryght hande, but it shall not come nether. Yea, with thine eyes shalt thou beholde and se the reward of the vngodly. For thou Loide art my hope, thou hast let thine house of defence very hye. There shall no euill happen vnto the, neyther shall any plage come nether thy dwelling. For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in al thy wayes. They shall beare the in thy handes, that thou hurte not thy fote agaynst a stone. BONVM EST CONFITERI.

This is a good thyng to geue thanks vnto the Loide, and to synge prayes vnto thy name, O most hest. Telle of thy louyng kyndnesse earlie in the mornyng, and of thy truth in the nyght season vpon an instrument of ten stringes, and vpon the lute: vpon a loude instrument, and vpon the harpe. For thou Loide hast made me glad thowt thy workes, and I will reioyse in geuing prayse for thy operations of thy handes. O Loide howe glorious are thy workes, thy thoughtes are very depe. An vnwyse man doeth wel consyde thes, and a foole doth not vnderstande it. When the vngodly are grene as the grasle, and when al the workes of wychednes do floure. then shall they be destroyed for euer. But thou Loide art the moste hest for euermore. For lo, thine enemies, O Loide, lo thine enemies shall perishe, and al the workers of wychednes shall be destroyed. But my hope shall be exalted, like the borne of an Eynoyne, for I am anointed with freche oyle. Myne eie also shall be full of myne enemies, & myne eare shall heare the despye of the wyched that rise vp agaynst me. The ryghteous shall flourish like a palme tree and shall lyke a Cedre in Liba-

nus. Such as be planted in the house of the Loide shall flourish in the courtes. They shall also byng forth more frute in theyr age, & shall be fat and welthyng. That they may saye, how true the Loide my strength is, and that there is no vngodlynes in hym.

DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Loide is kynge, and hath put on glorious apparel: The Loide hath put on his apparel, and gadded hym selfe with strength. He hath made the rounde worlde so sure that it can not be moued. Euer sence the worlde began hath the seate bene prepared for art from euerlastyng. The floudes are risen (O Loide) the floudes haue lyft vp their noyse the floudes lyft vp the waues. The waues of the see are myghtie, and rage horribly: but yet the Loide that dwelleth on hye is myghtier. Thy testymonyes, O Loide, are very sure, holynes becommeth thine house for euer.

Loide God to whome vengeance belongeth: thou God to whome vengeance belongeth: geue thy selfe. Arise thou iudge of the worlde, and reward the proude after their deseryng. Loide howe idge shall the vngodly: how long shall the vngodly triumphe: howe longe shall al wyched doers speake so dayntully, & make suche proude boastynge? They smyte downe the people, O Loide, and trouble thine heritage. They murder the wyddowe: and the stranger, and put the fatherles to death. And yet they saye: tuke the Loide shall nose, neyther shall the God of Jacob regarde it. Take heed, ye vnwise among the people. O ye fooles when will ye vnderstande: he that planted the eare, shall he not heare? O he that made the eye shall he not se? O he that nurthereth the heathen, it is he that teacheth man knowledge, shall he not se? The Loide knoweth the thoughtes of man, that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man, whiche thou chastenest (O Loide) and teachest hym in thy lawe. That thou mayst geue hym pacyfe in tyme of aduersyte vnep the yet be byged up for the vngodlye. For the Loide will not saye his people, neyther will he forsake his enperance. Anep ryghteousnes turne agayne vnto iudgemente. As much as be true of herte shall folowe it. Who will rise with me agaynst the wyched? Who will take my parte agaynst the enel doers? If the Loide had not helped me, it had not sayled: but my soule had bene put to sepience. But when I sayd: my fote hath slipped, thy mercie (O Loide) helde me vp. In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my herte, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule. While thou haue any thyng to do with the scoole of wychednes, which ymagined mischefe as a lawe.

They gather them together agaynst the soule of the ryghteous, and condeigne the innocent bloude. But the Loide is my refuge, yet wherof we be made, & he remembreth that we are floureth as a floure of the feilde. For as sone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and the place therof shall knowe it no more. But the mercyfull goodnes of the Lord endureth for euer, &

BENEDIC ANIMA

Rayse the Lord O my soule, O Lord my God, thou art become exceabyng gloious, thou arte clothed wth ma-iesty and honoure. Thou deckest thy selfe wth lyght, as it were wth a garment, and spreddest out the heauens lyke a curtayne.
Whiche lapeth the beames of his chambers in the waters, and maketh the cloudes his chaire and walketh vpon the wynges of the wynde.
He maketh his Angels spyes, and his my-nistres a flaminge fyre. He layde the founda-cyon of the earth, that it neuer shulde moue at a nye tyme. Thou coueredest it wth the depe lyght as wth a garment: the waters stande in pylles. At thy rebuke they fye, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afraied. Thy go vp as hye as the pylles, and downe to the valleyes benedic: euen vnto the place, whych thou hast appointed for them. Thou hast set them theyr boundes, whych they shall not passe, neyther turne agayne to couer the earth. He sendeth the sprynge into the ryuers, whych runne amonge the pylles. All beastes of the feilde dryncke thereof, and the wyld Ass quenche theyr thyrste.
Besyde theym shall the soules of the aspe haue habytacyn, and syng among the braunches he watereth the pylles from aboue, the earth is fylled wth the fruyt: of thy woiches. He bringeth forth grasse for the catel, and grene herbe for the serpente of men that he maye byng fode out of the earth: and wyne that maketh glad the herte of man, and oyle to make hym a chearfull countenaunce, and bread to strength mans herte. The trees of the Lord also are full of sappe, euen the cedars of Libanus whiche he hath planted.
Wherem the byrdes make theyr nestes, and the fyre trees are a dwellynge for the stoiche.
The hye pylles are a refuge for the wyld goates, and so are the stonye rocks for the Capres.

He appointed the mone for certayne seasons and the sunne knoweth his goinge downe. Thou makest darckenes that it maye be nyght, where in all the beastes of the feilde do moue. The Lions roarynge after they praye to seeke theyr meate at God. The Sunne ariseth, and they get them awaye togeder, and lay them downe in theyr denues. When goeth forth to his worke and to his laboure vntill the euynginge. O Lord howe many folde are thy woiches in wyldome: hast thou made them all, the earth is ful of thy creches. So is the grete and wyde see also, wherin are thynges crespynge innumerable both small and great beastes. There go the wyppes, and there is that: Leupathan, whome thou hast made, to take his prayme therein.
They warpe all vpon the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season. When thou ge-uerst it them, they gather it: and when thou open-est thyne hande, they are fylled wth good.
When thou bydest thy face they are traubled, when thou takest awaye theyr breath, they dye, and are turned agayne to theyr dust. When thou lettest thy breath go forth, they shal be made: and thou shalt renewe the face of the earth.

The gloious maiesty of the Lord shal endure for euer, the Lord shal reioyse in his wo-iches. The earth shall tremble at the loke of hym ye do but touch the pylles: they shal smolke. I will syng vnto the Lord as long as I lyue.
I will prayse my God whyle I haue my being And so shall my wydes please him, my voyce sumed oute of the earth, and the vngodlye shal come to an ende: prayse thou the Lord. O my we haue dooen amiss, and deale treacherly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, neither hepe they thy grate goodnes in remembrance: but were disobedient at the sea euen at yredde sea. After theles, he helped them fo; his names sake, that he might make his power to be knownen. * He rebuked the redde sea also, & it was dyed vp: so he led them thowowe the depe, as thowowe a wilderness. And he saued them from the aduersaries hãde, and deliuered them fro the hãde of the enemye. † As fo; those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them left! The blessed thy big worder, and say waite vnto him

But within a while thei forgot his woorkes: & would not abide his counsaill. But lust came vpon them in the wilderness, and thei tempted God in the desert. And he gaue them their desire & sent leanes withall into their soule. Thei hungered Voles also in the tētes, and Aaron the high priest of the Lorde. So the earth opened and swallowed vp Dardan, and covered the congregation of Avram. And the fire was kindled in their cōpaigme, the flame burnt vp the vngodly. They made a calfe in Horeb, & worshipped molten image. Thus thei turned their glory into similitude of a calfe, that eateth haye. And thei forgot God their sauoure, whiche had dooen so greate thonges in Egypt. Wonderful woorkes in the lande of Ham and fearfull wonders by the redbre sea.

So he saide: he would haue destroyed them, and not Moses his chosen stand before hym in that gap: to turne a waie his wrathfull indyganation, lest he should destroye them. * Yea, they thought some of the pleasant lande: and gaue credence vnto his worde. But murmured in their tentes, and hearkened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde. Then lift he by his hand against them to ouerthrowe them in the wilderness. To scatt out their seede among the nations, and to scatter them in the landes.

* Thei looped their selues vnto Baall Pe and ate the offeringes of the dedde. Thus he prouoked him vnto angre with their owne conuencions, and the plague was greates among eum. * Then stode vp Spineber and pray aured vnto hym for ephedousnes, among posterities for euer more. * Thei angered him so at the waters of strife, so that he punished Ioses for their sakes. Because thei prouoked his spirit, so that he spake vnaduisedly with his lipps. Neither destroyed thei the heathen as the Loyde commaunded them. But were angled among the heathen, and learned their which turned to their owne decay. * Pre the

Thus were they stained with their own works: and went a whoring with their own inventions. Therefore was the wrath of the Lord kindled against his people: in so much, that he abhorred his own inheritance.

C And he gave them over into the hands of the heathen, and they that hated them were lords over them. Their enemies oppressed them, and had them in subjection. Many a time did he deliver them, but they rebelled against him with their own inventions, & were brought down in their wickedness. Nevertheless, when he saw their adversity, he heard their complaints. He thought upon his covenant, and visited them, according unto the multitude of his mercies. Yea, he made all those that had led them away captive, to pity them. Deliver us, O Lord, our God, and gather us from among the heathen: that we may give thanks to thy holy name, and make our boast of thy praise. * Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting and world without end, and let all people say Amen. A. Psal. cxvii. 19.

Give thanks unto the Lord, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for ever. Let them give thanks whom the Lord hath redeemed and delivered from the hands of the enemy. And gathered them out of the land, from the east, and from the west, from the north and from the south. They went astray in the wilderness out of the way, and found no city to dwell in: hungry and thirsty: their souls fainted in them. So they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, & he delivered them from their distress.

He led them forth by a right way, that they might go to the city, where they dwell. O that men would therefore praise the Lord, for his goodness: & declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men. * For he satisfied the empty soul, and filled the hungry soul with goodness. Such as sit in darkness & in the shadow of death, being fast bound in misery and iron. Because they rebelled against the words of the Lord, and lightly regarded the counsel of his most high. He also brought down their heart: they were bound in misery and iron. So when they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, he delivered them out of their distress. For he brought them out of darkness, and out of the shadow of death, and brake their bonds in shattering.

148. 19.
Psal. cxvii. 19.

O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness: and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men. For he hath broken the gates of brass, & smitten & broken of iron in shattering. For the men are plagued for their offence, and because of their wickedness.

Their souls abhorred all manner of meat: and they were even hard at death's door. So when they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, he delivered them out of their distress. * He sent his word, & healed them, & he smote down their destruction. O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness: and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men.

That they would offer unto him a sacrifice of thanksgiving: & tell out his works with gladness. They go down to the sea in ships, & occupy their business in great waters: these men are the works of the Lord, & his wonders in the deep. * For at his word the stormy wind ariseth, which lifteth up waves thereof. They are carried up to the heaven, & down again to the deep, their souls melt because of the trouble. They cry for fear, & stagger like a drunken man: & are at their wits' end. So when they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, he delivereth them out of their distress. For he maketh a storm to cease, so that the waves thereof are still. Then are they glad, because they see at rest: and so he bringeth them unto the haven where they would be. O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness: & declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men.

That they would exalte him also in the congregation of the people: & sing unto him in the feast of a elders. * Which turneth the floods into a wilderness: and drieth up the water springs. A fruitful land he maketh barren: for the wickedness of them that dwell therein. Again, he maketh the wilderness a standing water: and water springs of a dry ground. And there he setteth the hungry, that he may build them a city to dwell in. That they may sow their land, and plant vineyards, to yield them fruit of increase. He blessed them, so that they multiply exceedingly: and suffereth not their cattle to decrease. And again, when they are diminished & brought low through oppression, through any plague or trouble: though he suffer them to be still, he entreated them out of the way in the wilderness: yet helpeth he the poor out of misery, and maketh him to dwell like a flock of sheep. The righteous will confesse this, & rejoice: & the mouth of all wickedness shall be stopped. Who so is wise will ponder these things: and they shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord.

I will thanke the, with an vnfained hearte, & when I shall haue learned the iudgements of thy righteousness. I will kepe thy ceremonies: O forsake me not vnto the last. Wherewithall shall a yong manne cleanse his waie: Euen by ru-lyng hymself after thy woerde. With my whole heart haue I sought the: O let me not go wyg out of thy commaundementes. * Thy woordes haue I hid within myne hearte, that I shoulde not synne against the. Blessed art thou O Lorde O teach me thy statutes. With my lippes haue I been telling of all thy iudgements of thy mouth

I haue had great desire in the waie of thy te-stimones, as in all maner of riches. I wil talke of thy commaundementes, and haue respect vnto thy wayes. My desire shall be in thy statutes: and I will not forget thy woerde. O dooe well vnto thy seruante, that I maie live and kepe thy woerde. Open thou myne eyes, that I maie see the wonderous thynges of thy lawe. * I am a stranger vpon earth, O hide not thy commaundementes from me. My soule breaketh out for the very feruente desire that it hath a waie vnto thy iudgements. Thou hast rebuked the proude, and cursed are they that dooe erre from thy commaundementes.

O turne fro me shame & rebuke: for I haue kept thy testimonies. Princes also did sit and speake against me, but thy seruante is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my de-lite and my counsaillers. * My soule cleueth to the dust: O quicken thou me accordyng to thy woerde. I haue knowlaged my wayes and thou herdest me: O teach me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waie of thy commaundem-tes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous wo-ordes. My soule melteth a waie for very deuotes confort thou me accordyng vnto thy woerde.

Take thou me out of the waie of lying, and cause thou me to make muche of thy lawe. I haue chosen the waie of truth: and thy iudgements haue I lately before me. I haue stikken vnto thy tes-timones. O Lorde confounde me not. I will cline the waie of thy commaundementes, when thou hast sette my hearte at liberty. Teach me, O

Psalm. cxix.

Lord, I wait of thy statutes: and I shall hope it unto the ende. Give me understanding, and I shall hope it with my whole heart. Where me to goe in the pathes of thy commandmentes: for therein is my desire. Encline my hearte unto thy testimonies, and not to concupiscences. O turne a waie myne enemies, lest they behold banitic: and quicken thou me in thy waie

Establish the worde in thy seruante, that I maye feare the. Take a waie the rebuke that I am afraied of, for thy iudgementes are good.
Beholde, my desire is in thy commandmentes.
O quicken me in thy righteousness. Let thy louyng mercy come also vnto me, O Lord: and thy saluacion accordyng vnto thy worde. So shall I make answer vnto my blasphemers: for my truste is in thy worde. O take not the worde of trauers out of my mouth: for my hope is in thy iudgementes. So shall I al-waie kepe thy lawe: yea, for ruer and ruer. And I will walke at libertie, for I seke thy com-mandmentes. I will speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynge, and will not bee ashamed. And my desire shall be in thy commaundmentes which I haue loued.

My handes also will I lift vp vnto thy com-mandmentes which I haue loued: and my study shall be in thy statutes. O thinke vpon thy seruante, as concerning thy worde, when in thou haste caused me to put my truste. The same is my comfort in my trouble, for thy word hath quickened me. The proude haue had me ex-ceedynly in derision: yet haue I not synched from thy lawe. For I remembred thyne euersa-ying iudgementes, O Lord: and receiued con-forte. I am horribly afraid for I vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue been my songes, in the house of my pilgrimage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lord, in the night season: and haue kepte thy lawe.

This I had, because I kepte thy commaundmentes: * Thou art my portoun, O Lord: I haue promised to kepe thy lawe. I made myne humble petition in thy presence with my whole hearte, O be mercifull vnto me accordyng vnto thy worde. I call myne owne daies to remembraunce, and turne my fete vnto thy testimonies.
I made haste, and prolonged not to kepe thy com-mandmentes. The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgottē thy lawe. At midnighte will I rise, to geue thankes vnto the: because of thy righteous iudgementes. I am a compaignon of all them, that fear the: & hope thy commandmentes. * The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy: O teache me thy statutes. O Lord, thou hast dealt graciouly with thy seruante accordyng vnto thy word. O learne me true vnderstanding, & know-lage, for I haue beleued thy commandmentes.

Before I was troubled I went wryng: but now haue I kepte thy worde. * Thou art good and gracious: O teache me thy statutes. The proude haue persecuted a lie against me, but I will kepe thy commandmentes with my whole hearte. Their hearts is as fat as hyane, but my desire hath been in thy lawe. It is good for me that I haue been in trouble, that I maye learne thy statutes. The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me the thousandes of golde and siluer. * Thy habdens haue made me and fashioned me: O geue me vnderstanding, that I maye le-arne thy commandmentes. Thei that feare the will bee glad whē thou seest me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde.

I know, O Lord, that thy iudgementes are righte, and that thou of very faithfulness hast caused me to bee troubled. O let thy mercifullhindenesse be my comfort, accordyng to thy word vnto thy seruante. O let thy louyng mercies come vnto me, that I maye liue: for thy lawe is my desire. Let the proude bee confounded, for thei go wickedly about to destroy me: but I will be occupied in thy commandmentes. Let such as feare the, & haue knowe thy testimonies be euen vnto me. O let myne heart bee sounde in thy statutes, & I bee not ashamed. My soule hath longed for thy saluacion: & I haue a good hope because of thy worde. Myne eyes long for thy worde, sayng: O when wilt thou comforte me? For I am become like a bottle in the smoke: yet dooe I not forget thy statutes.

How many are the daies of thy seruante: when wilt thou bee auenged of them that persecute me?
The proude haue digged piters for me, which are not after thy lawe. I seke thy commandmentes are true, thei persecute me falsly: O be thou my help. Thei had almost made an ende of me vpon earth: But I forsooke not thy commandmentes.
O quick me after thy louyng kyndenesse, and so shall I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth. O Lord, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy trauers also remaineth from one generation to another: thou hast laied the foundacion of the earth: and it abideth. Thei continue this daie, accordyng to thyne ordinaunces: for all thynges serue the. If my desire had not been in thy lawe, I should haue perished in my trouble. I will neuer forget thy commandmentes, for with them thou haste quickened me. I am thyne, O haue me: for I haue sought thy com-mandmentes. The vngodly laide waite for me to destroy me: but I will confesse thy testimonies. I se that all thynges come to an ende: but thy commandmentes are exceeding biode.

What loue haue I vnto thy law all the daie long is my study in it. Thou, & thou thy commandmentes hast made me wiser the myne enemies, for thei are euer to me. I haue more vnderstanding then my teachers: for thy testimonies are my studie. I am wiser then the aged: because I kepte thy commandmentes.
I haue restrained my fete from euery euill waie:
that I maye kepe thy worde.

I haue not synched from thy iudgementes for thou teachest me. O how sweete are thy wordes vnto my throte. Yea, sweeter the honey vnto my mouth. Thou know thy commandmentes I get vnder-standing, therefore I hate al wicked daies.

Thy word is a lantern vnto my fete, & a light vnto

into my pathes. I haue sworn, and am stedfastly purposed to keepe thy righteous iudgements. I am troubled about measure: quicken me O Lord according vnto thy worde. Let the free will offerings of my mouth please the O Lord, and teach me thy iudgements.

My soule is alwaies in my hand, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The ungodlye haue layde a snare for me, but yet I swaue not I from thy commaundementes. Thy testimonies haue I claymed as my heritage for euer: and why they are the very ioye of myne heart. I haue aspi-
 P ried myne heart to fulfill thy statutes alwaies euen vnto the ende. I hate them that ymagine euell thynges, but thy lawe doo I loue. Thou art my defence and hyde, & my truste is in thy worde. Swaue fro me pe wretched, I will keepe the commaundementes of my God. O stablish me according vnto thy worde, that I maye lue, and let me not be disapoynted of my hope. Hold thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yea, my de-P lyte shall euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagyne but disceyte.

Thou puttest a waue all the vngodly of the earth lyke dyssell: therefore I loue thy testimonies. My kene trembleth for feare of the: and I am affrayed of thy iudgements. I deale with the thyng that is lawfull and righte: O graunt me not ouer vnto myne oppressours. Make thy seruante to desire in that whiche is good: that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are washed away with loking for thy healtie and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruante according vnto thy louyng mercy: and teach me thy statutes.

I am thy seruant. O graunt me vnderstandyng, that I maye knowe thy testimonies. It is tyme for the Lord to laye to thyne hande for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commaundementes above gold and precious stone. Therefore hold I breight all thy commaundementes and al false waies I utterly abhorre.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull: therefore doth my soule keepe them. When thy word goeth forth, it geueth light and vnderstandyng, euen vnto y symple. I opened my mouth and dur in my breath, for my desire was in thy R commaundementes. O loke thou vpon me, and be merciful vnto me as thou vlist to doo vnto those that loue thy name. Order my steeppes in thy worde: and shall no wretchednes haue dominion ouer me. O deliuer me from y wronge full dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy B commaundementes. O be the light of thy continuance vpon thy seruante, and teach me thy statutes. Myne eyes guide oute with water, because minne kepe not thy lawe. Righteous art thou, O Lord: and true is thy iudgement.

The testimonies that thou haue commaunded, are exceeding righteous and true. * My zeale hath bene consumed me, because myne enemies haue forgotten thy wordes. Thy word is tryed in the bittermooste: and thy seruante loueth it. I am smal, and of no reputacyon, yet do not I forget thy commaundementes. Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastyng righteou-nesse: and thy lawe is the truth. Trouble and heauynesse haue taken holde vpon me: yet is my helpe in thy commaundementes. The righte-ousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastyng.

 O graunt me vnderstandyng, and I shall lue.
 I call with my whole heart, heare me, O Lord, I will kepe thy statutes. Yea, euen vpon the do I call, helpe me: and I shall kepe thy testimonies. Carely in the morninge do I crye vnto the: for in thy worde is my truste. Myne eyes pascient the nyghte watches, that I maye be occupied in thy wordes. Heare my voyce, O Lord, according vnto thy louyng hyndnesse quicken me according as thou art wont. They drawe nye that of malice persecute me: and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lord: for all thy commaundementes are true.

As concernyng thy testimonies, I haue knowen longe tyme, & thou haste grounded the for euer. O conspye myne aduersityte, and deli-uer me: for I do not forget thy lawe. I uenge thou my cause, and deliuer me: quicken me according vnto thy worde. Healtie is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes. Create is thy mercy, O Lord: quicken me as thou art wont. Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me: yet doo I not swaue from thy testimonies. It greueth me, when I see the transgressours: because they kepe not thy lawe. Conspye, O Lord, how I loue thy commaundementes. O quicken me according to thy louyng hyndnesse. Thy worde is true fro euerlastyng: all the iudgements of thy righte-ousnesse endure for euermore.

Dyncees haue persecuted me without cause I but my hearte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fin-deth grate spoyles. As for lyis, I hate and abhorre them: but thy lawe doo I loue. When tymes a daye, doo I praye the, because of thy righteous iudgements. Create is the peace y they haue whiche loue thy lawe, & they are not offended at it. Lord I haue looked for thy sauing healtie and done after thy commaunden-tes. My soule hath kepte thy testimonies, and loued them exceedingly. I haue kepte thy commaundementes and testimonies, for all my wayes are before the. Let my complaynt come before the, O Lord, geue me vnderstandyng, according vnto thy worde. Oh let my supplicacyon come before the, deliuer me accordyng to thy worde. My lippes shall speake of thy prayse, when thou hast taught me thy statutes.
 Yea, my tong shall syng of thy word: for al thy commaundementes are righteous.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes. I haue longed for thy sayng healtie, O Lord, and in thy law is my deliue. Oh let my soule lue, and it shall prayse the, and thy iudgements shall helpe me.

I haue gone astraye lyke a shepe that is lost O helpe thy seruante, for I doo not forget thy commaundementes.

and shewed hym of my trouble.

When my spete was in heuyness, I knewest piously layde a snare for me. I looked also vpon my ryghte hande, and se, there was no man that wolde knowe me. I had no place to set vnto, and no man cared for my soule. I cryed vnto O Lorde, and sayde: thou art my hope & my porcyon in the land of the liuyng. Consyde my co-playnte: for I am broughte very lowe. Obeliue me from my persecutours: for they are to stronge for me. Byng my soule out of pyson, shall no man liuyng be iustified. For the enemy lfe downe to the grounde: he hath layd me in the darkenesse, as the men that haue bene long do I remembre the tyme passe, I muse vpon all thy workes: yea, I exerceyse my selfe in the wor-kes of thy handes. I strecthe forth myne han-des vnto the: my soule gaspeth vnto the as a hyde not thy face from me, lest I be lyke vnto them that go downe into the pytte. O lette me heare thy louynge hyndnesse by tymes in the Teache me to do the thing that please the for thou arte my God, lette thy louynge sperte leade me forth vnto the lande of righteousness.

Rupchen me, O Lorde, for thy names sake

The ende of the Psalter.

The Proverbes of Salomon.

The first Chapter.

The profe of wysdome. We may not haue into the bytupreme pronouncacion and intelligence of synners. Wysdome complayneth hert to be despyced of all men, and prophesied destruction vnto hys despyces.

The Proverbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel: to learne wysdome, & to percerue the instructiō and to percerue the wordes of vnderstandyng: & thereby to receaue prudence, ryghteousnes iudgement and equyte. That the very symple myght haue wyte, and that the ydge me myght haue knowledge and true vnderstandyng. By hearyng, the wyle man shal come by moze wysdome, and he that is endued wth vnderstandyng, shal obtayne wyte to percerue a parable, and ynterpretacion therof, the wordes of the wyle, and the darke speches of the same. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome. But folles despyce wysdome and instructiō. My sonne, heare thy fathers doctryne: and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shal byng geace vnto thy deade, and shalbe as a chayne aboute thy necke. My sonne, consent not vnto synners, if they entyce the, and saye: come wyth vs, we wyll laye wayte for bloude, and lurie pryncelpe for the innocent without a cause: we shal swallowe them vp lyke the hell, and deuoure them quicke and hole, as those that go downe into the pyt. So shal we finde al maner of costly riches, and fill our houses with spoyles. Cast in thy lot amonge vs: and let vs all haue one purse.

My sonne, walke not thou with the: refrayne thy fote from theyr waye. For their fete runne to euil: & are hasty to shed bloude. But in wayne is the net layd forth before the bydes eyes, &ea they them selues laye wayte one for anothers bloude & one of them wolde sleie another. These are the wayes of all such as be couetous, the one wolde rauish anothers lyfe. * My sonne cryeth without, & putteth forth her voyce in streets. She calleth before the congregacion in the optegates, and she weth her wordes chozowe the cytic, sayenge: O ye chyldren, howe longe wyll ye loue chyldrynes: howe longe wyll ye choyners delyte in choyng, and the vnywyle be enemyes vnto knowledge: O turne you vnto my correccion: so I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, & make you vnderstande my wordes. * I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande: and no man regarded it: but all my counsels haue ye despyced: and set my correccion at naught. Therefore shal I also laugh in your destruction, & moche you, when that thyng that ye feare cometh vpon you: euen when the thyng ye be afrayd of, falleth in sodenly lyke a storme, and your myserye lyke a tempeste: yea, when trouble and heuyness cometh vpon you.

Then shal they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shal seke me early, but they shal not fynde me. And that because they hated knowledge: and receaued not the feare of the Lorde: but abhorred my counsell, and despyced all my correccion. Therefore shal they eat the frutes of theyr owne waye, & be fylled wth theyr owne inuencions, for the turnynge awaye of the vnywyle shal sleie them, & the prosperite of foolles shalbe theyr owne destruction. * But who so hath feared vnto me shal dwell safelye, and be sure from any feare of euill.

The .ii. Chapter.

My sonne is to be enuyced and let by. An abusuous woman is to be rebused.

My sonne, if thou wylt receaue my wordes and kepe my commaundementes by the, that thou wylt encline thyne eares vnto wysdome, apply thyne hert the to vnderstandyng. For yf thou cryeste after wysdome, and callest for knowledge: yf thou sekest after her as after money, & byggest for her as for treasure, then shalt thou vnderstande yf feare of the Lorde, & fynde the knowledge of God. * For it is the Lorde that geueth wysdome, out of hys mouth cometh knowledge and vnderstandyng: he bydeth by deith for yf ryghteous. He preferueth the wellfare of the righteous and defendeth them that walke sincerely: he kepeth them in the ryght path, and preferueth the waye of such as serue him wth godlynes. The shal thou vnderstande ryghteousnes, iudgement, & equyte: yea & euery good path. When wysdome entreceth in to thyne hert & thy soule delieth in knowledge: the shal counsell preferue the, & vnderstandyng shal kepe the. That thou mayeste be deliuered fro the euill waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges, from suche as leaue the bye the high strete, and walke in the wayes of darkness: whiche reioyce in dooping euill, and belite in wicked thinges: whose wayes are croked and thei forwarde in their pathes.

Chat thou maist bee deliuered also * from y strange woman, & from her y is not thine owne whiche genereth swete wordes, forsaketh y husbande of her yowth, & forgetteth the couenaunt of her God. For her house is enclined vnto death, & her pathes vnto hell. All thei that goo in vnto her come not again, neither take thei hold of the waie of life. Therefore, walke thou in the waie of luche as her verueous, and hepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iust shall dwell in the lande, and thei that bee perfect shall remain in it: but the vngodly shall be roted out of y land and the wicked doores shall be roted out of it.

The. iii. Chapter.

The commandmentes of God muste be diligentl y regarded and observed.

My sonne, forget not thou my lawe but se y thine hert hepe my commandementes. For thei shall prolong the daies and peaces of thy life and bypnyng y peace. Let mercy & faithfulness neuer go fro the: bynde thei aboute thy necke & write thei in the tables of thine heart. So shalt thou finde fauour & good vnderstandyng in the sight of God & manne. Put thy trust in God with all thine harte: & leaue not vnto thine owne wit. In all thy wayes haue respect vnto hym: & he shall order thy goynges. * Bee not wise in thine owne conceyte: but feare the Lord, & departe fro euill: so shall thy nauell be whole, & thy bones strong. * Honour the Lord with thy substance: & with the firstynges of all thine increase, & thou shalt be full of riches, & thy vessels shall flowe ouer with swete wyne. My sonne, despise not y chastenyng of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom y

Lord loueth, hym he chasteneth, & yet deliuereth in hym, euen as a father in his owne sonne. Wel is hym that synnderth wisdom, and obtaiynerth vnderstandyng: for y gettyng of it is better the any marchaundise of siluer, & the profite of it is better then golde. * Wisdom is more worth the precious stones: & all the thynges that thou canst desire are not to bee compared vnto her.

Upon her right hand is long life, and vpon her left hande is riches and honoure. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and al her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of life to thei that laie hold vpon her, and blessed is he that keepeth her fast. With wisdom hath the Lord laied the foundation of the earth: and thei now vnderstanding hard be stablished the heauens. Thow his wisdom the deapthes breake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe y dewe. My sonne, let not these thynges departe from thine eyes: but hepe my lawe and my counsaill, that thou maist haue y pleasure of long life and vnderstandyng: for thei shall be life vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy way: and thy fote shall not stumbe. * If thou sleepst, y shalt not bee afraied: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe sweetly. Thou needest not to bee afraid of any soden feare, neither for the violence rushing in of the vngodly, when it cometh. For the Lord shall stande by thy syde, & hepe thy fote, y thou bee not taken. Withdrawe no good thyng from thei y haue nede, so long as thine hand is able to dooe it. Shale not vnto thy neighbour: go thy way, and come again, to morowe will I geue y: where as thou hast now to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neighbour, sayng he dooeth dwell in rest by y. Strive not lightly with any manne without a cause, where as he hath dooen the no harme. * For not a wicked manne, & chole none of his wayes: for the Lord abhorreth thei frowarde: but his counsaill is among the righteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesteth the dwellinges of the righteous. As for y scornfull dooth not he laugh thei to scorne: but he geueth grace vnto thei lowly. The wise shall haue honoure in possession: but shame is the promotion that foolkes shall haue.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Wisdom and her frutes ought to be searched.

Care, O ye children, the fatherly exhortacion, and take good hede, that ye maie learne wisdom. For I haue geuen you a good doctryne: forsake not ye my lawe. For when I my self was my fathers deere sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and saied vnto me. * Let thine heart receiue my wordes, hepe my commandementes, and thou shalt liue. Get the wisdom: and get the vnderstandyng: forget not the wordes of my mouth, and synke not from thei. Forsake her not & she shall preserve the: loue her & she shall hepe y.

The chiefe pointe of wisdom is, that thou be willing to obtaine wisdom: and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstandyng. * Make muche of her and she shall promote the: For, if thou embrace her, she shall bypnyng the vnto honoure. She shall make the a gracious hede, and garnishe the with a crowne of glory. Heare my sonne, and receiue my wordes: and the peeres of thy life shall be many. I haue shewed the, y waie of wisdom, and led the inco the right pathes. So that if thou goeste therein, there shall no straitnes bynder the, and when thou runnest thou shalt not fall.

Take faste holde of doctryne, and let her not go: hepe her, for she is thy life. * Come not in y pathes of the vngodly, and walke not in y wayes of the wicked. I choyse it, and go not thei: departe aside, and passe ouer by it. For thei can not slepe, except thei haue first dooen some mischief: neither take thei any rest, except thei haue first dooen some harme. For thei cate the breade of wickednes, and bypnyng the wyne of robbery. The path of the righteous shyneth as the light that is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfecte daye. But the waie of the vngodly is as y darkenes, thei knowe not where thei fall.

thyne care vnto my saynges. Let them not be parte from thyne eyes. but kepe them in the myddeste of thyne hearte. For they are life vnto all those that finde them, and hea the vnto all their bodies. Kepe thyne heart with all diligence for thereupon hangeth life. Put a wale from the a frowarde mouth, and let the lippes of selaunder be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde & thyng that is right, and let thyne eie liddes loke straight before. Addye the pathe of thy feet, and let all thy wayes be ordred a right. Turne not aside, neither to the right hande, nor to the left: but withholde thy foot from euill.

and. 119. 119.

But withholde thy foot from euill. For the Lord knoweth the wayes that are on the right hande. As for the wayes that be on the left hande, they be frumous. For he shall direct thy goynges, and thy wayes be shall guyde in peace.

The v Chapter.

The turneth to offen and the whorhouse: the forthethyngs and the whorhouse. By the whorhouse is to be of our owne laboure. Whorhouse maye have the whorhouse.

I soonne, geue hie vnto my wile-dome, and how thyne care vnto my prudence: that thou maist regarde good counsaill. and that thy lippes maie speake knowlage. For the lippes of an harlot are a dropping honny combe, & her throte is more glistering then oyle. But at the last she is as bitter as worme wood, & as sharp as a two edged swerde. Her feet go downe vnto death, and her stepes pearle thowrow vnto hell. Perchauer, thou dwelyst with her, wile poudest the pathe of lyfe to vnto deathe: are her waies that thou canst not knowe them. Heare me now therfore (O my sonne) and be parte not from the woordes of my mouth.

and. 119. 119.

Kepe thy waie farre from her, and come not nigh the doores of her house. That thou geue not thy strenght vnto other, and thy cares to the cruell. That other mene be not filled with thy goodes, and that thy laboures come not in a straunge house. Psa. that thou mourne not at last (when thou shalt see thy body and lusty yonge youth) & then saie: Alas, why haied I nureture? why did my heart despise correctiō? Wherfore was not I obediēte vnto the voyce of my teachers, and hearkened not vnto them that enuour me? I am come almost into all mistofune in the myddest of the multitude & congregacion.

Drinke of the water, of thyne owne well, of the riuers that runne out of thyne owne springes. Let thy wile flowe out abroad, that there maie be riuers of waters in the stretes, but let them be onely thyne owne, and not straigers with the. Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wile of thy youth. Louyng is & kinde, and frendly is the roo: let her brestes alwaie satisfie the, and holde the euer content with her lone. O my sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace & bosome of another woman? For euery mannes waies are ope in the sight of & Loyde, and he pondereth all their goynges. amendement, and for his greafe foolishnes he shall goo astray.

The vi Chapter.

The flourisheth and flourisheth in riches and sheweth to the world. The flourisheth in riches. A country ought to be correctly managed.

P soonne * if thou bee suerty for thy neighbour, and hast fastened thine hand for another manne, thou art bounde with thyne owne woordes, and take with thyne owne speche. Therfore my soonne dooe this, and thou shalt be discharged: Wile thou come into thy neighbours daunger, go thy waies then lone, humble thy self, & wile thyne frendes treat thyne creditore let not thyne eyes slepe, nor thyne eie liddes slombze. Hauke thy self as a dowe fro the hande of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler. Soo to the rimmet (thou flouggard) con sidze her waies, & learne to bee wise. Wile hath no guyde, nor ouerscar, nor ruler: yet in the sonner she proudereth her meate, and gathereth her fode together in the beuelt. * How long wilt thou slepe thou flouggardman? Wile wilt thou arise out of thy slepe. Psa. slepe on still a litle, & bze a litle, folde thyne bades together yet a litle that thou maist slepe: so shall pouerty come vnto the as one that traualleth by the waie and needeth like a weaponed manne. * (Wile thou be not flouggard, thy hart shall come as a springing well, and pouerty shall flee from the).

And vngodly persone, a wicked man goeth with a frowarde mouth, he winketh with his eyes, he cokeneth with his feet, he poynteth with his fingers, he is euer imaginynge mischief and frowardnesse in his heart, and canseth discorde. Therfore shall his destruction come hastily vpon hym, sobrenlye shall he be all to broken, & not bee healed. * These sixe thynges dooeth the Loyde hate, & the seuenth he vterly abhoereth: A proude loke, a lying tong, handes that shed innocent bloodde, an heart that goeth aboute with wicked imaginacions, * teie & bee swift in runnyng to dooe mischief, a false witness & bysyngeth up lies, and such as soweth discorde among brethren.

O my soonne, kepe thy fathers commandement & forsake not & lawe of thy mother. Put them vntogether in thyne heart, & binde them about thy necke. That they maie lede the when thou goest, & preserve the when thou art a slepe, & that wile thou awakest, thou maist talke of them. * For & commandement is a lantern, and & lawe a light: Psa. chascenyng & nureture is the waie of life, & they maie kepe the from the cruell woman, and from the flatterynge tongue of the harlot, that thou lust not after her bewty in thyne hearte, & lest thou be taken with her faire lokes. An harlot will make a man to begge his byede, & a woman will hunte for & precious life. Wile a man take fire in his bosome, & his clothes not bee brennt?

Can one go vpon hote cooles, and his feet not bee hurt? Euen so, whosoever goeth into his neighbours wife & toucheth her, can not be vngiltye. * Wene dooe vterly dispise a thet that that beareth, to satisfie his soule when he is in grief: but if he maie begotten, he restoreth again leuen tyms as muche, as he maketh recompence to all the good of his house. But whoso mitteth aduoutry with a woman, he is a foole, and byngeth his life to destruction. He getteth himself also shame and dishonour, such as shal neuer bee put out. For the gelously and wra-the of the manne will not bee intreated: no, though thou wouldest offer hym grate gites to make amendes, he will not receiue them.

Eccl. vii. Chapter.

God ought to be feared and honoured. His commaundmentes ought to be kept: mannes appetites and desires ought to be humbled.

I P soone kepe my wordes: and late up my commaundementes by the.
Kepe my commaundementes & my lawe, euen as the apple of thyne eye & thou shalt liue. Wynde them vp on thy syngers, and write them in the table of thyne heart. Daie vnto wisdome thou art my sister: and call vnderstandyng thy kinswoman that she maie kepe the from the harlot which getteth swete wordes.

I For out of the window of my house I looked thow the lannes, and behelde the symple people: and among other symple folkes: I spied one younge foole, goynge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waie toward the harlottes house in the twyllight of the euenyng, when it began now to bee night and darke. And beholde, there met hym a womaⁿ with open tokens of an harlot, onely her heart was hidde. She was full of loude wordes, and rebye to ballaie: whose fete could not abide in y^e house, now is she without, now in the stretes, and laiter she bayeth in euery corner, she caught the young man, kissed hym & was not ashamed sayng: I had a vow of peace offerings to pale, & this daie I perfume it.

C Therefore came I forth to mete the, that I might see thy face, and so haue I founde the. I haue deckt my bed wth couerynges & clothes of Egypt. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrr Aloes, & Cinam^b. Come let vs lie together, and take our pleasure till it bee daie light: & we wil enioye the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of monie with hym: and will returne at the appointed solempne feaste. Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame hym, & with her flatterynge lippes she entised hym so-deinly to folow her: as it were an ore led to the slaughter, and like as it were a foole & laugheth when he goeth to the stocks to bee punished so long till he had wounded his liuer wth her darke like as if a birde fasted to the snare, not knowyng that the perill of his life lieth there vpon.

Hearke me now therefore, O my children, and marke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thine heart wandre in her waies, and bee not thou de-ceiued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded, and cast downe: yea, many a strong maie hath been slain by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waie vnto hell: and byng in the downe into the chambers of death.

Eccl. viii. Chapter.

The power of the righteous God.

Do not not wisdome crye death not vnderstandyng put forth the voice: Standeth she not in y^e high places in the stretes & waies: dooth she not crye before the whole ciue & in the gates where menne goe out and in: It is yon, O ye menne (saith she) whom I call. Vnto (the children of men) dooe I lift vp my voice Take hede vnto knowlage O ye ignorant: be ye wise in heart O ye fooles. Seue eare, for I will speake of greates matters, and open my lippes to tell thynges y^e bee righte. For my throte shal be talkyng of y^e trouth, & my lippes abhorre vngodlynes. All the wordes of my mouth are righteous there is no frowardenes no falshed therein.

They are all plain to suche as will vnderstand and right to them y^e finde knowlage. Receiue my doctryne, and not siluer: and my knowlage more then fyne golde. For wisdome is more worth then p^{re}ciouse stones: yea, all thynges y^e thou canst desire, maie not bee compared vnto it. I wisdome haue my dwellyng with know-lage, and prudent counsaill is myne owne. The fear of the Lord abhorreth wickednes, pride, disdaine, and the euill waie: and a mouth that speaketh wicked thynges, I utterly abhorre. I can geue counsaill, & I confesse thynges: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strenght. Thow owne me, counsaillers make iust lawes. Thow owne me, dooe princes bare rule and all iudges of the earthe execute iudgement.

I am louyng vnto those that loue me: & they that seke me early shal finde me. Richesse and honoure are with me: yea, excellens goodes and righteousnes. My fruite is better then gold and p^{re}ciouse stone, and myne encrease more worth then fine siluer. I will guyde the in the waie of righteousnes, and in the strete of iudgement.
That I may sende prosperite to those that loue me, and to encrease their treasure.

The Lord hym selfe had me in possession in the beginning of his waies, or euer he beganne his woorkes afore tyme. I haue hene ordained from eternall tyme, and from the beginning or euer the erth was made. When I was bozne there were nether depthes noz springes of water. Before the foundations of the mountaines were layed: yea, before all bylles was I bozne.
The erth and all that is vpon the erth was not yet made, no, not the ground it selfe. For when he made the heauens, I was p^{re}sente, when he set vp the depthes in ord^r, when he hanged the cloudes about, when he fastened the springes of the depe.

When he shut the sea within a certain bound des, that the waters would not goe ouer their markes that he commaunded.

When he laied the foundations of the earth I was with him, ord^ring all thynges: deli-ueryng dayly, and reioysyng al way before hym.

As for the round compasse of this worlde I make it ioyfull: for my deylte is to be amonge the children of menne. Therefore darke vnto me O ye children, blessed are they that hope my wordes.

O gene care vnto nourture, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the manne that heareth me: watching daily at my gates, & giving attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For who so findeth me, findeth life: and shall obtaine fauour of the Lorde. But who so offendeth against me, but-tereth his owne soule. And they that hate me are the louers of death.

In this chapter all men are to be warned by the prophet of an hope.

Wisdom hath buylded her self an house, and betwene our seuen pillars she hath killed her vitayles, poured out her wyne, and prepared her table. She hath sente forth her maidens to crye vpon the highest place of the citee.

Who so is ignorant, let hym come heere. And to the vnderstandyng she saith: O come on your waie, cate my bryde, and dyncke my wyne whiche I haue poured out for you. For I haue ignorauce, and ye shall liue: and I that ye goo in the waie of vnderstandyng.

Who so reproveth a scoynfull persone, getteth hymself dishonour: and he that rebuketh the vngodly stainerh hymself. Reproue not a scoyner, lest he owe the cruell will: but rebuke a wise manne, and he will loue y. Gene a discrete manne but an occasid and he will bee the wiser: teache a righteous manne, and he will encrease in knowlage.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wisdom, and the knowlage of holy thynges, is vnderstandyng. For thowowe me thy daies shalbe prolonged, & the peres of thy lyfe shalbe many. If thou be wyse thy wysdome shal do thy selfe good: but if thou thinkest scoyne thee-of, it shalbe thyne owne harme. A fooly wretch lesse woman full of woordes, and suche a one as hath no knowlage, lyteth at the doore of her house, & in the hye places of the citee, to cal such as go by, and that walke stryght in theyr way-es. Who so is ignorant (saith she) let hym come hither, & to the vnderstandyng she saith: stolen waters are swete: & the bread that is pyncely eatte, hath a good taste. And he doeth not consyde, & they are but deade whiche be there, and that her gestes are in the depe of hell.

For he that wyll be lapped vnto her, shal go downe to hell, but he that awaryeth from her, shal be saued.

The x. Chapter.

In this chapter all that folowe vnto the chyrche, the best man exhorteth by dyuers sentences, whiche he calleth parables, so folowe vnto the chyrche, & lyfe wyse. And sheweth also what profit cometh of wysdome, & what hynderaunce procedeth of foolyshe.

The Proverbes of Salomon.

Wyse sonne maketh a glad father: but an vnderstandyng sonne is an heu-nelle vnto his mother. Treasures that are tochedlye gotten, profyte nothyng: but righteousnesse deliuereth from death. The Lorde wyll not let the soule of the righteous suffer hunger, but he taketh awaye the ryche of the vngodlye. A ryche hande maketh pooze, but a quyet labou-ryng hande maketh ryche.

Who so is vnderstandyng, & lyf wyse, & the ryche hande maketh ryche, but the ryche hande maketh ryche.

Who so gardeth in somer, is wise: but he that is sluggish in haruest, bringeth him self to confusyon. Blessynges are vpon the head of the righteous, and the mouth of the vngodlye heryth myschefe in secrete. The memoypall of the iust shal haue a good reposte: but the name of the vngodly shal synke. A wyse man wyll recyue warnyng, but a playnge foole shalbe punished. He that leadeh an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goth a wyong way, shalbe knowen. He that winketh with his eye wyll do some harme: but he that hath a fooly mouth, shalbe eaten. The mouth of a ryghte-ous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouth of the vngodly heryth myschefe in secrete.

Euyl wyll styeth vpon the ryche: but loue coue-reth the multiplyng of synnes. In the lypes of hym that hath vnderstandyng a manne shal synd wysdome, but the rod belongeth to the backe of the foolyshe. Wyse men lape vpon knowlage, but the mouth of the foolyshe is nye destruccyon.
The ryche mans goodes are his stronge holde, but their owne pouertie seareth the pooze. The righteous labourerh to do good, but the vngod-ly vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nourture, is the waie of lyfe but he that refuseth to be reformed, dis-ceyueh hym selfe. Wyssemblyng lypes hepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh anpe-sclandye, is a foole. Where muche bablyng is, there must nedes be offence: and he that restray-neth his lypes, is wyse. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodlye is nothyng wyse. The lypes of the ryghte-ous fede a whole multiplyng, but foolyshe shal be in theyr owne folye. The blessing of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull trauayle it doth nothyng therto. A foole doeth wychebly, and maketh but a spoyle of it: but wysdome ruleth the man that hath vnderstandyng. The thynges that the vngodlye are asfayde of, shal come vpon them, but the ryghteous shal haue theyr deliue. The vngodlye passeth when the tempeste cometh: but the ryghteous remayneth sure for euer. As wyngre is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euil so is a slou-gish person to them that sendeth hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the yeares of the vngodly shalbe shortned.
The patient abidyng of the ryghteous shal be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of the vngodly shal peryshe. The waie of the Lorde geueth courage vnto godly, but it is a feate for wyched doers. The ryghteous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodly shal not remain in the lande. The mouth of the iust wyll be talkyng of wysdome, but the mouth of the froward shal peryshe. The lypes of the ryghteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodlye taketh them to the woyle.

The xi. Chapter.

A false

* False balauce is an abhomin-cid vnto þ Lord: but a true weight pleaseth him. * Where wisedom is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowlinesse, there is wyldome. The innocent dealing of the iust shall leade them, but the wychednes of such as dyssemble, shall be theiꝝ owne destruccion. * Richesse helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death. The righteou-nesse of the innocent omdreth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wychednesse.

The righteousnesse of the iust shall deliuer the, but the wyched shall be taken in theiꝝ owne vngodlynesse. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confydence of rycheesse shall peryshe. The ryghteous shall be deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shall come in his steade.

Thowthe the mouth of the dissembler is his neighbour destroyed: but thowthe knowlage shall the iust be deliuered. * When it goth well with the righteous, the cite is merry: and when the vngodly peryshe, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth, the cite prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth. A foole batingeth vp a sleaunder of his neighbour: but a wyse man wyl kepe it secrete. * A dys-sembling person wyl discouer many thynges but he that is of a fapfull herte wyl kepe confaple. * Where no good counsaile is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsaile, there is wealth. * He that is mercifull for a sleaunger hurteth hym self, and he that medleth not with suretyshyppe is sure. A gracyous woman may teynerh honestye, as for the wyched, they may teynerh rycheesse. * He that is mercifull, doth hym self a benefyte: but whoso hurteth his neyghboure, is a tryaunte. The laboure of the vngodly prospereth not, but he þ loweth ryghteousnesse, shall receiue a sure re-warde. Lyke as ryghteousnesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euil byngeth death. The Lord abhorreth them that be of a fained herte, but he hath pleasure in them þ are of an vndefyled conuersacion. The wyched amendeth not for plage vpon plage: but the seide of the ryghteous shall be preferred. A fapze woman without discrete maners is lyke a ryng of golde in a stowpnes smoute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodly is in-dignacyon. * Some manne geueth ouer his goodes, and ist'e rycher: but the nycard (batyng ynough) wyl departe from nothinge, & yet is euer in pouertye. * He that is lybterall in geuyng, shall haue plenty: & he that watereth shall be watered also hym selfe. * Who so hoou-deth vp his cozne, shall be cursed among the people: but blessing shall lyge vpon his heed that geueth foode. He that laboureth for honestye, fyndeth his desyre: but who so seketh after myschefe, it shall happen vnto hym. He that tru-deth in his rycheesse, shall haue a fall: but a ryghteous shall flooyde, as the grene leafe. Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his herpage, and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse. The frute of the ryghteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endeuoreth hym selfe to winne mens soules, is wyse. * If þ ryghteous be recompensed vpon earth, howe muche moze then the vngodly and the synner?

The. xii. Chapter.

Who so longeth wysdome wyl be content to bee relesoued: but he þ ha-teth to be relesoued is a foole. * A good ma is acceptable vnto þ Lord but the wyched ymagyneth wyl be condempned. * A man can not endure in vngodly nesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shall not be moued. A houswifely woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corrupcion in his bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are ryghte: but the ymagynacions of the vngodly are dysceptful.
The talkyng of the vngodly is how they may lay wyfte for blood, but the mouth of the ryghteous wyl deliuer them. * God ouerturneth the estate of the wyched, and they stande not: but the house of the ryghteous shall stande sted-fast. A man shall be commended for his wysdome, but a foole shall be despyed. * A symple manne whiche laboureth and wyketh, is better then one that is gozgioug and lacheth byead. A ryghteous ma regardeth the lyfe of his cattel, but þ vngodlye haue cruell hertes. * He that sylleth his lande, shall haue plentyousnesse of byerd: but he that foloweth ydelnesse, is a verpe foole.

(Who so hath pleasure in conuynce at the wyse, leaueþ dysmyse in his owne dysmyse.)

The desyre of the vngodly huntereth after myschefe: but the roote of the ryghteous byngeth fozth frute. The wyched falleth into the snare, thowthe the malice of his owne mouth, but the iust shall escape oute of all peryll. Euerie man shall enioye good, accordyng to the frute of his mouth, and after the wykes of his handes shall he be rewarded. Looker what a foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyl be counsayled. A foole vttereth dyswyth in all the haste: but a discrete man coureth wronge. A iust man wyl tell the true the, and shewe the thyng that is ryghte: but a false wytnesse dyscepneth. A sleaunders person pycketh lyke a sword, but a wyse mans tonge is wholesome. A true mouthe is euer constant: but a dissembling tonge is soone chaunged.

They that ymagyn euil in their mynd, wyl discrue: but the counsaillers of peace shall haue ioye solowynge them. There shall no misfoztune happ vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be fylled with mysery. * The Lord abhorreth lying lyppes: but they þ labour for truth please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng, doth hymde wisdome: but an vndiscrete hert telleth out his foolysnesse. A dysgent hande shall haue rule: but the yde shall be vnder trybut. * Heuynesse discepneth þ hert of ma: but a good woide ma-keth it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth his neyghboure: but the waye of the vngodlye wyl dyscepneth theiꝝ selues. The dysceptfull man shall not rolle, that he tooke in huntynge,

the children of menne. Therefore darke vnto me O ye children, blessed are they that kepe my waies.
O geue care vnto nourture, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the manne that heareth me: war-ching daily at my gates, & geuing attendaunce
at the postes of my doores. For who so findeth me, findeth life: and shall obtaine fauour of the Lorde. But who so offendeth against me, hurteth his owne soule. And they that hate me are the louers of death.

In this chapter all manner of counsel is geuen to the young.

A Pledome hath buylded her self an house, and betweene ouer seuen pillars she hath builded her vitallies, poured out her wyne, and prepared her table. She hath sente forth her maidens to crye vpon the highest place of the citee.

Who so is ignorant, let hym come heere. And to the vnwise she saith: O come on your waie, eate my breade, and drynke my wyne whiche I haue poured out for you. For I haue ignorance, and ye shall liue: and is that ye goo in the waie of vnderstandyng.

Who so reprimeth a scoynfull persone, getteth hymself dishonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodly stainerh hymself. Reproue not a scozner, lest he owe the euill will: but rebuke a wise manne, and he will loue y. Geue a discrete manne but an occasiō and he will bee the wiser:
teache a righteous manne, and he will encrease
in knowlage.

*Job. xxxviii.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wisdomme, and the knowlage of holy thynges, is vnderstandyng. For thouzow me thy daies shalbe prolonged, & the yeres of thy lyfe shalbe many. If thou be wise thy wysdome shall do thy selfe good: but if thou thinkest scoyne thee-of, it shalbe thyne owne harme. A foolysprete lesse woman full of wordes, and suche a one as hath no knowlage, syteth at the dooze of her
as go by, and that walke stryght in theyr way-
es. Who so is ignorant, saith she, let hym come hither, & to the vnwise she saith: stolen waters are swete: & the bread that is pyncely eat, hath a good taste. And he doeth not consyde, & they are but deade whiche be there, and that her gestes are in the depe of hell.

For he that will be taught vnto her, shall go helow to hell, but he that aspyeth from her, shall see foules.

¶ The x. Chapter.

In this chapter all that folow vnto the thynges, the wise man expoundeth by diuers sentences, whiche he calleth parables, to shewe vnto us, & lyf vnto us. And the xij. of this chapter is of the wyse man, & how he sheweth vnto us the pynfull end of the scoyners.

Wysdomme maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is an heunell vnto his mother. Treasures that are wickedly gotten, prouoke nothyng: but righteousnesse deliuereth from deathe. The Lorde will not let the soule of the righteous suffer hunger, but he taketh awaye the ryche of the vngodly. A pyle hande maketh pooze, but a quicke labou-

ryng hande maketh ryche.

For the vngodly man, which the Lorde hath cursyd, shall be as the chaffe of the hynde, which the Lorde hath cursyd.

Who so gathereth in summer, is wise: but he that is sluggish in haruest, bringeth him self to confusyon. Blessynges are vpon the head of the righteous, and the mouth of the vngodly hersch myschefe in secretes. The memoypall of the iust shal haue a good report: but the name of the vngodly shal synke. A wise man will receyue warnyng, but a playnge foole shalbe punyschyd. He that leadeh an innocente lyfe, walketh surety: but who so goeth a wong way: shalbe knowen. He that winketh with his eye will do some harme: but he that hath a foolys mouth, shalbe eaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouth of the vngodly hersch myschefe in secretes.

Cupill will synne by synne: but loue coue-reth the multitude of synnes. In the lypyes of hym that hath vnderstandyng a manne shall synd wysdomme, but the rod belongeth to the backe of the foolyshe. Wylle men lape vpon knowlage, but the mouth of the foolyshe is nye destruccyon.
The ryche mans goodes are his stronge holde, but theyr owne pouertie feareth the pooze. The righteous laboureth to do good, but the vngod-ly vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take heed
of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed, dis-ceyueh hym selfe. Wylle byngge lypyes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh anpe-sclandye, is a foole. Where muche babylngge is, there must nedes be offence: and he that restray-neth his lypyes, is wise. An innocent tonge is a noble treasoure: but the herte of the vngodly is nothyng woerde. The lypyes of the righteous fede a whole multytud, but foolys shall dye in theyr owne folye. The blessing of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull traunple it doth nothyng therto. A foole doeth wyckedly, and maketh but a spoyle of it: but wysdome ru-
thynges that the vngodly are asfayde of, shall come vpon them, but the righteous shall haue theyr deliue. The vngodly passeth when the tempeste commeth: but the righteous remaineth sure for euer. As wynege is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, such so is a slou-gish person to them that sendeth hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe,
but the yeares of the vngodly shalbe shortned.

The patient abydinge of the righteous shal be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of the vngodly shal perishe. The waie of the Lorde geueth courage vnto godly, but it is a feare for wycked doers. The righteous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodly shal not remain in the lande. The mouth of the iuste will be talking of wysdomme, but the strong of the feoward shall perishe. The lypyes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the woyle.

¶ The xi. Chapter.

* False balancer is an abhominacion vnto y Lord: but a true weight pleasech him. Where pride is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowliness, there is wysdome. The innocente dealinge of the iuste shall leade them, but the wychednes of such as dyssemble, shalbe theyr owne destruccio. Richesse helpe not in the dape of vengeaunce, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death. The righteousnesse of the innocente ozdeth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wychednesse.

The ryghteousnesse of the iuste shall deliuereth, but the wyched shalbe taken in theyr owne vngodlynesse. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confydence of rycheesse shal perishe. The ryghteous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shal come in his steade.

Thozowe the mouth of the dissembler is his neyghbour destroyed: but thozowe knowlage shall the iust be deliuered. * When it goeth well with the righteous, the cite is merry: and when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iuste are in wealth, the cite prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth. A foole bringeth vp a sciaunder of his neyghbour: but a wyse man wyll kepe it secrete. * A dyssembling person wyll discouer many thynges: but he that is of a saythfull herte wyll kepe counsaile. * Where no good counsaile is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsaile, there is wealth.

* He that is thierre for a straunger hurteth hym self, and he that medleth not with surety shal be sure. A gracious woman mayteyneth honestye, as for the wyched, they maytayne rycheesse. * He that is merciful, doeth hym self a benefyte: but who so hurteth his neyghboure, is a tryaunte. The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he yfoweth ryghteousnesse, shall receiue a sure rewarde. Lyke as ryghteousnesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euil byngeth death. The Lord abhorreth them that be of a fained herte, but he hath pleasure in them yf are of an vnde-fyled conuersacion. The wyched amendereth not for plage vpon plage: but the seide of the ryghteous shalbe plesured. A saye woman with out dyscrete maners is lyke a ryng of golde in a swynes snoute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodly is indignacion. * Some manne geueth out his goodes, and is the ryche: but the nygard (saying ynough) wyll departe from nothinge, yf yet is euer in pouertry. * He that is lyberall in geuyng, shal haue plenty: & he that watereth shal be watered also hym self. * Who so hood-deth vp his cozne, shalbe cursed among the people: but blessing shal lyght vpon his deed that geueth fode. He that laboureth for honestye, findeth his desyre: but who so seeketh after myschance, it shal happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his rycheesse, shal haue a fall: but yf righteous shal flopye, as the grene leafe. Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shal haue wynde for his heretage, and the foole shal be seruante to the wyse. The frute of the righteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endoureth hym self to winne mens soules, is wyse. * Yf ryghteous be recompensed vpon earth, howe muche moze then the vngodly and the synner.

Who so loneth wysdome wyll be content to bee reformed: but he yf ha- teeth to be reformed is a foole. * A good ma is acceptable vnto y Lord: but the wyched ymaginer wyll be condempned. A man can not endure in vngodly- nesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shal not be moued. A houldiue woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that beaureth her selfe vnbonesly, is a corrupcion in his bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are ryght: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly are dyscrepful. The talkyng of the vngodly is how they may lay wayte for blood, but the mouth of the righteous wyll deliuer them. * God ouerturneth the estate of the wyched, and they stande not: but the house of the ryghteous shal stande sted faste. A man shalbe commended for his wysdome, but a foole shalbe despyred. * A symple manne whiche laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgeous and lacketh bread. A righteous ma regardeth the lyfe of his cattel, but yf vngodlye haue cruell hertes. * He that tylecth his lande, shal haue plenty ofnesse of byerde: but he that foloweth ydelnesse, is a verie foole.

* Who so hath pleasure in contempnyng the wyse, leauech dyscomfyt in his owne dwellinge.

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after myschance: but the roote of the ryghteous byngeth forth frute. The wyched falleth into the snare, thozowe the malice of his owne mouth, but the iust shal escape oute of all peryll. Euerie man shal enioye good, accordyng to the frute of his mouth, and after the workes of his handes shal he be rewarded. Look what a foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyll be counsailed. A foole uttereth bys wyath in all the haste: but a dyscrete man couereth wronge. A iuste man wyll tell the truthe, and shewe the thyng that is ryght: but a false wytnesse dysceyneth. A sciaunderous person payketh lyke a sword, but a wyse mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouthe is euer constant: but a dissembling tonge is soone chaunged.

They that ymagyn euil in their mynde, wyll dyscriue: but the counsaillers of peace shal haue ioye folowyng them. There shal no misfortune happ vnto the iust, but the vngodly shal be tyled with mysery. * The Lord abhorreth lying lypes: but they yf labour for truth please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng, doeth hyde wysdome: but an vndiscrete hert telleth out his foolysnesse. A diligent hande shal brare rule: but the ydle shalbe vnder trybut. * Heuynesse discouageth yf hert of ma: but a good woide maketh it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth his neyghboure: but the waye of the vngodlye wyll dysceyue them selues. The dyscrepfull man shal not roste, that he tooke in huntynge,

The Proverbes.

lue. In the waye of righteouſneſſe there is life and in the ſame waye there is no death.

The. xiii. Chapter.

A Wiſe ſonne wyl berken to his fathers warnyng, but he is ſcoone-full, wyl not heare when he is re-proued. A good manne ſhal enioye the frute of his mouthe, but he that ha. be a frowarde mouthe, ſhal be ſpoyled. He that heareth hys mouthe heareth hys life: but who ſo openeth hys lippes to euell, deſtroyeth hym ſelfe. The ſlogarde wold ſayne haue, and can not gette his deſyre: but the ſoule of the li-lygente ſhal haue plenty. A ryghteous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodly ſwameth betwix other and hym ſelfe. Ryghteouſneſſe heareth the innocente in the waye: but vngodlyneſſe doeth ouerthrowe the ſpyner. * Some men are ryche though they haue nothing: agayne ſome men are poore, hauyng greate riches. With good-des euery man helpeth his life, and ſ poore wyl not be reſproued. The lychte of the rygheteous maketh ioyfull, but the candle of the vngodly ſhal be put out. Among the proude there is euill ſpyke: but among thoſe that do all things with aduylment, there is wiſdome.

Claynelle gotten goodes are ſoone ſpente: but they that bee gathered together wyl the hande, ſhal increaſe. Long taryng for a thing that is deſerred, greueth the heart, but when the deſyre cometh, it is a tree of life.

Who ſo deſpyſeth any thinge ſhal be hurte for the ſame: but he that feareth the commaun-dement, ſhal haue the rewarde.

Job. xxi. 25. A diſcreet ſonne ſhall haue no good, but a diſcrete ſeruant ſhall do ſull well, and his waye ſhall proſper.

C The lawe is a well of life vnto the wiſe, ſ it may kepe hym from the ſnars of death.
Good vnderſtanding geueth fauour, but hard is the waye of the deſpyſers. A wiſe manne doeth all thinges with diſcrecyon: but a fool wyl deſtroye hys ſoules. An vngodly meſſenger falleth into miſchefe: but a faythful ambafſadoure is wholiſome. He that ſpyketh ſcoone to be reſourced, cometh to pouertie and ſhame but who ſo reſteth in correccyon, ſhall come to honoure. When a deſyre is broughte to paſſe, it deſtroyeth the ſoule: but fooler counte it abhominacyon to departe from euell. He that goeth in the company of wiſe men, ſhal be wiſe: but whoſo is a companion of fooler, ſhal be hurte.

Job. xxi. 25. Wiſe ſonne ſoloweth vpon ſpyners, but the ryghteous ſhall haue a good rewarde. He that is vertuous, leaueſt an heritage vnto his children chyldren: * the rycheſſe of the ſpyner is layde vp for the iuſte. There is plentyfulneſſe of foode in ſeldes of the poore but the ſeld not well o. dzed, is withoute frute. * He that ſpareth the rod hateth his ſonne: but whoſo longeth him chaſteth him by ſtyckes. * The righteous eateſt, and is ſatysfied: but the belly of the vngodlye hath neuer ynough.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

W iſe women vpholde theyr houſe: but a foolyſhe wyfe plucketh it doſtne.
He that walketh in the ryghte path of the Lozde, ſereth him: but he that turneth hym ſelfe from hys wayes, deſpyſeth hym. In the mouthe of the foolyſhe is the rodde of pryde: but the lippes of the wiſe wyl pre-ſerue them. Where no oxen are, there the cryb is emptye: but where the oxen laboure, there is muche frute. A faythfull wyneſſe wyl not deſemble, but a falſe reſoarde wyl make a lye.
A ſcoonefull bodie ſereth wiſdome, and ſyndereth it not: but knowledge is eaſy to come by vnto hym that wyl vnderſtande.

He that thou medle not with a fool in who thou precepteſt to be no knowledge. The wiſe-dome of hym that hath vnderſtandynge, is to take heed vnto his waye: but the foolyſheſſe of the vniſe deſerueſt. Fooler make but a ſpoote of ſpyne, but there is a fauourable lone amonge the ryghteous. The deſte ſeleth hys owne lynes by tternelle, neyther ſhal the ſtraunger be partaker of his iore. The houſe of the vngodly ſhal be ouerthrowen: but the tabernacle of the ryghteous ſhall ſtoode. * There is a waye whiche ſome men thynke to be right: but the ende thereof leadeth vnto death. The deſte is ſozowful euen in laughter, & the ende of myſth is heynneſſe. A backſlidyng deſte ſhal be ſpilled with his owne wayes, but a good manne ſhal lyue of his frutes. An ignozaunte bodie bele-ueth all thinges: but who ſo hath vnderſtanding lokeſt well to his goynges.

Job. xxi. 25. A diſcreet ſonne ſhall haue no good, but a diſcrete ſeruant ſhall do well, and his waye ſhall proſper.

A wiſe man feareth, & departeth from euell but a ſurpous fooler goeth on preſumptuouſlye

An vnpatient man dealeth fooliſhly: but he that is well aduylſed, is hated of the fooler. The ignozaunt haue fooliſhneſſe in poſſeſſyon but wiſe are crowned with knowledge. The euell ſhal bowe them ſelues befoze the good: and the vngodly ſhal wapte at the dozes of the righteous: The poore is hated out of his owne neighbours, but the ryche hath many frendes. Who ſo deſpyſeth hys neyghboure doeth amyle, but * bleſſed is he that hath pytie of the poore.

Job. xxi. 25. He that putteth his truſt in the Lozde ſhall be merciful.

Withoute doubte they erre that ymagyne wycheſneſſe, but they that muſt vpon good thinges, vnto ſuche ſhall happen merce and faythfulneſſe. In euery labour there is ſome proſpitye. But onelye wayne woozden, bynne for the penneye. Rycheſſe are as a crowne vnto the wiſe, but the ignozaunce of fooler is very foolyſheſſe. A faythfull wyneſſe deſpynereth ſoules, but a diſcreet wyneſſe byn-nereth for the lyes. The feare of the Lozde is a ſtrong hold, & his chyldren are vnder a ſure deſence. The feare of the Lozde is a well of life, to a wyſe ſonnes of death. The increaſe & proſperitye of the comens is the kynges honour, but ſ decaye of the people, is the confuſyon of the wyne. He that is patient, hath muche vnder-ſtandynge, but he that is ſoone diſpleaſed, proue-

promoueth foolysnesse. A merry hert is the lyfe of the body: but rancoure consumeth away the bones. * He that doth a poore man wrong blasphemer is his maker: but whoso hath pittie of a poore doeth honoure vnto God. The vngodly is cast awaye for his iniquitie, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in deathe. Wylsome reffecth in a hert of hym that hath vnderstandynge, and it shalbe knowne amonge them that are vnlearned. * Ryghteousnesse letteth by the people, but the sacrifice of a heathen is synfull. A discrete seruaunte is a pleasure vnto the hyng: but one that is not honest prouoketh hym vnto wrath.

Eccl. xv. Chapter.

A sweet answer putteth downe displeasure: but froward wordes prouoke vnto anger. The tung of such as be wise, vnder knowlage a right as for a foolyshe mouth it vableth oute not byrde but foolysheenesse. The eyes of the Loide looke on every place, beholding both the good and bad. A wholsom tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mind. A foole despiseth his fathers correccion, but he that taketh hede wher he is repproued, shall haue the more vnderstandynge.

(Where righteousnesse is planted, there is very great pleasure: but the imaginations of the vngodly shall be rooted oute.)

The house of a ryghteous is full of riches: but the increase of a vngodly are nye destruccid. A wise mouth powyeth out knowlage, but a hert of a foolyshe doth not so. * The Loide abhorreth the sacrifice of a vngodly, but a praise of a ryghteous is acceptable vnto hym. The way of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto a Loide: but whoso foloweth righteously, hym he loueth.

He that forsaketh the right way, shalbe soze punished: & whoso hateth correccion shall dye.

The hell wher payne is knowen vnto a Loide howe muche more then the hertes of men. * A scornfull body loueth not one that rebuketh him: neither wyll he come vnto the wyse. * A merie hert maketh a cheerefull countenance: but an heuy hert compelleth a man to sygde.

The hert of hym that hath vnderstanding doth seke after knowlage: but a mouth of foolles is fed wpyth foolysheenesse. All a dayes of the poore are myserable: but a quiet hert is a continual feast. * Better is a lytle with feare of the Loide, then greate treasure with ioye.

Better is a melle of pottage w loue, then a fat oxe with euell wyl. * An angry man styreth up byrfe, but he that is pacient styllteth discorde.

The way of a stoutheull man is as it were hedged with thornes: but the strete of a ryghteous is well clenched. * A wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete body shameth his mother.

A foole reioyseth in foolyshe thynges, but a wise man loketh wel vnto his owne goynges. Unadvised thoughtes shall come to naught: but where as men are that can geue good counsaile, there is stedfastnesse. A ioyfull thyng is to a man, when his counsaile is folowed: and very pleasaunt is a word spoken in due season.

The waye of life leadeth vnto heauen & a man shalbe be ware of hell deneth. The Loide wyll breake downe the house of a proude, but he shal make faste the borders of the wyddome. The Loide abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wycked, but pure wordes of innocency ar pleasaunt vnto hi. The couetous ma rotte by his owne house, but whoso hateth rewardes shall lyue.

The hert of a ryghteous studieth his answer afore, but a wycked mannes mouth sheweth out myschete. The Loide is farre from a vngodly, But he heareth the prayer of a ryghteous. Like as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the hert so doeth a good name feche the bones. The care that darkeneth to the reformacion of lyfe, shal dwell amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submitteyth hym selfe to correccion is wyse. The feare of the Loide is a ryght science of wisdom: and lowlynesse goeth before honoure.

Eccl. xvi. Chapter.

An maye wel purpose a thing in a hert, but the answer of a tonge cometh of the Loide. * A man thinketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Loide that purgeth the myndes. * Compt the workes vnto the Loide, and loke what a deuyse it shall prosper. The Loide doth all thynges for his owne sake: yea, and when he kepeth the vngodly for the daye of wrath. The Loide abhorreth all such as be of a proude hert, his hande is against theyr hande, and they shal not escape as innocentes.

With louyng mercy & saythfulnesse, synnes be forgiven, and whoso feareth a Loide eschuerth euill. When a mans wayes please a Loide he maketh his very enemies to be his frendes.

Better it is to haue a lytle thyng with ryghteousnesse, then greate rentes wrongfully gotten. * A man deuyseth a waye in his hert, but it is the Loide that doth byrde his goynges.

When the prophete is in the lypes of the hyng, his mouth shal not go wronge in iudgement. * A true measure & a true balace ar a Loides iudgement, he maketh all weyghtes. It is a great abhominacion, wher kinges ar wicked, for a kinges seate shalbe be holden by a ryghteousnesse.

Ryghteous lypes are pleasaunt vnto a hyng: and he that speaketh the trouth, shalbe beloued. The hynges dyspleasure is a messenger of death, but a wise man wil pacifie him. The cheerefull countenance of a hyng is life: and his louyng fauoure, is as a euening dewe. * To haue wisdom in possesid, is better then to haue gold: & to get vnderstandynge, is rather to be cholen then to haue syluer. The path of the ryghteous is to eschue euill, & whoso loketh well to his wayes kepeth his owne soule. Presumptuousnesse goeth before destruccyon, and after a proude shal make there foloweth a fall. Better it is to be of humble mynd with a lowly, then to deuyde the

And why? the wyched shall haue no posterite, & the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. * My sonne, feare thou the Lord, and the kynge, and kepe no company with them that styde backe from hys feare: for they destruccyon shall come sodenly, and who knoweth the aduersyte? maye come from the both: & these are also saynges of the wyse. * It is not good, to haue respecte of anye personne in iudgement. he that sayth to the vngodly: thou art ryghteous, him shall the people curse: yea, the comynalte shall abhorre hym.

But they that rebuke the vngodly, in them doeth God deliuer, & a rych blessing shall come vpon them. Euerie man shall kysse his lippes that geueth a good answer.

Do not make vp thy wozhe that is withoute and loke well vnto that whiche thou hast in the felde: & then buyde thyne house. Be not a false wytnesse agaynst thy neighbour and speake no falschode with thy lippes. Saye not: I will handle hym: euen as he hath dealt w me, & I will rewarde euery man accordyng to his debtes.

These are also parables of Salomon, whiche the men of Chetiah kyng of Iuda copped oute.

It is the honoure of God to kepe a thyng secrete, but the kynges honoure is to seache oute a thyng. The heauen is hye, the earth is breye and the kynges heit is vnsearchable. Take the drasse from the spiner, & ther shall be a cleane vessel therof. Take a way vngodlynesse from the kyng, and his seate shall be stablished with ryghteousnes. But not for thy selfe in the presence of the kyng, and prele not into the place of great men. * Better is it, that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hither, then thou to be put lower in the presence of the prynce whiche thou leest with thyne eyes. * Be not hasty to goe to the lawe, lest haply thou do some offence after the styfe be ended, whereby thy neighbour put the to shame. Handle thy master with thy neighbour hym selfe, and discouer not anothers mans secret, lest wher men heare thereof, it turne to thy dyshonoure, & leaste thyne euell name do not cease. * If thou hope for thy selfe, lest thou be reproved.

A wozde spoken in due season, is lyke the appels of golde in a graued wozhe of syluer. The correccyon of the wyse is to an obedyent care, a golde chayne & a Iuell of golde. Lyke as the wynter colde in the barrest, so is a faithful messaunger to them that sende hym: for he refresseth hys masters mynde. Who so maketh great boastes and geueth nothing, is lyke the cloudes and winde withoute rayne. With patience is a prynce pacified, and with a softt tongue is ryghteousnes broken. If thou syndest hony, care to murde as is sufficient for the: lest thou be ouerfull, & perbake it out agayne. Whichdame thy foote fele thy neygbbours house: lest he be wery of the, & so abhorre the. Who so beareth false wytnesse agaynst his neygbboure, he is a verpe clubbe & a sworde, and a sharpe arrowe. * He hope that is put in a false man in tyme of neede, is lyke a rotten toth and a slippery sote. Who so taketh awaye a mans garment in the colde wetther, is lyke vynerget vpon chalyke, & lyke hym that singeth songes to an heuy hert. * Lyke as the mouth sheweth a garment: & a tongue the covetise of the hert: so sheweth the purpouse of a man whiche the hert. * If thyne enemye hunger, fede hym: & if he thyrste, geue hym drinke: for so shalt thou braye cooles of spye vpon hys heade, and the Lord shall rewarde the. The Northwynde dryneth awaye the rayne, euen so doeth an eneneste sober countenance a backbeters tongue. * It is better to lytte in a corner vnder the rose then with a bawdyng woman in a wide house. A good reposte oute of a farre countree is lyke colde water to a thyrstye soule. A ryghteous manne fallynge downe before the vngodlye, is lyke a troubled well, and a springe that is destroyed. Lyke as it is not good to eate to much hony, & euen so be that thou searsh oute thyne eyes, it shall be to heuy for hym. he that can not rule hym selfe, is lyke a cytle whiche is broken downe, and hath no wallis.

fooles mouthe is lyke a thorne that pyncheth a drunken man in the hande. ¹⁰ A man of experience discerneth al thyng ges well: but he that putteth the foole to selence endeth the styfe. * Lyke as the dogge turneth agayn to his owne vomite, euen so a foole begynneth his foolysheenes againe after he.

If thou seest a man that is wise in his owne conceite, ther is more hope in a foole the in him

* The flourishfull sayeth: there is a Lyon in y wape, and a Lyon in the myddest of the strettes.
Lyke as the doxe turneth aboute vpon the ben-ges, euen so doth the flourishfull welter hym self in his bed. * The flourishfull body chausteth hym hande into his bosome, & it greued hym to put it agayne to hym mouthe. The dogardethyn-heth hym selfe wyse then seven men that lye & teache. Who so goeth by and medleth w other mens styfe: he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares. Lyke as a mad man that casteth fyre byndes, & shoteh deadly arrowes and dartes, euen so doth a dissembler with his neighbour.

And then sayeth he: ¹⁰ (when he is taken) I dyd it but in spoyle. Where no wodde is, there the fire goth out: Euen so where the tale betraper is taken awaye, there the styfe ceaseth. * Coles kyndle heate, and wood the fyre: euen so doth a bawling felowe strete vp vnpaunier.

A taletrapers wordes are lyke men y styfe with hammers, but they pearse the inward par-tes of the body. Vicious lippes and a wyched herte are lyke a potte covered with spliuer dross. An enemy shal be knowne by his tal-kyng, & in the meane season he ymagineth mys-chere, but when he speaketh saye, beleue hym not: for there are seven abhominacions in hym herte. Who so heperth euell wyll secretly doo hurte, his malice shal be shewed before y whole congregation. * Who so dyggeth up a pye, shal fall therein: and he that welceth a stone, shal scamble vpon it hym selfe. A dissembling tong hateh one that rebuketh hym, & a flatterynge mouthe woorketh myschere.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The stone is heuy, and the sand weyghty: but Wrath is a cruel chynge, and furyousnesse is a very tefell: but who is able to abide enuy?

An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.

Raythfull are the woundes of a louer, but y hilles of an enemy are cruell. He that is full abhoretth an hony combe, but vnto him that is dongry, euery souer chynge is swete.

He that oftymes dyeterh, is lyke a byrde y their hert merry: so is the swete coucill of a mids frend that agreeth to his purpose. Thine owne frende & thy fathers frende se thou forsake not:

but goo not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble. For better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of. Wy sonne, be wyse: and thou shalt make me a glad herte, so that I shal make an answer vnto my rebukers. A wyse man seynge the plage, wyll hyde hym selfe, as for fooler they go on styll, and suffer harme.

* Take his garment that is swerth for a strawn get, and take a pledge of hym for the unknowe mannes sake. He that is to hasty to praple his nepyghbour aboue measure, shal be takn as one that geueth hym an euell reposte.

* A bawling woman and the rooffe of the house droppynge in a raynye daye: maye wel be compared together. He that restryneth her, refrayneth the wynd, and holdeth the oyle fast in his hande. Like as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another. Who so he-perth his sygge tree, shal enioye the frutes ther-of: euen so, he that wyperth vpon his mapster, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there appere dyuerse faces, euen so dyuers men haue dyuerse hartes. Lyke as bell and destruccyon are neuer full, euen so the eyes of men can neuer be satisfied. Wyler is tryed in y moule & golde in the foynace, & so is a man, when he is openly prapled to his face. ¹⁰ (The hert of a wicked man search after myschere, but a true hert search for knowlege.)

Though thou wyldest draye a foole wyth a pestel in a moztwe lyke fymenty coine, yet wyl not his foolysheenes go from hym. Se that thou knowe the nombre of thy catel thy selfe, & looke wel to thy flockes. For ryches abyedeth not al-waye and the crowne endureth not for euer.

The hope groweth, the grasse cometh vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shal clothe the and for the goates thou shalt haue moneye to thy busbandye. Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynough to fede the, to upholde thy household, & to susteyne thy maides

The xxviii. Chapter.

He vngodly dyeth wth no man cha-steth hym: but the ryghteous stan-deth styfe as a Lyon. * Because of synne the lande dothe ofte chaunge her payner: but the good men of vnderstandynge and wyldome, a realme endureth longe. One poore manne opprellynge another by violence, is lyke a continual raine that de-stroyeth the frute. They that forsake the lawe, praple the vngodly: but suche as hepe the lawe abhoire them. * Wyched men dyscerne not the thyng that is ryghte, but they that seie after the lawe discusse all thynges. * A poore man leadyng a godly lyfe, is better then the ryche that goth in frowarde wayes.

Who so heperth the lawe, is a childe of vnder standynge: but he that is a compaignion of ryo-tous menne, shameth his father. He that by v-surpe and vnjuste gapers gathereth ryches, he shal laye them in doze for a man that wyl pytie the poore. * He that tourneth a waye hye eare from hearyng the lawe, his praiser shal be abhominable. Who so leadeh the ryghteous into an euell waye, shal fall into his owne pit, but the iust shall haue the good in possession.

The rich man thynketh hym selfe to be wise but the poore that hath vnderstanding, can perceiue hym well ynough. * When ryghteous men are in prosperite, then doeth honoure flowe vnto them, but when the vngodly come vnto the state of men chaungeth. He that lyeth his synnes, shall not prosper: but * who so knowlegeth the, and forsaketh them shall haue mercy.

Well is hym that standeth alwaie in awe, as for hym that hardeneth his hart, he shall fall into myscrye. Lyke as a roaring Lyon, and an hungry beare, euen so is an vngodly prince ouer the poore people. Where the wyse is without vnderstanding, there is great oppres- sion and wrong: but yf he be such a one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe ragyne. * He that by violence sheddeth any mannes bloude: shall be a renegate vnto his grane, & no man shall be able to socoure hym. * Who so leadech a godly and an innocent lyfe shall be saued, but he yf goeth froward wayes shall once haue a fall.

* He that fylleth his lande, shall haue plen- teousnes of breade: but he yf foloweth vdelnesse, shall haue pouertie ynough. A man that dealeth fapthfully, shall be fylled with blessinges, and * he that maketh to muche haste for to bee ryche, shall not be vnglype. To haue respecte of persons in iudgement is not good. And why a man wyll do wyngre: yea, euen for a peece of breade. He that wyll be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye: and considereth not, that pouertie shall come vpon hym.

He that folowynge my preceptes rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at the last, then he that flattereth hym. * Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne, the same is lyke vnto a destroyer. He that is of a proude stomache and wythoute feare: feareth vpon stryfe: but he that putteth hym truste in the Lord shall be well fed. He that trusteth in his owne herte, is a foole: but he that dealeth wisely, shall be safe. * He that getteth vnto y poore, shall not lacke, but he that turneth away his eyes from suche as be in necessyte, shall suffer greate pouertie hym selfe. * When the vngodly are come vpon, men are sayne to hyde them sel- ues: but when they perishe, yf righteous increase

The xxx. Chapter.

He is stiffe necked, and wyl not be reformed: that sodenly be destroyed without any helpe. * When the ryghteous haue the ouer hande the people are in prosperite, but when yf vngodly beareth rule, there yf people mourne.

Who so loueth wysdome maketh his father a glad man: * But he that heareth company with baselofes, spendeth awaye that he hath. Which true iudgement the hynges setteth vpon the lande, but yf he be a man that oppreseth the people to gaderynge he turneth it vnto the downe.

Who so flattereth his neyghboure, layeth a net for his fete. The synne of the wyched is his owne snare, but the ryghteous doeth syng and reioyse. The ryghteous considereth the cause of the poore: but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge. Wyched people byynge a cylie in decaye, but wyse men sette it by agayne. Yf a wyse man go to lade wyth a foole: (whether he deale with hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no reste. The bloudy hynges hate the righteous, but the iuste seke his soule. A foole putteth out his spere altogether, but a wyse man keepeth it in, tyll afterwarde. Yf a wyse man deliue in ly- es, all his seruantes are vngodly. The poore and the lender mete together, and the lord ligh- teneth both the eyes. * The seate of the hynges that fapthfully iudgeth the poore, shall con- tinue sure for euermore. The rodde of correccion minister wysdome, but yf a chyld be not lohed vnto, he byyngeth his mother to shame.

When yf vngodly come vpon, wickednes increa- seth: but the righteous shall see they fall. Fur- ther the some with correccion, and thou shalt be at rest: yea, he shall do the good at thine herte.

When the woordes of God is not preached, the people perishe: but well is hym that heareth the lawe. A seruante wyll not bee the better for woordes, for though he vnderstande: yet wyll he not regarde them. Yf thou seest a man that is hasty to speake vnadvised, thou maist trust a foole more then hym. He that delicately byn- geth vpon his seruant from a chyld, shall make hym his master at length.

An angry man styreth vpon strife, and he that beareth euill wyll in his mynde, doeth muche euill. After wynde cometh a falle, * but a low- ely spere byyngeth greatesse woith. Who- so heareth company with a chese, hateth his owne soule: he beareth blasphemies, and telleth it not forth. He that feareth men, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth his truste in the Lord is with- out daunger. Many there be yf seke the wynges fauoure, but euery man iudgeth cometh fro yf Lord. The righteous abhorreth yf vngodly, but as for those that be in the ryghte waye the wy- ked hate them: * (A chylde that heareth the wordes, shall with- out destruction.)

The purpouse of the wordes of God, and what we ought to be of God, with certayne wonderfull thynges that are in this world.

He wordes of Agur: the sonne of Ja- key, and the prophete that the same man speake vnto Iehiel, euen vnto Iehiel, and Achab. I am more foo- ly then any man, & haue no man- nes vnderstandynge. I neuer learned wysdome nor had knowledge of hooly thynges. Who hath clymed vpon into heauen? Who hath come downe frome thence? Who hath holden the wynde faste in his hande? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? Who hath sette all the endes of the world? What is his name, as his sonnes name? Canst thou tell? * al the wordes of God are pure and cleane, for he is a spide vnto all them, that put they trust in hym. * Putte thou nothyng vnto his wo- des, leaste he reioyse the, and thou be founde a lyar.  taineth her armes. And of the pervauey her hous-wyfery doeth good, her candle goeth not oute openeth her hand to fyng poor: yea, she stretcheth forth her handes to such as haue neede. She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurt her flanel. She maketh her selfe fayre ornamen-tes, her clothyng is white syke and purple. Her gyrdels vnto fyng marchaunt. Strenght and ho-noure is her clothyng, and in the latter day she and in her tonge is the lawe of grace. She lo-keth well to the maies of her household: & cater-not her byrade wth belynes. Her children shall amuche of her. Whany daughter is there be fyng

Ecc. i. 1.

Joh. viii. 12.

Pro. viii. 1.
Ecc. i. 1.
Joh. viii. 12.

These are the words of the preacher the sonne of Dauid, king of Ierusalem. ¶ All is but vanitie & vaine chace (saith the preacher) and all is moſte vaine (I ſay) and but playn vanitie. For what ſhall a man of all the labour that he taketh vnder ſonne? One generation paſſeth away, another cometh: but the earth abideth ſtill. The ſunne ariſeth, the ſunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, & he maketh there reſt up againe. The wynde goeth toward the ſouth and turneth vnto the north, ſeteth his courſe, whirleth about, & goeth ſouth, and his circuit returneth againe to hym ſelfe. ¶ All ſtrouds runne into the ſea, & yet is the ſea it ſelfe not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne thence they come to flowe againe. All thynges are ſo harde to be knowne that no man can exprieſe them. ¶ The eye is not ſatiſfied wth ſight, the eare is not filled wth hearing. ¶ The thyng that hath bene done, cometh to paſſe againe: and the thyng that hath bene done, ſhall be done againe.
There is no newe thyng vnder the ſunne. Is there any thyng wherof it may be ſayd lo this is newe? For it was longe ago in ſyemes that haue bene before vs. The thynges that is paſt is out of remembrance: Euen ſo ſe thynges that are for to come, ſhall no more be thought vpon among them that come after. ¶ I my ſelfe & pre-cher was king of Iſrael at Ierusalem, and dyd apply my mynde to ſeche out & ſearch for know-lage of all thynges that are done vnder heauen.
Much trauayl & labour hath God geuen vnto the children of men, to exerciſe the ſelues therein.
¶ Thus haue I conſidered all theſe thynges & come to paſſe vnder the ſunne: and lo, they are al but vanitie and vexation of mynde. The crooked can not be made ſtreight, nor the thyng that is vn-perfect, cannot be accepted wth thynges that are perfect. ¶ I comened wth myne owne herte, ſaying: lo, I am come to a greater ſtate, & haue gotten more wiſdome, then all they that haue ben before me in Ierusalem. ¶ Pea, my herte had greater perſeuerance of wiſdome & knowledge, for therunto I applyed my mynde, that I myght know what were wiſdom and vnderſtanding what were errour & fooliſhneſſe: and I perceiued, that this was alſo but a vexation of mynde: for where much wiſdome is, there is alſo great travayl and dyſquietneſſe and the more know-lage a man hath, the more is his care.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ Abundance of labour, and paine, and of weyling, and yet is but vanity.

When I ſayde I thus in my hert: ¶ Nowe go to, I will take myne eaſe, & haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanitie alſo: in ſo much, that I ſayde vnto the manne geuen to laughte: thou arte mad, and to miſtake: what doeſt thou? ¶ So I thought in my hert, to geue my ſelfe vnto wyne, and againe to applye my mynde vnto wiſdom, and to comprehend ſoolyſheſſe vntill the tyme that (amonge al the thynges whiche are vnder the ſonne) I myght ſee what were beſt for men to do, ſo long as they lyue vnder heauen.

¶ I made gorgeous ſaire ſortes. I builded my houſes, & planted vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardenes of pleaſure & planted trees in them of all maner frutes. ¶ I made pooles of water, to water the greene & fruitful trees wthall I thought ſeruautes and maydens: and had a great houſholder. ¶ I ſet catell and ſhepe, I had more ſubſtance of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. ¶ I gathered ſyluer and golde together euen a treaſure of kyndes & li-den. ¶ I provided me ſyngers and women, which could playe on inſtruments, to make me mirth & paſſime. ¶ I gat me plaſteries & ſonges of muſicke. ¶ And I was greater, & in more wth my then all my predeceſſors in Ierusalem. ¶ For wth dome remained wth me: and loke what ſouere-myne eyes deſired, I ſet them hure it: & wherin ſo euer my hert deſyred, I had any pleaſure. ¶ I with held it not fro it. ¶ Thus my hert reioyced in all that I did: & this was my poize of al my travayle. ¶ But when I conſidered all the wth-kes that my handes had wroughte, and al ſaboures that I had taken therein, lo, all was but vanitie and vexation of mynde, & nothing of anye valewe vnder the ſonne.

¶ Then turned I me to conſider wiſdom, er-roure & fooliſhneſſe (for what is he among me, & might be compared to me the king in ſuche wth-keſe) ¶ I ſaw that wiſdome excelleth fooliſhneſſe, as farre as lyght dothe darkeneſſe. ¶ For a wyſe man hath his eyes in his hed, but the ſoule goeth in the darkeneſſe. ¶ I perceined alſo & they both had one end. ¶ The thoughte I in my mind, ¶ If it happen vnto a ſoule as it doeth vnto me, what nebeth me then to labour any more for wiſdom? ¶ So I confeſſed wthin my hert, that this alſo was but vanitie. ¶ For ſo wyſe are euer as lytle in remembrance as a fooliſhe, for the dayes ſhall come when all ſhall be forgoth: pea, the wyſe man dyeth as well as the ſoule.
¶ Thus beganne I to be weyry of my lyfe, in ſomuch that I coulde away wth nothing that is done vnder the ſonne, for all was but vanytie and vexation of mynde: pea I was weyry of my labour, which I had taken vnder the ſonne becauſe I ſhoulde beſayne to leaue them vnto another ma that cometh after me: ¶ And who knoweth whether he ſhall be a wyſe man or a ſoule? ¶ And yet ſhall he be lord of al my labours whiche I wth ſuche wiſdome haue taken vnder the ſonne. ¶ This is alſo a vaine thyng.

¶ So I turned me to reſtayne my mynde from all ſuche travayl, as I toke vnder the ſonne: for ſo muche as a man ſhould weyry him ſelfe wth wiſdom, wth vnderſtanding and oportunitie and yet be faine to leaue his labours vnto another, that neuer ſweete for them. ¶ This is alſo a vaine

hynsome cometh vnto pouerty. And I perceyued that all men luyng vnder the sunne go with the seconde childe, that shall stande vp in the steele of the other. As for the people that haue ben before him, and I come after him they are innumerable. And they that come after him shall not reioyce of hym. This is also a wayne thyng and verayon of mynde. When thou comest into the house of God, hepe thy foote and drawe nye, that God which is at hande maye heare: that thou geue not the offerings of foolcs: for they knowe nought but to do euill.

124. 24.

The v. Chapter.

¶ An admonition to beware of vaine glory. We ought not to measure at the excellencye of the poore. The creature is not satisfied with his creature.

BE not hasty with the mouthe, & let not thyne herte speake any thyng rashely before God. For God is in heauen, & thou vpon earth. therefore let thy wordes be firme. For where much carefulnesse is, there are many dreames. & where many wordes are, there men may heare foies. ¶ If thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to performe it. As for foolish vowes be hath no pleasure in them: ¶ If thou promise any thyng, paye it: for better is it that thou make no vowe, then that I shouldest promise, and not paye. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy helthe for to synne, neyther say thou before the angel: that it is thy ignorance. For then God wyll be angry at thy vowe, & destroy all the wordes of thine lippes. And why? wher as at many dreames & many wordes, there are also diuers vanities: but looke & thou feare God. ¶ If thou seest the poore to be oppressed, and wrongfully delt withall, so that equytye and ryghte of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruaile not thou at suche a thyng, for our great man hepech touch with another, and the myghtye men are in an croyste ouer the poore. The increase of feareth vppholdeth all thyng: for the hyng him selfe is maynteyned by but bandye. He ploveth mony, & wyll neuer be satisfied wyth monye: and wyso deliueteth in rycheesse what haue no profyt therof. This is also a wayne thyng. Where as much richesse is, there are many also that speke the wape. And what pleasure moze hath he that possideth them, sayng that he may loke vpon them with his eyes. A labouryng man sleepeth sweetly, whether it be lytle or much that he eateth but the aboundaunce of the rich, wyll not suffer hym to slepe. ¶ It is there a soze plage, which I haue seene vnder the sunne, (namely) ryche men kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession. For of tyme they perrysh with his great myserye & trouble: and yet he haue a child, & getteth nothyng. ¶ Like as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne: & carpech nothyng a wape with hym of all his labour. This is a miserable plage that he shall go a wape cuf as he came. What helpech it him then that he hath laboured in the wynder. All the daies of his lyfe also he dyeth in the darke, in greates carefulnesse, lychness, & sozow. ¶ Ther for me thynke it a better and a farther thyng, a man to eate and dyspnde & to be refreshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the daies of his lyfe which God geueth hym. For this is his poore. For vnto wylomscuer God geueth rycheesse, goodes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porcyon, & to be refreshed of his labour: this is the gyfte of God. For he thynketh not muche howe long he shall lyue, for as much as God sylleth his deit with gladnesse.

¶ The mystrye of the ryche and the mystrye of the poore. The mystrye of a foole and a wyse man.

There is yet a plage vnder the sunne, and it is a general thyng among men which God geueth a mid richesse, goodes & honoure, so that he wanteth nothyng of all that his herte can desire, and yet God geueth hym not leane to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a wayne thyng & a miserable plage. ¶ If a man beget a hundred children, & lye many yerres, so that his daies are many in number, & yet can not enioye his good, neyther be buried, as for hym I saye: that vntimelye bytch is better then he. For he cometh to a naught, & spedyth his tyme in darkness, and his name is forgotten. Whereouer, he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth not of it: and yet hath he moze rest then the other. ¶ Pea, though he lyued two thousand yeres yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour that a man taketh is for hym self, and yet his desire is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse moze then the foole. What helpech it the poore, that he knoweth to walke with foolcs before the luyng? The clere syght of the eyes is better then the soule should walke after desires of lust. ¶ How be it, this is also a wayne thyng, & a disquietnes of mind. The thyng that hath ben is named already, and knowen that it is euen man hym selfe, neyther may he go to lyme w hym that is mightier then he. Many thynges there be that encrease vanyte: and what hath a man elles? For who knoweth what is good for man luyng, in the dayes of his payne lyfe, which is but a shadow. ¶ Who wyll tell a man what shall happen after hym vnder the sunne.

The vii. Chapter.

¶ That whiche possideth one thinges and loseth, might he not so fere after.

A Good name is moze worth, then vanyte & our ornament, & the daye of death is better then the daye of birth. It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a banquettyng house. For there is the end of all men: and he that is luyng, taketh it to herte: grauytie is better then to laughe: for when the countenance is deuy, the deit is reformed. The deit of a wyse man is in mourning house, but the deit of the foolys is in the house of myrrour. ¶ It is better to geue eare to the challyng of a wyse man then to heare the song of foolcs. For the laughyng of foolcs is lyke the crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a wayne thyng.

15 The wyle man hateth wjong dealing: & abhorreth the herte that couereth rewarde. Better is it to coside & ende of a thyng then the begynnyng. The patient of spyrte is better then the hys mynde. Be not hastily angere in thy mynde, for wjath resteth in the bosome of foolles. Waxe not thou: What is the cause, that the daies of y olde tyme were better then they that be now: for that were no wyle questyon. Wisdom with enheritaunce is good: yet better is it with them that without care maye behold the Sunne. For wisdom defendeth as well as mony and the excellent knowlages wisdom geueth lyfe vnto hym & hath it in possession. Consyde the worke of God, howe y no man can make & thyng streyght wiche he maketh croked.

C All well & tyme of prosperitie, & remembre the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh y one by the other, so y a man can fynde nothing els. All thynges haue I consyded in y tyme of my vanytie: that the iuste man perissheth for hys righteousnesse sake, & the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therefore, be thou neither to righteous nor ouerwyle y thou perissh not, be nyther to vnyghteous also nor to foolissh, lest y dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, and not to let y go out of thy hand. For he y feareth God, chmeth forth w them al.

Wisdom geueth more courage vnto the wyle, then ten myghty men of the cytie: & for there is not one iust vpon earth y doeth good & synneth not. Take no hede vnto euery worde y is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunt curse the: for thyne owne herte knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft tyme spoken euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued in wisdom: for I thoughte to be wyle: but she wente farther frome then she was before: pea, and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mind also vnto knowlage, & to seke & search out secret, wisdom & vnderstanding: to know y foolisshnesse of the vngodly, & the errour of doying foolles. And I founde, that y a woman is bitterer then death, for she hath castte abjode her herte as a net that men fy the wyth: & her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shal escape fro her, but the synner wyll be taken with her.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this haue I bylgently searched out and proued. One thyng must be consyded with an order, y a man may come by knowlage: wyche as yet I seke and fynde it not. Amonge a thousand men I haue founde one, but not one woman among all. Lo this only haue I founde, y God made man iust and ryght, but they sought many inuencions.

The viii. Chapter.

1 The hynges of the world are taught to be obeyed. Whoso is y one of the chiefe thynges vnder the sunne.

Who is wyle: who hath the knowlage to mak an answer: I mans wisdom maketh his face to shyne: but vnchamefaynes putteth it out of fauour. I must hepe the hynges commandement, & the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of his sight, and fe thou continue in no euell thyng, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth hym that doeth be. Lyke as when a hyng geueth a charge, hys commandement is myghty: Euen so, & Whoso maye save vnto hym: what doest thou? & Whoso heareth the commandement, shall seke no harme, but a wyle mans herte discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thyng wyll haue oportunitie & iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulnesse, and sorrow. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyll tell hym? Neither is there any man that hath power ouer the spyrte, to kepe syl the spyrte nor to haue any power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the batayle: neyther maye vngodlynesse deliuer the that medle wythall.

All these thynges haue I consyded, and applyed my mynde vnto euerye worke y is vnder the sunne: how one man hath lordship vpon an order to his owne harme. For I haue sene of ten the vngodly brought to they graues: & yet they haue returned into the cytie agayne, and came from the place of holy men, which in y cytie were growen out of memory, as were thole also y lyued well. This is also a wayne thyng because now that euell workes are not hastily punyshed, the herte of man geueth hym self ouer vnto wickednesse. But though be an euell personne offende an hundred tymes, & God defer, geuyng hym longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go well with them y feare God, because they haue hym before their eyes. Againe, as for the vngodly, it shall not be wel with hym, neyther shall he prolonge his dayes, but euen as a shadow: so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanytie vpon earth: There be iustmen, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly.

Agayne, there be vngodlye, with whome it goeth as though they had y workes of y ryghteous. This haue I called also a wayne thyng. Therefore I commende gladnes, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drinke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth hym vnder the Sunne. And so I applyed my minde to learne wisdom, and to knowe the trauaple y is in the worke (and that of sure a fallyon, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe, neyther daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it not possible for a man to attayne vnto the workes y are done vnder the Sunne: and though be he bestowe his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: pea, though a wyle man wolde undertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

1 A man mortally not by the ryghteousnesse of his owne workes, but by the grace of God. A man ought to haue mercy on his wyfe, & his children, & his brethren.

Of all these thynges purposed I in my I mynde to seke out. The ryghteous and wise: pea, & they seruauntes also are in y hande of God: and there is no man that knoweth eyther loue or hate, but all thinges are before the. It happened vnto one of vnto another: it goeth with the righteous as with the vngodly: with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with hym that offereth, as with hym that offereth not, lyke as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner. As it happeneth vnto the perjured, so happeneth it also, to hym that is asrayed to be false. Among all thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: this is a misery that it happeneth vnto al alphe. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wychednesse, and made foolys heresse is in theyr hertes, as long as they lyue, vntill they dye.

B And why: as longe as a man lyueth, he hath an hope: for a quyeke dogge (say they) is better then a deere Lyon: for they þe lyunge, knowe that they shal dye: but they that be deere, knowe nothyng: neyther deserue they any more. For they memo: pall is for gotten, so þe they be neyther loued, hated nor envied: neyther haue they any more parte in the world in all that is done vnder the sunne. So thou thy waye then, eate thy bread with ioye, & drynke thy wyne with a glad hert. for thy woordes please God. Let thy garments be alway whyte, & and let thy heed lacke no cyntement.

Prover. 24.

* Use thy selfe to lyue ioyfully with thy wyfe whom thou louest, all þe daies of thy lyfe which is but wayne, that God geueth the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanytie: for that is thy porcion in this lyfe, of all thy labour & trouble that thou takest vnder þe sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue that thou goest vnto, there is neyther woike, counsaile, knowledge, nor wysdome.

Job. 31.

C So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder þe sunne, & I saw, þe in running it helpeth not to be swifte: in battaile it helpeth not to be strong to fydng, it helpeth not to be wys: to rycheesse it helpeth not to be subtyl: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be connyng: but that all lyeth in tyme & fortune. For a ma knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fywe are taken with the angle, & as the byrdes are caught with þe snare: Euen so are men taken in the peryllous tyme, when it cometh sodaynly vpon them.

D This wysdome haue I seene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thyng. There was a lytle cytie, and a fewe men wyth in it: so there came a greete kyng & besyged it, & made greete bulwoikes agaynst it. And in the cytie there was found a poore ma (but he was wysle) whiche with his wysdome deliuered the cytie: yet was there no body that had any respecte to such a simple man. Then sayd I: wisdom is better then strength. Herethelesse, a simple mans wysdome is delysed, and his woordes are not hearde. A wyse mans counsaile that is folowed in seyntes, farre aboute the cryng of a capytayne amonge foolys. * For wysdome is better then harnesse: but one vnto hye alone deuoteth muche good.

1. Re. 13.

A deere lyfe doeth corrupte swete opntment, & maketh it to synke. Euen so ofte tymes he that is made for wisdom and honour, is abhorred because of a litle foolishnesse. A wyse mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a foolys hert vpon the left. A foole wyl shewe hym self when he goeth by the waye: yet thynketh he that euerye man doth as foolishly as hym selfe. ¶ A princypall synne is geuen the to beare rule, & be not negligent then in thine offyce: for he that can take cure of hym self, auoydeth great offences.

Roma. 13.

In other place is there, whiche I haue seene vnder the sunne: namely, the ignorance that is commonly among prynges: in that a foole speeth in great dignitie, & the ryed are set downe beneth: I haue seene seruantes ride vpon horses and prynges goyng vpon their fete as it wer seruantes. * But he that byggeth by a pyte shal fall therein hym selfe: & who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shal bite hym. Who so remoueth the stones, shal haue trouble withal: and he þe dweth wood, shal be hurte therewith.

1. Re. 13.

When an yron is blunt, & the poynt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, & that wmpght. Euen so doth wisdom folow diligence. A babler of his tounge is no better then a serpente þe syngeth withoute bysnyng. The woordes out of a wyse mans mouth, are gracious: but the lippes of a foole wyl destroy himself. The beginning of his talking is foolishnes, & the last worde of his mouth is darke madnesse. A foole is full of woordes, & a man can not tel what shal come to passe, who wyl then warne hym of it that shal folowe after hym. The labour of a foolyshe is greuous vnto them, while they knowe not how to go into petye. Woe be vnto þe (o þe lande) whose kyng is but a chyde, & whose prynges are early at theyr banckettes. But well is þe (o þe land) whose kyng is come of nobles, & whose prynges eate in due seale, for necessitie & not for luste. Thozowe stout fulnesse the balles falle downe, & thozowe yble handes it raineth in at þe house. Wheat maketh men to laugh, & wine maketh them mery: but vnto money are all thynges obedyent. Wyse the kyng no tuell in thy thought, & speake no hurt of þe rich in thy pryue chambze: for a byrde of the ayre shal betray thy voper, and wyth her fetters shal she be wyaye thy woordes.

If thy heed vpon wete faces, and so wait thou synde after many dayes. Euen parte seuen dayes, and also vpon þe. vntill. for þe knowest not what misery shal come vpon earth. When the cloudes are ful, they poure out raine vpon earth. And whil þe tree falleth (whether it be toward the South or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, wynde, shall not sow and he þ hath no respecte vnto the cloudes, shall not reape. Now: lyke as thou knowest not the waie of the spyrte howe it entereþ into þ lytle body, being yet in þ mothers wombe: Euen so þ knowest not the woikies of God, which is the woikemaster of all.

C Ceasse not thou therfore with thy handes to some thy seide; whether it be in the moynynge or in the euenynge: for thou knowest not whether thys or that shall prosper, & yf they both take it is þ better. The lyght is swete, & a pleasaunt thing is it for the eyes to loke vpon the sunne. If a man lyue many yeres, and be glad in them all, let hym remembre the dayes of darkenesse, whiche shall be many, and that foloweth al thinges shall be but vanytie. Be glad then O thou yong man, in thy youth, & let thy heart be merry in thy yonge dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne herte, and the luste of thyne eyes but be þ sure, that God shall bring the into iudgemente for all these thynges.

Eccl. xii. Chapter.

¶ From our youth ought we to consider, and requyte the goodnes of God.

Remembre a waye of pleasure oute of thyne hert, and remoue euil from thy body: for childhode & youth is but vanytie. Remembre thy maker the sooner in thy youth, or euer þ dayes of aduersitie come, & of the yeres draw nye, when þ shalt saye: I haue not pleasure in this, before the sunne, flight, the mone & starres be darkened, and of the cloudes turne agayne after the rayne wher the hepers of the houle shall tremble, & when the strong men shall bowe them selues, when þ milners stande still, because they be so fewe, and when þ sight of the windowes shall waxe dymme, when the doores in the stretes shall be shut, & when þ voyce of þ mylner shall be layd downe: when men shall crye vp at the voyce of the byrde, & when all the daughters of musike shall be brought lowe: when men shall feare in hye places, and be afrayed in the stretes, when the almond tree shall flourish, and be laden with the greshopper, and when all lust shall passe (because man goth to þys longe home, and the mourners go aboute the stretes) O: euer the spiner lace be taken away, & of the golden wel be broken: O: the pot be broken at the well, & the whele vpon the chesterne. Then shall the duste bee turned agayne vnto earth, from whence it came: & the spiete shall retourne vnto God, whiche gaue it. * All is but vanytie (sayth the preacher) al is but plaine vanytie.

The preacher was yet moze wyse, & taught þ people knowlage: he gaue good hede, soughte out the grounde, and set forth many parables: his diligence was to fynd out acceptable woikies, ryght scripiture, and the wordes of truth. For the wordes of the wyse are lyke pychers and maples, that go thowowe, where with the stubbe gathered is holden vp: for they are geuen of one shepheard onelye. Therfore he wote (my sonne) of that doctryne that is besyde thys: for to make many bookes, it is an endlesse woike: and to loude cryynge wyereth the bodye.

Let vs heare the conclusyon of all thynges: Fearre God, and kepe þys commaundement: For that toucheth all men. For God shall iudge all woikies and secret thynges, whether they be good or euill.

¶ The fyrste Chapter.

¶ A mystical songe of the spiritual and godly loue betwene Christ the spouse, and the church or congregation his spouse.

Chat he wold kysse me with the hysses of his mouth: for thy loue is moze pleasaunte then wine: & that because of þ good and pleasaunt sauoure of thy moste pcyous balmes. Thy name is: a swete smellynge opment when it is shed forth, therfore do the maidens loue the, drawe thou me vnto the: we wyll runne after the. The kynge hath brought me into his pryue chambres. We wyll be glad & reioyse in the: we thinke moze of thy loue then of wyne. They that be ryghteous loue the. I am blacke: O ye daughters of Ierusalem lyke as the tentes of the Cedarenes, & as the hangynge of Salomon, but yet am I saye & wel fauoured withal: O Daniel not at me that I am so blacke: for why the sunne hath wynded vpon me. My mothers chyldren haue euil wyl at me they made me the keper of the vineyardes, but myne owne vyneyarde haue I not kepte.

Tell me of hym whom my soule loueth wher thou feedest the shepe, where thou makest them rest at þ none daye: for why shall I be lyke hym that goeth wylonge about the flockes of thy companions: If thou knowe not thy selfe: O þ say rest amonge women: then go thy way forth after the footstepes of the shepe, & fede thy goates besyde the shepherdes sties. Vnto þ þ hofte of Pharaos charrettes haue I compared the. O my loue. Thy chekes & thy necke is beautifull as the turtles, and hanged with spanges and goodly Jewels, a neckebande of golde wyll we make the with syluer buttong. When þ hyngge syteth at the table, he shall smel my Rardus: a bundel of myrrer is my loue vnto me: he wil lye betwixt my breastes: a clustre of Camphire in þ vineyardes: of Engaddi is my loue vnto me. O howe saye art þ (my loue) O howe faire art þ thou hast doues eyes. O howe saye arte þ (my beloued), howe wel fauoured art þ: Our bed is deckt wth flowers, the selynge of our house are of Cedre tree, & our crosse toltes of Cipresse.

among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved amonge the sonnes. My delecte is to lye vnder his shadowe, for his fruite is sweete vnto my throte. He byngeth me into his wyne seller, his banner spied ouer me his loue. Met aboute me cuppes of wyne, choyse me with appels: for I am lycke of loue. * His left hande lyeth vnder my head, and his right hande shal embrace me. * I charge you (O ye daughters of Ierusalem) by the roes and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vpon my loue, nor touche her: till she be content her selfe. We thinke, I heare a voice of my beloved: lo, there cometh he hoppinge vpon the mountaynes, & leapinge ouer the hyle hylls. My beloved is like a roo or a pong hart Behold, he standeth behind our wall, he looketh in at the wyndow, & peepeth throughte the grate.
My beloved answered, and saied vnto me.

I stand vpon my loue, my bewtiful, and go to thyne owne, for lo, the wynter is now past & rayn is away & gone. The floures are come vpon the felde, the tyme of the vyden syngynge is come, and the voyce of the turtle doue is heard in our lande. The figgetree bynged forth her fygges, & the vyndes beare blossomes, and haue a good smel. I stande vpon then & come my loue my bewtiful, & come I say (O my bone) out of the caues of rocks out of the holes of a wal: O let me se thy countenance, & heare thy voice, for I wote in thy voyce, & saye is thy face. Set vnto the fores, yea the lytle fores, that hurt & vines for oure vyndes beare blossomes. * My loue is myne, & I am his: whiche sedeth among the roies, vntill the daye bryake: and till the wadowes be gone. Come agayne (O my beloved) and be lyke as a Roo, or a pong hart vpon the wynde mountaynes.

The.iii. Chapter.

Bynged in my bed I soughte hym, whom my soule loueth: yea diligently soughte I hym, but I founde hym not I will get vp (thought I) and go a-boute the cite, in the wayes, in all the streates will I seeke hym whome my soule loueth: but where I soughte hym I founde him not. The watch men also that go about the cite founde me.

Say me not hym whome my soule loueth: for when I was a lytle past the, I founde hym whom my soule loueth. I haue gotten hold vpon hym, and will not let hym go, vntill I byng hym into my mothers house, & into her chāber that bare me. * I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, by the roes and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vpon my loue, nor touche her till she be contente her selfe. Who is this, that cometh vpon out of the wilderness lyke vapours of smoke, as it were a smel of myrr, francincense, and all maner spycies of the Spotearye. Beholde, about Salomons bedste he ther stande thie scole valiant men of a most myghty eye in Israel. They holde swerdes euery one, & are expert in warre. Euery man also hath his swerde vpon his thigh, because of feare in the myght: kynge Salomon had made hym selfe a palace of the wood of Libanus, & pillars are of spyer the conyng of golde, the seate of purple, the grounde is pleasant lyke pained w loue, for the daughters of Ierusalem. Go forth, (O ye daughters of Ierusalem) and beholde: kynge Salomon in a crowne, wherewith his mother crowned hym in a day of his maryage, and in a daye of the gladnesse of his hert.

The.iiii. Chapter.

O how saye art thou my loue, howe I saye art thou (thou haste doun eyes, Cant. 1.1) belide that whiche lyeth byd wthyn.
* Thy berpe lockes are lyke the woll of a flocke of goates that be shorne vpon mount Sleat: Thy teeth are lyke the shepe of a same bignesse, which went vpon the walpyng place: where euery one beareth two twinnes, and not one vnfrutefull amonge them. Thy lippes are lyke a rose coloured ryband, thy woordes are louely, thy chekes are lyke a pear of a pomegranat within thine heeres. Thy necke is lyke a towre of Dauid buyled with costly stones, lying out on the sydes wherupon there hange a. 11. whel-des: yea, all the weapons of the giantes. * Thy two breasts are lyke two twinnes of younge Roes, whiche fede amonge roses. * O that I myght go to the mountayne of myrr, & to the hill of frankincense: till the daye bryake, & till shadowes be past awaye. Thou arte all saye (O my loue) & no spot is there in the. Come to me fro Libanus (O my spouse) come to me fro Libanus, loke fro the top of Amanah, from the top of Danir, and hermd, from a syng dēnes, and fro the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast with loue bewitched my hert. O my syster my spouse: I hast bewitched my hert with one of thyne eyes & with one cheyne of thy necke.

O how saye are thy breasts, my syster, my spouse: Thy breasts are more pleasant then wyne, & the smel of thyne ornementes passeth all spycies. Thy lippes, O my spouse, dyop as the hony combe: yea mylke and honye is vnder thy tūge, and a smel of thy garmentes, is lyke the smel of Libanus. A garden well locked is my syster, my spouse: a garden well locked, and a sealed well. The frutes that are planted in the are lyke a very paradys of pomegranates, with sweete frutes: as Camphire, Rardus, and Saltron, Calamus, Synam, with all sweete smel-lynge trees: Myrr, Aloes, and all the best spy-ces: a well of gardens, a well of luyng waters whiche ranne downe from Libanus. Up thou vpon my garden, that the smel thereof maye be caryed on euery syde: yea, that my beloved may come into his garden, and eate of the sweete fru-tes that growe therein.

The.v. Chapter.

In come into my garde. O my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered mi-myrr with my spycies. I haue eat hony with my hony combe, I haue dronke my wine w my milke. Eat, O ye frendes, drinke & be merry, O ye beloved As I am a shepe, and my hert is wakynge I beare a voyce of my beloved, wher he knocketh Open

Oppe to me, O my sister, my loue, my done, my derlyng, for my heade is full of dewe, & the lockes of my heare are full of the nyght droppe. I haue put of my coote, howe can I doo it on a garter? I haue washed my fete, howe shal I file them agayne? My loue put in his hande at the hole, & my herte was moued within me. I rode vp to open vnto my beloued, & my handes dyopped with wyte, & the wyte rane downe my fyngers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone his way. Howe when he spake, my herte was gone: I sought hym, but I coulde not fynde hym: I cryed vnto hym, neuertheles, he gaue me no answer. So the watchmen y went about the cite: found me: smote me, & wounded me: Yea, they y kepte the walles, toke a way my hearechafe fro me.

I charge you therefore, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, yf ye fynde my beloued, yf ye tell hym howe that I am speke for loue. What maner of man is thy loue aboute other louers? O fairest among women! O what can thy loue do more the other louers that y chargest vs so straitly? As for my loue, he is whiter & redde coloured, a goodly person among ten thousand, his heed is as the moste fyne golde, & lockes of his heare are bulbed, and blache as a crow. His eyes are as the eyes of dones by the water brookes, as though they were washed with mylke, & are set lyke perles in golde. His chekes are lyke a garden bed, wherein the Apothecaries plant all manner of sweete thynges.

His lippes are lyke roses that dyoppe sweete smellynge wyte. His handes are lyke golde rynges, haung inclosed the pyncious stone of Charis. His bodye is as the pure puerp, deckt ouer with Sappires: his legges are as pylers of Warbell, sette vpon sochettes of golde. His face is as Libanus: and as the betwix of y Cedre trees. The woordes of his mouthe are sweete: yee, he is al together louelye. Suche one is my loue. O ye daughters of Ierusalem, such a one is my loue.

The. vi. Chapter.

Whyder is thy loue gone then? (O thou sayest among women) whyder is thy loue departed? We wil seke him with y. My loue is gone downe into his garden, vnto the sweete smellynge beddest that he maye refrethe hym self in the garden, & gather roses. My loue is myne and I am his, whiche sedeth amonge the roses. Thou arte bewyfull, o my loue: as is the place Chirza, thou arte saye as Ierusalem fearfull as an armie of menne, with theyr dancers. Turne away thine eyes fro me, for they haue set me on fyre. * Thy deary lockes ar like a floche of goates, whome vpon the mounte of Silead. Thy teeth are lyke a floche of thorne shepe, which go out of the washyng place: wher every one beareth thynas, & not one vnfruteful amonge them. Thy chekes are lyke a pere of a pomgranate. Within thy volupers. There are x. Quenes. lxx. wyues, and damaskelles withoute numbre. One is my done, one is my derlyng. She is the onely beloued of her mother: and here vnto her that bare her.

When the daughters sawe her, they sayd she was blessed. Yea: the Quenes and wyues prayd her. What is the thyng that loketh forthe as the mornyng? saye as the moone, cleere as the sunne, and fearfull as an armie of men w theyr banners. I went downe into the nut garden to see what grew by the brookes, and to loke yf y vyneparde floystred, or yf the pomgranates were not forst. I knewe not that my soule had made me the charyot of y people that be vnder tribute. Turne agayne tuene agayne. O thou perfect one tuene agayne, turne agayne & we wil loke vpon y. What wyll ye se in y Sulamite? She is lyke men of warre singing in a company.

The. vii. Chapter.

Howe pleasant ar thy tredynges wth thy shoes, thou Dynces daughter. Thy thynges are lyke a faster irwell, whiche is wroughte by a connyng woikemaster. Thy navel is lyke a round goblet, which is neuer without drynke. Thy wombe is lyke a heape of wheate that is set about with roses.

* Thy two breastes are lyke two ewines of ponge roes. Thy necke is as it were a Towre of puerp: thine eyes also are lyke the water poles that are in Ierusalem beside the porte of Balthabbim, thy nose is lyke the towre of Libanus, whiche loketh towarde Damascus.

That heade that standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmell: and the heare of thy heade is lyke purple, and lyke a king going forth with his gard about hym. O howe saye and louely art thou my derlyng in pleasures: Thy stature is lyke a palme tree, and thy brestes lyke y grapes. I sayde I wyl clyme vp into the palme tree, and take holde of his hye bzaunches.

Thy brestes also shalbe as y wyne clusters: the smel of thy nostrilles lyke as the smel of apfels, & thy lippes lyke the best wyne.

Which goeth straight vnto my beloued, & byn steech forth by the lippes of the auncient elders. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue, & he shal tuene him vnto me. O come on my loue, we wil go forth into the felde, and take oure lodgyng in the byllages. In the mornyng wyll we go se the vyneyard: we wyll se yf y vine bespyong forth, yf the grapes be growne, and yf the pomgranates be hot oute. There wyll I geue the my brestes: the Wandjagoas geue their sweete smel, and beside our dozes are all manner of pleasant frutes, both new and olde: whiche I haue kepte for the, o my beloued.

The. viii. Chapter.

That I myght fynde the wylthout, I kysse the, whom I loue as my bro- ther whiche suckt my mothers brestes: & that y shal not be despyed. I wyll leade y & bring y into my mothers house: that y mightest teache me, & I myght geue y drynke of spiced wyne, & of the sweete sappe of my pomgranates. * My left hande shalbe vnder my heade, and his ryght hande shall embrace me.

The. iiii. Ichar.

The Prophecye.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye wahe not up my loue, nor touch her, till she be content her selfe. What is the thing that cometh vpon from the wilderness: and leaue it vpon her loue: I make the vpon among the appell trees, where thy mother conceyued thee, where thy mother: I say: brought thee into the world. O let me as a scale vpon thine harte, and as a scale vpon thine arme: for loue is myghtie as the death, and gelously as the bell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so many waters are not able to quench her loue, neither maye the flames burne it.

Per, yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shulde coune it nothing. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no breestes, what shal we do for our syster, when she shal be spoken for: Yf she be a wal, we shal bulde a silver bulwark the vpon: yf she be an open doore, we shal fasten her with boordes of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my breestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauour in his syght. Salomon hath a vineyard at Baal Hamon, & this vineyard he deliuered he vnto the keepers: & euerie one for the frute thereof shulde geue him a thousand pices of syluer.

My vineyard is in my syght: thou O Salomon must haue a thousand, and the keepers two hundred with the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardenys. O let me heare thy voyce that my companions may hearken to the same. O get thee awaye, my loue, and be as a Roos: as a ponge herte vpon the swete smelling mountaynes.

The booke of the Prophecie.

where Esaye.

The fyrste Chapter.

Esay prophesyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Jerusalem, because of theyr synnes.

The visyon of Esay the sonne of Amos, which he sawe vpon Iuda and Jerusalem: in the dayes of Ezzia, & Ioathan, & Ahaz & Ieheschiah kynges of Iuda. heare: O heauen, and hearken o earth. For the Lorde hath spoken: I haue noyshed & brought vpon chylde, but they haue done wickedly agaynst me. The ore hath knowen his owner, and the asse his masters cry: but Israell hath receyued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for this synfull nacid, a people of great iniquite: a frowarde generacyon vnnaturall chyliden. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holpe one of Israel vnto anger, & are gone back ward. Whereby shulde ye be plagued anye more: For ye are euer sayyng a waie. The whole head is sick, and the herte is beny. From the sole of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole parte in all your bodie, but all are woundes, botches, sores, & stripes which can neither be helped, bounde vpon, mollified, nor called with anye ioyntment.

Your land is left waste, your cities are bent vpon, your enemies denoure your land, & ye must beaine to stand, & loke vpon it: & it is desolate as it were with enemies in a battayle. Moreover, the daughter of Sion is left alone lyke a cotage in a vineyard, lyke a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, lyke a beleged cite. And except the Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe almes: we shulde haue bene as Sodom, & lyke vnto Gomorra. heare the woide of the Lorde: ye Lordes of Sodom: and hearken vnto the lawe of our God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me: I am full of the burnt offrynges of wetters, and of the fatnesse of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloud of bullockes, lambes: & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyrezth you to treade within my porches: Offer me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abominable thyng vnto me. I maye not a waie with you newe moones, your Saboths and solymne dayes. Your fastynges are also in vayne. I hate your newe holpe dayes and fastynges, euen fro my very herre. They make me wery, I can not abyde them. Wylde you hold out your handes, I wyl turne myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayes, yet wyl I heare nothing at all, seeing your handes are full of bloud.

Wash you, make you cleane, put awaye your euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doynge of euell. Learne to do ryght, applye youre selues to equite, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryght: let the wydowes complaint come before you. Howe go ye: saith the Lorde: let vs talke together. Though yowr synnes be as red as scarlette, they shalbe as white as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as white as wol. Yf ye be lowyng & obediēt ye shal enioye the best thyng & groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate & rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured wth the sword: for thus the Lorde hath promysed wth his owne mouth.

Howe happeneth it then & the ryghteous cite (which was full of equite) is become vnsaythfull as an whoze. Ryghteousnesse dwelt in it, but nowe murderers. Thy siluer is turned to dross, and thy wyne mixt with water. Thy pynces are wyched and companions of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gaze for rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe hym not to his right, neyther wyl they let the widowes causes come before them. Therefore saith the Lorde God of hostes, I mightie one of Israel: Ah, I must ease me of mine enemies, and auenge me of mine aduersaries. I shall lay my hand vpon the, & burne out thy dross from the finest and purest, & put out all thy fyne, and let thy iudges againe as they were sometime & thy denatoures as they were from the beginning. Then shalte thou be called the righteous cite, the saythfull cite. Sion shalbe redeemed with with equitye, and they shal turne agayne vnto her in righteousnes. For the transgressours & vngodly, and such as are become vnsaythfull vnto the Lorde must al together be utterly destroyed. And excepte ye be ashamed of the oke trees wherein ye haue so belited, & of the gardenes that ye haue chosen, ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye: & as a garden & parthe no more. And as for the glory of these thinges it shalbe turned to hye strawe, & he y made the to a sparke. And they shal both burne together, so y no man shalbe able to queneche them.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

Of the commynge and taryng of Chyryl, and of the calyng of the Synagoge.

In this is the worde y was opened vnto Clave the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It wylbe also in the laste daye, that the hyl where the house of the Lorde is buyled, shalbe the cheefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all litle hylles. And all nacions shal preache vnto hym, and the multitude of people shal go, speaking thus one to another: by, & let vs go to the hill of the Lord and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For y lawe shal come out of Syon, & the worde of y Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the heathen, & shal resourne the multitude of people: they shal breake their swordes also in to mattoches, & their speares to make sythes. And one people shal not lyfte vp a weapon agaynst another, neyther shal they learne to fyght from thence forth.

Come ye (house of Jacob) let vs walke in the light of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken the people the house of Jacob, because they goo farre beyonde they fathers in Mozeres (whiche they haue as the Phylistines had) & in straunge children they thinke the selues to haue ynough. They lande is full of synner and golde, neyther is there any ende of they treasure: Their land is also full of hylles, and no ende is ther of their charettes. Their land also is ful of wayne goddes, & before the worde of they owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea even before y thyng that they owne syngers haue made. There knelthe the man, there fallerh the man downe before them, so y thou canst not bypunge hym awaye from thence.

C And therfore get the into some rocke, & hyde the in the ground for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his maiesty: Which casteth downe the hygher lokes of presumptuous perlonnen, & bypunge lowe the pyde of man, and the Lorde only shalbe exalted in that day. For the day of the Lorde of hostes shal go ouer all pyde & presumption vpon all them y exalte them selues, and shal bring them all downe: vpon all hygher and stout Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan: vpon all hygher hylles, and vpon all stoute Mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shippes of the sea, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasant to looke vpon.

And it shal bypunge do wne the pyde of man, and lape mans presumptuousnesse full lowe: & the Lorde shal onely haue the victorie in that daye. But the ydols shal utterly be rote out. Then shal crepe into holes of stone, & into caues of the earth, for feare of y Lorde, & for the glory of his maiesty: what tyme as he shal wake him vp to condempne y earth. Then shal man cast awaye his goddes of synner, and his goddes of golde (whiche he neuer thelesse had made to honour them) vnto Holes & Batters. And they shal crepe into the caues and rockes & into the clyftes of hard stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his maiesty, when he yrlseth to condempne the earth. Feare not ye then anyr man whose byethe is in his nostrilles. For what is he of reputation?

¶ The .iii. Chapter.

Of the prophesie that in the commynge of Chyryl all strength and power shalbe put forth of Iury.

In so, y Lorde God of hostes doth take away from Jerusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meat and bypunge, the captayne & the sou-dyar, the iudge & the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the pynce of fifty yere olde, and the honorable: the Senatours & men of vnderstandyng the maysters of craftes and orators. And y shal geue them children to be their pynces, & babes shal haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pyllid & poiled, and one shal euer be doinge violence & wyonge to another. The boye shal presume agaynst the eldier and the vyle personne agaynst the honorable. Per, one shal take a frende of his owne kynred by the bolome, & say: thou hast clothinge: thou shalt be our heade, for thou mayest kepe vs fro this fall and perill.

Then shal he sweare & saye: I can not helpe you. Moreover, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda must decaye because that bothe their wordes and counsels are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of his maiesty vnto anger. The chaunging of they countenance be wyaped the, yea they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomiters, and hide them not. Alas be vnto they sonles, for they haue rewarded euell vnto them selues. Wyl the ryghteous do well, for they shal enioye the frutes of they studies. But woe be to the vngodly & vnyghteous, for they shalbe rewarded after they workes. Children are ex-toyponers of my people: and women haue rule of them. O my people, the leaders deceaue the, and depraue the waye of thy fote steppes. The Lorde is here to comen of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgement of y people: The Lorde shal come forth to reason with the Senatours and pynces of his people. It is ye y haue burnt vpon my vnygarde, the poore is in your houses. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, & marre y faces of the poore, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde: Weying the daughters of Sion as become so proud, & come in with stretched out neckes, & with vain wanton eyes: saying they come in tripping so merrily with theyr feete: Therefore shall the Lord take away the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shall discover theyr shame. In that day shall the Lord take away the gorgeousness of theyr apparel and spanges chymers, parriclers, & colars, byace lattes, & boones, the goodly shoured, wyde and byordyed rayment, byooches, and brabbandes, ruyges and gaclandes, holy daye clothes & vales, hercheles and pyrmes, glasses & cypresses, bonnets, and raches.

And in stead of good smel, there shall be stinke amonge them. And for theyr girdles there shall be loose bandes. And for wel set heare ther shall be baldnesse. In stead of a stomacher, a sake clothe, and for theyr bewtye wytherdnesse, and sunne burning. Pour busbandes and myghtie men shall perishe with the swearde in battayle. At that tyme shall theyr gates moune and complayne, and they shall crye as desolate folke vpon the earth.

Chapter. iiii.

When shall seven wyues take holde of one man: and saye, we wyll laye all oure meate and clothyng together in common: only that we may be called thy wyues, and that thyr shamefull leppose maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shall the byaunche of the Lord be bewtyful and myghty, & the frute of the earth shall be faire and pleasant for those Israelites that shall sprynge thereof. Then shall the remnaunte in Syon, and the remnaunt at Ierusalem be called holy: Namely al suche as are dwyten amonge the liuing at Ierusalem: what tyme as the Lord shall waite away the fylchynesse of the daughters of Sion, & purge the bloud out from Ierusalem with the wynde of his iudgement, and with fyre. Whereouer, vpon all the dwellynges of the hylle of Syon & vpon theyr whole congregacyon, shall the Lord prouide a clode & smoke by daye, & the shynynge of a flaminge fyre by nyghte for all theyr glorye shall be preserved. And Ierusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme: a place & refuge where a man maye hepe hym from weither and rayne.

Chapter. v.

Owe wyll I sing my beloued frend a songe of my frendes, because of his vyneyard. My beloued frende hath a vyneyard in a verye frutesfull plenteous grounde.

Thys he bridged, thys he walled rounde aboute, and plantid it with goodlye grapes. In the myddel of it buylded he a tower, and made a wyne press therin: And afterwarde when he looked that it shoulde byynge hym grapes: it broughte forth thornes. Nowe therefore O ye Ciergens of Ierusalem & whole Iuda: Judge

I praye you betwixt me, and my vyneyard. What moze could haue ben done, for if I haue not done: Wherefore then hath it giuen thornes: where I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I shall do with my vyneyard. I wyll take the hedge from it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe the wal that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be dygged nor cut but beare thornes and byeares. I wyll also forbyd the clouedes that they shall not raine vpon it. As for the vyneyard of the Lord of hostes: it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda is saye plantynge. Of these be looked for equitye, but se there is wyngone: for ryghteousnes, lo it is but myscrepe.

Woe vnto them that saye one house to another, and byynge one lande so nyghe vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde: that ye maye dwel vpon the earth alone. These thynges are in the eares of the Lord of hostes: shall not many greater & moze gorgeous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwel in them? And ten acres of vynes shall geue but a quart, & thirty bushels of sede shall geue but an Epha.

Woe be vnto them, that tyme by earlye to folowe dyonhemmes, and to them that continue so vntyll nyghte, and tyme they be sette on fyre to wyne. In those companies are harpers & lutes, tabrettes and pypes, and wyne. But they regard not the worke of the Lord & consydre not the operacion of his handes. Therefore cometh my folke also into captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glorie is famished with hunger, and their myde is marred for thirst. Therefore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that thei pynde, boosynge, and welthe, with suche as reioyse therein, maye descende into it.

Thus hath a man a fal, and is brought lowe and the high loke of the proud shall be laid downe.

But the Lord of hostes shall be exalted in iudgemente, and God that is holie, is magnified in ryghteousnesse. Then shall the shepe eate, in order, & the ryche mens landes shall be laied wast, shall straungers deuoure. Woe be vnto them, that be wychednes vnto the with cozden of vanitie & synne, as it was with a carts rope.

Which vnto speake on this maner: let hym make haste now, and go forth with his wythe, that we maye se it. Let the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, & by the nye, that we maye knowe it. Woe be vnto them that call euell good: and good euell, whiche made darkenesse lyght, & lyght darkenesse, & make sowe sweete, & sowe sowre. Woe be vnto them that are wyse in theyr owne lyghte, and thynke thei selues to haue vnderstanding. Woe be vnto them that are stronge to suppe out wyne, & expect men to set vp dyonhemmes. These geue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iuste cause of the ryghteous. Therefore lyke an fyre lyketh vnto the strawe and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shall be as corrupcion and theyr blossom shall vanishe awaye lyke dust.

dust: for they haue caste awaye the lawe of the Lorde of holtes, and blasphemed the worde of the holye maker of Israel.

Therfore is the wrath of the Lorde kindled also agaynst his people, & he shaketh his hande at them: yea, he hath impetted, so that the hills byd tremble. And their harcaises byd lye in the open stretes, lyke mier. And in all this f wrath of God hath not ceased, but his hande is stretched oute still. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and cal vnto them in a farre countrie: and beholde, they shall come hastily vnto speede. There shall not bee one saynte no: feble amonge them, no not a sluggish no: slepey personne. There shall not one of them put of f ble from his loynes, no: loose the latcher of his shoo. His arrowes are sharpe, and all his bowes hent. His horse hooves are lyke flint, & his cart wheles lyke a storme wynde. His crye is as it were of a Lyon, & he roareth lyke a Lyon whel-per. They shall coare, and hantche vpon the pray and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them.
In that daye they shall be so feare vpon them, as the sea. And if we loke vnto f lande, behold it shall be all darknesse: & sozow. If we looke toward heauen, behold, it shall be darke.

The. vi. Chapter.

Howe folow the glory of the Lorde, and howe sent to prophete the destruction of Ierusalem.

In the same yere that kynge Oziah died, I sawe the Lorde setyng vpon an hyghe and gloriouse seate, & his traine fyllyng the temple: And about hym stode Seraphims, wherof euery one had sixe winges. With twaine eache couered his face, with twayne his fete, & with twayne did he flye. They cried also echone to another on this maner: holy, holy, holy is f Lorde of hostes. The whole world is full of his glorie yea, the grasses and doze chekes moued at hys cryng and the house was full of smoke. Then I said, O woe is me: for I am lost: in as much as I am a man of vncleane lippes, and dwell amonge people that hath vncleane lippes also:
for mine eyes haue seene f king & Lorde of hostes.

Then stode one of the Seraphims vnto me haupng a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the auter with the tonges and couched my mouth: and saide, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, and thyne vncyrcleousnesse is taken away, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I heard Whom shall I sende, and who wyl be our messaunger: Then I sayde: here am I: sende me.

And he sayde: go, and tell this people: "ye shall deare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: yee shall plainly see and not perceyue. Harden the deft of this people, stoppe they eares, and close they eyes: f they se not with they eyes, heare not with they eares, and vnderstand not with they hertes, and conuerste: and be dealed.

Then spake I: Lorde, howe long? he answered: vntyll f cities be utterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, til the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men saure awaye, so f the lande shall lye wast a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynnes, and the lande shall re-tourne and be layde waste. And as f Terribint tree and oke in wynter calke they leaues, & yet haue they sappe in them: so shall the holy seide continue in they substance.

The. vii. Chapter.

*Howe Sarias moue taltayle agaynst Ierusalem.
A byrgyne shall beare a chyld.*

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz: f sonne of Iotham, which was f sone of Oziah kynge of Iuda: that a Ra-zin the kynge of Siria, and Bechab the sone of Romeliah, kynge of Israel, went vnto ward Ierusalem to besage it, but Razin was not able to winne it. And when f house of dauid (that is Ahaz) heard woide ther of, that Siria & Ephraim were confederate to gether his hert quaked (yea & the hertes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Elap: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Beas Iasub) at f head of the ouerpole, in f fote path by f fullers ground and sape vnto hym. take hede to thy self: and be fyll, but feare not, neyther be saynte harted, for these two sayles: that is for these two smoking fychzandes the wrath and furepousnes of Ra-zin the Sirian, and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Siria Ephraim, & Romelies sonne haue wyckedly conspyred agaynst the saynge: We wyl go vnto agaynst Iuda, bere them, and byng them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Tabeel.

For thus saith the Lorde God therto: It shall not so go forth: neither so come to passe, for the head cytie of the Sirians is Damascus, but f heade of Damascus is Razin. And after tyme and the scoze yere, shall Ephraim be nomoze a people. And the cytie of Ephraim is Samaria but the heade of Samaria is Romelies sonne.
If ye beleue not, it cometh of this: that ye are vnsaithful to God. Whereouer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz sayng, requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, wherher it be towarde the deyth beneth or towarde the heighe aboue. The sayde Ahaz: I wyl requyre none, neyther wyl I tempte the Lorde.

The Lorde answered: Then here to, ye of the house of Dauid: is it not ynoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token: Beholde a byrgyne shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and (thou his mother) shalt call his name Emanuel. Butter and honye shall he eate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For oz euer the chyld come to knowlage: to eschue the euell, & chose the good, the lande (that thou so abhorrest) shall be desolate of bothe her kynnes. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda) tho-sowe the kynge of the Assyrians. For at f same tyme

syne shall the Lorde by the foye the eyes that are about the water of Egypt, & for the West in the Assyrians lande. There shall come a hal lyght all in the desolate wateres, in the holes of bones: vpon all thorny and bushy places.

D And the same tyme: that the Lorde shall the beate of the dead & the fete and the beache cleane of, with the radure that he shall byre beyond the water: namely, with the hyng of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cow, and two shepe. Then because of the abundaunce of mylke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whiche remaineth in the lande, shall eate butter and honey. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vy- nes in one and were saide for a thousand syluer lynes) shall be turned to beares and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with a- rowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become beares and thornes. And as for all bylles that are betwen doone, there shall not come vpon the any feare of beares & thornes. But the castel shall be bynen together, & the shepe shall fide there.

The viii. Chapter.

The testimonye of the land by Emanuel. The fete of offspr at the tyme many shall flourish.

A Doreuer, the Lorde saide vnto me Take the a great lease, & wyte in it, as men doo with a penne, make hasty spede to robbe, & haste to the spolie. And I called vnto me faith full wytnesse to recorde. Asah the prest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that I went I vnto the prophetisse, that had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue hym this name: a spede robber: an hasty spolyer. For why, o euer the childe shall haue know- lage to crie father, and mother: shall the ryches of Damascus and the substance of Samaria be taken awaye by the spolyer, before the kyng of the Assyrians.

B The Lorde spake also vnto me, saynge: for so much as this people refused the floure of the water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shall bypnyng myghty and great floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kyng of the Assyrians with all his power: which shall clyme vpon all his howes, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowing and encreasynge in power: tyll he get hym by the necke. He shall fyl also the wydnesse of chy land with his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye peo- ple of Assur) & ye shall be broken downe, perthen to all ye of farre countreys.

C Muster you, & ye shall be broken downe, pre- pare you to battell & you shall be tozned in peccat: take your counsel together, yet must your coun- sell come to naught, go in hand withal: yet shall it not prosper: for God is with vs. For the Lorde spake thus to me in the potyre of his hande and warned me, sayng vnto me: that I shulde not walke in the waye of this people.

He sayde moze ouer, round with none of the wysofuer saye, ponder people are bounde together: feare the not, neyther be afrased of them but sanctify the Lorde of hostes, let hym be your feare and dread. For he shall be a holy place to fye to, and none to stumbe at, the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both houses of Isra- ell, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And ma- ny shall stumbe, fall: and be broken vpon hym: they shall be snared and taken.

D Now laye the wytnesses together and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus wyll I wait vpon the Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I wyll loke for hym. But lo, as for me: and the chyldren whiche the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lorde of hostes saith, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsel at the doctayners, wytyches, charmers, and consu- rers, then make them this answeere. Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at his God? Shulde men runne vnto the beate for the luyng? If any man wante lyghte, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testimonye, whether they speake not after this meynynge. If he doo not this, he shall stumbe & suffer hun- ger. And yf he suffer hunger, he is oute of pacy- ence, and blasphemeth his kyng and his God. Then loke he vwarde, and downe warde to the earth, & beholde, there is trouble & darknes vnto rayson is rounde about hym, and the cloude of erroure. And out of suche aduersyte shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past it hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabalon and the lande of Neftalim (where thozome the see way goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the tyme in lytle trouble: but after- warde soze decayed.

The ix. Chapter.

The prophete of Chyrlis anathema and banysoun.

The people that walke in darkenesse haue seue a great lyghte. As for the that dwell in the lande of shadow of death, vpon them hath the lyght shyned. Thou haste multiplied the people and not increased theyr loye. They ce- loye before the, enen as men make mery in har- uest, and as men that haue gotten the victorie, when they deale the spolie. For thou hast bro- ken the yoke of the peoples burthen: & staffe of his shoulder and the rodde of his opprelloure, as in the dayes of Madian.

B And cruelly euery battayle & the warriours accomplissheth, is doone with confused noyse, and depylunge the garments with bloodde. But this battayle shall be with burning & con- sumpyng of fyre. For vnto vs a childe is borne and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. vpon his shul- der doth the kyngdom lye, and he is called with his owne name wonderful. The geues of coun- sell: the myghtie God, the euertlastyng father, & prince of peace, he shall make no end to encrease the kyngdom and peace, and shall lye vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdom, to set vp the same, and to stablish it with equyte and righ- teousnes, from henceforth for euermore. Thus shall shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes byng to passe. The Lorde sente a woide into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And al the people of Ephraim shall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, that sape wyth pryde and hys stomakes on this maner: The tyle woide is fallen downe, but we wyll buyde it with squared stones. The molbery tymber is broken, but we shall set it up agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles the Lorde shall prepare Razyn & enemy against them, and so ordre theyr aduersaries, that the Syrians shall laye holde vpon them before, & the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israel wpyth open mowthe.

After all thys is not the wraoth of the Lorde ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out still. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chastyseth them, neyther do they feare the Lorde of hostes. Therfore hath the Lorde rote out of Israel both dead and tyle, byaunch and ewyg in one day. By the dead is vnderstande the Sena tour & honourable man, and by the tyle the prophete that preached lyes. For all they which enfourme the people: that they bee in a right case, suche be discepuers. Such as men thynke also to be perfect among these, are but castewaies.

Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr yonge men, neyther sauour theyr fatherlesse and widdowes. For they are all together ypocrites and wyched, and all theyr mouthes spake follye. After all this, is not the Lordes wraoth ceased: but yet his hande is stretched out still. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the bypers and thoznes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood: or a rede bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde. For because of the wraoth of the Lorde of hostes, is the land full of darkness, & the people be consumed, as it were with fyre no man doeth spare his brother, but he robbeth on the ryght hande: and doeth samylke, he eateth on the left hand, & he shall not haue mough. Euerie man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arime. Manasses shall eate Ephraim, & Ephraim Manasses, and they both shall eate Juda. After all this, is not the Lordes wraoth ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out still.

Chapter.

¶ The thirteenth the oppressours of the poore, and propheseth agaynst Sennacherib.

Woe be vnto them that make vnyghteous lawes, and deuyse thynge: whiche be to hard for to kepe, wherthow the poore are opprelled on euerye syde, & the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgement: that widdowes maye be theyr praye, and that they may robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visitacion, & when destruction shall come fro farther? To whom wil ye runne for helpe: and to whom wyll ye geue your honoure, that he may kepe it: that when I widdowe my hande, ye come not amonge the prisoners, or lye among the dead? After al this doth not the wraoth of the Lorde cease, but yet is his hand stretched out still.

Woe be also vnto Assur, which is a staffe of my wraoth, in whose hande is the rod of my punishment. I shall sende hym amonge thole ypocrytysh people, amonge the people that haue deserued my dysfauoure. I shall sende hym, that he may vterly robbe the, spoyle them, & tread them downe, lyke the myse in the strete. Howebeit his meynynge is not so, neyther thynketh his hert on thys fallow. But he ymagineth on lye, howe he maye rote out and destroye muche people, for he sayeth: are not my princes all kinges? Is not Calno as easie to wyne as Char chamis? Is it harder to conquer Hamath then Arphad? Is it lyghter to overcome Damas cus, then Samaria? As who say: I were hable to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and theyr goddes: but not Jerusalem, and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem and theyr ymages, as I did vnto Samaria & their ydols.

Wherfore the Lorde sayeth: Asone as I haue persourmed my hole woide vpon the hyl of Syon & Jerusalem, then wyll I vylset the noble & stout bert of the kyng of Assyria with his proude lohes. For he standeth thus in his owne conceit. Thys doo I thowowe the power of myne owne hande, and thowowe my wysdome. For I am wysse: I am the premyoueth the landes of people, I robbe theyr treasures: and lyke one of the worthies I daine them from theyr hye seates. My hande hath founde out the strengthe of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges that were layed here & there, are gathered together. So do I gather all countreys. And there is no man that dare be so bolde, as to touche a feather that dare open his mouth, or ones whysper.

Shall the are boost it selfe agaynst him that he weth therwith: or both the same make anye bragginge agaynst hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as if the roddid exalte it self agaynst hym that beareth it: or as though the staffe shuld magnifie it self, as who say: it were no wood. Therfore shall the Lorde of hostes sende hym amonge his falsynge, leanelesse, and burne vpon his glozy, as it were w a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shall be that fyre, and his Sanctuary shall be the flame, and it shall kyndle and burne vpon his thoznes and bycers in one daye: yea, all the glozy of hys woodes and felde shall be consumed with body and soule. And they shall be as an hoste of men whose standerd beareth sayleth. The trees also of the felde which remaine, shall be of such a nombre, that a chyld may tell them.

After that daye shall the remnant of Israel and such as are escaped out of the house of Jacob seke no more comforte at hym that smote them but with saythfulnesse & trueth shall they trust vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The remnant, euen the yocrytie of Jacob shall conuerte vnto God the myghtie one. For though the people of Israel be as the sande of the see, yet shall the remnant of them conuert in hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that sheweth in righte outnesse, and therfore the Lorde of hostes shall perfectly fulfill the thynge that he hath determined in the myddest of the hole worlde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Thou my

the Prophecye.

¶ my people, that dwellest in Syon, be not afraid, for the kynge of the Assyrians: he shall smite the wyth a rod, and shall wagge his staffe as if he were the Egyptians byd some tyme: But shortly after shall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfilled in the destruction of them.

¶ Moreover, the Lord of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the slaughter of Adian upon the rocke of Oreb. And he shall lyft up his rod over the sea, and he byd somtyme over the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from the shoulders, & his yoke from the necke: yea, the same yoke shall be corrupte for very farnesse. He shall come to Iah, and goo thorougher toward Wygrou: at Wygrou shall he lay up his harnesse, and go over the foorde.

Sibea shall be their resting place: Ramath shall be afrayd: Sibea shall flye away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Sallin) shall be heard vnto Laps and to Inorboth, which also shall be in trouble. Wadimna shall tremble for feare, but scyptezins of Gabin are many, yet shall he remayne at Nob & dape. After that shall he lyfte up his hande agaynst the mount of the daughter syon, the hill of Ierusalem. But se, the Lord God of hostes shall take a waye the proude from thence with feare: he shall be we downe the proude, and sell & hys mynede. The vnder also of the wode shall be roote oute wyth syon, and Libanus shall haue a myghtie fall.

¶ The .xi. Chapter.

¶ The prophecye of the natyuite of Christe, and of his people of the covenant of Ihsa, and of the fygth of the dwelers of Iherusalem.

¶ Ad there shall come a rod forth of Iherusalem, and a blossom shall grow out of his roote. The spiryte of the Lord shall lyght vpon hym: the spiryte of wysdom and vnderstanding, the spiryte of counsaile and strenght, the spiryte of knowlage, and of the feare of the Lord, & shall make him seruent in the feare of god. For he shall not geue sentence, after & chynge that shall be brought before his eyes, neither reprove a matter at the first hearing, but w righteously shall he iudge the poore, and with holynesse shall he reforme the simple of the world.

¶ He shall smyte the world with the rodde of his mouth, and wyth the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the vngodly. Ryghteousnesse shall be the gyfte of his loynes: truth and fapfulness, the gyfing up of his rapnes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe: and the Leopard shall ly downe by the goate. Bulloches, Lyons and cattel shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them.

¶ The howe & the beare shall fede together, & their yong ones shall lie together. The Leo shall cate strawe lyke the ore of a howe. The chyld while he sucketh shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the cockatrice denne. No man shall do enel vnto another, no man shall destroy another, in all the daye of my holynesse. For the earth shall be full of the knowlage of the Lord.

¶ And in that day shall the Gentyles enquire after the roote of Jesse which shall be set up for a token vnto the people, and his dwelling shall be glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lord take in hande agayne, to conquire & remnant of his people (which shall be lefte alue) from the Assyrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Moyses, Clamptes, Calbers, Antiochyans: and from the Ilandes of the sea. And he shall set up a token among the Gentyles, and gather together the disperced of Iherusalem: yea, and the outcastes of Iuda from the four corners of the world. The hatred of Ephraim also & enemies of Iuda shall be cleane roted out. Ephraim shall beare none enel wyll to Iuda, & Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west, and spyle them together that dwell toward the East. The Ioumpres and the Moabites shall be obedient vnto them.

¶ The Lord also shall cleane the tonges of the Egyptians sea, and with a mighty wynd shall he lyfte by his hande ouer Assur, & shall smite his fenen streames, and make men go ouer drie shod. And thus shall there be a way for his people that remaineth from the Assyrians, lyke as it happed to the Israelites whate tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypt.

¶ The .xii. Chapter.

¶ The songs of the church for the obsequys of the victorie and ouercomynge of the world.

¶ So that then I shall saye: O Lord I will thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me: but retrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacion in whome I wyl truste, & not be afrayed. For I Lord God is my strenght and my songe, he also is become my saluacion.

¶ Therefore with ioye shall ye drinke water out of the welles of the sauour, and then shall ye saye: geue thanks vnto the Lord, cal vpon his name, declare his countenances amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O syng praises vnto the Lord, for he hath done great thynges, as it is knowen in all the world. Crye out, and syng thou & dwellest in Syon: for great is the holy one of Iherusalem in the myddest of the.

¶ Babylon is the heuy burden of Babylon, which lay & sonne of Iherusalem byd se. Lyfte up the baner vpon the hye hill, call vnto them, holde up your hands, that the payntes maye go in at the doze. I haue sent for my deputies & my grauntes (sayth the Lord) which shall execute wrath: I will call for such as cryumphe in my glozpe. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, & rushing as though the kyngdomes of the nacionys came together. (And the Lord of hostes mustered) multeth bys armye to battayle. They come out of a farre country, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lozde hym selfe wyth the mynystrs of bys warre, to destruy whole lande. Wourne ye, for the day of the Lozde is at hande and hal come as a destroyer from the almighty. Therefore hal all handes be letten downe & all mens hertes hal melt a way, they hal stand in feare carefullnesse and sorowe hal come vpon them and they hal haue payne, as a woman yrenaylet with chylde. One halbe abashed of an other, & they faces hal burne lyke the flame of fyre. Beholde, the daye of the Lozde hal come terryble, and full of indignacion, furoure, and wrath to make the lande waste, & to roote out the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heauen hal not geue they lyght, & sunne halbe darkened in the clyng, and the moone hal not shyne wyth his lyght. And I wyl punyssh the wychednesse of the world, and synners of the vngodly, sayth the Lozde.

C The byr stomaches of the proude wyl I take away, and wyl laye downe the boasting of tyrantes. I wyl make a man dearer then syne golde, and a man to be more worth then a golden wedde of Ophyr. Therefore I wyl make the heauen, and the earth hal remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lozde of hostes, and in the day of his fearfull indignacion. And Babylon halbe as an hunted or chased doo, and as a shepe that no man taketh vp. Every man hal turne to his owne people, and eache one into bys owne lande. Whoso is found alone, halbe shot thowowe. And whoso gather together hal be destroyed with the swerde.

Item. * They chyliden halbe slayne before their eyes, they houses spoyled, and they wyues raptured. For lo, I hal byng up the Medes agaynst them, which hal not regard spylle, nor be destruyd of gold. Which bowes hal they destruye the yonge chyliden, & haue no pity vpon women with chylde, & they faces hal not spare the chyliden. And Babylon that glorie of hyngdomes and beaute of the Calders honoure halbe destroyed euen as God destroyed Sod & Gomor. It hal not endure for ever, neyther hal there be any more dwelling there, from generacion to generacion.

The Arabians hal ppyche no tentes there neyther hal the shepherds make they foldes there any more: but fearfull wylde beastes hal lye ther, & the houses halbe full of great owles. Scryches hal dwel there, & apes hal daunce there, wylde cattes hal crye in the palaces, and dragons halbe in pleasaunte houses. And as for Babylons tyme it is hande, & her dayes hal not be prolonged.

The xliii. Chapter.

¶ The returne of the people from captiuitie. The prophete of the people of God, and affliction of theys enemies. The people of Babylon.

But the Lozde wyl be mercyfull vnto Jacob, and wyl yet chose Israel agayne, and set them in theys owne lande. For aungers hal cleane vnto them, & get them to the house of Jacob. The people hal take the & cary the dome to theyr owne lande. And make them to inherite the house of Israel in the lande of the Lozde, that they may be seruauntes & handmaydens of the Lozde. They hal take those pylones whose captiues they had ben afore and rule those that had opprelled them. When the Lozde noteth hal byng the to rest fro the trouble, feare, & hard bondage, that I wyl laden wythal, then wyl thou vlc thy mockage vpon the kyng of Babylon, & saye: how happeneth it that I opprel-B four leaueth of? In the golden trybute come to an end. The Lozde hath broken the scepter of the vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Which wyl he is wyl synners the people wyth confynall strokes, & tyranously raygneth ouer thea- then whom he persecuted without compassyon. And therefore the whole world is now at rest and quyetnesse: and men syng for ioye.

¶ Pea, euen the fyer trees & Cedres of Libanus, reioyce at thy fall, sayng: Now that thou art layde downe, there come no more vnto be downe vs. Hell also beneth trembleth to mee: the at thy commynge, and for thy sake hath ray- sed his deed, & all myghtye men and princes of the earth. All kynges of the earth stand vnto their seates, & they may al answer, and speake vnto the Arre thou hecome weake also as we: art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layd downe into the pyt, and so is the melody of thy instrumentes. Woymes be layd vnder the, & woymes be thy coneyng.

¶ How art thou fallen from heauen? Lucifer thou saye moynynge chylde: howe haste thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, & art become weaker then the people? For thou saydest in thyne hert: I wyl clyme vnto heauen, & exalt my thorne aboue, besyde the starres of God. I wyl lyt also vpon the holy mount toward the North. I wyl clyme vnto the clowds, and wyde lyke the hyghest of all. Yet thou wylt be brought downe to the depe of hell. Thy that seke the hal narrowly loke vpon the & thinke in the seines, sayng: Is this the man that brought all landes in feare, and made the hyngdomes a- frayed? Is this he that made the world in a maner waste, and layd the cyties to the grounde, whiche let not his pylones go out?

¶ The kynges of the nacous lye euerye one in bys owne house wyth wylshyppe, and thou art caste out of the graue lyke a flythy abhominable byaunche: lyke as deade mens raymente that are shot thowowe with the swerde and go downe to the stoness of the depe: as a deed coule that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried wth the. Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, & destroyed thy people. The generacion of the wyched halbe without honour for ever. Let there a way be long vt to destruy their chyl- den, that be in theys fathers wychednesse: that they come not vp agayne to possesse the land, & fyll the world full of enemies.

I wyl stande vnto agaynst them (sayeth the Lozde of hostes) & roote out the name and rem- naunte, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babylon, (sayth)

The Prophecie.

(saith the Lorde) and will geue it to the Desters, & will make water puddles of it. And I will sweepe them out with the besome of destruction, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an oath saying: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, & shall be fulfilled as I haue decreed. So that Babilonia shall I destroye in my lande, & vpon my mountaynes will I treade hym vnder foot. Wherefore I will hys poke that come from them and his burthen shall be taken from their shulders. This deuple hath God taken for his people the whole world, & this is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determine a thyng: who is able to bysnull it? And yf he stretcheth forth hys hande, who maye holde it agayne?

C The same yere that kynge Ihas dyed, God threatened on this maner: Kyrple not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of hym that beareth the is broken: for oute of the serpentis roote there shall come an adder, & the frute shall be a fyre synging worme. But the fyrst boine of the pooze shall be fed, & the symple shall dwell in safety. Thy roote also shall I destroye wth hunger, and it shall slay the remnant: Wourne & wepe, wepe thou cyrie, for (O whole lande of Palesti-na) thou arte laped wthte, for there shall come from the north a smoke & not one alone maye abide in hys place. Who shall then answer the messenger of the Gentyles? For the Lorde hath stablished Syon, and the pooze of his people be therein, do put theyr truste in hym.

The .xv. Chapter.

A prophete against Moab.

This is a drepy burthen vpon Moab As of Moab was destroyed & ouer-throwen in y night season. Kyr also in Moab was destroyed, & perished in the nyght. They went vnto the pdolabounde to Dibon to the places to wepe for Abo, & Moab did mourne for Medba: Al their hedes were balde, & all their herdes wauld.

In theyr streets are they girded about wth sackloth. In all the toppes of theyr houses and streets shall be nothyng but mourning and wepyng. Helbon and Eleale shall crye, that their voyce shall be herde vnto Iahaz. The worthies allo of Moab shall bleate oute, and crye for ver-ry sorrowe of theyr myndes: Woe shall my better be for Moabs sake. They shall lye vnto the cy-tie of Iahaz which is lyke a faire yonge bulloche of theyr yere olde, for they shall al go vnto Luth wepyng. Euen so by the waye towarde Bozoi-naim they shall make lamentacyon for their vt-ter destruction. For the waters of Nimrim shall be dried vp, by reason wherof the grasse is withered, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the resydue that he hath done, they are loyze. As for theyr substance, the enemyes haue caried them to the hooke of the wyllo-wes. For the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglatim vnto Ber Elvim was there nothing but mourning, because the waters of Dim were ful of blood: For the Lorde shall send more blood vnto Dim, & Lihab vnto the remnant of the land, & on them shall be escaped from Moab.

The .xvi. Chapter.

A prophete against Moab.

Ende the Lorde of the waydes a lambe from the roche that lyeth toward the deserte, vnto the hill of the daughter Syon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shall be as a trembling by the that is put out of harness, for they shall carpe them vnto Arnon: Gather your countail, come together in iudgement, come wth your shadow in the myddaye, as the myghte doth by the cha-ced, and be wate not them that are fled, let my persecuted people dwell amonge you: Moab be thou theyr refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to naught, the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is watted out of the lande And in mercy shall the seate be prepared, & he shall syt vpon it in the trueness in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgyng and sekynge iudgemente, and makynge iuste vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue herd of the pride of Moab, he is very proud presumptuous, arrogant, and full of indignacy-on and wayne are his eyes. Therefore shall Moab make lamentacyon because of the Moabites, (that shall be slayne) yea, they shall waille all together. Because of the foundations of the cyrie is made of hyche, shall ye complaine: euen ye lame people that are left onely beynbe.

For the vines of Helbon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of the beathen haue broken downe her principall bjaunches: they are come euen vnto Iazer, the y wente on wandrynge vnto the wilderness. Her goodlye bjaunches were thowen downe as they went ouer the sea. Therefore shall I mourne for Iazer and for the vyne of Sibna. I will pouse my teares vpon the, O Helbon and Eleale, for the crye of thyne enemies is fallen vpon thy former fru-tes, and vpon thy harvest. The mirth and chere is taken a waye out of the plente full felde, and in the vynerardes, there shall be no ioye nor glad-nesse. The reader shall treade oute no wyne in the presses, the songe of theyr merre chere haue I laid downe. Wherefore, my bowels shall com-ble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and mine inwarde partes, for the cyries sake that is made of hyche. And it shall come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shall be made wepye of his hyl chapels, he shall come to his temple to pray but he shall not be able. Wthen, this is the saying that the Lorde hath spoken concerning Moab, syns that tyme. But now the Lorde hath spoken, saying: In the yeres, whiche shall be as the yeres of an hyed seruante, shall the glory of Moab be turned into confusyon, tho-rowe oute all hys myltytude, whiche is verre great. And that whiche remaineth, shall be ver-ry small and feeble.

The .xvii. Chapter.

A prophete against Damascus.

This is the drepy burthen vpon Damascus: behold, Damascus is taken away, to be no more a cyrie, but shall be a heape of broken bones. The walle cityes

cyties of Troer shalbe solden for cattell, which shal lye there, and there shalbe none to fraie the awaye. Ephraim also shal nomore be strong, and Damascus shal no more be a kyngdome, and the remnant of Siria shalbe as the gloze of the chyldren of Israel. sayeth the Lord of hostes. And in that daye it shal come to passe, that Jacob shalbe made very poore, and the facelle of his flesch shalbe leane. And he shalbe as one that gathereth up coine in haruest, even lyke hym whose arme reapeth the eares of coine. He shalbe also lyke him that gathereth eares of coine in the valley of Rephaim. Some gather- yng in dede shal there be lefte in it, euen as in the wykynge of an Oleue tree, there remaine two or thre berpes in the top of the uttermost bowe, and foure or fyue in the bryde frutefull bryanches therof: sayeth the Lord God of Israel.

Then shal man turne agayne to his maker and his eyes shal haue respect to the holy one of Israel. As for the aulthers whiche are his owne handeworke, he shal not regard them, and the thynges that hys syngers haue made (as gro- ues and ymages) those shal be not cast his eye vnto. In that daye shal they strong cryes be as the fowlschen Thrubbes & bjaunches, whiche they left: because of the chyldren of Israel: and the land shalbe desolate. Because thou hast for- gotten God thy saluacion, & hast not ben mind- ful of thy strong rock: therefore shalt thou let plea- sant plantes, and shalt graffe the bjaunche of an other mannes vine. In that daye shalt thou make thy plant to growe & early in the morning shalt thou make thy seede to sprout. The har- nest shalbe gone in the day of embestance and there shalbe sorow without hope of comfort.

Woe shalbe to the multitude of muche people, whiche shal make a sounde lyke the noyse of the sea. And the violence of the nations, whiche shal rage lyke the rushing in of many waters: Eue- lyke many waters shal the people rage. God shal rebuke hym, and he shal flye farre of. He shalbe chased awaye lyke as drye strawe vpon the mountaynes before the wynde: and lyke a thyng that turneth before the Royme. As euen behold, there is trouble: & of euer it be morning lo he is gone. This is the porcyon of them that oppresse vs, and the lot of them that proboke vs.

The xlii. Chapter.

That lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of winges, & lande whiche is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: sendynge messengers by the sea, euen in vessels of reben ouer the water. Gette you hence (ye speedy messengers) to a nacyon that is scattered abroad, and robbed of that they had, a fearfull people from theyr begynnyng hitherto: a nacyon troden downe by yteles lyte, whose land & floudes haue spoy- led. All ye inhabitoures of the world and in dwellers of the earth, looke vp when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and hearken when he bloweth with the trompe. For so the Lord sayde vnto me: as for me, I will take my rest, & loke vpon the matter in my habitation, lyke a faire beate after the rayne: and like a cloude of dewe in the beate of haruest.

For afore the haruest when the bjaunche is growen, there shal come rype frute oute of the floure: and he shal cut downe the increase with sythes, and the bjaunches shal be take awaye with hookes: Thus shal they be lefte together vnto the fowles of the mountaynes & to the bea- stes of the earth: for in winter the brydes shal remaine vpon it, and euery beast of the land shal be vpon it in the winter. In that tyme shal ther a present be brought vnto the Lord of hostes euen a people that is scattered abroad, and rob- bed of that they had, that same people whiche haue bene fearfull from theyr begynnyng hitherto, a nation troden downe by litle and litle whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: to the place of the name of the Lord of hostes, euen to the mounte Syon.

The xlii. Chapter.

Behold the upburch of Egypt: Scholde the Lord rideth vpon a swift cloude & shal come into Egypt, & the ydols of Egypt shal tremble at the presence of hym, and the best of Egypt shal quake in the myddel of her. And I will set the Egyptians one agaynst another, so that one bjo- ther shal fyght agaynst another, and one neigh- bour agaynst another, cite agaynst cite: and realme agaynst realme. The mynde also of E- gypt shalbe cleane about counsaill within it self, and the deuyce that they take will I destruy, so that they shal seke counsaill at ydols, & at lecherers at wothers with spyttes and at sothsayers. And the Egyptians will I geue ouer into the hande of a maruylous cruel lord, & a myghty kyng, shal haue dominyon ouer the, sayeth the Lord God of hostes. the waters of the sea shal faile, and the ryuer shal decrease, and be dreyed by. The waters shalbe drowne out: the ryuers of Egypt shalbe emptyed and dreyed by, the reed- des and flagges shalbe cut downe.

The graile in the riuer & by the riuers banke and all that groweth by the riuer shal wither awaye, and be brought to nought. The fyshers also shal mourne, & all they that cast angle in to the water, shal make lamentacion, & they that laye forth theyr net beside the waters shalbe too- ted out. Woe couer, they that woe in flar and make fyne wokes, shalbe confounded: and so shal they that were open wokes. For they open wokes shalbe euen destroyed, and all they that make pondes and stues for fysh shal come to nought.

But ye foolyshe princes of ioan, ye wylle col- lapters of Pharao, whose wit is turned to fool- yshnesse, how say ye vnto Pharao, I am come of wyse men, and of ancient kynges: Where are now the wyse men? Let the reche (if they can) what the Lord of hostes hath deuyced vpon Egypt.

The princes of ioan are become foolyshe, & prin- ces of Boph are discreued, they haue discreued

The Prophecye.

Egypt, even they that were taken for the cheefe hyndes therof. In the myddes of it hath f Lozbe poured f spiryte of wickednesse: and they haue disceyued Egypt in euery woꝛke therof, eue as a dyabolical man flattered in his vomite. Neither shall the herd of caple, the byrds of the ayre be able to do any woꝛke in Egypt. In that day shall Egypt be lyke vnto women: It shall be afrayed and stande in feare at the motion of the hand of the Lozbe of hostes, whiche he shall heere ouer it. And Egypt shall be afrayed of the land of Iuda so that euery one whiche maketh mencyon of it, shall be afrayed therat because of the counsaile of the Lozbe of hostes whiche he deuysed for it.

In that daye shall syue cities in the lande of Egypt speake f language of Canaan, f sweare by the Lozbe of hostes: the cite of desolacyon shall be called one of them. In f daye shall f aultare of f Lozbe be in the myddes of the lande of Egypt, and this tytle besyde it: VNTO THE LORD. And it shall be a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lozbe of hostes in the lande of Egypt. For they shall crye vnto the Lozbe, because of such as trouble them, and he shall sende them a sauoure, and a great man to deliuer them.

D And the Lozbe shall be knowne in Egypt, f the Egyptians shall knowe the Lozbe in f daye, and doo sacrifice and oblation: yea, they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lozbe, and performe it. The Lozbe also shall smite Egypt soze, f heale them againe, and they shall be converted vnto f Lozbe, and he shall be intreated of them, f shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a chym wape out of Egypt into Assyria, f Assyria shall come into Egypt: and Egypt into Assyria: so f the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall serue f Lozbe together. In that daye shall the nacyon of Israell be the thyrde with Egypt and Assyria and they shall be blessed in the myddes of f land whiche lande the Lozbe of hostes hath blessed, sayng: blessed is my people of Egypt: Assur al so is the woꝛke of myne handes: and Israell is myne enerytaunce.

The .xx. Chapter.

Agaynst Egypt and Ethiopia.

In the yere that Thartan came vnto Ahab (when Sarg on the kyng of Assyria had sente hym) and had sought agaynst Ahab, and taken it. At the same tyme spake f Lozbe by the hande of Elape the sonne of Amos, sayng: Go, and take of the sacke clothe from thy loynes, and put of thy shoe fro thy fote. And he dyd so, walkyng naked and barefote.

And the Lozbe sayd: like as my seruante Elape hath walked naked f barefote for a signe and wondre thir yeres vpon Egypt: and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kyng of Assyria take away out of Egypt f out of Ethiopia, chyldren and olde men, naked and barefote, w their loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egypt.

B They shall be broughte in feare also, and named one of another: Ethioppe of Egypte f Egypt of Ethiopia, consyderyng what glorie they were in afore. And they that dwell in the same Ile, shall saye in that day: Behold, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we fle for helpe that we maye be deliuered from f kyng of Assyria? And howe shall we escape.

The .xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Babylon, Ierusalem, and Arabia.

The burthen of the waste sea: Euen as the storme wetter that passeth thoz ower at the none daye, so come from f wyldernesse, from that horrible lande. A greuous dysp was shewed vnto me: Let one disceyfull offender come agaynst another, f one destroyer agaynst another. Up Elam, laye siege f Media, all they: grompyng haue I layde downe. Therefore are my loynes fylled w sorowe: heuynesse hath taken holde vpon me as the panges of a woma that is traunspynge: It made me stoupe when I herde it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My heart panted, fearfulness came vpon me. The nyght of the voluptuousnesse hath be turned agaynst me into feare. Whyle they garnished f table, the watchman looked: And while he was eatyng and dnykng: it was sayde by f cap taynes take you to your wynde. For thus hath f Lozbe sayd vnto me: Go, f set a watchman, to tel what he seeth. And he sawe a charret which it. hoysmen sat vpon, w the carpage of an asse and the carpage of a camel. So he looked f toke very diligent orde. And the lyon cried, Lozbe, I stande waiting all the hole day, f am appoynted to hepe my watch euery nyght. And behold here cometh a charret of men, with two hoysmen. And he answered, and sayd, Babylon is fallen it is fallen: f all the ymages of her goddes hath he smitten downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must thyse, and thou belongest to my cozne hoore. Thys that I hearde of the Lozbe of hostes, the God of Israell haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watchma what hast thou elypped by nyght? Watchman what hast thou elypped by nyght? The watchman sayde: The moynnge cometh, and so doeth the nyght. Vt ye wll aske anye questyon, then aske it: retorne, and come agayne.

The burthen concerning Arabia: In f plea saunt ground of Arabia shall ye tary all nyght euen in the stretes of Dedanim. The inhabytours of the lande of Thema broughte for the water to him that was thyrst, they presented hym with they: beade that was sct a daye. For because of swarthes are they become fugityue, euen for the byawen swerde, f for the bent bowe, and because of the greuousnesse of warre. For thus hath the Lozbe sayde vnto me. There is yet a yere accosynge to the yeres of an hyed seruante and all the glorie of Cedar shall fayle. And the nombre of them that shall escape from the bowes, shall be mynyshed by the myghty chyldren of Cedar: for so f Lozbe God of Israell hath spoken.

The .xxii. Chapter.

Agaynst Ierusalem.

In the burthen of the valley of vison.
What hast thou to do here, & thou climest vnto y^e house toppes: Thou art full of occupynge, thou sedycous and proude cytie: thy daye menne are neyther put to deathe wyth swerde: no3 deade in battayle. All thy captaynes are sagittes together, the archers haue taken theim y^e conneres.
 All they that are founde in the, are in captiui-tie together, because they fledde farre of. Therfore sayde I let me alone, and I wyl make la-mentacion. Pe shal not be hable to comfort me because of the destruccyon of y^e daughter of my people. For this is a daye of trouble, of ruine, of destruccyon that the Lord wyl bring to passe in the valley of vison, breaking downe y^e cy-tie, and cryng vnto the mountaynes.

Behold, I claime beate y^e quier with a charret of foete and of hoysen, the cite of ier: the wed y^e child open. Thy chere valley also was full of charret-tes, & the hoysen set they: faced by rectyve to-warde the gate. And in that day byd the enemy take a waye the betwye of iuda: and then byd-dest thou loke toward the armour of the house of the fozeit. Pe haue sene also y^e broken places of the cytie of dauid, howe that they are many & ye gathered together the waters of y^e lower poole. As for y^e houses of ierusalem, ye haue no-byed theim, & the houses haue ye broken downe to make the wall stronge. A yette also haue ye made betwene y^e two walles, for y^e waters of y^e olde poole & haue not regarded y^e maker therof neither had respect vnto hym y^e toke it in hande.

C And in that day byd the Lord God of hostes call men vnto weping and mournyng, to baldnesse and gyrdyng about with sackcloth. And beholde, they haue soye and gladnesse, slayng oxen & kylling shepe, eatyng fleische, and drynkyng wyne. * Let vs cate & drynke, for to mo-rowe we shal dye. And it came to the eares of y^e Lord of hostes: This iniquity shal not be pour-ged from you tyll ye dye, sayeth the Lord God of hostes. Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: Go, get the into ponde treasurers, euen vnto sebna, whiche is y^e ruler of y^e house. What hast thou to do here, and whom hast thou here? that thou shuldest here betwe y^e out a sepulchre as it wer one that bereth hym out a sepulchre on hye, or that graueth an habitacyon for hym selfe in an hard rocke.

Behold, O thou man, the Lord shal cary the a waye into captiui-tye, and shal surely couer the with confusyon. The Lord shal turne the ouer lyke a bal to his handes: & cast the into into a farre countrie. There shalt thou die, and there (in steade of the charrettes of thy pompe) shal y^e house of thy Lord haue confusyon: I wil dnyne the from thy place, & out of thy dwellyng shal be ouerthrowe the. And in that daye shal I call my seruant eliakim the sonne of hel-kias. And with thy garmentes wyl I clothe him and with thy gyrdle wyl I strengthe hym: thy powder also wyl I comye into his hande, and beshalbe a father of such as dwel in ierusalem, & in the house of iuda.

In the kepe of the house of dauid wyl I late vpon his shoulde, so that he shal open and no man shal shut: he shal shut, and no ma shal open. And I wyl faste hym as a nayle in a sure place, and he shalbe the gloriouse seate of his fathers house. Moreover, all generacions and posterities shal hang vpon hym all the glory of they: fathers house, all vessels both greates & small, & all instrumentes of measure & musyke.
 In that daye (sayeth the Lord of hostes) shal the nayle that is fastened in the sure place, departe, be broken, and fall: and the burthen that was vpon it, shalbe plucked away, for so y^e Lord hath spoken.

The xliij Chapter.

¶ It sheweth agaynst Tyre, and a prophete that is shalbe destroyed agayne.

In the burthen of Tyre: Mourn ye shippes of charlis, for ther cometh such destruccyon, y^e shal not haue an house to lye into: Out of y^e land of cith haue they knowlage of this plage. We shyl ye y^e dwel in the yle, y^e marchantes of zidon, and such as passe ouer the see, haue made y^e plenteous. The coyne y^e groweth by the great waters of silus, and the cruises of the ri-uer were her vitayles, so that it became a commen mart of the nacions. We ashamed thou zidon, for the see (euen y^e strengthe of the see) hath spoken, sayinge: I haue not trauayled no3 brought forth chyldren, no3 noyshed vpon yonge men or brought vpon virgyns.

When tidynges cometh to the Egyptians they shalbe so3 for the rumoure that goeth of Tyre. Set you to charlis, mourn ye y^e dwell in the yle. Is not this that gloriouse cite of yours, which hath bene of old antiquyte: her owne sette shal carpe her forth to be a sojournet into a farre country. Who hath deuised this a-gaynst Tyre (y^e strength garlandes vnto other cityes) whose marchantes are princes: & whose captaynes are honourable in the world. Euen the Lord of hostes hath deuyled this, to put downe the proude of all such as be gloriouse, and to minishe all them y^e be proude vpon carthe.
 Get the ouer of the lande vnto the daughter of charlis: seyng thou hast no more strengthe.

Whe that smote the kingdomes together, holdeth out his hand ouer the see: euen y^e Lord hym self hath geuen a commandement agaynst the same chimen place of marchandyse, that they shal utterly destroye the myghte therof. And he sayde: Make nomore thy bolle (O virgyn y^e daughter zidon) thou shalt be brought downe: Up, get the ouer vnto cith, where neuer the-lesse, thou shalt haue no rest. Beholde, this people come not of y^e caldees: but Assur made the strong & great shippes. They set vpon y^e stronge holdes therof, and destroyed his places: and he brought it in decaye. Mourn, ye shippes of charlis for your strengthe is brought doome.

And in that day shal Tyre be forgotten se-

The xxviii. Chapter.

Behold, the Lorde maketh the earth wast and empye: he turneth it vpsyde downe, & scattereth abroade the inhabitours there of. And the preestes shall be as the people: and the master as the seruante: the maistresse like the mayde: the seller like the bier: he that lendeth vpon vsurye, like him that borroweth vpon vsurye: the creditor as the debtor. The world shall be cleane wasted & vterly spoyled, for sothe the Lord hath spoken. The earth is soyy, & consumerth away: the world is feble & perissheth, the proud people of the earth are come to naught. The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabitours therof, which haue trasgressed the lawes, channged the ordinaunce, broken the euerlastynge couenaunte.

Therfore hath the curse consumed the earth, & they that dwell therein, are falle into trespass. Therfore the inhabitours of the earth are perisshed with drought, & few men are left behynde. The wine faileth: the vine hath no myght, al they that haue bene merie of herte are come to mournyng. The mirth of tabyettes is layed downe, the noyse of such as haue made merie, is ceased: the ioye at the harpe is at an ende. They shall drincke no moze wine w mirth, stronge dryncke shall be bitter to them that drincke it. The cite of vauitie is broken downe, euery house is shut vp, that no man may come in. In the stretes is there a cryng because of wyne, all there is banished away, the mirth of the world is gone: in the cite is left desolacion, and the gate is smitten with destruction.

For in the middes of the world, euen among the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shalynge of olives: and as the grappes are when the vineharuest is done. They shall lyft vp their voice, & make a mery noyse: and in magnifyng of the Lorde, shall they crye out of the wele. Therfore shall ye the Lord in the valleys, euen the name of the Lorde God of Israel, in the fles of the se. And the vitermost parte of the earth haue we herde wailles & mirth, because of the righteous. And I haide: I knowe a thyng in secret: woe is me, the transgressours haue offended: the transgressours haue greuously offended. Fearfulnesse, the pit, and the snare are vpon the, & thou shalt dwell on the crache. It will come to passe, & the psonnes escapeth the fearful noyse, shall fall into the pit. And he that cometh by out of the pit, shall be taken with the snare. For the windows from on hygh are open, & the foundations of the earth are moued.

The earth is vterly broken downe, the earth hath a soye ruine, the earth quaketh exceedingly. The earth shall crie to and fro, like a droncherde: & shall be remoued lyke a tent of one myght, and the iniquite therof shall be deny vpon it. It shall fall, and not ryse vp againe. And in that daye shall the Lord visite the booke about that is on hye, & the hynges of the world are vpon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as they that be in prison: and they shall be shut vp in warde, & after many dayes shall they be visited. * The moone shall be abashed, & the sunne shall be named when the Lord of hostes shall raygne in mount Zion & in Ierusalem w wyshippe, and in the syght of such as shall be of his counsell.

The xxv. Chapter.

¶ The prophecies of the Lord to his people.

Thou art the Lord my God, I will magnifie the, I will geue thankes vnto thy name. For I haue brought wonderfull thynges to passe, accordyng to thine olde counsels truely & faithfully. * Thou hast made of a cite a heap of stones and brought a strong towne into decaye. The habitation of strangers hast thou made to be no cite, neither shall it be builded any moze. Therfore shall the mighty people geue glorye vnto the, the cite of valeaunt heartes shall fear the. For thou hast bene a strength vnto the poore, & a succour for the needy in his trouble. A refuge against euell wether, a shadowe against the heate. For the blaste of ragynge men is lyke a storme that casteth downe the wall.

Like as I bringest heat downe oute of a drye place: so shalt thou suppress the noyse of altars. The heat is in the shadowe of the cloude: the brasthe of the mighty shall be brought lowe. And in this mountaine shall the Lord of hostes make vnto al people a feast of plenteous & delicate thynges, eue of moost pleasur & deintie dishes. And in this mountaine shall the Lord destroye the courting, & all people are wrapped in, & the bagynge that is layed vpon al nacions. * As for death he hath destroyed it for ever. * And the Lord God shall wipe away teares from all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take awaye out of all the earth. For to the Lord hath sayde.

And in the day it shall be said: Lo this is our god, we haue waped for him, & he shall saue vs. This is the Lord in whom we haue hoped, we will be merie & reioyse in the saluacion & cometh of him. For in this mountaine shall I haue of the Lord cralle & woe shall be trespas vnder him, eue as strawe is trespas vpon the ground. And he shall stretch out his hande in the myddes of the (as he swimmeth) casteth out his handes to swimme) & w the strength of his handes shall he bring downe their pyrde. The strong holde also & defence of the walles hath he ouerthrowe & cast downe & brought them to the grounde, euen vnto duste.

For in the daye that the east winde bloweth soze, it taketh awaye the frutes. Thus therfore shall y iniquyte of Jacob be reconcyled, and here is all the knyght of the takynge awaye of hys synne, yf he make all the stones of the altare of Iools, as chalke stones that are beaten in sader, that their groues and ymages rpe not vp agayne.

that violently beareth downe al thynges. The crowne of the wyde of the dyonchen. The crowne of his saynes and bewtye, whiche is in the brade of the valley of sarnes, shall seade a way, and both an outmyclepe rype syg aforesharucte. Whiche whil a man lyeth, he lotheth vpon it, & whyle it is set in his hande, he eateth it up.

B In that daye shall the Lord of hostes be the crowne of glory, & a dyamonde of bewtye vnto the residue of his people. He wyll be also a spyer of perfur knowledge to him & lyteth in iudgement, & strengthe vnto the that turne away the battel to the gate of the enemies. But they are out of the way by reason of wyne: yee, sate out of the waye are they thowow strong dyuche.

 The pycke also and the ppyete are gone astray by the meanes of strong dyuche. they are thowow to wyne they go amulle thowow strong dyuche, they faile in ppyetynge & stumbe in iudgemente. For tables are so full of wynter & sytchynnes that no place is cleane. Whom then shall such one reach knowlege? And whil shall he make to vnderstande the thynges & he beareth? For they are as ignorant as yong children, & are taken from the mylke, and are weyned.

C For they that be suche must haue after one lesson, another lesson: after one commaundment, another commaundment, after one rule another rule, after one instruction, another instruction: there a litle & there a litle. For he that spaketh vnto this people is euen as one that vseth rude nesse of spech, and a straunge language. If any man saye vnto them: lo, this is the rest where with ye maye ease him that is werpe, this is & refering, they wyll not hearken. Therefore, the woide of the Lord (lesson vpon lesson, commaundment vpon commaundment, rule vpon rule, instruction vpon instruction, there a litle and there a litle) shall vnto them an occasion of stumbyng that they may go on, & fall backward, be byused, tangled and snared.

D Therefore, heare the woide of the Lord ye mockers, ye that haue rule of this people, which is at Ierusalem. Because ye haue sayde, we haue made a couenaunt with death, and with hell are we at agrement. And though there go forth a fyre plage, it shall not come vnto vs: For we haue made falshode our refuge, & vnder vanite are we byd: Therefore sayeth the Lord God: Behold, I lay in Iolion for a foundacion a stone euf a tryed stone, a ppyous corner stone, a sure foundation. Whoso beleueth, let him not be to hastye. Iudgement also wyll I laye to the rule and ryghteousnes to the balaunce: so that the people shall take awaye your wayne confidence as a byrome, & the ppye place of your refuge shall the waters come ouer.

E And thus the couenaunt that ye made with death, shall be dysannulled: and your agremente that ye made with hell, shall not stande. Yee, whil the fyre plage goth forth, ye shall be troden downe vnder it. From the time & it goth forth, it shall take you awaye. For earlye in the morninge curteye daye: yee, bothe daye and nyghte shall it go thowow: & when the noyse thereof is petreared, it shall geue hezacion. For the bed is narrowe, and not large: and the couerynge so small that a man cannot wynde him selfe vnder it. For the Lord shall stande as in mounte Baran, and shall be wyshlype as in the valley: & Iheron, that he maye do his wysh, his straunge wysh, and bypunge to passe his acte, his straunge acte.

And therefore is that ye be no mockers, lest your ppyetynge increaseth: for I haue heard of the Lord of hostes, that there shall come a woide vnto the whole earth. Heare ye then, & heren vnto my voyce, consyde and vnderstande my speche. Woe not the husbandman plowe all the daye, & openeth and byketh the clottes of his grounde, & he may sowe: when he hath made it playne, wyll he not speche abode the sytches, and sowe comin, and cast in wyete by measure, and the appointed barley and rye in their place? God wyll instruct him to haue discrecion, euen his God wyll teach him. For sytches shall not be thysed with an harowe, neither shall a carte whele be byoughte thowow the comyn: but the sytches are beaten out with a staffe, and comin with a rod. But the sode that bread is made of, is thysed, though it be not alway a thysling. And the carte whele must be byoughte ouer it, lest he grinde it w his teth. This also cometh of the Lord of hostes, which woiketh w wonderfull wysdom, & byingeth excellent woyses to passe.

I wyll lay sege vnto Ariel, so that there shall be byuines & sozow in it, and it shall be vnto me euen an altier of slaughter. I wyll besige the round about, & syght agaynst the thowowe a bulwarcke, & wyll reare vpon byches agaynst the. Thou shalt be byoughte downe, & shalt speake out of the grounde, & thy speach shall go lowe out of the dust. Thy voyce also shall come out of the grounde like the voyce of a witch: and thy talkyng shall whysper out of the dust. Moreover, the noyse of the strange enemies shall be like thynne dust, & the multitude of tyrantes shall be as byle straws & cannot stand: euen sodenly & in hast shall their blasphemie go.

Thou shalt be bysited of the Lord of hostes w thowowe earthquake, & w a great noyse w storme & tempest & with the flabe of a consuming fyre. And the multitude of al nacyons that syght agaynst Ariel, shall be as a dreame sene by nyght: & euf so that al they be, & inache warre agaynst it, & a strdge holdes so ouercome it, & that laye anye sege vnto it, In conclusio, it shall be euf as whil an hongry man dreameth that he is eatyng, & when he awa keth, his soule is emptye. Wondje

C Wondre these thynges once in your myndes, and wondre. * Wondred are they them selues, & the blynde gydes of order. They are dyonhen: but not to wyne, they are vnkable but not thoro- rowe stronge dyynke. For the Lozde hath coue- red you wth a stomberyng spete, and hath closed your eyes. Pourre prophetes also & rulers & Quylse, them hath he couered. * And the visid of all the prophetes is become vnto you, as the woyses of a boke that is sealed vp, wherpe men deliuer to one that is learned, sayng: Reade & in it. And he sayeth: I ca not, for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto hym that is not learned, sayng: Reade thou in it, and he sayth: I am not learned. Therfore thus harde the Lozde sayde: * For so muche as thys people, when they be in trouble, do honour me wth theyr mouth and wth theyr lippes: but theyr herte is far fro me, & the feare wherby they haue vnto me, pzoceadeth of a commandement & is taught of men. Therfore wyll I do maruayls amonge thys people, euen maruclous thynges (I saye) and a wonder. * For the wylsoms of theyr wylme shal perysh, & the vnderstanding of their wylly me shal hie it selfe.

Wlo vnto them & hepeyth secret theyr thoughtes, to hyde theyr counel from the Lozde and do theyr woyses in darknesse, sayng: * who seyth vs? & who knoweth vs? Doubtes, your destruc- cyon is (in my handes) in reputation as the pot- ters claye. And both the woyses say of hym that made it, he made not me. In both an earthe ves- sel saye of him that fashioned it, he had no vnder- standyng: Is it not harde at hande, that Ly- bannus shalbe turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shalbe taken as the wood? And in that daye shal deasse men heare the woyses of & boke, and the eyes of the blynde shal se euen out of the cloude & out of darknes.

E The meke spete also shalbe mety in & Lozde, and the poore amonge them that be lowly, shal- crye in & holpe one of Israel. For he that byd- dyolence, is brought to naught, and & scornful man is consumed: and they roted oute that were hasty so lone to vneyghteousnes, making a ma- to synne in the woys, & that toke hym in a snare wherby reppoued them in the ope place: and they that haue turned the cause of sperrygterous to naught. Therfore thus sayth the Lozde vnto & house of Jacob, eue thus sayeth he that redemed Abraham: * Jacob shal not now be confounded no; his face pale. But when he seeth bys chyldre the woyshe of my handes in the myddes of hym, they shal sanctify my name, and prayse the holy Lozde of Jacob, & feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erronous spete shal come to vnderstandyng, & they that haue bene scornfull, shal learne doctryne.

¶ The xxx. Chapter.

¶ Wherbye them that forsake the counsell of God & cleue to the counsell of men. The prophet also thynketh the reu- nant of the people, that after the destruction of Ierusalem turne into Egypte.

I Las, for those dyfobedyente chyldren, (sayth the Lozde) * that they wil take cou- sel wythoute me. I las, & they wyll take a secret aduysor, and not oute of my spete, and therfore adde they synne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypte, and haue asked no questiō at my mouth but like strength in the myght of Pharaō, & truste in the shadowe of Egypte. Therfore shal the strength of Pha- raō be your confusyon, & the truste in the shadowe of Egypte your shame. For his captaynes were at soan, & his ambassadours came vnto hancs * They were all ashamed of the people & coude do them no good, and that myght not helpe the, no; shewe them any profyte, but were theyr co- fusyon and rebuke.

B The heuy burthen of the beastes of the south in a lande of trouble and anguythe, from wher shal come the ponge and olde Lyon, the vpper & frys serpent that speth agaynst them that vpo- coltes beare theyr ryches, & vpon Camels theyr treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For bayne & nothyng woys shal the helpe of the Egyptians be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Ierusalem. They shal haue strenght ynough, yf they wyl lette theyr myndes in quietnes. * Now therfore, go thy waye, & wyte this before them in a table, & note it in a boke that it may fynally remayne and be kepte styl for euer.

For thys is an obdurate people: * and dys- sembling chyldren, chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lozde.

C For they sape vnto the seers: We not, and to them & be cleare of iudgement: loke not out right thynges for vs: but speake saye woyses vnto vs: loke out errorres, get you out of thys waye, departe oute of thys path, & turne the holpe one of Israel from vs. Wherfore thus sayth the holpe one of Israel: Because poure hertes rye agaynst thys woys, & because ye trust in wrong dealyng & peruerse iudgement, & put your con- fydence therein. Therfore shal ye haue thys mys- chepe for poure destruccyon and fall, lyke as an hye wall & falleth, because of some rye: or blas- t whose breakyng cometh sodenly. * And & hurt therof is lyke an earthen vessel, wherbye brea- keth wthout helpe: so that in the burstyng of it, ther is not founde one sheuer to fetche fyre in, or to take water wythal out of the ppe.

D For thus sayth the Lozde God, euen thy holy one of Israel: In repentance & in * rest shal ye be safe: in quyetnes and sure confydence shalbe poure strenght. But ye haue had no lust thereto, for ye haue sayde: No, but we wyll escape thro- rowe hoyses. (Therfore shal ye slype) and we wyll get vs vp vpon swyfte beastes. And ther- fore shal poure persecutours be swyfter. * I thousande shal slype at the rebuke of one, and at the rebuke of fyue shal ye all slype, tyll ye be leste as a hyppemall vpon the top of a mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an hylle. * Therfore doth the Lozde cause you to wayte that he maye haue mercy vpon you: to thynkent, that he maye haue the pzemynce, when he is gracious vnto you. For the Lozde is the God of iudgemente. Bles- sed are all they that hope in hym.

And when he heareth it he shall geue the an-swere. And though the Lord geue you the bread of trouble, & the water of aduersyte, they sayne

Deut. 31. 1

* This is the waye, walke ye in it. Turne not asyde, neyther to the ryght hande nor to the left.
Ye shall destroye also the coneynges of your syluer ymages, and the deckynge of your golden ydoles. Euen as fylthynges shal ye put the away.
And thou shalt sape vnto it. Get the hence. The shall God geue rayne vnto thy seed, that shall sowe the grounde wythal, and breade of the increase of the earth, whych shal be sat & very plenteous. In that daye also, shall thy catell be fed in large pastures. The oxen shal wepe and the ydgasses, that eate the grounde shall eate cleane prouender, whiche is poured wyth the wynde and the fanne.

II. Pet. 1. 1

* Finally, vpon euerye hye mountayne & hyl shall there be ryuers & streames of waters, * in the daye of the great slaughter, whē the towres fall. Moreover, the lycht of the moone shalbe as the lycht of the sunne, and the sunne lycht shal be seuen fold, and haue as muche shyne as in se-nen dayes helpe, when the Lord byndeth vp the foze of his people, and healeth the stroke of theyr wounde. Beholde, the fame of the Lord cometh from farre, & his presence is to hote, that no man is able to abyde. His lychtes are full of indignacyon, and his tonge is as a consuming fyre.
His byeth is as a vehement flood of water that reacheth vp to the necke. That he may lyte a way the heart in the syue of vanity. And his byeth is as a byrd of erreure in the chawes of people.

II. Pet. 1. 1

And ye shall synge, lyke as in the nyght, whē the hoipe solemnitye beynneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of herte, lyke as when one cometh wyth a wyfe vnto the hyl of the Lord, and to the most myghty one of Israel. And the Lord shall cause his glorious voyce to be herde, and shall declare his stretched out arme wyth a terrible countenance & wyth the flame of a consumynge fyre, with noysome lychtenynge, with a shower, & wyth hayle stones. For the howle the voyce of the Lord, shall * All be destroyed, whych smote other men wyth the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whycher soeuer he goeth the rodde shall cleane vnto hym, whych the Lord shall laye vpon hym wyth tabyettes and harpes & wyth great warre shall he fynde agaynst his doost. * For the fyre of payne is ordeyned from the beynnyng: yee, euen for kynge is it prepared. This hath the Lord set in the depe: and made it wyde: the burnynge wherof is fyre and much wood. The byeth of the Lord, whiche is a ryuer of byrmstone doeth kyndle it.

gypt for helpe, & trust in hoyses, and put their confydence in charettes, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lusty and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of Israel, and they aske no question at the Lord.

Where as he neuerthelesse (being wyfist of all) plageth the wyched, and yet goeth not from his wyche, when he steppeth forth, and taketh the optrogy agaynst the howsholde of the frowarde, & agaynst the helpe of euill doers. Nowe the Egi-ptians are men, & not God, & they: hoyses fleshe and not spyt. And allone as the Lord stretcheth out his hand, then shall the helper fall, & he that sholde haue bene helped, and they shall altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: * Lyke as the Lyon of the deserte roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayde though the multitude of sheperdes crye out vpon hym neyther abashed for all the heape of them. So shall the Lord of hostes come downe to fight for mounte Syon and defend his hyl. Lyke as byrdes floure about saue, defende, and deliuer Jerusalem.

be gathered whych shall be yours as are the ga-therynge of Byches. And the multitude going to it shall be as locustes runnyng to and fro.

The Lozde is exalted, for it is he that dwell-ment & ryghteousnes. And a sure habytynge of thy thynges shall be strenght, healt, wisdom

Let not hezekias dysceyne you when he sayeth the gods of f Gentyles hepe eury mans lande from the power of the kynge of the Assyrians.

Where is f God of hemath? Arphad: Where is f God of Sepharaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of all the goddes of these landes hath deliuered theyr countreye oute of my power: is the Loyde in dede able to deliuer Jerusalem from my hande vnto this hezekias messengers heide theyr togen, & answered not one word, for f king had charged the f they shuld geue hym no answer.
So came Eliakim Helkias sonne the president Sobna the scribe, and Ioab Asphas sonne f secretarye, vnto hezekias wth rent clothes, & tolde hym the wordes of Rablaketh.

¶ The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ Hezekias humbled hym selfe before the Loyde. The temple of Sennacherib is flaine of the Angell of the Loyde: and he is spoyled of his owne forces.

When hezekias heard that, he rente hys clothes, & put on a sackclothe and went into f temple of f Loyde but he sent Helkiam the president Sobna the scribe, wth the el dest priestes clothed in sackcloth vnto the pro phet Elay the sonne of Amos, & they sayd vnto hym: Thus sayeth hezekias: this is the day of trouble, of plage and blasphemie: for the chyld ren are come to the place of byrth: but there is no power to bynge them forth. The Loyde thy God (no doubte) hath well considered the wor des of Rablaketh, whom hys Loyde f kynge of the Assyrians hath sente to drye and blasphe me the liuyng God, with suche wordes as the Loyde thy God hath hearde ryghte well. And therefore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that are left. So the seruantes of f kynge he zekias came to Elaye.

And Elaye gaue them thus answer. Say thus vnto your Loyde: thus sayeth the Loyde Benot afrayed of the wordes that thou haste cause a winde to go ouer hym as one as he bea his owne land. * Now when Rablaketh retur nas, for he had vnderstande f he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumoure f Tharhes king of Ethiopia was come forth to warre against hym. And when the king of As hezekias wth this comaundement: Say thus to hezekias king of Iuda. Let not thy God dis ceiue the, in whom f hopest, and sayest: Jerusa lem shal not be geuen into the handes of f king of Assyria. For loo, thou knowest wel howe the kynge of Assyria haue handled al the landes f they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape?

Where the people of f Gentiles (whom my pro genytours conquered) deliuered at any tyme thosowt their Gods? * As namely, Sozan, Ha ran, Rezeph, and the chyldren of Eden, which were at Chalassar. Where is f king of hemath and the kynge of Arphad, & the kynge of the crye Sepharaim, Eua and Anar? Now when he zekias had receyued the letter of f messengers and read it: he went vp into the house of f Loyd and opened the letter before the Loyde: and he zekia prayed before the Loyde on this maner.
O Loyde of hostes thou God of Isracil, which dwellest vpon Cherubin. Thou art the God, that only is God of all kyngdomes of f world for thou onely hast created heauen and earth, Enclyne thyn eare Loyde and consider, open thyn eyes, O Loyde, and se, and ponder all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, whiche hath sent his embassage to blasphemie the liuyng God.
It is true O Loyde, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered al kyngdomes and landes, and caste theyr goddes in the fyre. Not wythstan dyng those were no gods, but the woorkes of mens handes, of wood, or stone, therefore haue they destroyed the. Deliuer vs then, O Loyde oure God, from f handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earthe maye knowe, that thou only arte the Loyde. Then Elay f sonne of Amos sent vnto hezekias, sayng: Thus say eth the Loyde God of Isracil. Where as f hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchyng Senna that the Loyde hath geuen, concernynge hym.

Dispyled art thou, & mocked: O daughter Sy the Loyde, and thus holdest f of thy selfe. I wyl ANNO. MDL.

Of longe aſoſe thys was hezekia ſicke vnto the death, * and the prophet Eſay the ſonne of Amoz, came vnto hym, and ſayde: Thus commaundeth the Lozde: Sette thynne houſe in order, for thou muſte dye, and ſhalte not eſcape. Then hezekias turned his face towarde the walle, and prayed vnto the Lozde, and ſayde: Remmebre (O Lozde) that I haue walked befoze the in trueth, and a ſtedfaſt hert and haue done the thynges that is pleaſaunt to the. And hezekia wepte ſore. Then ſayde God vnto Eſay: Goor and ſpeake vnto hezekia: The Lozde God of Dauid thy father ſendeth the this worde: I haue hearde thy prayer, and

I thoughte I ſhoulde haue gone to the gates of hell, when myne age was ſhortened, and haue wanted the reſidue of myne yeres. I ſpake within my ſelfe: I ſhall neuer byſet the Lozde (the Lozde I ſaye) in thys lyfe. I ſhall neuer ſe manne amonge dwellers of the worlde. Myne age is ſolden vp togethe, and taken away from me, lyke a ſhepherds cottage I haue betwen of my lyfe by my ſynnes: lyke as a weauer cutteth of his webbe, he wyll with bypunge ſyckneſſe make an ende of me: yet, he wyll make an ende of me in one daye. * I thoughte, I ſhoulde haue lyued vnto the morow, but he bynded my bones lyke a Lpon, and in one day thou wyll make an ende of me.

Ioh. 24.

Then chattered I lyke a ſwalowe, and lyke a Crane, and mourned as a dove.

I lyft vp mine eyes into the bright: O Lozde (ſaid) I my ſyckneſſe hepeeth me down: aſe thou me: What ſhal I ſaye: The Lozde hath made a promple to me. Yet, ſe hym ſelf hath perſonmed it. I ſhall therefore ſo longe as I lyue remeber this bitterneſſe of my lyfe. The xxxix. Chapter.

Hezekia is reuoyd of Aſſyria, becauſe he ſhewed his treaſures vnto the embaiſſadours of Babylon.

There was not one thyng in hezekias house, and so they rownt all his kingdome but he let them be it.

Then came Claye the prophete to hyngre hezekia, and sayde vnto hym: What haue the men sayde from whence came they vnto the hezekia answered, they came oute of a farre countrey vnto me oute of Babylone: Clay sayd what haue they looked vpon in thyne house hezekia answered: All that is in mine house haue they sene: and there is nothyng in my treasure but I wred it them.

Then said Clay vnto hezekia: Understand the woide of the Lorde of hostes. Beholde, the tyme wyll come that euery thyng whiche is in thine house, and all that thy progenitours haue layde vp in those dayes vntill this daye shalbe carryed to Babylone, and nothyng left behynd. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For a parte of thy sonnes, that come of the, and whom thou shalt get shalbe carryed hence, and become geilded chamberlaines in the kyng of Babylons court. Then sayde hezekia to Clay: Now God prosper his owne counsaile whiche thou hast tolde me. he sayd mozeouer. So y there be peace and saythfulness in my tyme.

The charging of saynt John Baptiste. The preparation of the apostles. The calling of the Gentyles.

Comfort my people (O reprobates) comfort my people, sayth your God, comfort Ierusalem at the vertice and tell her: that her trauaile is at an end that her offence is pardoned that she hath receyued of the Lordes hande sufficient correccion for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth in wyldernesse: Prepare the waye of the Lorde in the wyldernesse, make streight the path for our God in the deserte. Let all valleys be exalted, and euery mountayne & hyl be layd lowe: what so is exalted, let it be made streight and let the rough, be made playne feldest. For who is the ruler so blynde (saye they) as I perfect man & so blynde as the Lorde seruante Thou understandest much, & hepest nothing, & eares are open, & no man heareth. The Lorde is merciful vnto them for his ryghteousnes sake & his worde myghte be magnified, and praisyd: But the people them selues are robbed & troden vnder fote, chayned in dongeons, & they al (I saye) be shut into pysson houses. * They are capyed a waye captyue, & no man dorbe lose them They be trode vnder fote, & nomā doth labour to bringe the agayne. * But who is he among you that pondereth this, that consydreth it, & taketh it for a warning in tyme to come?
* Who suffered Jacob to be troden vnder fote, & Israel to be spoiled? Whyd not the Lorde?
Because we haue sinned against him, and haue had no dilyge to walke in his wayes, neither be obedient vnto his lawe: Therefore he hath poured vpon hym his wrathful displeasure, & strong battel, which syneth hym on euery syde yet wyl he not understand. He burneth hym vp, yet sinneth he not into his deute.

The xliij. Chapter.

God promyseth to sende his Chyld, whiche shall helpe his people, & sheweth howe they shall be redeemed.

In those dayes, the Lorde that made the.
O Jacob, and he that fashioned the O Israel, sayeth thus: * Feare not For I haue redeemed thee. * I haue called thee by name, thou art mine owne * If thou goest thowout the water, I wyll be wth thee, & the strong founteyns shalbe not plucke the awaye. * And if thou walkest thowout the fyre, it shall not burne thee, and the flame shall not syndle vpon thee. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel thy saviour. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Assyrians, & the Babylonians for thee: because I wylde be in my syght, & because I set by thee, & loued thee. I wyl geue ouer all men for thee, and deliuer vp all people for thy sake, feare not for I am with thee. * I wyl bringe thee from the east, and gather thee together from the West. I wyl say to the North: let go.

And to the southe, kepe not backe: * but bringe me my synes from farre, & my daughters from the rudes of the world. Namely all those that be called after my name. For them haue I created, sayd, and made for myne honour.

* Bring forth people, whiche is blynde & yet bathen yee, whiche are deafe although they haue eares. * What nacyons come in one & be gathered together: whiche among them shal declare such thinges, & to tel vs what is to come? Let them bringe they wytnes so that they be free, els, let them beare, & saye: it is truth. You are my witnesses (sayeth the Lorde) & my seruante, whome I haue chosyn, therefore be certified & geue me faithful credence, & consider * I am he, before whom there was neuer any God, and yther shalbe no ne after me. I am, euen I am the onely Lorde, & besyde me there is no saviour. I gaue warning I made whole, I taughte you, when there was no strange God amonge you. And thus record must ye beare vnto selues: (sayeth the Lorde) I am God. And euen he am I from the begyn-nyng, and * there is none that can take any thyng out of my hande. I do the worke and who shal be able to let it? Thus sayeth the Lorde the holy one of Israel your redeemer: * for your sake I haue sent to Babylon, and broughte downe the strongest of them. All they are fugityue with Chaldees that bost them of they wynges: Eue I the Lorde your holy one whiche haue made Israel, and am your kyng. Thus saith the Lorde (* Euen he that maketh a waye in y see, and a forepath in myghty waters) * whiche bygeth forth the charrettes and hostes, the host & the power of warre, that they maye fall & neuer rise, and be extincte, lyke a towne is quenched.

Remember not thynges of olde, and regard nothyng that is past: Beholde, I shall make a newe thyng, and shortly shall it appere, and shal you not knowe it? I wyl make streets in the desert, and riuers of water in the wilderness: The wylde beastes shal wyngre me: & dragons and the young & riches. * For I shal geue water in the wilderness, and streames in the desert I may geue drinke to my people, whome I thote This people haue I made for my selfe: and they shall be to my praise. For I (Jacob) wol-dest not call vpon me, but I haddest an vnliue to ward me, O Israel, Thou gauest me not thy bestes, for burnt offerings, neither didest honour me w thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no deere price with thy mony, neyther pouredst the sette of thy sacrifices vpon me. * Howche-

The xliij. Chapter.

Of the punishment of the people by Cyrus. The coming of Christ and calling of the gentes.

Thus

Ihus ſayeth the Lord vnto Cyrus his anointed, whom I haue taken by the right hand, to ſubdue nations beſore him. * I will loſe ſpyde of bynges and I wyl open the gates beſore his face, & not to ſhut their doores. I wil go beſore the, & make the croked ſtreight, I ſhall bryake the byſen doores, & burſt the yron barres. I ſhall geue the that hyd treaſure, and the thyng whiche is ſecretely kept, that thou mayſt knowe. I am the Lord God of Iſrael which haue called ſ by thy name and * that for Jacob my ſeruauntes ſake, & for Iſraell my choſen. For I called the by name & ordayned the: & euer thou kneweſt me. * Euen I the Lord beſore whom there is no other: for without me there is no God: I haue prepared: & euer thou kneweſt me, & I might be knowne fro the rſpyng of the ſonne to the goyng downe of the ſame, & all is nothyng without me. For I am the Lord, & there is elſe none. It is I that created the lyght & darcknes. I make peace and trouble: yee, euen I ſ Lord do all theſe thynges. Ye heauens from aboue droppe downe, & let the cloudes raine righteouſnes. The erth openeth it ſelf, & bryngeth forth healeth, & therby righteouſnes maye ſhew. Euen I the Lord brynging it to paſſe. * Who be vnto him that ſpurneth with his maker, the porter with the potter. Saith the clay to the potter: What makeſt thou of me? or the worche ſerueth for nothyng. Who be vnto him that ſaith to his father: Why begetteſt thou? And to his mother: Why bareſt thou? Thus ſayeth the Lord, euen the holy one & maker of Iſraell. Alke me of thynges for to come concerning my ſonnes: and put me in remembrance as touching the worches of my handes. I haue made the erth, & created man vpon it: With myne handes haue I ſpread forth heauen, and geuen a commaundement for all the hoſt thereof. I ſhall ſhake him vp with righteouſnes, and ordyne all his wayes. * He ſhall builde my citie, and let out my prſoners, and that neither for gyfte nor rewardes ſayth the Lord of hoſtes: Thus ſayth the Lord the occupiers of Egypt. The marchauntes of the Mozyans and Sabers, ſhall come vnto the with tribute, they ſhall be thyne: they ſhall ſolow the, and go with cheynes vpon their ſete. They ſhall ſal downe beſore the, and make ſupplication vnto the. For God without whom there is none other God ſhall be with the. * O howe profounde art thou O God, thou God and Bauioure of Iſrael: Confounded are they all, and put to diſhonour: they are gone hence together with ſhame, euen the makers of Images. But Iſraell ſhall be ſaued in the Lord: whiche is the euerlaſtyng ſaluacion. Ye ſhall not come to ſhame nor confuſion worlde wythoute ende. For thus ſayeth the Lord, * euen I created heauen the God I made the erth, that ſhadowed it, and let it forth. He dyd not make it for naught, but to be inhabited. Euen I the Lord without whoſe there is none other: I haue not ſpoken ſecretly neyther in darcke places of ſecret. It is not for naught, & I ſaid vnto the ſede of Jacob ſeke me

I am the Lord whiche when I ſpeake, declare the thynges: I am righteous and true, gather you and come together, draw nye heere, you ſ are eſcaped of ſ people. * Haue they any vnderſtan dyng, ſet vp the ſtocks of their Idoles, and pray vnto a god, & can not helpe the: draw nye come heere, & let them alke conſel one at another, & ſhewe forth: What is he ſ tolde this beſore: as who ſpake of it euer ſence ſ begynnyng haue not I the Lord doone it: * without whoſe there is none other God ſ true God & ſaluour, & there is elſe none but I. And therfore turne you vnto me (al pe endes of the earth) ſ ye may be ſaued: for I am God, and there is elſe none, I ſwear by my ſelfe, out of my mouth commeth the word of righteouſnes, & that no man may turne: * but all knees ſhall bowe vnto me, & all tonges ſhall ſwear by my name, ſaying: There ly, in the Lord is my righteouſnes & ſtrength. To him ſhall me come, but al they that thinke ſcorne of hym, ſhall be confounded. And ſ whole ſede of Iſrael ſhall be iuſtified, and make they: boalt in the Lord.

tis, are gadded vpon? God of Israel,* whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thynges that I shewed you euer sence passe immediately as they came out of my mouth and declared them: & they are come: howbeit, I knowe that they are obstinate, and that thy

Thou herdest it before and beholde, it is come

His name shulde not be rooted oute: noz destroyed before me. * So away from Babilon, saye the Caldees, with a mery voyce speake of this, declare it abroad, and go forth unto the ende of the world, saye ye: The Lord hath redeemed his seruant Jacob, that they suffered no shurte, he ledde them thozow the wyldernes, & caused the waters to flow out vnto them from out of the rocke. * He claue the rocke a sonder, & the water gushed out. * As for yf vngodly, they haue no peace, sayeth the Lord:

The xlii. Chapter.

¶ Christ shall gather together all paynes be they what so euer of.

Yhesu herchen vnto me, & take hede ye people fro farre. The Lord hath called me from my bythe, and made mencio of my name from my mothers wombe: he hath made my mouthe lyke a sharpe swerde vnder the shadow of his hande hath he defended me, and hidde me in his quyncer as a good arrowe, and sayde vnto me. Thou arte my seruant Israel. * I wyll be honoured in the. Then answered I: I haue lost my labour, I haue spent my strength in vayne.

Reuerberle I wil comit my cause and my worke vnto the Lord my God. And now sayeth the Lord, euen he that hath poned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruante, that I maye byng Jacob agayne vnto him: howbeit, Israel wil not be gathered vnto him again. In whose lyght I am great, whiche also is my Lord, my God & my strength. And he said: it is but a smal thyng that thou arte my seruant, to set vp the hyndredes of Jacob, & to restore the destructio of Israel. * For I haue made the yf lyght of the Gentiles, that thou maist be my helpe vnto the ende of the world.

Worow, thus sayeth the Lord the redeemer & holy one of Israel: because of the abhorryng & despying among the Gentiles, concernyng the seruant of all the that beare rule: kynge and princes shal se, and aryse and worchyp, because of the Lord that is faithful: and because of the holy one of Israel, which hath chosen the. And thus sayeth the Lord: * In the tyme accepted haue I herde the, & in the daye of saluacyon haue I helped the. * I wyl preserue the, & make the to be the attonement of the people, that thou mayst helpe by the earth agayne: and possesse agayne the desolate herpages. * That thou mayst saye to the pyloners: go forth, and to them that are in darcknes, come into the lyght, they shal fede in the hye wapes, and gette their pasture in all hye places.

* They shal neyther hunger noz thurst, heate noz sunne shal not hurt the. For he yf fauoureth the, shal leade the, & giue the drinke of yf spring of welis. I wil make waies vnto al my moztalnes, & my foote pathes shal be exalted. And behold they shal come from farre: lo, some from the north & west, some fro the lande of Syng, which is in the south: & they shal beauen: and they shal saye, thou earth. Talke of iope ye byles, for God hath comforted his people, & wyll haue mesty upon his that be in trouble.

But whil sayd, * God hath forsaht, & my lord hath forgott me. Whil a wife forget yf childe of her wombe, & not pitie the sonne who she hath borne: And though she do forget, yet wil I not forget the. Behold, I haue writen the vp vnto my hilles, thy wallies are euer in my sight. They make hast to builde the vp again. As for those yf ouer the we the, & made the wast, they shal be parte from the. * Lyfte vp thine eies, & looke about the: al these gather the together & come to the. And therfore thus saith yf Lord God: Behold I wyl stretch out myne hande to the Gentiles and set vp my token to the people. They shal byng the thy sonnes in their lappes: and carpe thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kinges shal be thy nursyng fathers, & queenes shal be thy nursyng mothers. They shal sal before the with their faces flas vnto the earth: yf lyke vnto the dust of thy feet: that thou mayest know how that I am the Lord. * And whoso putteth his trust in me shal not be confounded. Who spied the graut of his praye: or who taketh the prisoner from the myghtye? And therfore thus saith the Lord: The prisoners shal be taken from the graunt: and the spoule deliuered from the violent, for I wyl maintayne thy cause against thyne aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And wyl fede thyne enemies with their owne fleshe, & make them drinke of their owne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all fleshe shal knowe, O Jacob, that I am the Lord, thy saupour, thy noble redeemer.

The Prophecie.

When I was angry, I hid my face from you for a little season, but your iniquities shall not be forgotten. I have pardoned your iniquities, and this is unto me as the water of flood, for I have sworn that I will not be angry with you, nor will I be angry with you. The mountains shall remove and the hills shall fall down: but my lovingkindness shall not move, and the bond of my peace shall not fall down from me, saith the Lord, thy merciful lover. Behold, thou poor overthrown with tempest and without comfort: I will make thy walls of precious stones, and thy foundation of sapphires, thy windows of crystal, thy gates of fine clear stone, and all thy borders of pleasant stones.

Thy children shall all be taught of God, and I will give them plentifulness of peace. In righteousness shalt thou be grounded, and be later thou shalt oppress no man, for which I need not to be afraid, neither for mine honour, for it shall not come upon me. Behold, the almeat was farre from me, shall dwell with thee, and he shall joineth battle against thee, shall perish. Behold, I make the sun to be scorched, and the cooles in the fire, and he maketh a weape after his handy worck. I make also the water to be drye: but all the weapons that are made against thee, shall not prosper. And as for all tongues, I shall resist thee in judgement, I shall overcome them: and condemn them. This is the heritage of the Lordes seruantes, and their righteousnes cometh of me, saith the Lord.

Chapter. lvi.

A consolacion and comfort to the people. The feigne and vaine of the waste of Gode.

Come to the waters all ye that be thirsty, and ye that haue no money. Come by that ye may haue to eate. Come, buye wine and milke without any money, or any worth, wherfore do ye laye out your money for thing that feedeth not, and spende your labour about thing that satisfieth you not? But hearken, hearken rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the best, and your soule shall haue her pleasure in plentifulnes. Encline your eares, and come vnto me, take heede (I saye) and your soule shall lyue. For I will make an euerylastyng covenant with you euen the sure mercies of Dauid.

Behold, I gaue him for a witness among the folke, for a prince and captayne vnto the people. Lo thou shalt call an vknownen people, and a people that had no knowledge of the waye runne vnto thee, because of the Lord thy God, and the holy one of Israel, whiche glorified thee. Heke the Lord while he may be founde: and call vpon him while he is neere. Let the vngodly man forsake his owne wayes, and the vnpurgedous hye owne ymaginations, and turne agayne vnto the Lord, so that he be merciful vnto him, and to our god, for he is verie ready to forgive.

For thus sayth the Lord: my thoughtes are not your thoughtes, and your wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyer the earth, so farre do my wayes exceede your wayes, and my thoughtes yours. And like as the raine and snowe cometh downe from heauen, and returneth not thither againe but watereth the earth, maketh it fruitful and grene, it maye geue com to the sower, and beare to him that eateth: so the word also that cometh out of my mouth, shall not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shall accomplysh the my will and prosper in the thing whereto I sende it.

And so shall ye go forth with ioye, and be led with peace. The mountains and hills shall sing with you for ioye, and all the trees of the fild shall clappe their hands. For thornes ther shall growe as yere trees: and the thickett in the steade of briers. And this shall be done to you for the sake of the Lord, and for an euerylastyng token, that shall not be taken awaye.

Chapter. lvi.

A propheticall vision to the people of the house of Israel, and to the synners of the house of Judah.

Thus sayth the Lord: I have equitie and do righte, for my sayyng shall come to pass, and my righteousnes shall be opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans childe whiche heperth the same. He that taketh heed, that he vnhalowe not the Saboth (that is) he that heperth him selfe that he do none euil. Then shall not I be a stranger, whiche cleaueth to the Lord, saith the Lord. Alas the Lord hath sent me cleane out fro his people, neither shall the grided man saye: loo, I am a drye tree. For thus sayeth the Lord vnto the grided that heperth my Saboth, namelye that holdeth greatly of the thing that pleaseth me, and heperth my covenant: vnto them will I geue in my household, and within my walls, a better heritage and name then if they had ben called sonnes and daughters. I will geue them an euerylastyng name, that shall not perishe. Againe the strangers that sticke to the Lord, to seru hym, and to loue his name: and to be his seruantes. And all they which kepe the selues, they vnhalowe not the Saboth, namelye, that they fulfill my covenant. Then will I bring to my holy mountayne, and make the ioyful in my house of prayer. Their burnt offerings and sacrifices shall be accepted vnto mine altar. For my house shall be called a house of prayer for all people. Thus sayeth the Lord God whiche gathereth together and scattered of Israel: I will bring yet another congregacion to him. Come all ye beastes of the fild, that ye may deuour all the beastes of the wood. For his watchmen are all blind, they haue altogether no vnderstandyng, they are all dome dogges, not being able to bark: they are sleppe dogges, they are they, and I knowe they are sleppe dogges, that be neuer satysfied. The sheperdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandyng, but euery man turneth his owne waye, euery one after his owne counselnes with all his power. Come (saye they) I will fetch wyne, so shall we fyll our selues: we maye be drunken. And do so moche like as to daye: yet, and much more.

C The. lvi. Chapter.

C The James are written for they saye thus to Elay.

The righteous periseth, & no man regardeth it in his heart. Good godly people are taken away, and no man conlydeth it. Namely, that p'p'gious is conveyed away fro the world. He commeth into peace, and godly men rest in their chaumbres, and befoze the godlye man goeth peace. Come hither therfoze ye charmers chyldren, * ye sonnes of the aduoutrye, and the whoze: wherein take ye your pleasure: vpon whō gape ye with your mouth, and bleare out poure tongue: Are ye not chyldren of aduoutrye? And a seed of dissimulation? * Ye make your face vnder the oke, and vnder all grene trees, and ye offer chyldren in the valleys and denes of stone. Thy parte shalbe with the stony rocky by the river. Yea, euen these shalbe thy parte. For ther thou hast poured meate and drynke offeryng vnto them. Shoulde I delyte in that? Thou haste made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wastest vpon thyder, and there thou hast staine sacrifices. * Behynde the dozes and postes hast thou set by thy remembrance.

When thou haddest discovered thy selfe to another the same, when I wentest by, & made thy bed wider, & with those yholes hast thou made a counsaile, & I ouerthrew thy couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest straight to henges with * oyle & diuers opyntmentes, that is, thou hast sent thy messenges farre of, & yet arte thou fallen into the pitte therby. Thou art deuy for the multitude of thine owne wates, yet saydest thou neuer, I wil leane of. * Thou hast had the life that thy handes wrought, & therfoze I arte carelesse. For when wilt I be a bawd of leare, seing thou hast broken thy promise, and remembrest not me, neither hast me in thine heart. Thinkest thou, that I also wil holde my peace, as a foze tune, that thou fearest me not? Yea, verely I wyll declare thy goodnesse & thy wozhes, but they shall not prosper the: when thou expest, let thy chosen hope deliuer the. But the winde shal blowe them away, and vanitie shal take them al away. * Reuerendeste, they put their trust in me, shal enherite the lande: and haue my holpe byll in possession.

And therfoze thus he sayeth: * Waire playne, make playne: & cleane the street, take vpon thy shuldryng bloches oute of the way & leade to my people. For thus sayeth the hye and excellent, euen he dwelleth in eternall yugnesse, whose name is the holy one: * I dwell hye aboue: and in the sanctuary, and with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirite do I dwel: that I may heale a troubled mynde, & a contrite heart. * For I chide not ruer, and am not wroth with out ende. But the blasfyming goeth from me: and is included in the body, and I made the breath. I am ioyful with him for his courtesynesse. I smyte him, I hyde me, & am angry, whē he turneth him selfe, and foloweth the by waye of his owne herte. I haue sene his wayes, and I heale him. * I leade him, and restore so hym comfort, and to those that were soye with him. I make the frutes of thanksgyuyng, that he may say: Peace, peace: vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nyghe, sayeth the Lord, and I make him whole. But the wyched are like the ragyng sea, that can not reste, whose water is meted with the myze and grauell. * Euen so the wyched haue no peace, sayeth God.

C The. lvi. Chapter.

C The Lord by the mouth of the prophet requyeth the people for they saye thus, wherby haue we full of yugnesse.

Gyre * nowe as loude as thou canst, & leane not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, & shewe my people theyr synnes. For they seke me dayly, and wyl know my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd right, & had not forsaken the statutes of theyr God. They argue with me concerning right indgement, and wyl be nye vnto God. * Wherfoze fast we (saye they) and thou seest it not: we put our lyues to strapnesse, and thou regardest it not.

* Behold, when ye fast, your lust remaineth: I saye, so ye do no lesse violence to your betters: lo ye fast to tryfe & debate, & to synne w'ch fyt of wychednesse. Howe ye shall not faste thus that you maye make your voyce be heard aboue. * Thinke ye this fast pleaseth me, & a man shuld chaunge him selfe to a daye, & to wite his deed about lyke a boke, & to lye vpon fardyn in an heare cloth? Shoulde that be called fastyng, or a daye that pleaseth the Lord? Woe is not this fastyng rather please me, & thou & loose him oute of bondage, that is in thy danger: that I maye the othe of wyched bargaynes: that thou let the oppressed go free, & take from the all maner of burthen: & so deale thy byeed to the hungry, and bypunge the poore wandryng, home into thynne house: when thou seest I named that thou couer him, & hyde not thy face from thy neyghboure, (and sayest not thynne name) (lyk.)

* Then shal thy light breake forth as the moyning, & thy teache shal right woztly, thy right counseile shal go before the, and the glory of I Lord shal embayre the. * The yf thou callest, I Lord shal answeere the: yf I cryest, he shal saye: here I am. Yea, yf thou layest away fro the thy burthens, and holdest thy fyngers, * cease fro blasphemous talkyng, yf thou haste compassid vpon the hungry, and refrehest the troubled soule: Then shal the lyghte spyrng oute in the darkenesse, & the darkenesse shalbe as the none day. The Lord shal euer be thy guide, & satisfy I desire of thine heart in p'tyme of drought & fyl thy bones w' mary. Thou shalt be like a frese watered garde: lyke I fountaine of water I neuer leaue thy dryng. Then the places I haue euer ben waste shalbe builded of the: there shalt thou lay a foudacion for many kynreds. Thou shalt be called the maker vpon of bedges, and the buylder agayne of the wape of the Saboth.

Moreover, those shal come kneeling vnto the, that haue heretofore: and all they that despi sed the, shal fall downe at thy fete. Thou shalt be called the cyrie of the Lorde. Upon the cyrie of the holy one of Israell. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated: so that no man wence thow the: I wyl make the glorious for ever and ioyfull thow without all paternties. * Thou shalt luche the mylie of the Gentyles, and kin ges brestes shal fete the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lorde am thy sauoure and redemer the mighty one of Jacob. For I wyl geue the golde, and for yron I wyl geue wood brasse, and for stones yron. I wyl turne thine oppres syon into peace, and thine cracions into ryghte outnes. Violence & robbery shal neuer be heard of in thy lande, neyther harme and destruccion within thy borders. Thy walles shal be called helthe, and thy gates the prayse of God. * The sunne shal neuer be thy daylyght: and the lyght of the mone shal neuer thine vnto the: but the Lorde hym selfe shal be thine euerlastyng light and thy God shal be thy glorye.

* The sunne shal neuer goe downe, and the mone shal not be hyd: for I the Lorde hym selfe shal be thine euerlastyng lyght, and thy sorowfull dayes shal be ended. Thy people shal be al righ teous & possesse thy lande ever, the flower of my plantynge: the worke of my handes, wherof I wyl reioyce. The pondeit and least shal grow into a thousand, and the symplest into a strong people: I the Lorde shal woxtely bypge this thyng to passe in this tyme.

¶ The prophete that shal be anointed & sent to preache.

I the spirit of the Lorde God is vpon me, for the Lorde hath anointed me, and sent me to preache good thynges vnto the poore, that I myght bynde vp the wounded hertes: that I myght preache deliuerance to the captiue, & open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable yere of the Lorde, and the daye of vengeance of our God: that I myght com forte all them that are in deuynes, that I might geue vnto them that mourne in Syon, that I myght geue I saye bewep in steade of ashes, ioy full oynment for sygging, pleasaunt raiment for an heup mynde. That they myght be called trees of ryghteousnes, a plantynge of the Lorde for hym to reioyce in.

They shal bynde the longe rougher wilder nes, & set vp the wild desert, they shal repaire þ wast places, & such as haue bene voide thow oute many generacions. Strangers shal stand and fede your catell, and the Aleuantes shal be your plowmen & dyers of your vines. * But ye shal be named þ priestes of the Lorde, & men shal call you the seruantes of our God. Ye shal enioye the goodes of the Gentyles, & triumphe in theyr substance. For your greates reioyce you shal haue double ioye, and for thame shal they haue ioye of theyr poepon. For they shal haue double possesyon in theyr lande, & euerlastyng ioye shal be with them. For I the Lorde which loue ryghte & hate robbery: though it were offered me, shal make theyr workes full of fayth fulnesse and make an euerlastyng couenaunte with them.

* He shal decke me lyke a bydegrome & as a byde that hath her apparell vpon her. For lyke as the grounde bynggeth forth frute, and as the garden woteth forth sede: so shal I the Lorde cause ryghteousnes, and praple to flosythe forth before all the heathen.

¶ The. lxi. Chapter.

I the Lorde shal reioyce for I not holde my tounge and for Ierusalem sake: I wyl not cease vntill they ryghteousnesse byake for the as the byrning lyghte, and theyr saluacy on as a byrning lampe. Then shal I Gentiles se thy ryghteousnes, and all kynges thy glorie. Thon shalt be named w a newe name, which the mouth of the Lorde shal shew. Thon shalt be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, & a glorious garland in the hand of thy God. And this tyme forth thou shalt neuer be called the forsaken, & thy lande shal be nomore called the wyldernes: but thou shalt be called my pleasure is in her: & thy land shal be called þ maryed woman, for the Lorde loneth the and thy lande shal be ioynd in maryage. * And lyke as a ponge man taketh a daughter to maryage, so shal thy sonne be ma ried vnto the. And as a bydegrome is glad of his byde, so shal thy God reioyce ouer the.

I haue set watchmen vpon thy walles (O Ierusalem) which shal neyther cease day nor nyghte to preache the Lorde. And ye also that remembre the Lorde, ye shal not hepe hym close nor leaue to speake of hym vntill Ierusalem be set vp, & made the prayse of the world. The Lorde hath sworn by his ryght hand & by his strong arme, that fro henceforth he wyl not geue thy cozne to be meat for thine enemies, nor thy vine (wherin thou hast laboured) to be dynke for the strangers. But they that haue gathered in the cozne shal eate it, and geue thanks vnto the Lorde and they þ haue bozne in the wyne, shal dynke it in the courte of my Sanctuarie.

So you go you thow w gates make cleane the way for þ people, make plaine, make plaine the fote path, and take away the stones out of it, and set out a token for the people.

The Prophecye.

the Sauoure cometh: behold, he byngeth his treasure with hym, and his woordes go before hym. For they whome the Lord deliuereth shall be called the holy people: and as for the, shall be named the greatly occupied, and not the forsaken cytie.

The .lxiii. Chapter.

Of the redemption promised to the people.

What is he this, that cometh from Edon, with red colored clothes of Bosra: (which is so collyre cloth) and cometh in so myghtely with all his strength. I am he that teacheth righteousness, and am of power to helpe. Wherfore then is thy clothing red, & thy rayment lyke his that treadeth in the wine presse? I haue troden the presse my selfe alone, and of all people there is not one with me.

Thus will I treade downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set my fete vpon them in my indignacion. And they: bloude shall be sprunge my clothes, and so will I stayne al my raiment.

* For the daye of vengeance is assigned in my herte, and the yere when my people shall be deliuered is come. I looked aboute me, and there was no man to shewe me any helpe: I marueled that no man helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my strength sufficed me. And thus will I treade downe the people in my wrath, and bary them in my displeasure, & vpon the earth will I laye the strength.

* I will declare the goodnes of the Lord, per, and the prayse of the Lord for all that he hath geuen vs, for the great good that he hath done for Israel: whiche he hath geuen them of his owne fauour, and accordyng to the multitude of his louynge kyndnesse. For he sayde: These no doubte are my people, and no thinking chyl dren, & so he was they: sauour. In they: troubles, he was also troubled with them, and the angell that went forth from his presence deliuered them: Of very lone and kyndnes that he had vnto the, he redeemed the. He hath bozned them and carped them vp, ever since the world began. But after they prouoked him to wrath and vexed his holy mynde, he was they: enemy and foughte agaynst the hymself. Per remembred Israel the olde tyme of Moses and his people.

* saying: Where is he that broughte them from the water of the see? With them yfede his shepe where is he that hath geuen his holy sperte amonge them: he led them by the ryght hande of Moses with his glayous arme: demyng the water before them (wherby he gaue hym self an euerlastyng name) he led them in: he depe, as an hoyle is led in the playn, & they shulde not stumble as a tame beaste goeth in the felde: and the byeth geuen of God, geue them rest.

Thus (O God) haue thou led thy people, to make thy self a glayous name whichal. * Loke downe then from heauen, and beholde the dwellinge place of thy Sanctuarye, and thy glayous house is it that thy glospe, thy strength, the multitude of thy mercyes, and thy louynge kyndnes will not be entreated of vs: Per arte & out father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neither is Israel acquainted with vs. But O Lord, art our father and redeemer, and thy name is euerlastyng. O Lord, * Wherfore hast thou led vs out of thy waye: Wherfore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare & not? We at one with vs agayne, for thy seruantes sake, & for the generacyon of thyne heritage. Thy people haue had but a lytle of thy Sanctuarye in possession: for oure enemyes haue troden downe the holpe place. And we were thine from the begynnyng when thou wast not they: Lord, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

The .lxiiii. Chapter.

Of the prophecies vnder the person of the Jewes, wherby they are called and banished. Wherby they are called is by a cloth dyed with the colour of a woman.

What thou wilt cleane the Heauen in sondre, and come downe: that the mountaynes myghte melt a waye at thy presence, lyke as an whote syer: and that the malicious myght boyle as the water doeth vpon the fyre.

Wherby thy name might be knowne among thyne enemyes, and that the Gentyles myghte tremble before the. When thou wroughtest wonders straunge woordes, we looked not for them. Thou camest downe, and the hylls melted at thy presence. For since the begynnyng, of the world it hath not bene heard or perceiued, neither hath anye eie sene another god besid which doeth so much for them & put they: trust in the.

Thou helpest hym that doeth ryghte with cheartynesse and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But loo: thou hast bene angrye, for we offended, and haue bene euer in synne, though I wolde haue cleaved to them: per that we be saued. We are all as an vnclane thyng: all our ryghteousnes are as the clothes stayned with floures of a woman, we fall euerychone as the leafe for our synnes carpe vs a waye lyke & wynde.

There is no man that called vpon thy name that standeth vp to take hold by the. Therefore hidest thou thy face from vs, and consumed vs because of our synnes. But now, O Lord, thou father of ours: we are thy claye, and & art oure potter, & we all are the worke of thy handes.

* Be not so sore displeased (O Lord) & kepe not oure offences to longe in thy remembrance: but consider that we are all thy people. The cyte of thy Sanctuarye lyeth wast: Zion is a wil dernes, & Jerusalem a deserte. Oure holy house which is our deuote, where our fathers prayed the, is byente by: pee all oure commodities and pleasures are wasted a way. Wylt thou not be intreated (Lord) for all this: Wylt thou holde thy peace and scooge vs so for?

The .lxv. Chapter.

Of the furye of Jerusalem and the calling of the heathen.

Thy seke me, that byther to haue not asked for me, they synde me & byther to haue not soughte me, I haue sayde I am here, I am here. I am found of a people & neuer called vpon my name. For thus long haue I neuer holden out my handes to an vn faythful people that go not the ryght way, but after after their owne ymaginations: To a people is euer desynge me to my face. * They make their oblations in gardens, & their smoke vpon alters of bypche, they lurke among the graues: & lye in theyr dennes all night. * They eat swynes fleshe: & vncleane borsch is in theyr vessels. If thou comest npe them, they sape touche me not: for I am holper then thou.

All these men when I am angry, shalbe turned to smoke and * fyre that shal burne for euer.
Behold, it is witten before my face, & shal not be forgotten, but recompensed. * I shal reward it them into theyr bosome: I meane your misde-des, and the mysdoes of your fathers together (sayth the Lord) which haue made theyr smokes vpon the mountaines, and blasphemed me vpo the hylls: therfore wyl I measure their old de-des into theyr bosome againe. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord: * lyke as when one wolde gather holy grapes, men sape vnto him: bzeah it not of, for it is holy: * euen so wyl I do also for my seruantes sakes, that I wyl not destroye them all. But I wyl take a sede out of Jacob & out of Iuda one, to take possession of my hyll.

My chosen shal possesse these thynges & my ser-uantes shal dwell there. Foron shalbe a shepe solde, and the valley of Achor shal geue & shal lyng for the cattell of my people that feare me.

But as for you, ye are they & haue forsake the Lord, & forgotten my holy byl. Ye haue set vp an alter vnto Iuppiter, and greuen riche drink offerings vnto the planetes. Therfore wyl I nombe you with the sward, that ye shalbe destroyed all together. For when I called, noman gaue me answer: whē I spake, ye hardened not vnto me but byd wchdednesse before mine eyes and chose the thyng that pleased me not.

Therfore, thus saith the Lord God: Beholde my seruantes shal eat, but ye shal haue hunger Behold, my seruantes shal drinke, but ye shal suffer thyrst. Behold, my seruantes shal be mery but ye shalbe confounded. Behold, my ser-uantes shal reioyce for a very quyetnes of hert but ye shal crye for: for sothe of hert: & complain for vexatio of mid. Your name ye shal leaue ac-ursed amonge my chosen, for God the Lord shal sape you, and call his seruantes by another name. * Whoso reioyleth vpon earth, shal reioyle in the true God. And whoso sweareth vpon earth shal swear in the true God. For the olde enemye shalbe forgotten, and taken awaye out of my syghte: * For so, I wyl make a herte heauen and a newearth. And as for the olde, they shal neuer be thought vpon, nor kept in mynd: but the Lord sayth: be glad and curmore reioyle, for the thynges & I shal do.

For why? Beholde, I shal make a iopfull Jerusalem, and his people iopful: yee, I my selfe wyl reioyle with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people. * And the voyce of wepyng & waylyng shal not be heard in her from thence forth.
There shal neither be chyldre, nor olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chyldre commeth to an. C. yere olde it shal dye. And yf be that is an. C. yere of age do dyong he shalbe curied. * They shal buyde houses and dwell in them they shal plant vineyardes, and eate the frute of them: They shal not buyde and another possesse: they shal not plant, & another eate.

* But the lyfe of my people shalbe lyke a tree, and so shal the worke of theyr handes.

My chosen shal lyue longe, they shal not laboure in vayne, nor beget with trouble: for they are the hygh blessed seide of the Lord, and theyr frutes with theim. And if shalbe, that ouer they call, I shal answere them.

Whyle they are yet but thynkyng how to speake, I shal heare them. * The wolfe and the lambe shal fede together, and the Lyon shal eat haye lyke the bullocke. * But earth shalbe the serpentes meate. There shal no man hurte nor slay another, in al my holy byl, saith the Lord.

The lvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes handes. He despyseth sacrifices done withoute mercy and faith. God con-fute them that are troubled for his sake, and charge the Chyrtians the sheweth in continuall.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * Heauen is my seate, and the earth is my foote.
I ole, where shal now & house stand that ye wyl buyde vnto me? And where shalbe the place that I wyl dwell in. As for these thynges my hande hath made them all and they are all created, sayeth the Lord.

Whiche of them shal I then regarde? Euen hym that is pooze & of a lowlye troubled spere and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so sayeth an oxe for me doth me so greate dyho-nour as he that killeth a man. He that killeth a shepe for me, knetteth a dogge. He that byn-geth me meatofferings, offereth swines bloude.

Whoso maketh me a memoziell of incence, prayseth the thyng that is vnyghee. Per take they such thynges in hande, and theyr soule de-lyteth in these abominacions.

Therfore wyl I also haue pleasure in laugh-yng them to scoone, and & thyng that they feare wyl I byyng vpon them. * For when I called no manguere answer: when I spake they wold not heare: But did wickednesse before mine eyes and chose the thynges that displease me. Heare the woide of the Lord all that feare the thyng whiche he speaketh. Pour brethren & hate you and cast you oute for my names sake, say: The Lord is greuous agaynst vs: but you shal see hym in ioye when they shalbe confounded.

Then shalbe heard a great noyse from the cyrte and the temple, the voyce of the Lord, that wyl reward, and recompence his enemies, lyke as whē a wyfe bringeth forth a man child or euer she suffre the payne of the byrth, and an guyd of the traull. Whoe euer hearde or sawe inche thynges: doth & ground beare in one day, or are the people bozne at once, as Dion translated in chyldre byrth & bare her sonnes: For thus sayeth the Lord.

Am I he that maketh order to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh barren: sayeth the Lord? Reioyle with Jerusalem, & be glad with her, all ye that loue her: * Be iopful with her, al ye & mourned

The floods of Jeremy, in such time as prospereth. He excuseth himself, and heere crieth the officer of a pougher, because he is poorer a husband. He is taught of the Lord, and heerein hee is God opened unto him, that the bestowment of the Ieremy by the Babylonians is at hande. Jeremy is commanded to spend the wealth of God unto the Ieremy without faile.

These are sermons of Jeremy the sonne of helkiah the priest one of them that dwelt at A-nathoth in the lande of Ben Jamyn when the Lozde had by yt spoken woth hym in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon: kyng of Iuda, in the thyrtyent yere of hys reigne: and so during vnto the tyme of Jeioiakym the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, * and vntyll the xi. yere of iehoshiah the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda were ended, when Je-rusalim was taken, euem in the fyfte moneth.

The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me. * Before I shoyoned p in thy mothers wombe I dyd knowe the. And o: euer thou wast bozne I sanctified the, & ordeined the to be a prophet vnto the people. Then sayd I: * Oh Lord God I cannot speake, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lord answered me thus. Saye not so I am yong. * For I wale go to all that I shall sende the vnto: & what soeuer I comaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of theyr faces. For I am w the to deliuer the saith e Lord.

* And with that, the Lord stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & the same Lord sayde vnto me: Beholde, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and beholde: this daye doo I set thee ouer the people & kyngdomes that thou mayest roote out, breake of, destroy and make waste: & that thou mayest builde vp and plante. After this the Lord spake vnto me, saying: Jeremy what seest thou? And I sayde: I see a rod of an almonde tree. Then sayde the Lord vnto me: Thou hast sene ryght, for I wyl make hast & be deli upon my word, to performe it.

It happened afterward that a Lozde spake to me agayn, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I dole a seshynge a pot lokyng frome Joh. ma out of the Rothe.

Then saith the Lord vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plague vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For so, * I will call all the heerereds of the kingdomes of the North (saith the Lord). And they shall come, and euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Ierusalem, in theyr walles rounde aboute, and in all the cyties of Iuda. And thozowe them shall I declare my iudgement vpon all synners of those men that haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incense vnto straunge goddes, and worshipped of women of theyr owne handes.

* And therefore graue vp thy loynes, arys & tell them all, that I graue the in commaundment * Feare them not, lest I destroy the before them.
 * For behold, this day do I make the a strong for her. For ye shall sucke comforte oute of her brestes, and be satisfied. Ye shall eate, and haue driete in the plentifullnesse of her power. For thus saith the Lord: beholde, I will let peace into her lyke a water founte and the mighte of the breaste lyke a flowing streame. Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be bozne vpon her sides, and be ioyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chyld is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you and ye shall be comforted in Ierusalem. And when ye se this, your heart shall reioyse, and your bones shall say: helpe an herde.

Thus shall the hande of the Lord be knowne amonge his seruantes, and his indignacyon amonge his enemyes. For beholde, the Lord shall come with fyre, & bys sparret shall be lyke a whyle wynde, that he maye recompence his vengeaunce in his wyath, and his indignacyon with the flamme of fyre. For the Lord shall Iudge all fleshe wth the fyre, and wth bys sweard, and there shall be a great nombre slaine of y Lord. Such as haue made the selues holy and cleane in y gardens, and those y haue eaten swynes fleshe, myce, and other abhominacions, these shall come and see my glozpe. Unto them shall I geue a token and sende a certayn of the (that be deliuered) amonge the Gentiles: into

* The Iles farre off, þ haue not heard speake of me, and haue not sent me glorie, þal preach my praise amonge þ Gentiles and shall bring al your birthzen for an offering vnto the Lord our of all þ people, vpon hoises: charettes, hoise lytters, vpon mules, and carres to Ierusalem my holy hyl (saith the Lord) lyke as the chyl- dren of Israel, bring the offering in cleane ves- selles to the house of the Lord.

* And I shall take oute certayne of theim for to be preestes and Leuytes sayeth the Lorde.

For I haue as y newe heauen, and the newe earth whiche I wyll make, shalbe faste stablished by me, (sayeth the Lord): And shall poure fede and poure name contynue, and there shalbe a newe (1) one for the order, and a newe Sabbath for the other, and all like shall come to worshippe before me, (sayeth the Lord). And they shall goe forth, and loke vpon the carions of them that haue transgressed agaynst me. * For they woymes shall not dye, neyther shall their fyre be quenched, and all fleshe shall abhorre them.

defenced towne, an yron pyller & a brasse wall agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kynge and myghtye men of Iuda, agaynst the prestes and people of the lande. They shall fyghte against y, but they shall not be able to ouercome the: for I am with the to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

¶ God reuerend by himselfe thus saith the Lorde agaynst the prestes and scholeres, as preschers of the lawe and people of the lande. The Lorde is destroyed, because they haue said, and because they shall be a wretched people.

I Ozer, the word of y Lorde came vnto me, saying: Go thy way, crye in the eares of Ierusalem, and saye thus sayeth the Lorde: I remember the, for the kynnesse of thy yowthe and because of thy steadfast loue, at the tyme of thy despoiling, in that thou folowest me thorough the wyldernesse, in an vntyled lande. Israel was an halowed chynge vnto the Lorde, and so was his spalte frutes. * All they that denounce Israel shall offende: my fortune shall fall vpon them, sayeth the Lorde. Here therefore the word of the Lorde. O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacions of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde.

What vnclapthulnesse founde yon fathers in me, that they went so farre away fro me, follyng to lyghenesse, and being so vaine? They thought not in theyr hartes: Where haue we left the Lorde y brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte: that led vs thowth y wildernesse, thro-rough a desert and rough lande thowth a drye and a deadly lande: yea a lande y no man had gone thowth, and wherein no man had dwelt.

And when I had broughte you into a pleasaunte wel buylde lande, that ye myght enioy the frutes and all the comodities of the same ye went forth and despyled my lande y broughte myne herbage to abhominacion.

The prestes them selues saide not: Where is the Lorde? They that had the law in theyr han-des knowe me not: The shepherdes offended a gaynste me. The prophetes dyd serupe vnto Baal, and folowed such thynges as shal bring them no profyte.

Wherfore, I am constrainyd (sayeth the Lorde) to make my cōplaynt vpon you, & vpon your chyldren chyldren: Go into the ples of Cedrim, and loke well: sende vnto Cedar, take by lygent hede: & se whether such thynges be done there, whether the Gentyles the selues deale so falsely and vntroly with theyr goddes (which yet ar no goddes in dede.) But my people haue griuen ouer theyr hye honoure for a thyng that maye not helpe them.

Be astonysht, O ye heauens, be afraied & ashamed at suche a thyng, sayeth the Lorde. For my people haue done it, ruyles. They haue forsaken me the well of y water of lyfe, and dyg-ged them pyttes: yea vyse and broken pyttes, y can holde no water. Is Israel a bond seruante of one of the householde?

Why the is he so spoiled? Why do they raze & cry then vpon hym as a yon? They haue made his land wast, * his cities are so bent vp, that there is no man dwelling in the. Yee, the chyldren of Moab and Taphnes haue despyled thy nerche.

Commeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, ever sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypte to drinke the water of Asyria? Eytter what in thet thou in the waye of Asyria? To drinke the water of y floude Thyne owne wychednes shal reioyce the,

and thy curyngge a waye shal condemne the,
that thou mayst knowe and vnderstande, how euell and hurtfull a thyngge it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, & not feared hym, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. * I haue euer broken thy yoke of olde, and burst thy bondes: yet sayest thou: * I wyll nomore offende, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest aboute vpon all drye hylls, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the a noble vine and a good roote whose seds is all saythfull. * Howe arte thou turned then into a bytter vntreutful & strange grape? Yee, and that so soze: that though thou waldest with Asyrians, and make thy selfe to saunoure with that swete smelling herbe of ro-serb: yet in my syght thou art stained with thy wychednes, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not now, I am not vncleane, and I haue not folowed Baal. * Looke vpon thyne owne wayes in the woodes, valleyes, and den-nes, so shalt thou knowe, what thou hast done Thou art lyke a swifte dyonary, that goeth easily by his waye, and thy wantonnes is lyke a wyld ass, that vseth the wyldernesse, and that smoketh & bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the? All they that seke the shall not saye, but fynde th: in thyne owne vncleannes. Keepe thou thy selfe from nakednesse, and thy throte from thyngge, and wrythout shame thou answereste.
So, for I haue loued strangers and them wyll I folowe.

Lyke as the thefe that is taken with the dede cometh to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusyon: the comen people, theyr kinges and rulers, theyr prestes and prophetes.

For they sape to a stocke, thou art my father: and to a stone, thou hast begotten me, * yee: they haue turned theyr backe vpon me, and not theyr face. * Woe in the tyme of theyr trouble when they sape stande vp, and helpe vs: I shall answere them. Where art now thy gods, that thou hast made y let them stand vp & helpe the in the tyme of nede (yf they be able). * For loke howe many cities thou hast (O Iuda) so many gods hast thou also.

Wherfore then wyll ye gooe to latwe with me, sayng ye all are synners agaynst me sayeth the Lorde. It is but losse labour, that I synne your chyldren, for they receiue not my correccio.

Poure stowe swerde destroyed youre prophetes lyke a denouryngge Lyon. O ye people: looke vpon the word of the Lorde. Am I then become a wyldernes vnto the people of Israel? or a lande that hath no lyght? Wherfore sayth my

my people then: we are Lordes, we wyl come no more vnto the: Woerth a mayden forget her rayment, as a byrde her stomacher: But as for my people, they haue forgotten my dayes (innumerable. Wherfore thou thy wayes so high: lye (to optayne sauour there thowome) when thou haste per stayned them with blasphemies and teachest thyne owne wayes:

¶ Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of pooze and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all their places. Perdarest thou say: I am a gyftelesse. Tuthe his wyath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I condemne the in Judgemente because thou darest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to & fro to change thy wayes? For thou shalt be confounded as wel of Egypt, as of the Assyrians: yet, thou shalt go thy waye from them: and smite thyne handes together vpon thyne head. Because thou dost abhorre that confidence and hope of thine and thou shalt not prosper withall.

The iii. Chapter.

¶ God byng mercifull callith vnto repentance his people, whiche he had forsaken for theyr iniquities with phara. The exhorteth Israel vnto repentance promysynge therein the pashopp that shall haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God confessynge theyr offence.

¶ Omenly, & when a man putteth a waue by a wyfe, and she goeth from hym, and maryeth with another: then the questyon is: Shuld he resort vnto her anye more after that? Is not his teide then defyled and vnclean? But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers: yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lorde. Lyfte vp thyne eyes vnto the heylens and loke yf thou be not defyled with whoredom: Thou hast wayped for them in the stretes, and as a murdres in the wybernes. Thowome thy whoredome and shamefull blasphemies, is the blande defyled.

¶ This is the cause that the rayne and eueryng dewe hath ceased. Thou haste gotten the an whores fordeade and wylte not be ashamed. Ellys woldest thou say vnto me: O my father thou art he that hast brought me vp, and leade me from my poud: Wilt thou the put me away, and cast me of for euer? O wylte thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane from me? Heerecheleste, thou speakest suche wordes, but thou art euer doynge woyle and woyle.

¶ The Lorde saide also vnto me: in the tyme of Josaphat the kynge haste thou sene what the rebellyon of Israel hath done: howe the harthe runne vp vpon the hylls, and amonge all the thycktrees, and there played the harlot, hast thou sene also (when she had done all this) howe I saide vnto her: that she shulde turne again vnto me, and yet she is not returned.

¶ Juda that vnfaithfull syster of hers also saue this: namelye, that after I had well sene the aduouty of the whynckynge harlot Israel:

¶ I put her away, & gaue her a byll of denouement. For all this, her vnfaithfull syster Juda was not ashamed, but went backe, and played the whore also: yea, and the nosp of her whore dome hath defyled the whole lande. For she hath charytied fornicacyon with stones & stockes.

¶ Heerecheleste, her vnfaithfull syster Juda, is not turned vnto me agayne with her whole herte, but sayndly: sayeth the Lorde. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: The badlyder Israel is more ryghteous then the vnfaithfull Juda & therfore go preache these wordes toward the North: and saye: Thou bysloberpent Israel, turne agayne (sayth the Lorde) & I wyl not let my wyath fall vpon you, for I am mercifull (sayth the Lorde) and I wyl not alway beare displeasure agaynst the: but this I wyl, that thou knowe the greates blasphemies. Namelye, that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lorde thy God & haste made thy selfe partaker of strange goddes: vnder all greene trees, but hast had no wyl to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Then those that be of the house of Juda shal go vnto the house of Israel: & they shall come together out of the North, into the same lande that I haue geuen your fathers. I haue the word also, how I toke the by byng but a chyldre and gaue the a pleasaunte lande for thyne heritage yea, and a goodlye hoste of the heathen, & howe I commaunded the, that thou shuldest call me sa theer onely, and not to thyne fro me.

¶ But lyke as a woman vnfaithfully faileth her husbande, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me: O ye house of Israel (sayeth the Lorde).

¶ O ye disobedient chyldren, turne agayne (saynge, lo we are thyne: for thou arte the Lorde oure God:) And so shall I heale your backturnynges. Cruelly, vaine trusteth he for helpe that loketh for it in the hylls, and in dayn is it sought in the multitudine of mountaynes, & but the helth of Israel standeth only vpon God our Lorde. Confusyon hath deuoyed our fathers labour from our yowthe vnto yea, they thepe & bullockes, their sonnes & daughters. So do we also also hope in our confusion, and shame couereth vs. * for we and our fathers from oure youthe by vnto this day haue synned against y^e Lozde our God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lozde of our God.

The.iii. Chapter.

In the true repentance of returning to God. Overcometh to the circumference of the heart. The interpretation of Jeremy is prophesied, for the malice of theys preter.

Isræll. yf thou wilt turne the, then turne vnto me, sayeth the Lozde. And yf thou wilt put away thyne abominacions out of my syght, thou shalt not bee moued: * And shalt sweare. The Lozde liueth: in truth, in equitie & righteousnesse: & all people shall be fortunable & ioyful in hym. For thus sayth y^e Lozde to al Iuda and Ierusalem: plow your lande & sowe not amonge the thornes. * Be circumcised in the Lozde & cut away the foreskin of your hertes, all ye of Iuda and all the indwellers of Ierusalem: that my indignacion bryake not out lyke fyre and kynde, so y^e noman may quench it, because of y^e wickednesse of your ymaginacions.

* Breache in Iuda and Ierusalem, crye out and speake: blow the trompettes in the lande, crye that euery man maye heare, gather together, and saye: Gather you together, and we will goo into stronge cyties. Bet by the token in syon, speede you, & make no taryng. * For I will brynge a greates plage, & a great destruction from the North. For the spoiler of y^e Gentyles is bryght vp from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that I maye make thy lande wast and destroye the cyties: so y^e noman may dwell therein. Wherefore, gird your selues about with sacke clothe, mourne, and wepe, for the fearfull wrath of the Lozde is not to be despised from vs.

At the same tyme (sayeth the Lozde) y^e herite of the kynge and of the princes shall be gone, the priestes shall be astonysed, and the prophetes shall be sore afraid. Then sayth y^e Lozde God, halfe thou then distressed this people and Ierusalem, sayng: * Ye that haue peace, and now y^e swarche goeth thow we theys lye. Then shall it be sayde to the people and to Ierusalem: * a stronge wynde in the dyce places of the wylder-nesse commeth thow we the waye of my people but neyther to san, nor to cleanse.

After that, shall there come vnto me a strong wynde from those places, and then will I also geue sentence vpon them: For so, he cometh vp lyke as a cloude, & his charreters are lyke a stormy wynd. * His horsemen are swifter then the Eagle. Woe vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, woe thine hert for y^e wickednesse that thou mayst be helpe. How long shall thy noysome thoughtes remaine with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyll of Ephraim speaketh out, & telleth of a destruction Remembre the bethen, & geue Ierusalem warning, and preach vnto her that watchers ouer her are commyng from farre countreys. They haue cryed out agaynst the cyties of Iuda. And they haue belied ther aboute in euery place lyke as the watchmen in the felde: * For they haue psonned me to wrath, sayeth the Lozde.

* Thy wayes & thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this, such is thyne owne wickednesse and dysobedience, and because it is a bytter thynge, it hath stryken the to the herte. Ah my helpe, ah my helpe (Waste thou crye) howe is my herte so sore: my herte panted wythin me I can not be still, for I haue heard the cryng of the trompettes, and peales of warre. They crye: murder vpon murder, the hole lande shall perishe. Immedyately my tentes were destroyed, and my hangings in the twynhellyng of an eye. Howe longe shall I see the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

Acuerthelesse, this shall come vpon them, * because my people is become foolyshe, and hath not knowen me. * They are the chyldren of foolysheenesse, and without any discrecyon. To do euell, they haue wyl ynough: but to do wel, they haue no wysdom. I haue looked vpon the earth, and see: it was waste & voyde. I looked towarde heauen, and it had no lhyne. I beheld the mountaynes: and so they trembled and all the hylles were in feare. I looked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the bydes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea, all theys cyties were broken downe at the pience of the Lozde, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus hath y^e Lozde sayd: The hole lande shall be desolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therefore shall the earth mourne, and the heauen be sope aboute: for the thynge that I haue spoken (to the prophetes) and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, & I will not go from it. The hole land shall lye, for y^e noyle of y^e horsemen and bowmen: they shall runne into denues, into woodes, and clim vpon the stony rockes: All the cyties shall be void, & noman dwell in therein.

What wilt y^e now do, thou being destroyed? * For though thou clodest thy selfe with scar- let, and deckest the with golde: * though thou payntest thy face with coloures, yet shalt thou cry in thy selfe in wayne. For those y^e dytters haue bene thy great sauouters, shall abhorre y^e and go about to slaye the. For I heare a noyle lyke as it were of a woma traueling on one labouryng of her fy: it cryde: Euen the voyce of the daughter Sid, & casteth out her armes, and sonnety, sayng: Ah, woe is me, how sore vered and faint is my hert: for feare of y^e murderers.

The.v. Chapter.

In Jeremy is shewd no righteous or faithfull man founde, ap- paret amongst the people of the rulers, for he sayd: like the Lozde shoulde speake the cytie. Wherefore Jeremye is destroyed of the Assyrians.

Whe thow we Ierusalem, beholde: I and see, Sehe thow we her stretes al- so wythin, yf ye can fynde one man y^e doth equall and iyghte, or sekerth for the truth, and I shall spare that cytie (sayeth the Lozde). * For though they can saye: y^e Lozde hath purged, yet do they sweare to discrep.

Where as thou, O Lozde, lokest on thy vpon sayth and truethe.

Thou

The Prophecie.

Thou hast scourged them, but they take no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendment, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, and would not amende.

B Therefore I thought in my self: peradventure they are so simple and foolish, & they understand nothing of the Lordes way & iudgements of our God. * Therefore will I go vnto the yedes and rulers, and talke with them, if they know the way of the Lord and the iudgements of our God. But these in lyke manner haue broken the pole, and burst the bondes in sondre.

 Therefore, a lyon oute of the woode hath burst them, and a wolfe in the euening hath destroyed them. The Leopard doeth lyke luryng by the cyties, to teare in peces all them that come thereout. For thei offences are multiplyed, and thei departing awaye is increased. Shoulde I then for all this haue mercye vpon the: Thy chylde haue forsaken me, & sworne by them that are no goddes. And albeir, that I fedde them to the ful, yet they fail to aduownt, and haunte harlottes houses.

C In the desire of vnclely lust, they are become lyke the stoned horse: every man neyeth at his neighbours wyfe. * Shuld I not correcte this sayeth the Lorde: Shuld I not be auenged of euery people that is lyke vnto this: Cyme vp vpon thei walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not vterly: take awaye thei fortresses, because they are not the Lordes.

For vnfaithfully hath the house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, sayeth the Lorde. * They haue denyed the Lorde, and sayde: it is not he that looked vpon vs. * Tush there shal no mysfortune come vpon vs, we shal be nether swerd nor hunger. As for the warning of the prophetes they take it but for wynd: yea there is none of these whiche will tell them, that suche thynges shall happen vnto them.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: because ye speake suche wordes, behold: * The wordes that are in thy mouth will I turne to fyre, and make the people to be woodde, that the fyre maye consume them. * Lo, I will byynge a people vpon you from far, O house of Israel (sayeth the Lorde) a myghty people, an olde people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, neyther understandest what they saye.

Thei arrowes are sodayne deathe: yea, they them selues be very spawntes. This people shall eate vpon thy frute and thy meate: yea, they shall deuoure thy sonnes & thy daughters, thy wyfe and thy bullockes. They shall eat vpon thy grapes and fygges. As for thy strong and wel fenced cyties, wherein thou dydest truste, they shall byynge to pouertie, and that thow olde swerde. * Neuerthelesse I will not then haue done with you, sayeth the Lord. But if they say wherfore doth the Lord our God al this vnto vs

Then answer them: * because that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge goddes in your owne lande, euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge lande. Speache this vnto the house of Jacob and crye it out in Iuda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou foolish and vnderstande not people) * ye haue eyes, but ye see not: eares haue ye but ye heare not. Feare ye not me, sayeth the Lorde. For ye are ashamed to loke me in the face: * which bynd I set with the sande, so that it can not passe his bondes. For though it rage, yet can it do nothing, & though the waues thereof be swell, yet maye they not go ouer. But this people hath a false and obstinate harte: they are departed and gone away from me. They thinke not in their hartes: O let vs feare the Lorde our God, that geueth vs raine early and late, when ned is: whiche heareth euer the prayer of the poore.

 Neuerthelesse, your misdoings haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you herof. For amonge my people are founde wyched persones, that pryncipally laye snares and waite for men, to take them and destroye them. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are they houses full of that which they haue gotten with falschod and discreete. Herof cometh their great substance and rychesse, herof are they fat and welthy, & are more myscheuous then any other.

 They mispasse not the lawe: they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause: yea, and they prosper: yet they iudge not & pouer accorde to equyte. * Shuld I not punyssh these thynges, sayeth the Lorde: shuld I not be auenged of all such people as these be: horrible and greuous thynges are done in the lande. The prophetes trache falsely, and the priestes receiue gyftes, and my people * haue pleasure therein. What will come thereof at the laste?

The vi. Chapter.

The synne for which Ierusalem is afflicted. The synne of the priests, the synne of the prophets, the synne of the people. The Lorde correcteth the synners of the Ierus. The comynge of the Babylonians to punish the synners.

Come oute of Ierusalem, ye stronge chyliden of Ben Jamin blow vp the trompettes ye * Recuytes, set vp a token vnto Bethcaran, for a plage and a greate mysferte appereth oute frome the North. I will lyken the daughter Syon to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shall come the shepherders with theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shall they pitch rounde about her, and euery one shall fede them that are vnder his hande. Make battayle agaynst her (shall they saye) Arise, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye. Alas, the day goeth away, & the nyght shadowes fall downe. Arise, let vs go vp by nyght, & destroye her strong holdes, for thus hath the Lorde of hostes commaunded. Hewe downe her trees, & set vp bulwarkes agaynst Ierusalem, for the tyme is come that this cite must be punished: for in her is all malice. Lyke as a condyte spouteth out waters, so she spouteth oute her wychednesse. Robbery & vngyfteousnesse is herde in her, sojownd and woundes are euer there in my syghte. Amendeth O Ierusalem I will I with you to my best fedde, & make I desolate and the land also, & no man dwel in it. For thus sayeth sayth the Lord of hostes. The residue of Israel shall be gathered, as the remnaunte of grapes. And therfore turne thyne hande agayne into the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shall I speake, whom shall I warne that he maye take hede? Their eares are so uncircumcysed, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take the wordes of God but for a scoone, & haue no lust thereto. And therfore I am so full of thine indignacion. (O Lord) that I may suffer no longer, but shew it out vpon the children: for they are without and vpon al yonge men. Pee, the man muste be taken prisoner with the wife, and the aged with the crepell. Their houses with their lades, & wiche shall be turned vnto strangers when I stretch out myne hand vpon the inhabitants of this lande, sayth the Lord. For from the left vnto the right, they hang al vpon couctousnes, & from the prophet vnto the priest: they go al aboute with falshe and lies.

And besyde that, they deale the parte of my people with swete wordes, sayng: peace, peace, wher ther is no peace at al. Were they ashamed when they had comyted abhominacion? Truly nay they be past shame. And therfore they shall fall among the slayne & in the houre wher I shall vylet them, they shall be brought downe sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord: go into the stretes, consyder and make inquisition for the olde waye, and yf it be the good & ryghte way, then go therein, that ye may fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye we wil not walke therein, & I wyll set watchmen ouer you, and therfore take hede vnto the voyce of the troper. But they say we wyll not take hede. Heare therfore ye gentiles, & thou congregacion that know, what I haue deuyed for them. Heare thou erth also, be holde, I wyll cause a plague to come vpon this people, euen the frute of their owne ymaginacions. For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes & to my law, but abhorred them. Wherfore I wyll byng ye me lincise from Babilon, & swete smellyng Calamus fro farre countryes: Poure burnt offeringes displease me, & I reioyce not in your sacrifices. And therfore thus sayth the Lord beholde, I wyll make this people fall, & therfore shall fall among them the father with the childen, one neyghbour shall peryshe with another.

Thus sayth the Lord, Beholde there shall come a people from the North, and a great people that shall aryse fro the endes of the earth, whowes and with darters shall they be weaponed. It is a rough & scarce people, & an vmerciful people, their voyce shall crye lyke the see, they ride vpon horses wel appointed to the battel against the daughter Syon. The crye of them haue we hearde. Our armes are feeble, theynes & sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelyng with chylde. Let no man go forth into the felde let no man come vnto the hye strete: for the swerde and feare of the enemyes is on euery syde.

Wherfore gyde a sacke cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) spynckle thy selfe with ashes: moune & wepe bytterly as vpon thyne onely beloued sonne. For yf destroyer shall sodenlye fall vpon vs. The hane I sette for a strong tower. (O thou prophete) and a well fenced wal among my people, to lye & to try their wales. For they are al stubburne apostates & fallen awaye, walkyng disceyfullye, they are cleane blasf, and yf, for they hurt and destroy euery man. The bellous are bent in the fyre, the leade is not molten: the meller melteth in vaine for the euil is not taken away fro them. Therfore do they call them naughtye siluer, because the Lord hath cast them out.

The viij. Chapter

Jeremy is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the wordes of God, which he had sayd in the outwarde temple of the temple. The euil that shall happen to the Iewes for the bypocrisyng of their prophetes. Wherfore both not the Lord cherefully requyre of the Iewes, but that they shoulde obeye his wordes.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremy, sayng: Stand vnder the gate of the Lordes house and crye oute these wordes there, with a loude voyce and saye: Heare the word of the Lord al ye of Iuda, & go in at this doore to worshippe the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, God of Israel. Amend your wayes & your coucelis, & I wil let you dwel in this place. Truste not in false lyng wordes, sayng: here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord.

But rather in dede amende your wayes and counceils, & indige ryghte betwyxe a man & his neyghboure, oppresse not the straunger, the fatherlesse, and the wyddow: shed not innocent bloude in this place, cleane not to straunge goddes to your owne destruccio, then wyll I let you dwel in this place: yee, in the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede: ye trust in lyng tales, that begyle you and do you no good: For when ye haue stolen, murdered, comyted aduourty, and perjury: When ye haue offered vnto Baal, folowynge straunge and vknown gods that ye be unpunished: Yet then come ye and stand before me in this house: (Whiche hath my name geuen vnto it) & say: We are absolved quite, though we haue done all these abhominacions.

What thyncke you this house that beareth my name, is a den of theues? And yet I se what you thyncke, sayth the Lord. Goto my place in Babilon, wher vnto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke wel: what I byd to the same place for the wickednes of my people of Israel. And nowe though ye haue done al these dedes (sayth the Lord) and I my selfe rose vpon euery tyme to warne you and to comen with you, yet wolde ye not heare me. I called, ye wolde not answer. And therfore eue as I haue done vnto Babilon so wyll I do to this house, that my name is geuen vnto (that you put your trust in) yee, vnto the place that I haue geuen to you: and your fathers. And I shall trust you out of my syght: as I haue cast out al your brethren the whole sede of Ephraim.

Therfore, thou shalt not praye for this people, thou shalt nether geue thankes, nor byd prayer for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for the, for in no wise wilt I be the. De-est thou not what they do in the cities of Juda, and in the stretes of Ierusalem? * The children gather stiches, the fathers humble the fyre, the woman knebe dough: to bake cakes for the queene of beauf. They powre out bynche offerynges vnto strange gods, to prouoke me vnto wrath howbeit they hurt not me, saith the Lord, but rather confounde and shame them selues. And therefore thus saith the Lord God: beholde, my wrath and my indignacion shall be poured oute vpon this place, vpon men and cattel, vpon the trees in the felde, & frute of the lande, & it shall be burne, so that no man maye quench it.

E Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: heape vp your burnt offerynges with your sacrifices, and eate the flesh. * For when I brought your fathers out of Egypt I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offerynges and sacrifices: but thus I commaunded them, sayng * hearken & obeye my voyce, and I shall be your God, and ye shall be my people: so that ye walke in all my wayes whych I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prosper. * But they were not obedient, they inclined not their eares thereto, but went after theyr owne ymagynacions, & after the motions of their owne wyched herte, and so turned them selues away, and churched not vnto me. And this haue they done, fro the tyme your fathers came out of Egypt, vnto this day.

F * Neuerthelesse, I sente vnto you, all my ser-uantes the prophetes. I rose vp early and sente you worde: yet wolde they not hearken, nor offer me theyr eares, but were obstinate, & wolke the theyr fathers. And thou shalt no more speake all these wordes vnto the, but they shall not heare the, thou shalt cry vnto them, but they shall not answere the. Therefore shalt thou say vnto the thus is the people, that neither heareth the voyce of the Lord theyr God, nor receaured his correccion. * Fawthfulness & truthe is cleane rooted out of theyr mouth.

G * Wherefore cut of thyne heare, O Ierusalem and cast it a waye, take vp a complayne on hye, for the Lord hath cast a waye, and scattered the people that he is dyspleased with all. For the children of Juda haue done euil in my syghte, saith the Lord. * They haue set vp their abho-minacions in the house that hath my name, and haue defiled it. They haue also buyded an aulter at Topheth, whiche is in the valleye of the children of hennom, & they might burne theyr sonnes and daughters in fyre, whiche I neuer comaunded the neither came it euer in my thought.
And therefore beholde, the dayes shall come, sayeth the Lord, that it shall no more be called Topheth, or the valleye of the children of hennom, but the valleye of slaughter. * For I Topheth, they shall be buryed, because they shall ciles haue no rowme. * Yee, the deade bodies of this people shall be eaten vp of the foules of the aire: & wilde beastes of the earth, and no man shall frap them awaye. * And as for the voyce of mirth & glad-nesse of the Cyties of Juda, and Ierusalem the voyce of the bydegrome, and of the hyde, I wyl make them cease: for the lande shall be desolate.

The viii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Ierusalem. The Lord mooueth the people to amendment, shewing by theyr synnes, the cause why the Ierusalem is destroyed of the prophetes and prophetes.

At the same tyme sayeth the Lord, I the bones of the kynges of Juda, & bones of his prynces, the bones of the prestes and prophetes: yet and the bones of the cytyzens of Ierusalem shall be brought out of their graues & layd against the sunne the mone, & all the heavenly host: whom they loued, whom they serued: wh-they ranne after, whome they sought and wo-shipped. They shall neither be gathered together nor buried, but shall lye as dong vpon the earth to theyr shame and despylyng.

* And all they that remaine of this wyched generacion, shall desire rather to dye the to lye where soeuer they remaine and where as I sea-rer them, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Thus shalt thou saye vnto them also, thus saith the Lord Do men fall so, that they aryse not vp agayne?
O yf Israel repente, wil not God turne agayne to the? Wherefore then is this people and Ieru-salem gone so farre backe that they turne not agayne? They are euer the longer the more obstinate, and wyl not be conuerted.

* For I haue looked & consyded, but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentance for his synne & wyl so muche as say: wherefore, haue I doone this? But euerye man, as soone as he is turned backe runneth forth syl, like a wyde horse in a battel: The wyche in the ayre knoweth his apointed tyme, the Turtle doue: the Swallowe and the Crane, consider the tyme of theyr reuel * but my people wyl not know the tyme of the punysshment of the Lord. How dare ye saye then, we are wyse, we haue the law of the Lord amonge vs?

Truely in wayne haue he prepared his penne and vayne haue the wyters written it, therefore shall the wyse be confounded, they shall be afrayd and taken: for lo, they haue caste out the word of the Lord: what wysdome can the be among them? Wherefore I wyl geue their wyues vnto aleauntes, and theyr felides to destruction.

* For frome the lowest to the hylle: they so-lowe all fylthy lucre, & from the prophet vnto the prest, they deale all with lyes. * Neuertheles they deale the hurt of my people very frendly, sayng: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all. Yee for shame, howe abhominable thin-ges do they: yet they be not ashamed: yee, they knowe of no shame. * Wherefore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall fall amonge the dead bodies, and be ouerthrowne sayeth the Lord.

Wherefore I wyl consume them in dede, sayeth the Lord, so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vine, neither one figge vpon the figgetre and the leaues shall be plucked of. And the thyng that I haue geuen them shall be taken from the wyl longe we the tyme: Let vs gather oure selues

It shal be together, and go into the stronge Cypre, there shal we be in rest. For the Lord our God hath put vs to silence & geuen vs water myete with gall to drynche, because we haue sinned against him. * We looked for peace, and we sawe not the better, we waited for the time of healeth and lo, here is nothing but trouble.

The noyse of his boies is heard from Dan the whole lande is afrayed at the noying of his strong boies, for they are come in, and haue deuoured the lande, with al that is in it: the cities and those that dwell therein. * Whereouer I wyl sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you, (which wyl not be charmed) and they shal bite you sayth the Lord.

I wolde haue had comforte againste for to be but sorrowe is come vpon me, and beaumes vnder my herte, for loo, the voyce of the crying of my people is heard for feare of them, that come from a farre countrie. Is not the Lord in Syon? Is not the King in her? Wherefore then haue they greued me? (Wal þ Lord saye) With theyr ymagines and foolyshe straunge fallycons of a forryne God: The bestest is gone, & Homer hath an ende, and we are not helpe, I am sore vexed because of the hurte of my people, I am deuy & abashed, is there no tricke at Gilad? Is there no wisdom there? Why then is not the healeth of my people recovered

Chapter.

The complaint & bewailing of the prophet the for manye of the people. In the knowledge of God ought we only to reioyce. The vncircumcysion of the heere,

Who * wyl geue my deade water enough, & a well of teares for myne eyes, that I maye wepe nyghte and daye for the slaughter of my people? * Wylde God that I hadde a cottage some where farre from folke, that I might leaue my people, and go from them, for they be all aduouterers and a whymyng folk. They bende their tungen like bowes to shote out lies. They were strong vpon earth. As for the truth, they maye notyinge a waye with all in the world. For they go from one wyckednesse to another, and wyl not knowe me, sayth the Lord.

* Pre, one must kepe him selfe from another no mā may safelye trust his owne brother, & for one brother vndermyndeth another, one neyghbour begyleth another. Pre, one dissembleth with another, and they deale with no truste. * They haue practised theyr tongues to lye, and taken greate paynes to do myschefe: Thou syttest in the myddes of a disceatfull people, whiche for very dyssemblinge falschod, wyl not knowe me sayth the Lord.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, beholde, I wyl melt them, & trye them: for what shuld I els do to my people? Theyr tungen are lyke sharpe arowes, to speake dysceat. Wylth their mouth they speake peacably to their neyghbour, but pceuly they laye wayte for him. * Shulde I not punyche the for these thynges, sayth the Lord? Or shulde I not be aduenged of any such people as this? Vpon the mountaynes wyl I take vp a lamentacion & a sorrowful crie, and a mournyng vpon the sayre playnes of the wilderness. Namely how they are so diste vp: that no man gothe there anye more. Per a man shal not heare one beaste crye there.

Wylde & catell are gone fro thence, * I wyl make Ierusalem also an deape of stoness, & a den of venimous wormes. And I wyl make the Cities of Iuda so wast, & no man shal dwell there in. What mā is so wyll, as to vnderstande this? Or to whome hath the Lord spoken by mouth & he maye shew this & saye: O thou lande, why perystest thou so? Wherefore arte thou so bent vp, & lyke a wilderness, & no man goeth thozom Per, the Lord him selfe tolde the same vnto the that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thyng that he gaue them in charyngement, neyther lyued thereafter: * but folowed the wyckednes of their owne bettes, and ierued straunge goddes, as theyr fathers taughte them.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I wyl se the people with worme made, & geue them gall to drynche: * I wyl scatere them also amonge the heathen, wher neither they nor their fathers haue knowe and I wyl sende a swerd amonge them, to persecute them, vntyll I buyng them to naughte Whereouer, thus sayth the Lord of hostes, be ware of the vengeance that hangeth ouer you: and call for mournyng wyues, & sende for wyse women that they come hostely, & syng a mournyng songe of you, that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that our eye lyddes maye geue out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse heard of Syon. How are we so sore dectraied? How are we so petecously confounded? We must forsake oure owne natural countrie, and we are thutte out of oure owne lodgynges. Per heare þ worde of þ Lord: O ye women, & let your eares regard the wordes of my mouth, & ye maye leaue your doughters to mourne, & p eury one may teach her neyghbours to make lamentacion Namely thus: Death is clymyng vp in at our windowes he is come into oure houses, to destroye & chylde befoze the doze, and the yonge man in the strete But tell thou playnly, thus sayth the Lord.

* The deade bodies of men shal lye vpon the ground, as the dong vpon the felde and as the hepe after the mower, and ther shalbe no mā to take them vp. Thus sayth the Lord. Let not the wyseman reioyce in his wysedome: nor the strong man in his strenght: neyther the ryche mā in his ryches. * But who so wyl reioyce let him reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth, & knoweth me: for I am the Lord: whyche do mercey, equite, & rightousnes vpon the earth. * Therfore haue I pleasure in suche thynges, sayth the Lord. Beholde, the tyme cometh: sayth the Lord that I wyl vifet all them, whose foze-shynne is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Jewes, the Edomites, & Ammonites, the Moabytes, * and the Hauen Chadianites & dwell in the wilderness. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcised in þ flesh, but al the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

The Prophecie.

The .i. Chapter

The confessions of the heathen are not to be feared, of the wisdom of god, and of the power of god. of all creatures.

Hear the worde of the Lord that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord * Ye shal not lerne after the maner of the heathen, and ye shal not be afrayed, for the tokens of heauē: for the heathen are a frayre of such: yea, all the customes: and lawes of the Gentiles are nothing but vanite. They haue done a tree in the woode, with f bandes of the wozechman, and fasten on it with the axe, they couer it ouer with golde o: syluer, they fasten it with napples & diamers, that it mouenot. It standeth as a sylle as the palme tree, it can neyther speake nor go one foote, but muste be borne. * Ye not ye afrayd of suche, for they can do neither good nor euil. But there is none like vnto the, O Lord, * a great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the? O hynde of the Gentils, for thoue is the dominion.

For among al the wise men of the Gentils, in al their kyngdoms, there is none y maye be likened vnto the. They are altogether vlearned and vnpic in this one thyng. Al their conyng is but vanite: namelye wod, syluer: which is bzought out of Charlis, and beate to plates: and golde from Oppir, * a worche that is made with the hand of the crafterma. & the catter clothed it with yelowē spliche & scarlett, euen so is the worche of their wise men altogether. But y Lord is a true God, a luyng God, & an euerlastyng luyng. * If he be wozd, the carthe shalthe: al the Gentiles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their gods thus shal you saie to them: they are goddes, that made neither heauen nor earth, therefore shal they perishe from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauē. But (as for our God) * he made the earth with his power, & with his wisdom he hath ordeyner the whole course of y world, & his discrecyon hath he spred oute the heauens. At his voyce the waters gather together in y ayre, & he dymeth vp y clowdes feth the vetermost partes of y earth: he turneth y lychtning to rayne, and bzyngethe fowls the wyndes out of thei treasures. his wisdom maketh all men foolis: And confounded be castles of ymages, for y they caste, is but a vaine thyng, and hath no lyfe. * The vayne craftermen with thei wozhes, y they in thei vanitie haue made, shal perishe one w an other in tyme of visitacion. Auerthelesse Jacobs pozeion is none suche: but it is he that hath made all thynges, & Israel is the rod of his enheritaunce. The Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy warres out of the lande thou that art in the strong place. For thus sayeth the Lord. Behold, I wil now shewe as with a stone hynde the inhabitours of this lande at this once, & wil bzynge trouble vnto them that they shal proue true the worde, that I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, howe am I hurt: alas howe paynfull are my se, urges vnto me: For I consyde this forowe by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, & all my coardes are bzoken. My chyldre are gone from me, & ca no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to shewe out my tene, and to set vp my hanginges. For the herde me haue done folpshy. y they haue not sought the Lord. Therefore haue they deale vnpicly with thei cattell: and are scattered abyde. Beholde the noise is heard at hande and great sedicion out of the north: to make the cities of Iuda a wilderness, and a dwelling place for wyagons. * Nowe I knowe (O Lord) that it is not in mans power to bzide bys owne wayes, o: to rule his owne steps and goynges. Therefore chaften y vs, O Lord, but with fauoure: not in thy wyath, bzynge vs not vterly to naught. * Doute out thine indignacion rather vpon the Gentyles, that knowe the not, and vnto the people that cal not on thy name. * And y because they haue consumed, deuoured, and destroyed Jacob: and haue made his habitacion wast.

The .ii. Chapter.

It curd of them that they not the worde of Goddes promise. The people of Iuda following the steppes of their fathers, worshyppynge strange goddes. The Lord sayeth that he will not heare the Jewes, and subsequently also Ieremye to praye for them.

His is another sermon, whyche the Lord commaunded Ieremye for to preach, sayyng: heare y wozdes of the couenaunt, and speake vnto the men of Iuda, and to al them y dwel at Ierusalem. And saie thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: * Cursed be euey one y is not obediēt vnto the wozdes of this couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I bzought them out of Egypt, fro y yon fornace, sayyng: * Be obediēt vnto my voyce, & do accordyng to al y I commaunde you so shal ye be my people, and I wil be your God, and will kepe my promise, * that I haue sworn vnto your fathers. Namely that I wolde geue them a lande whyche floweth with milke and honye, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I and said: Amen. Let it be euen so Lord as thou sayest.

Then the Lord sayd vnto me againe: Wraich this in the cyties of Iuda & rounde about Ierusalem, & say heare the wozdes of this couenaunt that ye maye kepe them, for I haue diligently exhorted your fathers euer sence the tyme that I bzought the out of the lande of Egypt vnto this daye. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, sayyng: heare vnto my voyce. * Auerthelesse they wolde not obey me, nor encline thei eares vnto me, but folowed the wyched ymaginacions of thei owne bestes. And therefore, I haue accused them as trasgressours of al the wozdes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe which they (notwithstandyng) haue not kept.

And the Lord sayd vnto me: It is found out y whole Israel & all the cytyens of Ierusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemies of thei fozefathers, which had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lyke wyse haue these also folowed straunge Goddes, and wozshypped worshipped them. The house of Israel and Juda haue broken my couenaunt, whiche I made with their fathers.

C Therefore thus sayeth the Lord. Beholde, I wyl sende a plague vpon them, which they shal not be able to escape, and though they cry vnto me, I wyl not heare them. * Then shal the townes of Iuda and the citezynes of Ierusalem go, and call vpon their gods vnto whom they made their oblacions, but they shal not be able to helpe the in tyme of their trouble. * For as many cities as thou hast O Iuda, so many goddes hast thou had also. And loke how many kretes there be in the, (O Ierusalem) so many name-full alters haue ye set vp, alters I say to offere vpon them vnto Baal. * Therefore wyl I praye not for this people, vnto neither praye nor prayer for the, for though they cry vnto me in theyr trouble, yet wyl I not heare them.

What parte hath my beloued in my house singinge he hath wrought abominacyon, seruyng many Goddes. * The holy fleshe offerynges in the temple are gone fro the O Iuda, and thou when thou hast done euill makest thy boast of it.
* The Lord called y a grene Olive tree, a faire one, a fructful one, a goodly one: but with great clamor hath the enemy set fyre vpon it and the braunches of it are destroyed. For the Lord of hostes that planted the, hath deuyled a plague for the (O thou house of Israel & Iuda) for the euill that ye haue doneto prouoke him to wrath in that ye byd seruer vnto Baal.

D This (O Lord) haue I learned of the, and vnderstande it, for thou hast shewed me theyr ymagynacions. * But I am as a meke lambe an-dye that is caried awaye to be slaine, not kno-uyng, that they had deuyled suche a counsell against me, sayng: * We wyl destroy his meat with wodde, and dryue hym out of the land: of spuyng: that his name shal neuer be thought vpon. Therefore, * I wyl beseeche the nowe (O Lord of hostes) thou righteous Judge, thou that triest the reynes & the herres: let me se the aduenged of them: for vnto the haue I commytted my cause. The Lord therfore spake thus of the citezins of Anathoth: that soughte to slaye me, sayng. * Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lord, or els thou shalt dye of oure han-des. Thus I saye spake the Lord of hostes.
Beholde, I wyl visite you. Your yong men shall perishe with the sword, your sonnes and your daughters shal vterly dye of hunger, so that none shal remaine: For vpon the citezins of Anathoth wyl I bringe a plague: euen the yeare of their visitacion.

The xii. Chapter.

C The prophete manerly greatly at the prophete of the temple, although he confesse God to be righteous. The Jewes me fulfyllen of the Lawe, he speake agaynst Lawes, and preaches that fulfille the people. The Lawe thenceforth visitacion vnto the nation that believe vpon Iherusalem troubled and wroth.

Lord, thou arte moare righteous, then I wylde dispute with & Reuerencelesse, lette me talke with the in thinges reasonable. * Howe hap-penethis, that the waye of the un-godly is so prosperous? & that it goeth so well with them which (without anye shame) offended & lye in wickednesse? Thou plantest them they take roote, they grow, & bring forth frute They best much of the, yet art thou farre from their raynes. But thou Lord (to whome I am wel knowe) thou that hast sent and proued my bert * take them away, like as a floche is caried to the slaughter house, and point them for y day of slaughter. Howe longe shal the land mourne * and all the herbes of the felde perishe, for the wychednes of them that dwel therein.

The cattell and the bydes are gone: yet saye they tuche. * God wil not destroye vs vterly Scinge thou arte weep in runnyng wyth the fotemen, howe wylt thou then runne with ho?
In a peaceable sure land thou mayst be safe But howe wylt thou do in the furious wyde of Iordane? For thy byethen & thy kynred haue altogether despised the: and cried out vpon the in thine absence. * Belieue the not, though they speake faire wordes to the. As for me (I say) I haue forsaken myne owne dwelling place, and leste mine heritage. My lyfe also that I loue so well haue I geuen into the handes of mine ene-myes. * Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wood, It crieth out vpon me, there for haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byde, a yerde of diuerse coloures vpon it. Come & gather ye together all y beastes of y felde, Come that ye maye eat it vp * Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my nephe, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wilderness and desert. They haue layde it wast: and now y it is wast, it spgberth vnto me. Per, y whole lād lieth wast, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heate euery way, for y sword of the Lord doth consume from y one end of the land to y other, & no fleshe hath rest. They haue sowne wheate, & reaped thornes. They haue taken heritage in possession, but it doeth them no good. And y prophetes were ashamed of yore fruites, because of the great wrath of the Lord

Thus sayeth the Lord vpon all myne euill neighboures, that laye hande vpon myne heritage, which I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyl pluche them (namelye Israel) out of the lande, and put out the house of Iuda from among them. * And when I haue rooted them out, I wyl be at one with them a-gayne: and I wyl haue mercy vpon them: * and drynge them agayne, eue y man to yps owne heritage, & into his lande. And yf they (namelye that trouble my people) wyl learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The Lord lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be rehedned among my people. But yf they wyl not obeye, then wyl I rote out the same folke, and destroye the sayth the Lord.

The xiii. Chapter.

C The destruction of the Jewes is purgued, and they shal fynde abondance: they shal be rehedned to the people of God and they shal be fulfyllen.

The Prophecie.

Ihus sayeth the Lord vnto me: good thy waye: & get me a lynny bryche & gyde it about thy loines, and let it not be wet. The I got me a brych accordyng to the commaundement of the Lord and put it about my loynes. After this the seconde tyme, the Lord spake vnto me againe. Take the brych that thou hast prepared and put aboute the, and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates & hyde it in an hole of y^e rocke. So went I, and hyd it at Euphrates, as the Lord commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, & the Lord spake vnto me. Up and get the to Euphrates, & let the brych fro thence: which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, & toke the bryche from the place wher I hyd it, and beholde, the bryche was corrupte, so that it was profitable for nothinge.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me. Thus sayeth the Lord. Euen so wyl I corrupte the pyper of Juda & the pyper of Jerusalem. This people is a wicked people, & they wil not heare my woide, they folowe the wyched ymaginations of their owne hert, and hang vpon straunge gods, them they serue & worship: & therfore they shal be as this brych, that serueth for nothinge.

For as straitly as a brych lyeth vpon a mans loines, so straitlye byd I bynd the whole house of Israel, & the whole house of Juda vnto me saith the Lord: that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name that they myght be in honoure, but they wolde not obeye me. Therfore laye this rible befoze the & say. Thus sayth y^e Lord God of Israel. Euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne. And they shal say thynckeste thou we knowe not, that euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne? Then shalt thou saye vnto them. Thus saith y^e Lord. Beholde I shal fyl all the inhabiteours of this lande with dyshonemmes, the kinges y^e syt vpon Dauides stole, y^e prestes & prophetes, with all that dwel at Jerusalem. And I wil set them one against another pee, & father against the sonnes, saith the Lord.

I wyl not pardon them, I wil not spare them nor haue pite vpon them, but de stroye the. Be obedient, geue eare: take not dysdayne at it, for it is the Lord him selfe that speaketh. Honour the Lord your God here in, or he take his lycht from you, & or euer your feete stromble in darcknes at the hil, least when you looke for the lighte he turne it vnto the shadowe and darcknes of death. But yf ye wyl not heare me, & geue you secret warnyng, I wil mourne from my whole herte for your stubbernes. Witteoulpe wyl I wepe, & the tentes shal gush out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shalbe carped a waye captiue. Tell the kyng & the quene humble youre selues, syt you downe lowe, for youre dygnitie shalbe thowen downe, and the crowne of your gloire shal fall from your heade.

The cyties towarde the south shalbe shut vp & no man shal open them. All Juda shalbe caried a waye captiue, so that none shal remayne.

Lifte up youre eyes, and beholde them that come fro the north, where is the flocke (O thou land) that was gine the. And where are thy sat an rich shepe? To whom wilt thou make thy mone when the enemye shal come vpon the: for thou hast taught them thy self, and made them masters ouer y. Shal not sorrow come vpo the as on a woman traunayling w^{ch} childe? And yf thou woldest then sape in thine hert. Wherfore come these thynges vpo me? & Euen for y^e multitude of thy blasphemies, shal thy hynde partes and thy feet be discouered.

Way a man of Inde chaunge his skyn, & the cat of y^e mountaine her spottes: nomore maye ye that be exercised in euyl, do good. Therfore wyl I scatter them, lyke as the stubble that is take a way with the south winde. This shalbe your porcion, and the porcyd of your measure, wherewith ye shalbe rewarded of me, saith the Lord: because ye haue forgotten me, & put youre trust in dysceyful thynges. Therfore shal I turne thy clothes ouer thy heed, & discover thy thynges, that thy pryncities maye be sene, thy aduocerie, thy deedly malice, thy beastlinesse, and thy shameful whozdom. For vpon the selues and bylles I haue sene thynne abhominacions. Wloob vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wylt thou euer be cleansed any more?

The xiiii. Chapter.

Of the death that shoulde come in Jerusale. The prayer of the people of Iherusalem of the Lorde. The unfortunat people are not heare. Of prayer, fasting, and of folk prophetes that spake the people.

Whe woide of the Lord shewed vnto I Jeremy, concerning the deatch of the frutes. Juda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: they are brought to deuilles euen vnto the grounde, & they crye of Jerusalem goeth vp. The lordes sente their seruantes to sech water, & when they came to the welles, they did finde no water, but caried their vessels home emptye. They be ashamed and confounded, and couer theyr herdes. For the grounde is dyed vp, because ther cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed, and couer theyr herdes. The hynde also forloke the yonge fawne, that he brought forth in the felde, because there was no grasse. The wilde asses byd stande in the hygge places, and drew in theyr wynde lyke the dragons, theyr eyes dydde fayle, for wante of grasse.

Wonderle our owne wickednesse doth reward vs. But Lord do thou accordyng to thy name, though our transgressions & synnes be many, & against the haue we synned. For thou art the comfort & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble: Wylt thou be as a straunger in the land, & as one y^e goeth ouer the felde, & cometh in onely to remaine for a nyght? Wylt thou make thy self a coward, & as it were a gyafe that yet may not helpe? For y^e (O Lord) art in y^e myddest of vs: & thy name is called vpo vs, for sake vs not. Thus hath the Lord said vnto this people seying they haue had such lust to wandre & brode, & haue not refrained their feet, & therfore displeased the Lord: but he wyl nowe bynge agayne to remembraunce all their mysdedes, & punysh punye all their synnes. Per, euen thus saith J Lozbe vnto me: * Thou walste not praye to do this people good: For though they fast, I will not heare their prayes, and though they offer burnt offerynges and sacrifices: yet will not I accept them. For I will destroye them with the sword, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O Lozbe God, * the prophetes sape vnto them: Tylle ye shall neede to feare no swerde and no hunger shal come vpon you, but the lozbe shal geue you contynuall rest in this place:

And the Lozbe sayd vnto me: The prophetes preache lies in my name, where as I haue not sente the, nerher gaue I the any charge, nerher dyd speake vnto the, yet they preache vnto you false visions, charmyng, vanite, and disceatfulnes of their owne hert. Therefore thus saith the lozbe: As for those prophetes that preache in my name (whom I neuertheless haue not sente) and I sape: Tylle there shal no swerde nor hunger be in this land: * With swerde and with hunger shal those prophetes perishe, & I people to whome they preache shalbe call out of Ierusalem, dye of hunger & be slaine with I swerde: & ther shal be no man to bury the: both they & their wyues their sonnes and their daughters: For thus wil I powre their wickednes vpon the. This shall I say also vnto them. * Mine eyes shal wepe wout ceasinge daye and nyghte. For my people shalbe destroyed with great harme: and shal perishe with a great plage. For I go into the felde: loo, it lieth al ful of slayne men. If I come into the cite: loo, they be all lampyed of hunger.

Per, their prophetes also & preastes shalbe led into an vknownen lande. Hast thou then viterly forsaken Iuda? Doest thou abhorre thyon? O hast thou so plagued vs, & we ca be healed no more? * We looked for peace, & there cometh no good: for the tyme of helth: & loo, here is no thinge but trouble. We knowledg (O lozbe) all our misdedes, and the synnes of our fathers that we haue offeded the. Be not displeased, O Lozbe for thy names sake: for get not thy louing kyndnes. Rember the thione of thine honour breake not the councaunt that thou hast made w vs. * Are there any amonge the gods of the Gentiles, that sende rayne or geue the showres of heuen? O maye the heauens drop rayne without thy commaundement: Doest not thou it, O Lozbe oure God in whom we trust: Per, Lozbe thou doest all these thynges.

The xv. Chapter.

The Lozbe will not heare Moyses, as Aaron & they praye for the people: but will wrappe them in many miseries. The cause of such greute miseries.

Then spake the Lozbe vnto me. * Though Moyses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to this people. Wyne the awaye that they maye go out of my sight: And if they sape vnto the, whether shal we go: The tell them: The Lozbe geureth you this aunswere: * Some vnto death: some to I swerde, some to hunger, some into captiuite. For I will bringe the plagis vpon them saith J Lozbe. The sword shal slay them: & dogges shal tear the in peeces

* the foules of paye, & beastes of the earthe shal eat the vp, & destroye them. I wil scatter them about also in all kingdoms & lades to be plagued: because of Manasses sonne of hezekia king of Iuda, for thynges that he dyde in Ierusalem.

Who shal then haue pittie vpon the, O Ierusalem: Who shalbe for thy: O who shal make intercession, to obteyne peace for the: seynge thou goeste frome, & turnest backwarde, saith the Lozbe: Therefore, I will stretche out myne hande agaynst the to destroye the, and I haue ben for thy so longe & I am wepy. I haue scattered them abroade with the same on euery syde of the lande. * I haue wasted my people & destroyed them. Yet they haue had no luste to turne forme theyr owne waies. I haue made their wydowes mo in nombze, then the sandes of the see. Upon the mothers of their children dyd I bringe a destroyer in the none day. * So denyly and vnwares dyd I sende a feare vpon their cities: So that each borne seuen children hath none, her herte is full of sorowe.

* The Sunne doth faile her in the cleare day, she is confounded and lamente for very heuynes: As for those that remayne, I will deliuer them vnto the swerde before their enemyes sayeth the Lozbe. * O mother, alas that euer thou dyd: best beare me, a brauler & rebuker of the whole lande: Though I neuer sente nor receaued vpon vsurpe, yet all men speke euell vpon me.

And the Lozbe answered me: Mercie thy remembrance shal haue welthe: Come not I to the, when thou art in trouble & helpe the, whet thine enemy opprest the: Doeth one yron hurte another: or one metall that cometh from the north, another? * As for thy ryches & treasure, I will geue them out into a praye, not for anye monie, but because of al thy synnes: that thou hast done in all costes. * And I will bring I with thine enemies into a lande that thou knowest not: for the fire that is kindled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O Lozbe, thou knowest, therefore remember me, & viset me, deliuer me fro my persecuters. Take me not from this life in the tyme of long pacience, thou knowest, that for thy sake I suffer rebuke. * Whet I had sounde thy wordes. I dyd eate them vpon gredelepe: they haue made my hert ioyful & glad. For thy name was called vpon me, O Lozbe God of hostes. I dwel not amonge I scoyners: nerher is my delite therein: but I dwel onely in the feare of thy hande, for thou hast fylled me with bitternes. Shall my heauynes endure for euer? At my plagis the so great that they maye neuer be healed: Wylte thou be as one that is false: and as a water that falleth and cannot contynue: Upon these wordes, thus saide the Lozbe vnto me. Psthou wilt turne a gayne, I shall set the in my seruice: and yf thou wylte take oute the thynges that are precyous from the vile, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. * They shall conuerte vnto the, but cur ne not thou vnto the: and so shall I make the a strong brasen wall agaynst this people. * They shal fyghte agaynst the, but they shal not pueruall. For I myselfe will be with the, to helpe the and deliuer the. sayeth the Lord. And I wyl ryd the out of the handes of the wyched, and deliuer the out of the handes of ryauntes.

The xvi. Chapter.

The prophesie of the myserie of the Jewes. The helme that the northynge of Iherusalem is the contempt of God: his labour in cause of these myserie. The prophesie of the captiuitie of Babylon, and thes deliuerance from thence agayne. The callinge of the Gentyles.

Ihus sayde the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt take the no wyfe, nor beget children in this place. For of the children that are bozne in this place & of the mothers that haue bozne them, and of the fathers that haue begotten the in this land, thus sayth the Lord. They shall dye an horrible death: no man shall wepe for the nor bury them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They shall perishe thowge the swearde and hunger, and their bodies shall be meat for the foules of the aire, and bestes of the earth. For thus sayth the Lord. So not thou in vnto them, nor come to mourne & wepe for them: for I haue taken my peace fro this people. sayth the Lord. yee, my fauoure and my mercie. And in this lande shall they dye, olde and younge, and shall not be buried, no man shall be wepe them, no man shall clyppe or haue him selfe for them.

There shall not one viset another, to mourne with them for their deade, or to console them. One shall not offer another the cup of consolacio to forget their heuynesse for father and mother.

* Thou shalt not go into their fe: all house, to sit downe, to eat and drinke with them: For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel.

* Beholde, I shall take a waye out of this place the voyce of myrrh & gladnes, the voyce of the bridegrome & of the byde, yee, and that in your dayes, that ye maye see it.

C Nowe when thou seest this people at these wordes & they saye vnto the: * Wherefore hath the Lord deuised all this greates plage for vs? Or what is the offence & synne that we haue done against the Lord our God? Then make thou the this answer: * Because your fathers haue forsaken me: sayeth the Lord and haue walked after straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped, but me they haue forsaken and haue not kept my law. * And ye with your shameful blasphemies: haue exceeded the wickednes of your fathers. For every one of you hath folowed the freward and euell ymaginacio of his owne herte: and is not obedynte vnto me.

* Therefore wyl I cast you out of this lande into a land that ye and your fathers know not and there shall ye serue strange goddes day and nyght, there wyl I thewe you no fauoure. * Beholde, therefore sayth the Lord: the dayes are come that it shall no more be sayde: The Lord liueth which brought the children of Israel out of the lande of Egypte: But it shall be sayd: the Lord liueth that brought the children of Israel from the nozthe, and from all landes where he had scattered the: For I wyl byng the agayne into the lande that I gaue vnto the fathers

Beholde sayth the Lord: * I wyl sende out many spyhers to take them, and after that wyl I sende out hunters to hunte them out from all mountaines and hylles, and out of the caues of stone. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, & they can not be hid fro my face, neither can their wyched dedes be kept close oute of my syghte. But first wyl I sufficientely rewarde the: shamefull blasphemies & synnes, because they haue despyled my lande, namely with their synnyng ydoles and with the carions of the: abominacions, wherewith they haue filled myne heritage. * O Lord, my strength, my power a refuge, in tyme of trouble. The gentiles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the world, and say, Verely our fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes: their ydoles are but vayne and vnysofteable. How can a man make those his gods, whyche are not able to be gods? And therefore I wyl once teach them, sayth the Lord: I wyl thewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lord.

The xvii. Chapter.

The frewardes of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put thys confydence in man, & those blessed that trust to God against hys synners. God is the frewarder of the herte. The bynging waters are forsaken. The halowynge of the Sabboth is commaunded.

Youre synne (O ye of the trybe of Iuda) is wyrtten in the table of youre perces and grauen so vpon the hedges of youre aulcers with a penne of yd and with an Adamante clawe, that as the fathers thynke vpon the: children, so thynke you also vpon youre aulcers, wooddes the trees, hylles, mountaines and feldes. * Wherefore, I wil make my mounte that standeth in the felde al your substance and treasure to be spoyled, for the greates synne that ye haue doone vpon your hyl places thowge oute all the contres of your land, ye shall cast out also from the heritage that I gaue you. And I wyl subdue you vnder the heauye bondage of youre enemies, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue missered sye to myne indignacio, which shall burne euermoore. Thus sayth the Lord: * Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in man, and that taketh steepe for his arme, and he whose herte departeth from the Lord, he shall be lyke the brathe, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thynge, that is for to come he shall not se it: but dwell in a drye place of the wilderness, in a salte and vnooccupied lande. * Blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lord, and whose hope is the Lord him selfe. * For he shall be as a tree that is planted by the waters syde: whiche spredeth out the roote vnto myssnesse, whome the heate cannot harme: when it cometh, but his leaf shall be grene. And though there growe but lytle fruite, because of drought: yet is he not carful, but he neuer leaueeth of to byng for the fruite. Amonge all thynge man hath the most disceafull & stubborne hert. Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lord searche oute the grounde of the herte, and try the raines: & reward every man according to his wayes & according to the frute of his doings.

* The partyche maketh a nest of egges, which she layde not. he commeth by rchelle, but not ryghteously. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynd hym, and at the last be founde a verpe foole. But thou (O Lorde) whole thow one is moste glayous, excellent, and of moste antiquyte, which dwellest in the place of our holp sette: Thou art the comforte of Israel. All they that forsake the, shalbe confounded: all they that departe from the, shalbe written in earth: * for they haue forsaken the Lord the very conducte of the waters of lyfe.

D Heale me, O Lord, and I shalbe whole: saue thou me and I shalbe saued: for I art my praisse. Beholde, these men sape vnto me: Where is the woide of the Lord? (Let it come nowe.) Where as I neuer beleffe, obedyente folowed the as a shepherde, and haue not vncalled taken this of hie vpon me, this knowest thou well. My woide also were ryghte before the. Be not nowe terrible vnto me, O Lorde, * for thou art he in whome I hope. When I am in perill. Let my persecuters be confounded: but not me: let them be afrayd, and not me. Thou shalt byng vpon them the time of theyr plage, and shalt destruy them ryghte soze.

E Thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Go & stande vnder the gate where thow owest people and the kynges of Iuda go oute and in: pea, vnder al the gates of Ierusalem I sape vnto them heare the woide of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and all thou people of Iuda and all the cytyzens of Ierusalem, that go thow the gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth: * Take hede for your lyues, that ye carpe no burthen vpon you in the Saboth to bynge it thow the gates of Ierusalem: ye shal beare no burthen also out of your houses in the Saboth. Ye shall do no labour therein, but halowe the Saboth, * as I commaunded your fathers. howbeit, they obeyed me not, neyther hardened they vnto me but were obstinat and stubborne, & neyther obeyed me, nor receiued my correccion. Neuertheles if ye will heare me (sayth the Lord) & beare no burthen into & oute thow the gate vnto the Saboth if ye will halowe the Saboth, so if ye do no woike therein: then shal there go thow the gates of this cytie kynges and prynces, & shall sye vpon the thone of Dauid: They shalbe carped vpon charettes, & ryde vpon horses bothe they & theyr wyues. Pea whole Iuda & the cytyzens of Ierusalem shal go hede thow: & this cytie shal euer be the moze & moze inhabited.

There shall come men also from the cyties of Iuda, from aboute Ierusalem and from the lande of Ben Iamin, from the playne felde, from the mountaynes, and from the wyldernes which shal byng burnt offsprynges, sacrifices oblacions, and incense, and offer vp thanksgyng in the house of the Lord. But if ye wyl not be obedyente vnto me, to halowe the Saboth, so that ye wyl beare your burthens thow the gates of Ierusalem vpon & Saboth

Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem and it shall burne vpon the houses of Ierusalem and no man shalbe able to quenche it.

The xliii Chapter.

God sheweth by the example of a potter: that it is in his power to destroye the besydes of his woide: and to helpe them agayn when they amende. The conspiracy of the Iewes agaynst Jeremy. His prayer agaynst his aduersaries.

Ihs is another communicacyon that God had with Jeremy, sayng: Arise & go downe into the potters house and there shall I tell the moze of my mynde. Nowe when I came to the potters house. I founde hym making his woike vpon a whele. The vessel that the potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes. So he began a new and made another vessel according to his mind. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: * Waxe not I doo wyth you as this potter doeth. O ye house of Israel, saith the Lorde: Beholde ye house of Israel, ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the potters hande.

* When I take in hande to roote oute, to destroye, or to waste a waye anye people or kyngdome. * If the people agaynst whome I haue thus deuised) conuert from theyr wickednes: I repent of the plage. & I deuyled to byng vpon them. * Agayn, when I take in hande to builde or to plant a people or a kyngdom, if I same people do euill before me, and heare not my voice I repent of that good & I deuyled to do for them.

Speake now therfore vnto whole Iuda: and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Behold, I am deuising a plage for you and am taking a thyng in hande agaynst you.

* Therfore, let euery manne turne from his euill waye, take vpon you the thyng that is good & do right. But they said. A moze of this * we wyl folowe oure owne pynagynacions, and do euery man according to the wilfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus saith the Lorde: Aske among the heathen, if any man haue hearde suche horrible thynges, as the daughter of Sion hath done. Shal not the snow that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Lybanus) moflen the felde? Or maye the sprayes of waters be so grauen away, that they runne nomoze, gene mofnes noz make fruteful? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne gods. And theyr prophetes make them fall in theyr wayes from the auncent pathes, and to go into a fote way not vsed to be troden of iust men. Wherethow: they haue brought theyr lande into an euerlastyng wyldernes and scorne. * So that whosoever traualleth derby shalbe a bashed, and wag their heades.

With an aske wynde wyl I scatere them before theyr enemy. And when theyr destruccid cometh, I wyl turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then saide they: come let vs pynagyne some thyng agaynst this Jeremye: for the preachers shall no be destitute of counsell, nor the prophetes destitute of & woide of God. Come and let vs smite hym with & tongue and let vs marke all his wordes, consider me: D Lozde, & heare the voyce of myne enemies: Whal they recompence euell for good / for they haue dygged a pyt for my soule. Remembre that I stode before the, to speake good for them and to turne away thy wrath from them.

Therfore, let theyr chyldren dye of hunger and let them be oppressed with the sword. Let theyr wyues be robbed of theyr chyldren & become wyddowes: let their husbandes be slayne let theyr yonge men be kyled with the sword in the felde. Let synners be heard out of theyr houses, wher synners cometh secretly vpon the.

For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, and layde snares for my feet. Yet Lozde I knowest all theyr counsel, that they haue deuised to slay me. Forgeue not theyr wickednes: and let not theyr synne be put out of thy syghte, but let the be iudged before the as the gylete. This walte thou do vnto them in tyme of thy indignacion.

The xix. Chapter.

Of the prophecye the destruction of Ierusalem for the captivity and besyging of the wyche of God.

Thus sayde the Lozde: So the waye and by the an earthen pytcher, and bying forth & denatours & chese pytches vnto the valley of the chyldren of hemon, whiche lyeth before the doze that is made of byrche: and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the: and saye thus vnto them. Heare the wordes of the Lozde pe kynges of Iuda and ye cetergens of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Irael: Beholde, I wyll byng suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnhalowed this place and haue offered in it vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther they, theyr fathers, nor the kynges of Iuda haue knowen. They haue fylled this place also with the bloude of innocents. For they haue set up an alter vnto Baal, to burne their chyldren for a buente offeringe vnto Baal, whiche I nether commaunded nor charged the nether thought once there vpon.

Behold therefore the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lozde, that this place that nomore be called Topheth, nor the valley of the chyldren of hemon, but the valleye of slaughter. For in this place wyll I slaye the denatours of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the sword in the syght of theyr enemies, and of them that seke theyr lyues. And theyr dead carcasses wyll I geue to be meat for the foules of the ayre, and the bestes of the felde. And I wyll make this cytle so desolate & despyled, that who soeuer goeth thereby, shalbe abashed and iest vpon her because of all her plagis.

I wyll fede them also wyth the flesh of theyr sonnes and their daughters. Pea, euery one shall eat vp an other, in the besyging and straitnesse, wherewith theyr enemies that seke theyr lyues shall kepe them in. And the pitcher shalte thou breake in the syght of the men that shalbe wyth the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes. Euen so wyll I destroye this people and this cytle, as a man breaketh an earthen vessel that cannot be made whole agayne. In Topheth shall they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. Thus wyll I do vnto this place also: sayeth the Lozde: and to them that dwel there in: yee, I wyll do to this cytle as vnto Topheth (for the houses of Ierusalem, and the houses of the kynges of Iuda shalbe despyled, lyke as Topheth) because of all the houses, in whose parlours they dyd sacrifice vnto all the hostes of heauen, and powred byrche offeringes vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremie came from Topheth, wher the Lozde had sent hym to prophete and stode in the court of the Lozde, and spake to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Irael: Beholde, I wyll byng vpon this cytle & vpon euery towne about it: all the plagis that I haue deuised agaynst them: For they haue bene obstynate, & wolde not obey my warnynges.

The xx. Chapter.

Jeremie to susanna and call into prison for preaching of the word: of God the prophecye the captivity of Babylon. He explained that he in a mocking stroke for the words of God. He is compelled by the spirit to preach the word.

When Balthur the priest, the sonne of Emer, chiefe of the house of the Lozde heard Jeremie preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremie, and put him in the stocks: & are by the hye gate of Ben Iamin, in the house of the Lozde.

The nexte daye following Balthur broughte Jeremie oute of the stocks agayne. Then layd Jeremie vnto hym: The Lozde shal call the nomore Balthur: (his excellent and increasynge,) but Gago: (he is fearful & afraid) euery where. For thus saith the Lozde, behold, I wyll make the afraid euery thy selfe, and all that fauoure the whiche shall perishe with the sword of theyr enemies: euery before thy face.

And I wyll geue whole Iuda vnder the power of the kyng of Babylon, whiche shall carpe some vnto Babylon prisoners, & slaye some with the sword. Whereouer, all the substantances of this lande, all theyr precious & gorgeous wythes, all costlynes, and all the treasure of the kynges of Iuda, wyll I geue into the handes of their enemies whiche shal spoyle them, and carpe the vnto Babylon. But as for the (Balthur) shalte be carped vnto Babylon with all thyne household, & to Babylon shalte thou come, wher thou shalt dye, and be buried: thou and all thy fauourers to whome thou hast preached lyes.

O Lozde: If I am discyued, then haste thou discyued me: thou haste deite strongly, and haste preyauiled, and makest me stronge agayne. At the day long am I dyspyled & laughed to scoorne of euery manne, because I haue not preached longe agaynste malycious tyrannye and shewed them of destruction. For the which cause they call the wordes of the Lozde in my tery and take me euery to the wyse.

Wherfore I thought thus before, not to speake of hym, nor to preache any more in his name.

But

But the worde of J Lozde was a very burning fyre in my herte, and in my bones, which when I wolde haue stopp'd: I might not. For wher

I hearde so many derpysons and blasphemys on euery syde of me, complain vpon hym saye they: and we wyll tell his tale: yea, euen of myne owne companions, & suche as were conuersant with me, went about to murder me: saynge: vpon hym. We shall one waye or other begyle hym, and p'euayle against hym: and be aduenged of hym.

But the Lozde stode by me lyke a myghty gyant, therfore my persecuters fell, and could do nothyng. They shalbe soze confounded, for they haue done vnyuersally, they shall haue an euell lastyng name: * And now: O Lozde of hostes thou righteous searcher, (whiche knowest & raynes, and the very hertes) let me se them punished, for vnto the, I comyt my cause.

D Wng vnto the Lozde, and praye hym: for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed from the bande of the vyolente: * Cursed be the daye wher in I was borne: vnbappy be the day wher in my mother brought me forth. Cursed by the man that brought me father the tydynges to make hym glad, sayng: I hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cytyes which J Lozde turned vpside downe. Let hym heare cryng in the moynyng, & at none day lamentable howlyng. Wherfor thou not me as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe: O my mother had bene my graue her self, that the byrth myghte not haue come out, but remayned still in her. * Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe: To haue experyence of labour & sorrow, and to leade my lyfe with shame.

C The. xxi. Chapter.

Of the prophesie that Jeremie shalbe taken, & the cytye burned.

I These are the wordes that the Lozde spake vnto Jeremie: what tyme as kynge zedekias sent vnto hym. Wherfore the sonne of D Dauid, and so phonyas the sonne of Dauidas praye saynge: * The counsel at the Lozde (we pray J) of our behalf, for Nabuchodonosor K kynge of Babylon besegeth vs, yet the Lozde (peradventure) wyl deale with vs, according to his maruelous power, and take hym from vs.

B Then spake Jeremie: Seue zedekias thus answered. Thus sayeth the Lozde God of Israel beholde, I wyl turne backe the weapons I ye haue in your handes, wherby ye fyghte agaynst the kynge of Babylon and the Chaldees whiche besege you rounde about the walles: and I wyl byng them together in the myddest of this cytye, and I my self wyl fyghte against you with an outstretched hande and with a myghty arme, in greete dyspleasure and terribile wraethe and wyl smyte them I dwell in this cytye: yea, both men & cattell shall dye of great pestilence.

* And after this (sayth the Lozde) I shall deliuer zedekias K kynge of Juda, & his seruantes his people, and suche as are escaped in the cytye from the pestilence, swearde and hunger into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon: yea, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those that folowe vpon theyr spyes whiche shall smyte them with the swearde, they shall not p'prie them: they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercye vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the Lozde: behold, I lay besyde you the wynde of lye and deathe. * Whoso abydeth in this cytye, shall perishe: either with the swearde with hunger, or pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that besege it, he shall saue his lyfe, & shall wyne his soule for a praye. * For I haue set my face agaynst this cytye (sayth the Lozde) to plage it and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, & be bzent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda I say thus: heare J word of the Lozde: O thou house of Dauid, thou shalt saye to the Lozde: * Wyldest thou ryghteousnesse, and that sone: deliuer the oppressed from vyolent power, & ouer my terryble wraethe breake out lyke a fyre and burne, so that no maner maye quench it, because of the wychednesse of your imaginacions. * Behold (sayth the Lozde) I wyl come vpon you that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and felde, & say: * Cuth, who wyl make vs a leaue, or who wyl come into oure houses: For I wyl vyset you (sayth the Lozde) because of the wychednes of your inuencions, & wyl kyndle suche a fyre in your wood, as shall consume all I is about you.

C The. xxii. Chapter.

Of the prophesie that Jeremie shalbe taken, & the cytye burned.

I Thus saide the Lozde: Go downe into the house of the kynge of Juda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: heare the worde of the Lozde, thou kynge of Juda, that syrest in the kynge lyce seat of Dauid: thou and thy seruantes and thy people that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the Lozde commaundeth: * kepe quyet and ryghteousnesse, deliuer the oppressed from J power of the vyolente: doo not geue nor oppresse the stranger, the fatherlesse nor the wydow & the no innocent bloud in this place.

And kepe these thynges faithfully, then shal there come in at the doore of this house saynges to sye vpon Dauidas seate: they shalbe caried in charrettes, and ryde vpon horses bothe they and theyr seruantes, and theyr people. But ye wyl not be obedyent vnto these commaundementes: * If we are by myne owne selfe, sayth the Lozde) this house shalbe waste. For thus hath the Lozde spoken vpon J kynge house of Juda. Thou Gilead art vnto me J head of Lybanus. Shall I not make the so waste: and thy cyties also: J nom an shall dwell therein: I wyl prepare a destroyer with dys weapons for the to he we downe thy espycally Cedre trees, & to cast them in the fyre. And all the people I go by this cytye shal speak one to another. * Wherfore hath J Lozde done thus vnto this noble cytye: Then

The Prophecie.

Then shall it be answered: because they haue broken the couenaunt of the Lorde they God, and worshipped & serued straunge goddes.

* Woyn not ouer the dead: and be not woe for them, but be soye for hym that departeth away: for he cometh not agayne, and seeth his natyue countrey no more. For thus sayeth the Lorde: as touching * Well the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda: whiche raygned after his father, and is caried oute of this place, he shall neuer come hether agayne, for he shall dye in the place, wherunto he is led captiue, and shall see this lande nomore. * Woe worth hym & buyldeth his house with vnryghteousnesse, and his parlours with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours labour, nor payeth hym his hire: he buildeth in hym self, I wyl buyld me a wyde house and goyous parlours. he causeth windowes to be betwen therein, and felynges and ioyes maketh he of Cedre, and painteth the with Sennaper: Thynkest thou to raygne nowe, & thou pronokest me to wrath wth thy Cedar trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drinke, and prospered well, as long as he delte with equitye, and ryghteousnes? Per, when he helped the oppressed and poore to they ryghte, then prospered he wel. From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lorde: He uertheles, as for thyne eyes and thine hart, they loke vpon courtesies, to shed innocent blood to do wrongs & violence. * And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde agaynst Ierohim, the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda. They shall not mourne for hym (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas sister. Neither shall they saue vnto hym. Alas sye, alas for that noble wyner. But as an asse shall he be buried, corrupt, and be cast without the gates of Ierusalem.

E Clyme vnto the hill of Lybanus: O I thoughter upon lyfte by thy voyce vpon Basan, cry from all partes: for all thy iouers are destroyed. I gaue the warning, whyle thou wast yet in prosperitie. But thou saydest: I wyl not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed from thy youth that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmen shall be diuyn with the wynde: and thy derlinges shall be caried away into captiuitie. Then shalt thou be brought to shame & confusyon because of all thy wickednes, thou & dwellest vpon Lybanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedre trees. * Whow lyke shalt thou be regarded when thy sorowes & panges do come on the as a woman traueylng with chyld.

* As truly as I liue (saith the Lorde) Though Conanias the sonne of Ierohim, kynge of Iuda were the sygnet of my ryght hande, yet wyl I plucke hym of. And I wyl geue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of the that thou fearest, into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of the Chaldees. Woynouer, I wyl sende the & thy mother & bare & into a straunge lande wher ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyl despyse to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it againe. This man Conanias shall be like an ymage robbed and tozned in peces, whiche pleasech no man for all his apparell. Wherfore, both he and his seide shall be sent a way, and cast out into a land that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the woide of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Wylte this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperitie shall this man haue all his lyfe longe. Repeter shall any of hym seide be so happy, as to syt vpon the seate of Dauid: & to beare rule in Iuda.

But & I Lorde lyueth, which broughte forth, and led the seed of the house of Israel out of the Roithlande and from all countries where I haue scattered them: & they shall dwell in their owne lande agayne.

wherein they maye flacker and fall. For I will bring a plague vpon them, euen the yere of their visitacion, sayeth the Lorde. I haue sene folpe amonge the prophetes of Samarye, & preached for Baal, and disceyued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Ierusalem soule aduoutye, and presumtuous lyen. They take the most shameful men by the hande, slatering them: so that they can not returne from theyr wyckednes. All these whiche cytyens are vnto me as Sodome, and as a habytours of Gomoz.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes concerninge & prophetes. Behold, I will fede them with woxe and wode, and make them drinke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is yccuredly come into all the lande.

And therefore the Lorde of hostes geueth you this warnynge. Heare not the wordes of the prophetes that preache vnto you, and disceyue you: truelye they preache you vanite, for they speake the meaninge of their owne herte, and not out of the mouth of the Lorde.

They saye vnto them that despyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tush, ye shall prospere right wel. And vnto all them that walke after the luste of theyr owne herte: they saye: Tush there shal no misfortune happen you. For who hath sitten in the counsayl of the Lorde that he hath heard and understande, what he is about to do? Who hath marked his deuple, and heard it? Beholde, the scoyme whether of the Lorde (that is hym indignacion) shal goe forth, and a wyolent whylle wynde shal fall downe vpon the head of the vngodlye.

And the wyathe of the Lorde shal not turne againe, vntill he persourme a fulfyll the thought of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meynynge.

I haue not sene these prophetes, sayeth the Lorde: yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, yet they preached. But yf they had continued in my counsell, they had opened to my people my wordes, and they had turned my people from theyr euell wayes and wycked ymagynacions. Am I then God & seeth but the thyng whiche is nye at hande, and not that is farr off: sayeth the Lorde. Way any man hysde hym selfe so, that I shal not se hym, sayeth the Lorde. Do not I fulfyll heauen and earth, sayeth the Lorde. I haue heard wel ynough, what the prophetes saye, that preache lyen in my name, sayynge: I haue dreamed: I haue dreamed.

Howe longe will this contynne in the prophetes herte to tell lyen, & to preache the craftye subtelty of theyr owne herte: Whose purpose is (with the dreames & euery one tel) to make my people forget my name, as their fozefathers dyd when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame let him tell it: and he & understandeth my word, let hym shewe it saythfully.

For what hath he chaffe and wheate to do together sayth the Lorde: Is not my word lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde: and lyke an hammer: & breakech the hard stone: Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I will vpon the prophetes that steale my word pccuclly from euery man: Beholde here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst the prophetes & make tynge tendre to speake and to saye: The Lorde hath sayde it. Beholde here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst those prophetes that dare prophesie lyng dreames, and myacles, whome I neuer sente nor commaunded the. They shal do this people greute harme sayeth the Lorde.

Of this people, either any prophet or preache aske the, and saye, what is the burthen of the Lorde: Thou shalt saye vnto them: what burthen: Therefore will I caste you from me, sayeth the Lorde: because ye your selues are a burthen. And the prophete, wicak, of people that vseth this tearme (the burthen of our Lorde) hym wyl I wyllet: and his house also.

But this shall ye saye euery one to another, and euery man to his brother. What answereth the Lorde geuen: what is the Lordes commaundemente? And as for the burthen of the Lorde: ye shall speake nomore of it, for euery mannes owne word is his burthen because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuing God, the Lorde of hostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answereth the Lorde geuen the? What sayeth the Lorde: And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde. For so muche as ye haue vseth thys terme the burthen of the Lorde where as I notwithstandynge sente vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Behold therefore, I will repute you as a burthen, & wil cast you out of my pccesse: yee, & the cytie also & I gaue you and youre fathers: and will bring you to an euerlastynge confusyon: and into such a name as shal neuer be forgoth.

The xxiii. Chapter.

The vision of the paynes of sygges. The first vision signifyeth that parte of the people shal be brought agayne from captivite. The second that yechias and the rest of the people shal be deliuered.

The Lorde shewed me a vision. Behold, there stood two maidens of sygges before the temple of the Lorde: after that Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon had led awaye captiue Iechonias the sonne of Ieoahym: kynge of Iuda, the myghtye men also of Iuda with the woichemasters, and connyng men of Ierusalem: vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were verpe good sygges, euen lyke as those that be fyrtst rype. In the other maunde were verpe noughtye sygges whiche might not be eaten, they were so euell. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seest thou Jeremye? I sayde: sygges whereof some be very good, and some so euell that no man maye eate them.

Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, lyke as I knowest the good sygges, so shal I knowe the men led awaye whom I haue sent out of this place, into the lande of the Chaldeys.

Therefore

Therefore, tell them all these wordes, and say vnto them: * The Lord shall ceepe from aboue and let his voice be heard from his holy habitation. With a great noise shall he ceepe from his court regall: he shall geue a greete voyce, lyke the grapegatherers; & the sounde thereof shall be heard vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lord hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, and will holde his court of iustyce with all fleshe, & punyssh the vngodly: sayeth the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: * Behold a miserable plage shall goo from one people to another, and a great stormy water shall arise from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lord hym selfe slay them, from one end of the earth to another. For he shall no more be made for any of the, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as dunge vpon the ground.

Houme (O ye shepherdes) & ceepe, lyke your selues with albes, O ye rammers of the flocke for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slay one another, & ye shall be scattered and ye shall fall lyke vessels newly made.

* The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flye and the rammers of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes ceepe horribly, and the rammers of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lord hath consumed theyr pasture, and theyr best felde theyr dead, because of the horrible wrath of the Lord. They haue forsaken theyr foldes lyke as a yon. For their land is waste, because of his furpous crueltie, and for hym fearfull indignacion.

¶ The xxvi. Chapter.

Jeremye moueth the people to amendment, by shewing of the prophetes and prophetesses brought to iudgement. And sheweth the people to hym of Ierusalem contrary to the will of God.

In the begynnyng of the raygne of Jehohim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came this worde from the Lord, sayng: Thus saith the Lord

* Stande in the court of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (oute of the cyties of Juda) come, to do worshippe in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaund the to say.

* Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (per aduenture) they wyl herken, and turne euery man from his wyched waye, * that I maye also repente of the plage whiche I haue determined to byngne vpon them, because of theyr wyched inuencion.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lord: yf ye wyl not obey me to walke in my lawes whiche I haue geuen you, to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes whome I sent vnto you, clyng vnto mynselfe, and styl sendynge: yf ye wyl not followe them (I saye) then wyl I do to this house as I byd vnto Babilon, and wyl make this cytye to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the priestes, the prophetes, and all the people hearde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of the Lord.

Now when he had spoken out all the wordes that the Lord commaunded hym to preache vnto the people: then the priestes, the prophetes, and all the people take holde vpon hym, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bold, as to saye in the name of the Lord: it shall happen to this house as it byd vnto Babilon: and this cytye shall be so waste, yf no man shall dwell therein.

And when all the people were gathered about Jeremye, in the house of the Lord, the priuies of Juda heard of this rumour, and they came sone oute of the hynges palace, into the house of the Lord, and sat them downe before the netweyke of the Lord. Then spake the priestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people these wordes: * This man is worthy to dye for he hath preached agaynst this cytye, as ye your selues haue heard with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cytye all the wordes that ye haue heard. Therefore am I obedient vnto the voyce of the Lord your God so shall the Lord repente of the plage, that he hath deuyled agaynst you. Nowe as for me: I am in your handes, do with me as ye thinke expedient and good. But this shall you knowe, yf ye put me to deathe: * ye shall make your selues, this cytye, and all the inhabytours thereof guilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a truty that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the priestes and prophetes: This man may not be condemned vnto deathe, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lord our God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: Micah, the Mozaheite

* whiche was a prophete vnder Ezechiah kyng of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: * Spon shall be plowed lyke a feld, Ierusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shall be turned to an hye woode. Byd Ezechiah the kyng of Juda and the people of Juda put hym to deathe for this: No verely: * but rather feare the Lord, & made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the Lord repented of the plage, that he had deuised agaynst them.

Shulde we then do suche a shameful dede agaynst our soules: There was a prophete also that preached truly in the name of the Lord, called Aiah sonne of Semiah, of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cytye, and agaynst this lande accordyng to all as Jeremye sayeth. Now when Jeremye the kyng with all the elders & priuies, had heard his wordes, the kyng went about to slay hym. * When Aiah perceyued that, he was afrayed & fled, and departed into Egypte.

Then Jehoahim the kyng sent his seruantes into the lande of Egypte: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achboi: & certayne men with hym into Egypte, whiche fetched Aiah out of Egypte and brought hym vnto kyng Jehoahim, that slay hym with the sword, and cast his dede bodye into the comen peoples graue. But Ahicam the sonne of Nabhan helped Jeremij. & he came not into the banes of the people to be slayne.

The xxvii. Chapter.

¶ Jeremij at the chawmment of the Lorde sheweth how he was brought to the kinges of Iuda and to the other kinges that were neygh, wherby they are moued to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kinges & rulers, that they be true not false prophetes.

In the begynnyng of the reygne of Jehoahaz sonne of Josiah king of Iuda, came this word vnto Jeremij from the Lorde, which spake thus vnto me. Make the bondes & chaynes and put them aboute thy necke, and sende them to the kyng of Edom, to the kyng of Moab, to the kyng of Ammon, to the kyng of Tyrus, and to the kyng of Sidon: and that by the messengers which shall come to Ierusalem vnto zebediah the kyng of Iuda, and bydde them say vnto theyr masters: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel, speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he, & made the earth, the men, and the cattel that are vpon the grounde, with my grete power, and outstretched arme: and haue geue it vnto whome it pleased me: * And now wyl I deliuer al these lades into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon my seruant. The bestes also of the feilde shall I geue him to do him seruice. * And al people shall serue him, & his sonne, and his childrens children vnto the time of the same lande be come also: yet many people and great kynges shall serue hym.

Wherouer, that people & kyngdom whiche wyl not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyl not put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babilon: I same people wyl I visyte with the swerde, with hunger, with pestilence, vntill I haue consumed them in his handes, sayeth the Lorde. * And therfore folowe not your prophetes, sorchaers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytyches, whiche saye vnto you: ye shall not serue the kyng of Babilon. For they preache you lyes: to byng you farr from your lande, and that I myght caste you out, and destroye you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babilon, and serue hym: those wyl I lette remayne still in theyr owne lande (saith the Lorde) and they shall occupie it and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde I zedekia the kyng of Iuda, and sayd: * But your neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babilon, and serue hym and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wylte thou and thy people praye with the swerde with hunger, with pestilence: lyke as the Lorde hath deuyled for all people, that wyl not serue the kyng of Babilon? * Therfore geue no care vnto those prophetes (that tell you: ye shall not serue the kyng of Babilon) for they preache you lyes: neither haue I sent them, sayeth the Lorde howbeit they are bolde, falsly to prophete in my name, that I myght sloue byng you out, and that ye myght perishe by your preachers.

I spake to the prestes also and to all the people: Thus saith the Lorde: heare not the wordes of those prophetes that preache vnto you, and saye: Beholde, * the vessels of the Lordes house shall shortly be broughte byther agayn from Babilon: for they prophete lyes vnto you. heare them not, but serue the kyng of Babilon: that ye maye lyue. Wherfore wyl ye make this cite to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in verie dede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be completed vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of hostes that the remnant of the ornamentees (whiche are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kyng of Iuda, and at Ierusalem) be not carryed to Babilon also. For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken, concernynge the pylers, the lauer, the seate: and the resydue of the ornamentees that yet remaine in this cite, which Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon toke not, * when he carryed awaye Ieconiah the sonne of Jehoahaz kyng of Iuda with all the power of Iuda and Ierusalem vnto Babilon captiue.

Pea, thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken, as touchynge the resydue of the ornamentees of the Lordes house, of the kyng of Iudaes house, and of Ierusalem: * They shall be carryed vnto Babilon, & there they shall remayne vntill I visyte them, sayeth the Lorde. * Then wyl I byng them byrder agayne. And this was done in the same yere, even in the begynnyng of the reygne of zedekiah kyng of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ The false prophete of Hananiah the prophet Jeremij sheweth that the prophete of Hananiah is false, by the example of the other prophetes. He byngs the kynges of the Lorde, especially Hananiah, prophesyng his death.

In the fourthe yere of the reygne of zebedekiah kyng of Iuda, in the fyrste moneth happened that Hananiah the sonne of Asur the prophete of Gibeon, spake to me in the house of the Lorde in the presence of the prestes and of all the people, & sayde: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yoke of the kyng of Babilon, * and after two yere wyl I byng agayne into this place al the ornamentees of the Lordes house, & Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon carryed awaye from this place, vnto Babilon. Pea, I wyl byng agayne Ieconiah the sonne of Jehoahaz the kyng of Iuda hym selfe, with all the pyloners of Iuda (that are carryed vnto Babilon) even into this place, sayeth the Lorde. For I wyl bryake the yoke of the kyng of Babilon.

Then the prophet Jeremij gaue answer vnto the prophet Hananiah befoze the prestes, and befoze all the people that were presente in the house of the Lorde. * And the prophete Jeremij sayde: Amen, the Lorde do that, and graunte the thyng whiche thou hast prophesied: that he may byng agayne all the ornamentees of the Lordes house, and restore all the pyloners frome Babilon into this place. But thou also what I wyl saye, that thou and all the people maye heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tyme past, which prophesied of warre of trouble of trouble, of pestilence, either of peace, vpon many nacions and great kyngdomes, were proued by this (yf god had sent them in very dede) wher the thing came to passe, whych the p[ro]phete tolde before. And hananiah the p[ro]phete toke the chayne from the p[ro]phet Jeremies necke, & broke it, and with that sayd hananiah, that al the people mighte heare. Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyl I breake the pochte of Ra-buchodonozor kyng of Babilo, from the necke of all nacions: yee, and that within this two yeres. And so p[ro]phet Jeremy went his way.

Some after that hananiah the p[ro]phet had taken the chayne from the p[ro]phet Jeremies necke and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the p[ro]phet Jeremy, saying: Go, and tell hananiah these wordes. Thus sayth the Lorde.
Thou hast broken the cheyne of wodde: but in steade of wodde thou shalt make cheynes of yron.
For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I wyl put a pochte of yron vpon y^e neck of al this people, that they may serue Rabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon: yee, and so shal they do. And I wyl geue him the deastes in the felde. Then said the p[ro]phet Jeremie vnto the p[ro]phet hananiah: Hear me hananiah. The Lorde hath not sent me, but I bringest this people into a false belefe. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde, beholde: I wyl sende the out of the land and within a yere thou shalt die, because thou hast said y^e spoke against the Lorde. So hananiah the p[ro]phet died the same yere in y^e vii. moneth.

The xxix. Chapter.

The p[ro]phete of Jeremie sent vnto them that were in cap-tivitye in Babilon. He p[ro]pheseth the returne from the captivitye after 70 yeres. He p[ro]pheseth the destruction of the kyngs and of the people that conspire in Jerusalem.
He threatneth the two p[ro]phets that seduce the people. The death of hananiah the p[ro]phet is p[ro]phesed.

These are y^e wordes of y^e booke that Jeremy the p[ro]phet sente from Jerusalem vnto the prisoners, y^e senatours p[re]astes, p[ro]phetes, & all the people whom Rabuchodonozor had led fro Jerusalem vnto Babilon: after the tyme that kyng Sehoniah & his queene, his chamberlains the princes of Iuda and Jerusalem, the woche maisters of Jerusalem were departed thither.
Whiche booke Eliaha the sonne of Saphan & Somaiah y^e sonne of heliah dyd beare, whiche zedekiah the kyng of Iuda sent vnto Babilon to Rabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilo, these were the wordes of Jeremies booke.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken vnto al the prisoners, that were led from Jerusalem vnto Babilo, * buyd you houses to dwel therein, plant you gardens: that ye may enioye the frutes therof. * take you wy-ues, to beare you sonnes & daughters, prouyd wyues for your sonnes, & buyndes for your daughters: that they may get sonnes & daughters: and that ye maye multiplye there. Laboure not to be lette but seke after peace and prosperi-te of the citty wherein ye be prisoners, * and pray vnto the Lorde for it. For in y^e peace therof shall your peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes y^e God of Israel, * Let not these p[ro]phe-tes and soothsayers that be among you disceane you & beleue not yowre owne dremes. For why * they p[re]ach you lyes in my name, And I haue not sent them, saith the Lorde.

But thus sayeth the Lorde: * When ye haue fulfilled lxx. yeres at Babilon, I wyl byp[re]ssye you home, and of myne owne goodnes I wil ca-rye you hither agayne into this place. For I knowe what I haue deuysed for you sayth the Lorde: My thoughtes are to geue you peace, & not trouble (whych I geue you already) & that ye myghte haue hope agayne. * Ye shal crye vnto me, ye shal go and call vpon me, & I will heare you. * Ye shal seke me & fynde me. Yee, yf so be y^e ye seke with your whole herte: I wil be found of you saith the Lorde, & I wyl deliuer you out of prison: and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherin I haue scattered you, saith the Lorde, & wyl byp[re]sye you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried awaye captiue. But where as ye say, that God hath raised you vp p[ro]phetes at Babilo: thus hath the Lorde spoken to the kyng that sitteth in the chyrone of Babilo, & to all the people that dwell in this citty, your b[re]thren * that are not in Babilon, gone with you into captivitye: Thus (I saye) speareth the Lorde of hostes beholde. * I wyl sende a swerde: hunger, & pestilence vpon them and wil make them like vntymely figges, that maye not be eaten for bitterness. And I wil persecute them wth swerd, with hunger, & pestilence.

I wil deliuer them vp to be verred of al kyng domes to be cursed, abhorrred, laughed to scoyne and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes: saith the Lorde whiche I sent vnto them by my seruantes the p[ro]phetes. * I stode vpearlye, and sente vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayth the Lorde. Heare therefore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prisoners, whome I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babilon. Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Ihab the sonne of Eliaha, and of zedekiah the sonne of Iahazabab, whiche p[ro]phetic lyes vnto you in my name. Beholde I wyl deliuer them into the hande of Rabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon, that he maye slaye them before your eyes. And all the prisoners of Iuda, that are in Babilon, shall take vp this terme of cursynge and saue. Some God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto zedekiah and Ihab, whome the kyng of Ba-bilon rosted in fyre, because they sinned againe fully in Israel. For they haue not only despyed they^e neyghbours wyues, but also p[re]ached lying wordes in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded them.

This I testifie: and assure, saith the Lorde But as for Demetiah y^e Rechabite, thou shalt speake vnto him. Thus saith the Lorde of hostes y^e God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto al the people that are at Jerusalem, and to Zophoniah the sonne of Gaaliah the prest: yee, and sente them to al the

The Prophecye.

Preacher: wherein thou writest thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordeyned the to be a preast in the stead of * Jehoiada & preast that thou shouldest be the chiefe in the house of the Lord, aboue all prophetes and preachers, and that thou myghtest set them vpon the pyllyer, as in the stocks. Howe happeneth it then, that thou hauest not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, whych neuer lea- neth of his prophetsyng: And belydes all this, he hath sent vs woordes vnto Babilon, & tolde vs playnely: that oure captiuitie shal longe dure: that we shoulde buyde vs houses to dwell therein: and to plante vs gardens, that we may enioye the frutes therof. Which letter Dopho- niad the prest receiue, & let Jeremy the prophete heare it. Then came the woordes of the Lord vnto Jeremy sayng: sende woord to all them that be in captiuitie: on this maner: Thus haue the Lord spoken concerning Semiah the Rechelamite: because that Semiah hath prophesied vnto you without my commission & broughte you into a false hope, therefore thus saith the Lord doth rectifye you: Behold, I wyl visit Semiah the Rechelamite, & his seed: so that none of his shal remaine amonge this people, and none of them shal see the good: I wyl do for this people, saith the Lord. For he hath preached falsely of the Lord.

The xxx. Chapter.

Exhortation of the people from Babilon God by his chyr-sting strength that the people in synners, the to the of the sinners of Israel.

I These are the woordes, that the Lord sheweth vnto Jeremy sayng. Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: * Wryte vp diligently al the woordes that I haue spoke vnto the, in a booke. For loo, the time cometh, saith the Lord that I wyl bringe agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel, and Iuda, sayre the Lord. For I wil restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shal haue it in possession. Agayne, these woordes spake the Lord, concer- nyng Israel and Iuda: Thus sayth the Lord. We haue hearde a terrible cry, feare and disqui- eten, for what elles doth this signifye, that I see. Namely that all stronge men lympt, euerye man his hand vpon his loines, as a woman in the payne of her trauaile. Whoruere saw a man trauaile with chylde: Enquyre there after, and se. See, all they faces are maruelous pale.

25 Alas for this daye, which is so dreadfull that none maye be likened vnto it, and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, for the whych he shal yet be deliuered. For in 5 dayes sayth the Lord of hostes I wyl take his yoke fro of hyne and breake the bondes: And strangers shal no more lette hym, but they shal do seruer vnto God they Lord, and to Dauid they kynge, whome I wyl raise vp vnto the. * And as for the, O my seruant Jacob, feare not sayre the Lord, and be not afrayed, O Israel. For loo, I wyl helpe the also from sacre, and they sed fro the lande of they captiuitie. And Jacob shal turne agayne, he shal be in rest, and haue a pro- sperous lyfe, and no man shal make him afrayd

For I am with the to helpe the saith the Lord. * And though I shall destroye all the people among whom I haue scattered the, yet wil I not destroye the, but correct the, & that with dis- cretion: For I know that thou art in no wise without faute. Therefore thus saith the Lord Thy bysnynges are pailous: and thy woundes redy to cast the into sickness. There is no ma to medle with thy cause, or to laye plaster vpon or to bynde vp the woundes there maye no man helpe the. All thy louers haue forgotten the, & care not hyng for the. For I haue geuen a cru- el stroke, and chastened the roughly: & that for the multitude of thy misdeades: for thy synnes haue had 5 ouerhand. Why makest thou more for thyne harme in dede, thou art soze wounded and in leoparde, but for the multitude of thy mysdoes & synnes: I haue done this vnto the.

* And therefore all they that denour the, shal be deuoured, and al thine enemies shal be led in to captiuitie. All they that make the wast, shal be wasted them selues, and al those that rob the wyl I make also to be robbed. For I wyl geue the thy helth agayne & make thy woundes whole saith the Lord, because they reuiled the, as one cast a way & despised. And (saith the) is the who no ma regardeth. For thus saith the Lord. Beholde: * I wyl byynge agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs teetes & defende his dwelling place. The cite shal be builded in her olde estate, & the hou- ses shal haue their right foundacion. And out of them shal go thanksguyng: & the voyce of lode.

I wyl multiplie them, and they shal not be fraye: I shall endue them with honoure, and no man shal subdue them. They chylde shal be as afoze time, and they congegraci shal con- tinue in my syde. And al those that were them wil I visit. * A captaine also shal come of them and a pynce shal spyng our from the middest of them, him wyl I challenge to my selfe and he shal come vnto me. * For what is he y gyuerth ouer his herte to come vnto me sayth the Lord. * He shal be my people also, and I wyl be your God. Beholde: on the other syde shal I wathe of the Lord byake out as a storme water as a myghtye whylle wynde, and shal fall vpon the heades of the vngodlye.

The terrible displeasure of the Lord shal not leaue of, vntyl he haue done, & performed the intente of his herte, * which in 5 latter dayes ye shal vnderstande: At the same tyme sayeth the Lord, that I be the God of al generations of Israel, and they shal be my people.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The prophecye that the people of Israel shal be restored agayne vnto the prosperitie. To be turned from synne to the grace of God. The birth of Christ is prophesied. Al the wicked shal dye in their wickednes. The new Testament is couenanted to prosper. The City of Ierusalem is to be builded & the people of the Lord. Oure synnes shal be remitted, that they shal not anye thought on God promyseth that he wil care of the Iewes. The bysynge agayne of Ierusalem.

I Thus sayth the Lord: the people of Israel, whych escaped in the wyldernes fro the swearde, founde grace to come into they rest. Euen so shal the Lord nowe al so appere vnto me from sacre and saye, I loue

John. vi. 3 * I loue the wyth an euerlastyng loue, therefore by my mercye I haue drawen the to me. I will repayre the agayne, O thou daughter of Israel that thou mayest be faste and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabernacles agayne, and go forth wyth the that leade the dancke. Thou shalt plant vynges agayne vpon the hylls of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plant, and commenlye eate of it.

For the dayes shall come when the watchmen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye, a-crye, * let vs go vpon the mount to our Lord God for thus sayth the Lord: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentyles: speake out, synge and saye: O Lord saue thy people, the remnant of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde, I will brynge them a-gayne from oute of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the world, with blynde and lame that are amonge them, wyth the women that be greete wyth chyldre, and suche as be also deliuered: and the compaignie of them that come agayne, shall be greete.

They shall come wepyng and wyth mercyfull pte wyll I brynge them byther agayne, I wyll lead the to fprynge of water in a strygge waie, where they shall not stumble. * For I am Israelis father, & Ephraim is my first borne.

Hear the woide of the Lord, O ye Gentyles, preache in the ples, that lye farre of, and saye he that scattered Israel, shall gather hym together agayne, and shall hepe hym, as a shepheard dorch his flocke. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and red hym from the bande of the vpolent, and they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes which the Lord shall geue them. Namely: wheat wyne: oyle, ponge shepe and calues. And they conscience shall be as a welwatered garden, for they shall nomoze be hungry.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the dancke pee, bothe ponge and olde folkes. For I will turne they: sozow into gladnesse, and wyll com-forte them from they: sozowes: and make them ioyfull. I wyll powre plenteousnesse vpon the heres, of the prestes, and my people shall be satisfy-ed wyth my goodnesse sayth the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * the voyce of heunesse, wepyng and lamentacyon was herde on the euen of Rachel mournyng for her chyldren & wold not be comforted, because they were away.

But now sayth the Lord, leaue of from wepyng and cryenge, wythholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayth the Lord. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of they: enemyes: Pee, euen thy posterite shall haue consolacyon in theys, sayth the Lord, that thy chyldren shall come agayne into they: owne lande. Moreover, I heard Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, complayne on this maner. * O Lord, thou hast correct me and thy cha-stityng haue I receaved, as an vntamed calfe.
* Conuerter thou me, and I shall be conuerted: for thou art my Lord God: Pee, asone as thou tur-nest me, I shall reforme my selfe, and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thigh. For verely I haue comytted shamefull thynges. For I haue doone p repulse & confusion of my youth.

Vpon this complayne, I thought thus by my selfe, * is not Ephraim my dere sonne: is he not the chyldre, wyth whome I haue had all my myth and passyme: For sem the tyme that I syllt comened wyth hym, I haue him euer in re-membraunce: therefore, my verpe berre depucth me vnto hym, gladly and longyngly wyll I haue mercye vpon him sayth the Lord: Set watch men, proude teachers for the: set thine bett vpon the ryght waie, that thou shouldest walke, and turne agayne, O thou daughter of Israel, turne agayne to the cyties of thyne. Howe longe wyll thou go astraye, O thou synners daughter: For the Lord wyll worke a newe thyng vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. It wyll come therto, that wht I haue broughte Iuda out of captiuyte, these wordes shall be heard in the lande and in his cyties. The Lord which is the sayre & bydegrome, of rygh-teousnesse, make the fructfull, O thou holy hyll.
And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cyties, & shepherdes, and husbandmen. For I * shall fede the hungry soule, and refrethe all fayne hertes.
When I herd this, I came agayne to my selfe. I mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete sleepe. Beholde, sayth the Lord, the dayes come that I wyll sowe the house of Israel, & the house of Iuda, wyth men and wyth cattell.

* Pee, it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them oute, to scatter them, to bryake them downe, to destroie them, and chasten them: Euen so wyll I also go dyligently aboute, to bryde them vpon agayne, & to plante them, sayth the Lord. * Then shall it nomoze be sayd: the fathers haue eaten a sowte grape, and the chyldrens teth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for his owne misdeede: so that that I wyll make a newe couenaunt wyth the house the couenaunt that I wyll make wyth the house of Israel after those dayes, sayth the Lord. * I wyll plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in they: hertes, * and wyll be they: God, and they shall be my people.

And from thence forth, shall no man teache his neyghboure as his brother, and saye: knowe take out of my sight, sayth the Lorde. So shall the scoe of Israel neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me.

So:ouer, thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen above cannot be measured, and as fouldarpons of the earth beneath maye not be soughte oute. * So wyll I also not calke oute the whole scoe of Israel, for that they haue comytred: sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lorde: that the cytie of the Lorde shalbe enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner walle. From thence shall the ryght measure be taken before her vnto the byll toppe of Garb, and shall come aboute Garb and the whole valley of the deade carthasses, and of the ashes, and al the felde vnto the booke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the hollygate toward the East, where as the sanctuary of the Lorde also shalbe set. And when it is now builded, and set vp of thyng fast vpon, it shal neuer be broken nor cast downe any more.

The xxxiij Chapter.

Jeremye is cast into pylon, because he prophesied that the cytie shalbe destroyed of the henge of Babylon. By the which that heere is bought of the commandment of the Lorde, as frumpred, that the people shalbe come agayne to their owne pylon. The people of God are his seruantes, and he is their Lorde. To leaue God is to leaue his people, so the intent that they maye be destroyed.

In these wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremye, in fiftenth yere of zedekiah kynge of Iuda: whyche was the eghthen yere of Nabuchodonosor, at tyme as the kynge of Babylons house laye syege vnto Ierusalem: But Jeremye the prophet laye bounde in the court of the pylon, which was in the hyng of Judas house: where zedekiah the kynge of Iuda caused hym to be layde, because he had prophesied of this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll deliuer the cytie into the handes of the kynge of Babylons, whiche shall take it. As for zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of the kynge of Babylons which shal speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shall lye another in the face. And zedekiah shalbe carped vnto Babylons, & there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vylt him, sayth the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hande to fyghte agaynst the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremye sayth: thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me. Beholde, Hananeel, the sonne of Belum thyn vnckles sonne, shall come vnto the and requyre the to redeme the lande that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of synned it is thy ryght to redeme it, and bye it out.

And Hananeel, myne vnckles sonne came to me in the court of the pylon, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me: Wyt my lande, I praye the: that lyeth in Anathoth in the country of Ben Iamin: for by heretage I haue ryght to lose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued that this was the comaundment of the Lorde, and so I bought the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, mine vnckles sonne and wayed hym there the money: euen seuen sy-

cles, and ten silver pence.

I caused hym also to make a wytyng, and to seale it: and called recorde therby, and wayed hym there the money vpon the weygthes. So I toke the cupdence with the coppe when it was orderly seald & red it over, and I gaue the cupdence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah in sygnt of Hananeel, my cosyne and in the presence of the wytnesses, that be named in the cupdence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the court of the pylon.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying. The Lorde of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take this seald cupdence with the coppe: and to lape it in an erthen vessel, that it may longe contynue. For the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel hath determined that houses shalbe sold, and vyneyardes shalbe possessed agayne in this lande. Now when I had deliuered the cupdence vnto Baruch sonne of Neriah, I besoughte the Lorde, saying: O Lorde God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and thy arme, and there is nothing that I can saye. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thou sandes, thou recompenseth the wyckednes of the fathers, into f bosome of the chyldren that come after them. Thou art the great & myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: greete in counsell, and excellent in worke. Thyn eyes lye vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, * to rewarde euery one after his waye: and accordyng to the frutes of his inuencions.

Thou hast done great tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypt, as we se this daye vpon the people of Israel. & vpon those men, to make thy name great, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought the people of Israel out of the lande of Egypt with tokens, with wonders with a myghty hand, with a stretched out arme and with greete terribleness: and hast gyven them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto thy fathers. Namely, that thou woldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye. * Now when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, & walke not in thy lawe, * but all that thou commaundest them to do, that haue they not done, & therfore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwoches made nowe agaynst the cyty to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Chaldees that besyge it with swearde, with hunger, & death: and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, al thynges are present vnto the. Yet (sayst thou vnto me O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall loose a peece of lande vnto my selfe, & take wytnesses thereto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me saying: Behold I am the Lorde God of all flesh is there any thyng then to haue for me. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: * Behold, I shall deliuer this cytye into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor, the kynge kyng of Babylon, they shall take it.

For the Chaldees shall come and burne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and bowyed bypnyhe offerynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For I saye the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Iuda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr youth vpon what haue they els done but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes, sayeth the Lord.

What hath this cytye ben els but a pryncyng of my wrath, euer sence the day that they byploed it, vnto this houre wherein I call it out of my fynde, because of the great blasphemys of the chyldren of Israel and Iuda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yee they, their kynges they, paynes, they, prayes, they, prosperes, the men of Iuda, & the cytyens of Ierusalem.

When I stode vpon the wall, and taught them & instructed them, they turned their backs to me and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed & correct, but set theyr ydols in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to despyle it. They haue byploed bye places for Baal, in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to bowe theyr sonnes & daughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer commaunded them: they ther came it euer in my thowght to make Iuda synne with such an abominacyon. And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken, concerninge this cite, which (as ye your selues confesse) shall be deliuered into the handes of the kyng of Babylon when it is donne with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence. Beholde, I will gather them together from all landes, wherein I haue scattered them in my wrath in my fearfull & great displeasure, & I will bypnyng them agayn vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, & I will be theyr God.

And I will gyue them one hert & one way, that they may feare me al the dayes of their life: that they & theyr chyldren after them may prosper. And I will set vpon euerylastyng covenants with them. Namely, that I will neuer cease to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their hartes, so that they shal not runne away from me. Yee, I will haue a lust, and pleasure to do them good, & sayethfully to plant them in this lande with my whole herte, & with all my soule. For thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as I haue bypnynged all this great plage vpon this people, euen so will I also bypnyng vpon them all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande: whereof ye saye now, that it shall neuer be inhabited of the people, nor of cattell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shall be bought for money, and euidences made there vpon, & sealed before wytnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Ierusalem, in the cyties of Iuda, in cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lye beneth yee, and in cyties that are in the south. For I will bypnyng theyr bypnyngers byther agayne, sayeth the Lord.

The prophete is mannyng of the Lorde to praye for the deliuerance of the people, whiche the Lorde promysed: God sheweth synners, and howe graciously to the people, for theyr owne sake. Of the byrth of Christe. The kyngdome of Christe in the church shall neuer be ended.

Where, the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye on this maner, when he was yet bounde in the Courte of the prynces. Thus sayeth the Lord, whiche fulfyllereth the thyng that he speaketh: the Lord whiche perfourmeth the thyng that he taketh in hande, euen he whose name is the Lord. I crye vnto me and I will answer, and I will beate and bye thynges, whiche were vnknewen vnto the. Thus I saye I spake the Lord God of Israel, concerninge the houses of this cytye and the houses of the kyng of Iuda, & they are broken: for I have the dynallie & the swerde: Because the inhabitants of this cytye are come to fighte agaynst the Chaldees, and they are fylled with the drake hartes of men whome I haue slayne in my wrath and displeasure: when I turned my face from this cytye, because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde sayeth the Lord, I will repaire and heale theyr woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the large treasure of peace and truth. And I will returne the captiuitie of Iuda and Israel: and I will set them vpon agayn as they were afore. From all misdoers, wherein they haue offended agaynst me, I will cleanse them.

And all theyr blasphemys whiche they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I will forgyue them. And this shall get me a name a people, and honour amonge all the people of the earth, whiche shall heare all the good that I will shewe vnto them: yee, they shall be as a people, and as a people at all the good dedes and benefites that I will do for them. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord: In this place where of ye saye that it shall be a wyldernesse, wherein neither people nor cattell shall dwell: in the maner in the cyties of Iuda and wythoute Ierusalem (whiche also shall be so voyde, that neither people nor cattell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladnesse be heard agayne, the voyce of the bydegrome and of the byde, & voyce of them that shall sing: Prayse the Lord of hostes, for he is louyng: and his mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shall offer vpon giftes in the house of the Lord. For I will restore the captiuitie of this land, as it was afore: sayeth the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, It shall come yet thereto, that in this lande, which is voyde from men and cattell and in all the cyties of the lande, there shall be set vpon shepheardes cotages: in the cyties vpon the mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cyties of the south.

In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the feldest of Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda shall they be nombred agayne, vnder the bande of hym, that telleth them, sayeth the Lord: Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lord: that I will perfourme that good thyng, whiche I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel, and to the house of Iuda.

The Prophecye

In those dayes and at the same tyme, I will bringe forth vnto Dauid, the brāuche, of ryghteousnesse, and he shall do equyte and ryghteousnesse in the lande. In those dayes shall Iuda be helped, and Ierusalem shall dwell safe, and he shall call her, is euen God our ryghteousnesse. For thus the Lorde promyseth * Dauid shall neuer want one to sit vpon the throne of his house of Israel: neither shall the priests and Leuites want one to offer alwaye before me burnt offerings, to kindle the meateofferings, and to prepare the sacrifices.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie after this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde: Owe the couenaunt * whiche I haue made with dauid and nought be broken, that there shulde not be day and nought in due season: Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunt, & so he not to haue a sonne to raygne in his throne: so that also the priests and Leuites neuer sayle, but serue me. * For lyke as the starres of heauē may not be nombred neyther the lande of the see measured: so will I multiplye the seede of Dauid my seruaunt, and the Leuites, my ministers.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, sayinge: Considerest thou no what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (say they) hath the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he cast away. For so they haue despised my people, and they reputed them as though they were no people. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt with dauid and nought, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: the will I also caste awaye the seede of Iacob & Dauid my seruaunt, so that I will take no pynce out of his seede, to rule the posterite of Abraham Isaac and Iacob. But yet I will turne agayne theyr captiuitie, and be mercifull vnto them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The thirtieth that the cytie, & the kyng iehoiachin also that: be geuen into the handes of the kyng of Babilon. the rebueth them that broughte such of thesē iehoiachin into captiuitie, as were pardoned to goe at theyr libertie.

These are the wordes whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie. * What tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon & all his hostes (out of all the kyngdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people foughte agaynst Ierusalem, and all the cyties ther of. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: So, and speake to iehoiachin the kyng of Iuda, and tell hym: The Lord sendeth this word vnto the. Beholde, * I will deliuer this cytie into his hand. Beholde, * I will deliuer this cytie into his hand of the kyng of Babilon: he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, and deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babilon in the face and he shall speake vnto the mouth to mouth: & then shalt thou goo to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O iehoiachin, & kyng of Iuda: Thus sayth the Lorde vnto the. Thou shalt not be slayne with the swerde, but shalt dye in peace. * Lyke as the forefathers the kinges, thy progenitors were bent: so shalt thou be bent also, & in thy mourning they shall say: Oh Lord

For thus haue I determined, sayth the Lorde.

Then sayd Jeremie the prophete all these wordes vnto iehoiachin kyng of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kyng of Babilons host besieged Ierusalem, & the remnant of the cyties: Namely, Lachis and Iekab, which yet remanend of the * stronge fenced cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, when iehoiachin was agreed with all his people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed * a libertie, so that euery man shulde let his seruaunt & handmaide go fre: Hebrue, and hebruisse, and no Jewe holde his brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes, & all the people which had gathered vnto this agreement, & euery man shulde let at libertie his bonde seruaunt, & bond woman, & no longer to holde them bonde, euen so they were obedyent, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented and toke agayne the seruautes and handmaidens, whom they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie from the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel.

* I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egypt, (that they shulde nomore be bondmen) sayinge: When leui peres are out, euery man shall let his bought seruaunt, an hebrue go fre, if he haue serued hym fyve yerres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned, and byd ryght before me in that ye proclaimed, euery man to let his neyghbour go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in my temple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, & blasphemed my name. In this, & euery man hath requyred his seruants and handmaidens agayne, whom ye haue let go quyte and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, & so be your bondmen, and bondwomen. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclaim freedom vnto his brother and neyghbour: wherefore I will call you vnto a freedom, sayth the Lorde: euen vnto the swerde, to the pestilence & to hunger, and will make you to be plagued in all the kyngdomes of the earth. Per, those men that haue broken my couenaunt, & not kept the wordes of the appoyntment which they made before me, when they swored & calfe in two, & when there went thow the two halves therof: the princes of Iuda, the princes of Ierusalem, the gelded men, the priests, and all the people of the lande, whiche went thow the two halves of the calfe. Those men will I gyue into the power of thre enemies, and into the handes of them that followe vpon theyr lyues.

* And theyr dead bodies shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the feld. As for iehoiachin the kyng of Iuda and his princes, I will deliuer them into the power of theyr enemies, and of them that desire to slay them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babilons host, which now is departed from you: But thow my commandement (sayth the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this ctyte, they shall syt agaynst it: they shall burne it: & ouerthrowe it. I will lape the ctytes of Iuda so wastell, that no man shall dwell therein.

¶ The lxxv. Chapter.

¶ The purpose of the chapter is the commandment of the Lorde to the Rechabites, that they should not drink wine, but they did not obey.

In the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie, in the daye of Iehoiachin the sonne of Iosiah kynge of Iuda are these: So vnto the house of the Rechabites, & call them out, and bynge them to the house of the Lorde into some commodious place, & gyue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Iazaniab, the sonne of Jeremie the sonne of Ihabazimab, & his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole household of the Rechabites: and brought them into the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the chyldezen of Hanan, the sonne of Iegedallah the man of God, which was by the closet of the pynces, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Belum, which is the treasurer. And before the sonnes of the kyned of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne and cuppes, and sayd vnto them: Drynke wyne.

But they sayd: we wyl drynke no wyne: for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father commaunded vs, saying: Pee and your sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, & buyde no houses, sowe no seede: plant no vynes, yet: ye shall haue no vynyardes but for all your tyme, ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye may lyue long in the lande wherein ye be straungers. Thus haue we obeyed the commandement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all ye hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we nor our wyues our sonnes & our doughters. Neither buyde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs neyther vynyardes, nor come lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordyng vnto all ye Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

¶ But now that Babuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vnto the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we may escape the host of the Chaldees and the Assirians, and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto Jeremie, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Iuda and the inhabitants of Ierusalem: Wyl ye not be reformed to obey my wordes, sayth the Lorde? The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shuld drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obey they fathers commandement. But as for me: I haue stande vpon early, I haue spoken vnto you, & gyue you earnest warnyng: and yet haue ye not ben obedyent vnto me. Pee, I haue sent my seruauntes all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vpon early, & sent you word, saying: O turne you now every man from his wyched waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to worschipp them:

that ye may contynue in the lande wyche I haue geuen vnto you and your fathers, but ye wolde neyther heare me, nor folowe me.

The chyldezen of Jonadab Rechabys some, haue stoufastly kepte they fathers commandement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bynge vpon Iuda, and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuyed agaynst them. For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuertheless, they wolde geue me no answer: Jeremie spake also to the household of the Rechabites: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. For so much as ye haue obeyed the commandement of Jonadab your father, and kepte all his preceptes, and done accordyng vnto all ye he hath bydden you. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stock, to stand alwaye before me.

¶ The lxxvi. Chapter.

¶ Baruch the scribe, as Jeremie had charged the booke of the cursed agaynst Iuda & Israel. He is sent with the booke vnto the people and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers and readeth it before them also. The rulers then vnto the kynge the wordes of the booke. Jeremie taketh the booke and readeth a litle of it, and caldeth it in the tyme. There is another word of the commandement of the Lorde.

In the fourth yere of Iehoiachin the sonne of Iosiah the kynge of Iuda, came the word of the Lorde vnto Jeremie, saying: Take a booke, and wyte ther in all the wordes that I haue spoken to ye agaynst Israel, agaynst Iuda, and agaynst all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the daye of Iosiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuyed for them tury maye peradventure, turne every man from his wyched waye: that I maye forgyue tury offenders and synners. Then byd Jeremie call Baruch the sonne of Neriah: and Baruch came in the booke at the mouth of Jeremie all the wordes of the Lorde, wyche he had spoken vnto hym.

And Jeremie commaunded Baruch saying: I am in prison, so that I maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therefore go thou thyself and reade the booke that I haue written at my mouth namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade the in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng day, & the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out of the ctytes may heare. Peradventure, they wyl pray myhelly before the face of the Lorde, & turne every one from his wyched waye. For great is the wrath and dyspleasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people. So Baruch & sonne of Neriah byd accordyng vnto all that Jeremie the prophet commaunded him, readyng the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfte yere of Iehoiachin the sonne of Iosiah kynge of Iuda, in the ix. moneth, when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shulde faste before the Lorde & they also were come from the ctytes of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

The Prophecie

E Then read Baruch the wordes of Ieremye oute of the booke within the house of the Lord: oute of the treasury of Samariah & sonne of Saphan the scribe, whiche is besyde the hyer losse of the * newe doore of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Now when Micheah & sonne of Samariah, the sonne of Saphan had hearde all the wordes of the Lord oute of & booke he wente downe to the kynges palace into the cheryben chambers, forther all the princes were set. Elishama the scribe, Dalaiab the sonne of Semet, Elnathan the sonne of Ichboz, Samariah the sonne of Saphan, Jechiah the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes & he hearde Baruch reade oute of the booke before the people.

D Then all the princes sent Ichudi the sonne of Harhamiab, the sonne of Belamiah, the sonne of Chusi, unto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thine hande the booke, wher oute thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Aeriah, toke the booke in hys hande, and came unto them. And they sayde unto hym: Wytte downe and reade the booke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red that they myght heare. Nowe when they had hearde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certifie the kyng of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs howe dydest thou wytte all these wordes out of hys mouth. Then Baruch answered them: he spake all these wordes vnto me in hys mouth, and I wrote them in the booke.

E Then sayde the princes vnto Baruch: So thy waye, hyde the word Ieremy, so that no man knowe where ye be: And they went into & kyng to the court. But they kepte the booke in the chambze of Elishama the scribe, and tolde the kyng all the wordes, that he myght heare. So & kyng sent Ichudi to fet hym the booke whiche he broughte out of Elishama the scribes chambze. And Ichudi red in it that the kyng and all the princes tohyde were aboute hym myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ii. moneth, and ther was a fyre before hym. And when Ichudi had red the o. foure leues therof, he cut the booke in peeces w a penknife and cast it into the fyre vpon the dardh vntill & booke was all bzent in the fyre vpon the dardh.

I Yet no man was abashed thereof, o. rente hys clothes: neyther the kyng hym selfe, nor his seruantes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse, Elnathan, Dalaiab, and Samariah beloughte the kyng that he wolde not burne the booke: not withstandinge the kyng wold not heare the. but commaunded Ierachmael the sonne of Amelech: Baraiab the sonne of Eyrrell, and Belamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the scribe, & vpon Ieremy the prophet: but & Lord kept them out of syght. After nowe that the kyng had bzent the booke and & sermons which Baruch wrote at & mouth of Ieremy. The worde of the Lord came vnto Ieremye, sayinge: Take an other booke and wytte in it all the soze sayde sermons, that were wyppen in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda hath bzent.

G And tell Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda: thus sayth the Lord: thou hast bzent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast & wyppen therein, that & kyng of Babylon shall come and make this lande waste: so & he shall make bothe people and catell to be out of it. Therfore thus the Lord sayth of Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda. * There shall none of his generacyon lye vpon & throne of David. His dead coyle shall be cast out, that the heat of the dape, & the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym. And I wyll visyte the wychednes of hym, of his seide, & of his seruantes. Moreover, all the euyl that I haue promysed them (though they hearde me not) wyll I bring vpon them, vpon the inhabitours of Ierusalem, & vpon all Iuda. Then toke Ieremy another booke, & gaue it Baruch & scribe the sonne of Aeriah, which wrote therein out of the mouth of Ieremy, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda byd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Ezechiah succedeth Conania. He cometh vnto Ieremye to praye for hym. Ieremye gaughe into the lande of Beniamin in taken. He is taken and put in prison. He is deliuered by house ezechiah.

Ezechiah the sonne of Josiah & whiche was made kyng thowowe Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, raygned in the lande of Iuda, in the strede of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoahym. But neyther he nor his seruantes, nor the people in the lande wolde obey the wordes of the Lord, whiche he spake by the prophete Ieremy. * Neuerthelesse, Jechiah & kyng sent Ichudai the sonne of Belamiah, & Sopdoniah & sonne of Maasiah & priest to the prophete Ieremy, sayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Now Ieremye walshed fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. * Pharaos hoost also was come out of Egypt: whiche when the Chaldees that besyged Ierusalem perceyued, they departed from thence. Then came & worde of the Lord vnto the prophet Ieremy, sayinge: Thus sayth & Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye geue to the kyng of Iuda that sent you vnto me for couisayle. * Behold, Pharaos hoost whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayn and syge agaynst this cite, wyne it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: disceyue not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: Thus, & Chaldees go now they waye fro vs. No, they shall not go they waye. For though ye had slayne the whole host of the Chaldees that besyge you, and curry one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stande by and set fyre vpon this cite.

E Nowe when the hoste of the Chaldees was broken by from Ierusalem, for feare of & Egipcians armye: Ieremye went out of Ierusalem, towarde the lande of Beniamin, to gette hym from amonge the people.

And when he came vnder Ben Jampas porte there was a porter, called Jerpah, the sonne of Selemiab the sonne of * Hananias, whiche fell vpon hym, and toke hym, sayinge the mynde is to runne to the Chaldees. Then sayde Jeremie It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees. But the les, Jerpah wolde not beleue hym: but broughte Jeremie bound before the pynces. Wherfore the pynces were angry wth Jeremie, & smote hym and layde hym in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremie put into the dongron & prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then zedekiah the kynge sent for hym, and called him and asked hym quietly in his owne house, sayinge the mynde thou thy busynesse (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lord: Jeremie answered, yee, that is dooth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Wherfore Jeremie sayde vnto kynge zedekiah: What haue I dooth against the, against the seruantes, or against thys people, that ye haue put me in prison? Wher at your prophetes which haue prophesied vnto you, and sayd: that the kynge of Babylons shoulde not come against you and thys lande: And therfore heare now: O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and send me no more into the house of Jonathan the scribe, & I dye not there. Then zedekiah the kynge commaunded to put Jeremie in the fore entre of the prison, and day by to be geuen hym a hake of bzeade oute of the bakerys treate vntyll all the bzeade in the ctyte was eaten vp. Thus Jeremie remayned in the fore entre in the prison.

By the motion of * eulene Jeremie is put into a dongron. At the request of Abemelech the chamberlaine: the kynge comma: neth Jeremie to be brought forth of the dongron. Jeremie sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

At that tyme the sonne of * Hananias, Godo lias the sonne of * Hananias, Ieremias the sonne of * Hananias, and * Hananias the sonne of * Hananias, perceaued the wordes, that Jeremie had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on thys maner. Thus sayeth the Lorde, * Who so remayneth in thys ctyte, shall perishe, eyther wth the swerde, wth hunger, or wth pestilence. But who so shall flye vnto the Chaldees, shall escape, whynnyng his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. * For thus sayth the Lorde: Thys ctyte (no doubte) must be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylons, and he shall wyne it. Then sayde the pynces vnto the kynge: Wherfore we beleue the, thou let thys man be put to death, for thus he dysswageth the handes of the soudyers that be in thys ctyte, and the handes of all the people whiche speaketh such wordes vnto them. This man verely labourereth not for peace of the people but myscheffe. zedekiah the kynge answered & sayde: loo, he is in youre handes, for the kynge maye denye you nothinge. Then toke they Jeremie, and cast hym into the dongron of * Hananias the sonne of * Hananias that dwelleth in the fore entre of the prison: And they layd downe Jeremie wth coarbes into the dongron, where there was no water but myre. So Jeremie sticke fast in the myre. Some tyme Abemelech the chamberlaine, beinge a chamberlaine in the kynges court, vnderstand that they had cast Jeremie into the dongron, he wente oute of the kynges house and spake to the kynge, (whiche then sat vnder the porte of Ben Jampas) these wordes: my Lorde the kynge, wher as these men medle wth Jeremie the prophete, & they do hym wronge, namelye in that they haue put him in prison, ther to dye of hunger, for ther is no more bzeade in the ctyte. Then the kynge commaunded Abemelech the chamberlaine and sayd Take from hence xxx. men whom thou wilt, & drawe vp Jeremie the prophete out of the dongron before he dye. So Abemelech tooke the men wth hym, and went to the house of the kynge: and there vnder the treasury he gat olde ragges and woyme cloutes, and let them downe by a coarde into the dongron to Jeremie.

And Abemelech the chamberlaine sayde vnto the prophete Jeremie: O put the ragges and cloutes vnder thyn arme holes, betwixte them and the coarbes: and Jeremie dyd so. So they drew vp Jeremie wth coarbes, and toke hym out of the dongron, and he remayned in the fore entre of the prison. Then * zedekiah the kynge sent, and called Jeremie the prophete to be called vnto hym, into the chymere entre that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremie: I will aske the somewhat, but hyde nothinge fro me. Then Jeremie answered zedekiah: If I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me to suffer death: If I gyue the counsaile, thou wilt not folowe me. So the kynge swore an oth secretly vnto Jeremie, sayinge: As trulye as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I will not slaye the, nor gyue the into the handes of them that seeke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremie vnto zedekiah: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * If case be, that thou wilt go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons pynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this ctyte shall not be bzente: yea, bothe thou and thy householde shall escape wth your lyues. But if thou wilt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons pynces, then shall this ctyte be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremie: I am afraied for the Jewes that are fledde vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremie answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O hearken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beleue the) which I speake vnto the: lo shalt thou be wel and saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me this playnly Beholde, all the women that are left in the kynge of Judas house, shall be led forth out to the kynge of Babylons pynces. And they shall saye, that thou art disceyued: and the men in whome thou dydest put thy trust haue gotten the vnder, and let thy feet fast in the myre, and gone theyr way from the. Therfore alle thy wordes which they that man, wyfe, and chyld, yee, and the poore men in þe lande: that were not led captiue to Babilon: shoulde be under þys surseytyon. They came to Godoliab vnto Wyssa: Namely Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah Johanan, and Jonathan the sonnes of Cariah, Baruch the sonne of Chabome: the sonnes of Ophai, the Actophaite: Jelanah þe sonne of Maachaty, wyth they companyens. And Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan swaie vnto them and they: fellows in this maner. * Be not afrayde to serue the Chaldees, dwel in the lande, and do the kynge of Babilon seruyce, so that ye prosper. Beholde, I dwel at Wyssa to be an officer in þe Chaldees behalfe, and to saytysse suche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne, gyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your ctytes that ye haue in keepyng.

D Yee, all the Jewes also that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonytes in Iouma and in all the countreyes when they hearde that the kynge of Babilon had made Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan gouernour, vpon them that were left in Iuda. All the Jewes (I saye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into the lande of Iuda to Godoliab vnto Wyssa, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreover Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste that were scattered on euery syde in the lande, came to Godoliab in Wyssa, and saie vnto hym: knowest thou not that Baalis the kynge of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to slay the? But Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam beleued the not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliab in Wyssa these wordes secretly. Let me go I praye the and I will slei Ismael þe sonne of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore will he kyll the, that all the Jewes whiche resorte vnto the, myghte be scattered, and the remnaunt in Iuda perishe. And Godoliab þe sonne of Ahicam sayde vnto Johanan the sonne of Careah. Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyers, that thou sayest of Ismael.

The xlii. Chapter.

¶ Ismael killeth Godoliab secretly, and many other with hym. Johanan foloweth after Ismael.

In the seventh moneth it happened, * that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges bloud) came wyth the that were greatest aboute the kyng and ten men that were sworne wyth hym: vnto Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam to Wyssa, & they dyd eate to gether. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those tenne men that were sworne to hym, starte vp, and smote Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan wyth the sword and slewe hym, whiche the kynge of Babilon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismael also slew all the Jewes that were with Godoliab at Wyssa & all the Chaldees that he founde there wayfaryng vpon hym & those that were able to fyght be slewe wyth hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godoliab (the matter was yet vnknewen) & there came certayne men from Sychem, from Syloah and Samaria, to þe nombre of lxx. whiche had hauen they beards, rente they clothes, & wer all heauye, brynnyng meat & corynges and in cence in they handes to offre it in the house of þe Lojd. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Wyssa wepyng, to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayde: So poure waye to Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came into the myddest of the ctyte, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with the that were sworne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the myddest of þe ctyte. Among these foure score men there wer ten that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh, slei vs not for we haue yet great tresour in the feild of wheate, barley, ople, and honye.

So he spared them, and slewe them not wyth they byrdzen. Nowe the * ppe wherem Ismael dyd cast the deade bodies of the men (whome he slewe because of Godoliab) had kynge Aza caused to be made for feare of Baaza the kyng of Israel, & the same ppe dyd Ismael kyll wyth slayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kynges daughters and all the people that were yet left at Wyssa vpon whom Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had made Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam gouernour: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah carped them awape prysoners towarde the Ammonytes. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all they whiche had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoste wyth him, heide of al wychednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done, * they toke they companions, & went out for to fyght wyth Ismael þe sonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the great waters that are in Sybeon. Nowe when all the people whiche Ismael led captiue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other captaynes of the hoste, they were glad. So all the people þe Ismael had carped away fro Wyssa, were brought agayne.

D And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, fled from Johanan wyth viii. of his sworne companions, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah & all the captaynes of the hoste, that were with him toke all the remnaunt of the people: whome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led awape. (When he had slayne Godoliab the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had reserued from hym: fyghtyng men, women and chyldzen, and selled men, whom they brought agayne from Sybeon & went from thence and sat them downe at Geruth Canaan whiche lyeth besyde Ierusalem, * that they myght go into Egypte for feare of the Chaldees: of whome they were afrayd, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliab Ahicams sonne: whome the kynge of Babilon hath made gouernour in the lande.

The Prophecie

So al the captaynes, and Johanan sonne of Carab: J:anah the sonne of Osiab, came wth al the people fro the lest unto the most, and sayde vnto Jeremie the prophet. * O heare our praye: for we have sinned agaynst the Lord thy God, namely, for al the remnaunte wherof there be very fewe of us left of many, as thou seest vs, for the Lord thy God hath brought vs awaye to go in, and sell vs what we shoulde do. Then Jeremie the prophet sayde vnto them, I haue heard you. Beholde, I will praye vnto God your lord as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answer the Lord geueth you, I shall certifie you therof, and hope nothinge backe frome you. And they sayde vnto Jeremie, * The Lord of truth and faithfulness be our recorde, that we will do all that the Lord thy God commaundeth vs, wherether it be good or euill. We will hearken vnto the voyce of the Lord God, to whom we sende the that he maye prosper, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lord our God.

And after thre dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremie. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Carab, and al the captaynes of the people from the lest to the most, and sayde vnto them, Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel vnto whome ye sente me to praye for the poure praye: before hym: * If ye will dwell in this lande, I shall builde you vp, and not breake you downe: I shall plante you, and not roote you out: for I repent, as concerninge the trouble that I haue done vnto you: fear not the kynge of Babilon of whome ye stande in awe: for he is not a praye of hym sayth the Lord: for I will be with you, to heale you, and to deliuer you frome his hande: I will pardon you, I will haue mercie vpon you, and cause hym to praye for you, and bypunge you agayne into youre owne lande.

Againste this, if ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lord your God, but will say thus: we will not dwell here but go into Egypte, where we shall nether feare warre, heare the noyse of the trumpet, nor suffer hunger, there will we dwell. Wherefore, heare now the worde of the Lord: O ye remnaunte of Juda: * Thus sayth the Lord, God of Israel: If ye be wholy purposed to goe into Egypte, and to dwell there as straungers: * The sword that ye feared, shall ouertake you in Egypte, and the hunger wherof ye be heare a praye: shall hang vpon you: and folowe you in to Egypte, and there shall ye dye, And all they that of set purpose undertake to go into Egypte to solourne there, shall perishe wth the sword wth hunger and pestilence, not one of the shall remayne, there shall none escape the plague, that I will bypunge vpon them.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel, I like as my wrath and indignacion is moued agaynst the inhabytours of Ierusalem: so shall my displeasure be kindled agaynst you also, if ye go into Egypte, and there ye shall be reuyled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: as for this place ye shall neuer see it more,

The Lord sayddeth you: O ye remnaunte of Juda that ye shall not go into Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, for ye haue dyssembled wth me: * For ye sent me vnto the Lord your God and sayde: O praye thou the Lord our God for vs: and loke what answer the Lord our God geueth the, that bypunge vs agayne and we shall do thereafter. Nowe haue I forwed and declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord your God, for the which cause he hath sent me vnto you.

Nowe therefore, * If ye will not folowe it, be sure that ye shall perishe wth the sword, wth hunger and pestilence: euen in the same place where your lust is to go and dwell.

Johanan catcheth the remnaunt of the people into Egypt contrary to the mynde of Jeremie. Jeremie propheseth the destruction of Egypte.

When Jeremie had ended al the wordes of the Lord his God: vnto the people whych to declare the Lord their God had sent him to them: (eue all these wordes, I saye) Baruch sonne of Osiab: Johanan the sonne of Carab wth all the subbourne persons, sayde vnto Jeremie: * Thou seest, The Lord our God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shoulde not go into Egypte, and dwell there. But Baruch the sonne of Necriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myghte bypunge vs into the captiuitie of the Caldres, that they myghte slave vs, and carry vs awaye prisoners vnto Babilon.

So Johanan the sonne of Carab, and al the captaynes of the host, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord: Name lyke, to dwell in the lande of Juda. But Johanan the sonne of Carab, and al the captaynes of the host, caried awaye all the remnaunte in Juda, that were come to gether agayne frome all the heathen (among whom they had bene scattered) to dwell in the lande of Juda, Men, women, chyl dren, the kynges daughters: all those that Nabazardan the chefe captayne had left wth Gedoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Naphan. They caried awaye also the prophet Jeremie. Baruch the sonne of Necriah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obedyente vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Caphtais.

And in Caphtais the worde of the Lord happened vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Take greates stones in thine hande, and hyde them in the byrche wall, vnder the doze of Pharaos house in Caphtais: that all the men of Juda maye see and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. * Beholde, I will sende a cal for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon my seruant and will set his seate vpon these stones: that I haue byd, and he shall sprede his tente ouer them.

And when he cometh, he shall smyte the land of Egypte: some wth slaughter, some wth bypnysonment: and some wth the sword. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of Egypte: and God

Moreover, he shall arape hym selfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a shepheard putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypte, shall be breake in peeces, and burne the temples of the Egyptian goddesses.

The xliiii. Chapter.

He reprooueth the people for their idolatry. They that sit by the charynting of the Lorde are chastised. He de-scripcion of Egypte and the Iherusalem in prophesie.

Ihys is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy concerning al the Jewes: whiche dwelt in Egypte: at Migdol at Tapphis, at Aoph, & in the land of Paturs. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene al the misery that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, & vpon the cyties of Iuda: so that this daye they are desolate, and noman dwellynge therein: and that because of the greates blasphemies whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that they wente backe to do sacrifice and worship vnto strange goddesses: whome neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowen. I sent vnto them my seruantes al the prophetes. I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. O do no suche abhominable thynges & thynges I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor herken to turne from thyr wickednes, and to do nomore sacrifices vnto strange goddesses.

Wherfore myne indignation and wrath was kindled, and it went vnto the cyties of Iuda, the feldes with the stretes of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: how happeyth it, that ye do so great euill vnto your owne soules: thus to destroye the men & women: children and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the wordes of your own handes: When ye offer vnto strange Goddesses in the lande of Egypte wher as ye be gone to dwel. That ye myghte better perishe, and that ye myghte be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacions. O haue ye now forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kynge of Iuda and their wiues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the labe of Iuda, in the cite, & in the stretes of Ierusalem.

Pet are ye not sorry vnto this daye, ye feare not, neither walke ye in my lawe and in my commandementes, that I haue geuen vnto you & your forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determined to punyssh you, and to rote out all Iuda. As for the remnant of Iuda, that purposely went into Egypte, there to dwel, I will take them, & they shall al be destroyed. In the land of Egypte shall they perishe, beinge consumed with the swerde and with hunger. For from the least vnto the moste, they shall perishe with the swerde and with hunger. Moreover, they shall be reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and contemned: For I will vnto them that dwell in Egypte, & as I haue vnto Ierusalem, with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence so that none of the remnant of Iuda, whiche are gone to dwel in Egypte, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iuda although they synke to come thither agayne, & to dwel there: For noone shall come agayne, but suche as are led a wyfe.

Then all the men whiche knewe that theye wyues had offered vnto strange goddesses, and a greates losse of wyues that stode there, yet, and all the people that dwelt there in Egypte in the cite of Paturs, answered Jeremy, and sayde: As for the wordes thou hast spoke vnto vs: in the name of the Lorde, we wyl in no wyse heare them, but whatsoeuer goeth out of oure owne mouth, that we wyl doo. We wyl do sacrifice and offer oblacions vnto the quene of heauen. lyke as we and oure forefathers, oure kynge and oure heades haue done in the cyties of Iuda, and in the stretes and feldes of Ierusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of bytacles then were we in prosperite and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

But sence we leste to burne incense: and to do sacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thynges, and perished with swerde, and hunger. Laste of all: When we women byd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen, & we make her cakes and power vnto her bynchofferings, even to that ymage byd we sacrifice and scrupce, without oure husbandes wyll.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people to the men to the women, and to al the folke which had geuen hym that answer: Did not the Lorde remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers: your kynge and rulers, which al the people, haue offered in the cyties of Iuda, in the stretes and lande of Ierusalem: and hath he not considered this in his mynde. In so much that the Lorde myghte no longer suffre the wickednes of your inuencions, & the abhominable thynges whiche ye byd: Is not your land desolate and voyde, & abhorred and accursed: so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this daye.

Wyd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made such sacrifices to ydols, and synned agaynst the Lorde: Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordynances and statutes.

Pea, this is the cause that al mysfortune hapened vnto you: as it is come to passe this daye. Moreover Jeremy spake vnto all the people & to all the women. Heare the wynde of the Lorde all Iuda: ye that be in the land of Egypt. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Ye and your wyues haue spoken with your owne mouth, that this thinge ye haue fulfilled in dede.

Pea, thus haue ye sayde: We wyl not sayle but performe the vowes that we haue vowed: we wyl do sacrifice & powe out bynche offeringes to Baruch is reproued of Jeremie.

Jer. xlii. a
These are the wordes that Jeremie the prophete spake vnto Baruche the sonne of Neriah, * after that he had wyrtten these sermons in a booke at the mouth of Jeremie, in the yere of Ieoahym the sonne of Josias kynde of Iuda, saying: Thus sayth the Lozde God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch. In so much as thou thoughtest thus: when thou wast wyrtynge: Who is me, the Lozde hath geuen me knowe vpon knowe. I haue weryed my selfe wth synginge and haue founde no rest.

Ber. xlii. a Therfore tell hym, O Jeremie, that the Lozde sayth thus: Beholde, the thyng that I haue buried: wyl I breake downe agayne a roote out the thyng that I haue planted, yee this whole lande. And I shall thou yet promocyon: Looke ne for it, and desyre it not. For I wyl byngne Make redye buckeler and shylde, and go forth to fyght: harnes your hoyses, and set your selues vpon the: set your salte crye fast on: byng forth speares, scour your swerdes, and put on your best plates.

But alas how happeneth it, that I se you so ascapde wth shynche ye backe: They wyl thys are slayne. Yee, they runne so fast a waye that none of them loketh bekynd hym: Fearful-nes is fallen vpon euerye one of them, sayeth the Lozde. The lyghtest of foote shall not fle away and the worstes shall not escape.

Towarde the Nozthe by the water of Euphrates, they dyd scumble and fal. But what is ye thys, that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, ro-rynge and ragynge lyke the streames of water?
It is Egypt that cyleth vpon lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters wth so great noyse.

And he sayde: I wyl go vp, and wyl couer the earth. I wyl destroy the city with them that are therein. Set ye vpon your hoyses, role forth ye cha-rettes comme forth wth thys, ye Moyses, ye Libyans with your buckeler, ye Lydeans w your bowes. This dape of the Lozde God of ho-lies, is a dape of vengeance, ye maye adueng hym of hys enemyes. The swerde shall deuour it shall be satisfied and bathed in theyr bloude.
For the Lozde God of hostes shall haue a flaine offerynge toward the nozth, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Siliad, and byngne repacle vnto the daughter of Egypte. But in dayne waite thou go to surgery, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The feathen haue heard of thy name, and the lande is full of thy confusion, for one stronge man dyd scumble vpon another, and they are fallen both together.

* These are the wordes that the Lozde spake to the prophete Jeremie concernynge the commyng of Nabuchodonosor the kynde of Babilon, whych was sent to destroye the lande of Egypte. Preach out thowwe the lande of Egypte and cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Aoph and Tarnis: say: Stand styll make the redye for the swerde shall consume the rounde about howe happeneth it, that thy mighty worstes are fallen: Why stode they not faste? Euen because the Lozde thrust the downe. The slaughter was greete, for one fell eneyr styll vpon another. One cryed vpon another. Up, let vs go a-gayne to our owne people, and to our owne natural contraye from the cruel swerde.

They dyd crye euen there, O Pharaos, kynde of Egypt thou troublous kynde, the tyme wyl byngne sedicion. As trulie as I lyue sayeth the kynde, * whose name is the Lozde of hostes, it shall come as the mount of Taboz, and as Liba-nus if it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypte make redye thy geare to flicke. For Aoph shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein. The land of Egypt is like a good lie faire calfe, but destruction shall come oute of the nozth I saye it cometh. Her waged sound-ers that be wyllyng are like fatte calues, They also shall fle away together, and not abyde: for the day of their slaughter, and the tyme of their visitation shall come vpon them.

The crye

The crye of them shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trumpet. For they shall entre in with theyr hostes, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wood. And they shall cut downe her wood, saith the Lord: They shall be innumerable, for they shall be more in nombre then greaf hoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell the. The daughter of Egypt is confounded, and deliuered into the handes of the people of Egypt. Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I will vnto the restles people of Alexandria, Pharaos, and Egypt: yee, both theyr goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharaos, and all them that put theyr trust in hym. Yee, I will deliuer them into the handes of those, that seke after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon and into the power of his seruantes. And after all these thynges it shall be inhabited as aforetyme: saith the Lord.

But see not thou afraied (O my seruante Jacob) feare not thou O Israel. For lo, I will helpe thee from farre, and thy seed from ylande of theyr captiuite. Jacob also shall come againe and be in rest: he shall prospeere & no man shall do hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruante) saith the Lord for I am with thee: and will destroye all nations, among whom I haue scattered thee. Neuertheles, I will not consume thee: but chasten thee and correcte thee: yee, & that with discrecion, neyther will I spare thee as one that were faultles.

C The xlviij. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Philistynes.

These are the wordes, that the Lord spake vnto Jerem the prophete, agaynst the Philistynes, before that Pharaos smote the cytie of Azah. Thus saith the Lord. Beholde, there shall waters clype out of the North: and shall growe to a great floud runnyng ouer & conerpyng the lande, the cyties and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse and stammyng of theyr stronge barbed horses, at the making of theyr charrettes and at the rumbling of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to the chyldezen, so feeble & weake shall theyr handes be at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of Philistynes. He shall make waste both Tyzus, Sydon, and all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lord will destroye the Philistynes the remnant of the kyngdome of Caphtor. Baldnes is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with other valleys shall kepe her peace.

How long wilt thou sleepe, O thou sword of the Lord: When wilt thou cease? Turne againe into thy sheath, and leaue of. But how can it cease, when the Lord hym self hath geuen hym a charge agaynst Ascalon and rapled it vpon agaynst the cyties of the see coastes.

C The xlvij. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Moabites.

Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel agaynst Moab: Woe be to the cytie of Hebo: for it is layd waste, brought to confusion: and his richiari taken. His gab is brought to shame & afraied: Moab can boast nomore of Heleb: for they haue deuised agaynst it. Come shall they say, let vs rote the out, that they may be nomore amonge the nombre of the Gentiles and that the madmen may nomore be thought vpon: and the sword shall persecute. A voice shall crye from Hozanaïm: with great wailing and destruction is Moab made desolate.

Chylozen could be tel of the crye therof. For at the going vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentacyon and mourning, and downe toward Hozanaïm, they heard a cruel and deadly crye. Get you awaye, saue your lyues, & be lyke vnto the heath in syniderties. For because thou hast trusted in thyne owne wozches and treasure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos with his prestes and pipners shall go awaye into captiuite.

The destroyer shall come vpon all cyties: none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed and the feldees shall be layd waste, lyke as the Lord hath spoken.

Sene wynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye speedely: for her cyties shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein.

Cursed be he that doth synne of the Lord negligently, and cursed be he that heperth back his sword from the dyng of bloude.

Moab hath neuer ben riche and careles from her youth vpon, she hath suten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessel into another: she neuer went awaye into captiuite, therfore her cause remaineth, and her sauour is not yet changed.

But lo, the tyme cometh saith the Lord, that I shall sende her trusters to truste her vpon, which shall remoue her from her dwelling: and emptye her vessels, & breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherein she put her trust. Wherfore do ye thynke thus, we are myghty and stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed: and her cyties bent vpon, her chosen yonge men be slayn, saith the Lord, whose name is Lord of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say, O how happeneth this, that stronge staffe, & the goodly rodde is thus broke? And thou daughter Dibon come downe from thy gloze, and syt in chynste. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vpon to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Iroer, get thee to the strete, & loke aboute the, aske them that are fled and escaped, & saye: What thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Ieron, that Moab is destroyed. For indignment shall come vpon the playne lande. Namely: vpon Holon, and Iabazab, vpon Mephaath & Dibon: vpon Rabo them. My seed shall be wasted away: yea, my brethren and his neyghbours: and he hym self shall not be left behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chyldren behynde the, and I wyll hepe them: and thy wydowes shall take theyr comfort in me. For thus hath the Lord spoken. * Behold they that men thought were vnnete to drynke of the cuppe, haue vponken wyth the syff: and chynest thou then to be free?

No, no, thou shalt neyther be quyte nor free: but thou must drynke also. For why? I haue sworne by my selfe, sayeth the Lord: that Bozrah shall become a wyldernesse, an open thame, a loughynge stoke and cursyng: and all her cyties shall be a continuall deserte.

For I am perswysed informed of the Lord, that he hath sent a message already vnto the heathen. Gather you together, & go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battayle: for so, I wyll make the but small amonge the heathen, and lyke regarded amonge men.

* Thy nye Romache, and the pyde of thy dert haue deceyued the, because thou wylt dwell in holes of stony rocks, and haue the hyr most saynes in possession. Reuerthelesse, though thy nest were as hye as the Eagles: yet wyl I caste the downe, sayeth the Lord. Moreover, Idumea shall be a wyldernesse: * who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, & wonder at her miserable plagues. * Like as Sodome, Gomorre, and the cities that lay thereabout were turned vnto dedewyne sayeth the Lord: so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habitation there. Beholde, lyke as the Lyon, so shall a destroyer come vnto the pleasaunt meddowes of Jordan vnto the stronge dwellinge place: and when I haue made him quyet, I wyll make hym to flye from her: and all cholen men wyl I set in aray agaynst her: who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyl stryue with me? What shal he stande in my handes?

* Therfore heare the counsaile of the Lord that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and his purpose that he hath deuysed vpon the cytyens of Thema. The least of the flocke shall reare them in pecces, and loke what saye theynge they haue, they shall make it waste: and them selues also.

At the noyse of theyr fall the earth shall quake: the crye of their voyce shall be heard vnto the erd see. Beholde, the enemye shall come and flye vnto byther, lyke as it were an Eagle, and lured by wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hartes of the wyrdyes in Edom be as the vertes of a woman traunaylyng of childe. * vpon Damascus, Demath and Arphad shall come consulsion: for they shall beare cupplid wynges, they shall be tolled to and fro lyke the see that can not stand styll. Damascus shall be soe afraped, & shall flye, trembleng shall come vpon her. Sozobe and payne shall ouertake her as a woman traunaylyng with chylde. But howe shalde so wyrdyful & glorious a cite be forsaken? here therfore der ponge me shall fall in the stretes, & at her men of war shall be take away in that tyme, sayeth the Lord of hostes:

I wyl kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus which shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

* As for Cedar and the hyngdome of Babylon whom Nabuchodonosor the hyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lord hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, & get you vnto Cedar, and destrope the people toward the east. Theyr tentes and their doches, shall they take away: yea their hangynges and theyr vessels. Theyr camels also shall they carry away with them. They shall crye to them: Feare is on every syde.

Arise, get you some away, crape into caues, that ye may dwell there. O ye inhabytters of Babylon sayeth the Lord, for Nabuchodonosor the hyng of Babylon hath holden a counsel contraryng you: and concluded his deuyse agaynst you. Arise, and get you vnto agaynst yonder riche and carelesse people: sayeth the Lord, which hath nei ther gates nor doore barres, but dwell alone.

Theyr camels shall be stolen, and the dyones of theyr cattel dyuen away. Moreover, those wyl I scatter toward al the wyndes: and byng the to destruction: yea, and that theyr owne samplers, sayeth the Lord. As for also shall be a dwellinge for dragons, & an euerlastyng wyldernesse: so that no body shall dwell there: and no man shall haue there his habitation.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake to the prophet Jeremie, concernyng Elam, in the begynnyng of prayme of ieremiah hyng of Iuda. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: Beholde, I wyl breake the power of Elam, and take away theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wyl byng the soure wyndes from the four quarters of heauen, and wyl scatter them agaynst the same soure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flye vnto them.

For I wyl cause Elam to be afraped of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyl byng vpon them the indignacion of my wrath, sayeth the Lord. And I wyl persecute them wth the swerde, so longe tyl I haue brought them to nought. I wyl set my thorne in Elam, I wyl destrope bothe the hyng and the princes from thence, sayeth the Lord. But in proccesse of tyme I wyl byng Elam out of captiuitie agayne, sayeth the Lord.

at that tyme, sayeth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israel shal come, they and the chyldren of Juda wepyng & makinge fast, and shal see the Lorde their God. They shal aske the waye to Syon, thyshe shall they turne they faces, sayinge: Come and we wyll cleave to the Lorde, in a covenante that never shalbe broken.

23 My people hath bene a lost & flocke, my shepherdes have disceyved the, and have made them go astrape vpon the hylls. They have gone fro the mountayne to the lytle hyll, and for gotten theyr foldes. All they came vpon them, have deuoured them: and theyr enemyes sayde: we haue made no default agaynst them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yea, euen the Lorde, whiche is the beauty of their righteousness, and that defendeth theyr fathers. Per shall ye flye from Babylon, and depart out of the land of the Chaldees, & be ye as the rammes that go before the flocke. 24 For so, I wyll wake vp an host of people fro the northerne lande, and bypnyng them vnto Babylon: the shall laye siege to it, and wynn it. Their arrowes shall not mysse, lyke as a connyng archer shotech not wronge.

And the Chaldees shalbe spoyled, and al they that spyle them, shalbe satisfied, sayth the Lorde: although ye were so chereful & glad, to treade downe myne herpytage, and full yll of your pleasures, as the calves in y grass, and triumphed ouer them lyke y bulles, when ye had gotten the victory. Your mothers shalbe soze confounded, and they that beare you, shall come to shame. For shalbe the least seth y amonge the nacyns: yourde wasted and dyled vp. No man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but the shalbe whole desolate. 25 All they that go by Babylon, shall stande styll and be abashed, and shall wondre at all her plagues.

So forth in your a rape agaynst Babylon rounde aboute, all ye y can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arrowes: for she hath synned agaynst y Lorde. Crye out, vps her, vpon her, agaynst her round about: she shal yeide her self, her foundations shal fall, and her walles shal come downe: for it shalbe the vengeance of the Lorde. 26 Yea, vengeance shalbe tak of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye w her. Root cut the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the scyle in haruest. For feare of the swerde of the enemye every man shall get him to his owne people: and every man shal flye to his owne lande. Israel is a scattered flocke y lyons haue disperled them.

27 For so, the kynge of the Assyrians deuoured them, & last of al this Nabuchodonozor king of Babylon hath brosed all theyr bones.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will vylite the kyng of Babylon and his kyngdome as y I haue vylited the kyng of the Assyrians, and wyl bypyng Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he may fede vpon Chamel and Basan, and be satisfied vps the mount of Iphzaim and Galaad. 28 In those dayes and at the same tyme, sayeth y Lorde: Of the officer of Israel be sought for, there shal none be founde. Of men enuyrs for the syn of Juda: there shalbe none: for I wyll be merciful vnto them, whom I suffer to remayne ouer.

So downe, O thou auenger, into y enemies lands, & visse the that dwell therein: downe with them, & smyte them vpon the backes, sayeth the Lorde: do accordyng to al that I haue comaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter & great murder, namely on thys manner. Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole world is thus broken, & bylde in sondre: how chaunceth it, y Babilon is become a wylderne among y heathen on this maner: I my selfe haue layed waite for the, & thou art taken vnawares art y trapped and snared: for why y thou hast prouoked the Lorde vnto angre. The Lorde hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the land of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hostes woike.

Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: bye the by her cherties, cherties her as ye thes the corne: destroye her, that nothyng shalbe left. Slape all their mighty souldiers, & put the to death. Woe be vnto them, for the day & tyme of theyr visitacion is at hande. We thynke I heare alreadye a crye of them y braked & escaped out of y lande of Babylon, which the we in Syon the vengeance of the Lorde our God, the vengeance of his temple: yea a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call vp all the archers agaynst Babylon, pitch your tentes rounde aboute her, y none escape. 29 Recompence her as she hath del: ruded: & accordyng as she hath done, so deale with her agayne, for she hath set by her selfe against the Lorde, agaynst the holy one of Israel. Therefore shal her ponge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shalbe rooted out in y daye sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I speake vnto the, O thou proude, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy day shal come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shal stamble and fall, and no man shall helpe hym vp. I wyl burne vp his ceties wth fyre, and it shal consume all that is rounde about hym.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The chyldren of Israel and Juda suffer violence together: Al they that haue them in captiuitie, herpe them faste, and wyl not let them go, but theyr auenger and redeemer is mighty. Whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shall ma pntayne theyr cause he shal make the land shake, and iudge the that dwell therein, one wth an other. The swearde shal come vpon the Chaldees, sayeth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon theyr pynces, and vpon theyr wyle men. The swearde vpon theyr souldiers, as for those, they shalbe come foolles. The swearde vpon theyr woithyres, so that they shal stande in feare. The swearde vpon theyr hoysmen and charettes, and vpon all the comune people that dwell vnder them: so that they shal all become lyke women.

The swearde vpon theyr treasure, so that it shalbe stollen awaye. I brought vpon theyr waters, so that they shalbe dyled vp.

For the lande wyl wyppeth ymages, and delpteth despeth in strange wondrefull thynges. Ther foze that wilde beastes, Lamia & cat of the mo-tanyes, and estriches dwel therein, for there shall neuer man dwell there, neyther shall any man haue his habitation there for euermore. Lp he as God destroyed Sodom and Gomoze: with the cyties that lay thereabout, sayth the Lozde: So shall no man dwell there also, neyther shall any man haue there his habitation. * Beholde, there shall come a people from the north with a great bande of men, & many kynges that stande vp from the endes of the earth. They beare bowes and buchlers, cruel are they & vnmerecyful.

They vowe roseth lpe the raging see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fyghte agaynst the, O Babylon. I knowe as the kynges of Babylon heareth of them, his handes shall wage feble. Sozow and benyngnesse shall come vpon him, as a woman trauepyng with chylde.
Beholde, * lpe as the lyon cometh vp from the pleasant meadowes of Jordan vnto the grene pastures of Eban, so wyl I dyspue them forth, and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shal I chose out, and ordeyne to suche a thyng?
* For who is lpe me, or who wyl styue with me, or what shepherde may stand agaynst me?
Therfoze beare the cosaple that the Lozde hath gyuen vpon Babylon, and the deuyle that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Chaldees.
The lesse amonge the people shall teare them in peces, and loke what pleasure thyng they haue: they shall lape it waste. The noyse at the wynnyng of Babylon shal moue the earth, and the crye shal be hearde amonge the Gentyles.

The ii. Chapter.

Chaild Babylon shal be overthowen. Jeremye speaketh vnto her to be taken.

Ihus hath the Lozde sayd: * behold, I wyl rayse vp a perylous wounde agaynst Babylon and her cytyzins that beare euill wyl agaynst me. I wyl sende also into Babyls faners to fanne her cur, and to destroye her lande, for in the daye of her trouble they shal be about her on euery syde. Moreover, the Lozde hath sayd vnto the bowmen, and to them that clyme ouer the walles in breaste plates. Ye shall not spare her pouge men: kyll downe al her hooste. Thus the flayne shall fall downe in the lande of the Chaldees, and the wounded in stretes. * Is for Israel and Iuda, they shal not be forsaide of their God of the Lozde of hostes for the holy one of Isra-els sake: no, though they haue fylled all theyr landes full of synne. * Flye away from Babylon, euery man saue his lyfe, that ye be not tored out with her wyche dwelle: for the tyme of the Lozdes vengeance is come: yea, he wyl rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lozdes hande, * a goldeu cuppe that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken: therfoze are they out of theyr wyettes. * But sodounly is Babylon fallen, and destroyed.

Wonne for her, byng playsters for her woundes, if she maye perauenture be healed agayne.
We wolde haue made Babyls whole, say they:

but she is not recovered. Therfoze wyl we let her alone, and go euery man to his owne coun-tre. For her iudgement is come into beand & is gone vp to cloudes. The Lozde hath brought forth our ryghtousnes. And herfoze com on, we wyl let her downe & wylke of p Lozde our God.

Make sharpe the arrowes, and multiplie your shylde: * for the Lozde shall rayse vp the spynne of the hynges of the Medes, which hath alreadye a desyre to destroye Babylon. They shal be the vengeance of the Lozde, and the vigiance of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon make your watche stronge, set your watchmen in arapt: yea, holde pmyse watches: and yet for al that shal the Lozde go forth with the deuyle which he hath taken, vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that hast so great treasure & riches, thyne ende is come, and the rekenyng of thy wynnyngges. * The Lozde of hostes hath sworne by hys selfe, that he wyl ouerwhelme the with men, lpe grethoppers in nom bze, which wyte a co-rage shal crye, alarum, alarum agaynst the.
* Yea euen the Lozde of hostes, that with his power made the earth, with his wysdome prepared the rounde worlde, and with his discretion spredde out the beautes. As soone as he leteyth his voyce be herde, the waters in the abyse ware fearce. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He turneth the lyghtnynges to rapne, he byngeth the wyndes oute of theyr secret places: If they be esteemed by their wysdom all men are become foolen. * Confounded be all the casters of ymages, for the thyng that they make is but dysceyte, & hath no byearch. Clayne is it, and an erromous worke: and in the tyme of upstatation it shal perpe.

Neuertheless, the porcyon of Jacob is none suche: but he that made al thynges, whose name is the Lozde of hostes, he is the rodde of his enheritance. Thou hast bene myne hammer and wrapons for warre: for with the haue I broken the people in peces: & with the haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Thozow the haue I beart to poudye horse and horseman: yea, the charrettes and such as sat vpo them. Thozowe the I haue bzoken man and woman, olde and pouge, bachelor and mayden. Thozow the I haue destroyed the shepherde and his flocke, the husbandman and his cattell, the pynces and the rulers. Therfoze wyl I rewarde the cytie of Babylon, and al her cytyzins, the Chaldees with all the euill whyche they haue done vnto Zion: yea, that ye your sel-ues shal se it, sayth the Lozde: Beholde, I come vpon the, thou nopsome hyl, sayth the Lozde: thou that destroyest al landes: I wyl stretch out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and wyl make the a bent hyl: so that neither corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foundacions of stonys shal be taken any more out of the, but waste and desolate shalte thou lpe for euermore, sayth the Lozde.

Set vp a conk in the land, blowe the troset.

tes amonge the heythen: prouoke the nacions agaynst her, calle the kyngdomes of Ararat, Menims: Alcomes agaynst her. Her the prince agaynst her, bynges as greace a soze of terrible hostes agaynst her: As if they were grethoppers. Prepare agaynst them the people of the Medes with theyr kynges, princes, and al the cheif rulers: yea, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

The lande also shal make and be afrayed wth the heurle of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon: to make the land of Babylō so waste that no man shal dwell any more therein. The worstes of Babylon shal leaue the battayle, and kepe them selues in stronge holdes, theyr strength hath fayled them, theyr shalbe lyke women. Theyr dwellinge places shalbe dynt vp, their barres shalbe broken. One pursyuante shal mete an other: yea, one post shal come by an other, to bynge the kyng of Babylon tydynge: that his cytie is taken in on euery syde, the fourdes occupied, the fennes dynt vp, and the souldyers loze afrayed.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: the daughter of Babylon hath ben in her tyme lyke as a chylde byng fode, but shortly shal her barne come. Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylō hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel: he swallowed me vpon lyke a dragon, and spiled my beire wth my delicates: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substaunce away, and the thyng that was left me hath he caried vnto Babylon, sayeth the daughter & dwelleth in Syon: yea, & my blood also vnto the Chaldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyll bynke vpon her see, and drye vp her water sprynges.

* Babylon shal become an heape of stones, a dwellinge place for dragons, a fearfulnesse and wondring, because no man dwelleth there. They shal roze together lyke Lyons, and as the ponge Lyons when they be angrey, so shal they bende them selues. In theyr heate I shal geue them a dyner, and they shalbe broken for ioye. * Then shal they slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lorde. I shal cast them downe to be slayne lyke shepe, lyke weethers and gootes. O how was Belach wonner. O howe was the glozy of the whole lande taken: how happeneth it, that Babylon is so wondred at among the heythen: The see is ryfen ouer Babylon, and hath covered her wth byr greace waues. Her cyties are layed waste, the land lyeth vnbuylded, and voyde: it is a land where no man dwelleth, and where no man tranapleth thowowe. Wozeouer, * I wyll bysite Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shal I pluche out of his mouth. The Gedyles also shal runne nomore vnto hym: yea, and the walles of Babylon shal fall.

O my people, * come out of Babylon, that every man maye saue his lyfe from the fearful wraith of the Lorde. Be not farnethered, and feare not at euery rumour that shalbe hearde in the lande: for euery yere bynged newe tydynges, and in the yere folowynge nethe tydynge and robbynge in the lande, and loze vpon loze. And so, the tyme cometh, that I wyll bysite the ymages of Babylon, and the whole lande shal be confounded: yea, and her slayne shal lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth, wryt al that is therein, shal reioyse ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north, sayeth the Lorde.

* Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shal theyr sal many and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye haue escaped & swerde hast you, stande not styll, remein by the Lorde asarte of, & thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we are ashamed to heare & blasphemies our faces were covered with shame, because the strange alrauntes came into the sanctuary of the Lorde. Wherefore beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme cometh, & I wyll bysite the ymages of Babylon, and thowowe the hole lande theyr shall mourne and sal. * Though Babylon clymed vnto heauen, & hept her power on hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde.

A ptyous crye shalbe herde from Babylon, and a great myerie from the lande of the Chaldees when the Lord destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hye stomahe and proude boostynge, wherwyt they haue bene as furious as the waues of great water skoudes, & made great creakes wth theyr woyses. For the destroyers shal come vpon her (euen vpon Babylon) whych shal take theyr woyses, and bryake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to aufge him selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll make theyr princes, theyr wyse men, theyr cheif rulers, and al theyr woyses broken: so that they shal slepe an euerlastyng slepe: and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lord of hostes.

Wozeouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The thycke wal of Babylon shalbe broken, and her hye gates shalbe dynt vp. And the thyng that the Gedyles and the people hath wrought wth great tranaple and labour, shal come to nought and be consumed in fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Aetiah, the son of Masaiab, when he went towarde Babylon wth Jechaiab & kyng of Iuda, in the fourth yere of his raygne. Nowe this Saraiab was a peaceable prince, Jeremy wrote in a booke all the myserie that shulde come vpon Babylō: yea and al these sermons that be wyrtten agaynst Babylō, and gaue Saraiab his charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade all these woyses, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out this place, so & neither people nor cattell shal dwell there any more: but to lye waste for ever: and when thou hast redde oute the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: euen thus shal Babylon synke, and be thurst downe wth the burthen of trouble, that I wyll bynge vpon her: so that she shal neuer come up agayne. Thus saith the Destroyer of Jerusalem.

The. lll. Chapter.

Whereupon the taking of Iherusalem. Iherusalem is taken of the Chaldees. Iehoiachin sonne of kyng Iehoiachin was made kynge. Iehoiachin sonne of kyng Iehoiachin was made kynge. Iehoiachin sonne of kyng Iehoiachin was made kynge.

3 Iehoiachin was * xxi. yere olde when he was made kynge, and he reigned a lene yere in Iherusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremies daughter of Libna. He lyued wchedyse before the Lord, even as Iehoiachin dyd. For the Lord was angrye at Iherusalem and Iuda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his pience. And Iehoiachin fell from the kynge of Babilon. * But in the nynt yere of his reigne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon with all his host came before Iherusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwokes rounde about it. And this besieginge of the cite endured vnto the thirteenth yere of kynge Iehoiachin.

B And in the fourth moneth, the .ix. daye of the moneth, there was so great hunger in the cite: that there were nomore vytybles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake a waye, and fled out of the cite by nyght thowse the waye of the porte betwene two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cite rounde aboute, yet went these men there; waye toward the wyldernesse.

And so the Chaldees followed vpon them, and toke Iehoiachin the kynge in the felde of Jericho, when his host was runne from hym: So they carped the kynge awaye prisoner to Babilon vnto the kynge of Babilon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym.

C The kynge of Babilon also caused Iehoiachins sonnes to be slayne before his face: yea, and put all the princes of Iuda to death at Babilon. Whereupon he put out the eyes of Iehoiachin, and caused hym to be bounde with two chaynes, to be carped vnto Babilon: and let him lye in prison tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the seventh moneth, in the nynt yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon. Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne, and the kynge of Babilons seruantes came vnto Iherusalem, and went by the house of the Lord. He went vnto also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buydynge in Iherusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees were with the chiefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Iherusalem rounde about.

D As for the poore people and such folke as yet was left in the cite, whiche also were fallen to the kynge of Babilon: yea, and what people ad yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne carred them awaye prisoners. But the poore people of the countrey, dyd Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the bynyardes and felde. The Chaldees also brake the bulwokes that were in the house of the Lord, yea, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lord: and carped all the metal of hym vnto Babilon. They toke awaye also the canibres, honers, flesschers, spynblers, spones, and all the brasen vessel that was occupped in the seruice, with the basses, colepannes, spynblers, portes, candlestyches, spones, and cuppes wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chiefe captayne toke also the two pillars the lauer, the twelue brasen bulloches that stode vnder the seate: whiche kynge Salomon made in the house of the Lord: and all the vessel conteyned so much metal, that it myght not be weyed. For every pillar was cygherne cubites hye: and the rope that went aboute it, was twelue cubites, and foure fyngers thicke and round. Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knoppe was fyue cubites hye: vpon the knoppes, were whopes, and pomegranates rounde about of cleane brasen.

After this maner were both the pillars fastened vnto the pomegranates, wherof there were an hundred and .xxvi. whiche hanged vpon the whopes rounde aboute. The chiefe captayne also toke Saraiab the hye priest, and Sopponiab that was chiefe next hym, and the thir hepers of the treasure. He toke out of the cite a chambrelayne whiche was a captayne of the souldiers, and seuen men that were the kynges seruantes, whiche were founde in the cite: and Berbera captayne that vled to mustre the men of warre, with thirscore men of the countrey that were taken in the cite. These Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne toke, and carped them to the kynge of Babilon vnto Babilon and the kynge of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Babilon in the land of Hemath. And thus Iuda was led awaye captiue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonosor led awaye captiue.

E In the seventh yere of his reigne, he carped awaye of the Jewes, thir thousand and thir and twentye. In the .xviii. yere Nabuchodonosor carped awaye from Iherusalem cyghthe hundred, thirtye and two persones. In the .xxiii. yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne toke awaye seuen hundred forty and fyue Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousand and fyue hundred.

In the .xxviii. yere after that Iehoiachin the kynge of Iuda was carped awaye in the .xv. daye of the .xii. moneth Euphmerodach kynge of Babilon (the same yere that he reigned) gaue Iehoiachin the kynge of Iuda his pardon, and let him out of prison, and spake louingly to him. And let hym stonde about the trones of the other kynges that were with hym in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea, and he dyd eate with hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a continuall lyping gyven hym of the kynge of Babilon, euery daye a certayne thinge allowed hym all the dayes of his lyfe vntill he dyed.

of Ieremye.

The first Chapter.

Can any man deliver Ieremye the prophet from the hands of the Chaldees? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Babylonians? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Egyptians? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Assyrians? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Philistines? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Ammonites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Moabites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Edomites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Idumeans? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Amalekites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Canaanites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Hittites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Amorites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Canaanites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Hittites? or shall any man deliver him from the hands of the Amorites?

A LAM, how syteth the cytie so be-solate, that somtyme was full of people: howe is she become lyke a wyddowe: which was the lady of all nations: howe is she broughte vnder tribute that ruled all landes: howe wepeth she in the nyght, so that the teares runne downe her chekes: for a monge all her louers, there is none that gyueth her anye comfote: yea, her nexte frendes traungre agaynst her, and are become her ene-myes. Iuda is taken prisoner, because she was despyed, and for seruyng so many straunge god-des, she dwelleth now among the heythen. Howe fructeth no rest, al they that persecuted her, toke her in strapte places, where she coulde not escape

B The stretes of Syon mourne, because no man cometh any more to the solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her piers make lamentacion, her maydens are carefull: and she her selfe is in greate heynesse. Her enemyes haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemyes haue prospered, because the Lorde hath chastened her, for her greate wychednesse: her chyldren are led awaye captiue before they enemyes. All the beautye of the daughter of Syon is awaye, her prynces are become lyke hartes that fynde no pa-ture. They are dyspued awaye before they ene-myes, so that they haue no power.

C Howe doth Ierusalem remembre the tyme of her miscey and disobedience: yea, the ioye & pleasure that she hath had in tymes past, seeinge her people is broughte downe thowme the power of their enemy, and there is no man to helpe her: her enemyes stande loking at her, and laugh her habbooth dayes to scoyne. Ierusalem hath sinned euery more and more, therefore is she com in decay.
All they that had her in honoure despyse her, for they haue sene her fylchinesse. Yea, she hath sinned, and is ashamed of her selfe.

D Her synners are despyed, she remembred not what wolde folowe: therefore is her fall so wonderful: & there is no man to comfote her. O Lorde consyde my trouble, for myne enemy hath the upperhande. The enemy hath put his hande to all precious thynges that she had: yea, euery foye her eyes came the heythen in and out of the sanctuary: whom thou (nerethels) hast forgydden to come within thy congregacion.

E All her people seke theyr lyfe with heynnes, and loke what precious thynges euery man hath, that gyueh he for meate, to saue his lyfe.
Consyde, O Lorde, and se howe wyle I am become. haue ye no regards, O all ye go farre by, beholde and se, yf there be anye sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherewith the Lorde hath troubled me, in the day of his fearfull wrath. From aboute hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones, and it bur-nethe them cruelly: he hath layed a net for my feet and thowen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euery be mourninge.

F The pike of my transgression is come at the last, with his hande hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lorde hath deliuered me into those handes, wherout I can not quyte my selfe. The Lorde hath destroyed all the mighty men that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter al my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the doughter of Iuda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse.

G Therefore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush out of water: for the comfote that shoulde quychen me, is farre from me.

H My chyldren are dyspued away, for wher the enemye hath gotten the upperhande.

I Syon casteth out her handes, and there is no man to comfote her. The Lorde hath layed the enemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Ierusalem is become abhominacion in the myddes of them.
The Lorde is ryghteous, for I haue prouoked his cōfession vnto anger. O sake hede all ye people, and consyde my heynesse. My maydens and my yonge men are led away into captiuitie.

K I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my priestes and counsellors, but they pershed: euery whyle they sought for meate to saue theyr lyues. Consyde, O Lorde, howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my hart turneth about in me, and I am full of heynesse: because I rebelled stubburnly. The swerde bursteth me wout, and within I am lyke vnto death. They beare my mourning, but there is none that wyl comfote me. All myne enemyes haue herd of my trouble, & are glad therof, because I hast done it and thou hast broughte forth I tyme which thou calleddest, when they also shal be lyke vnto me.

L From the wall come al theyr aduersaries, thou shalt plucke them away, euery as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wychednesse. For my sorowe is very great, and my herte is heuie.

The ii. Chapter.

A LAM, howe hath the Lorde darkened the daughter of Syon so soze in his wrath.
As for the honour of Israel, he hath cast it downe fro heauen vnto y earth. Howe happened it, & he remembred not his owne: & foretold whe he was angry. The Lorde hath cast downe all the habitacions of Jacob wout any fauoure: al the stronge places of the daughter Iuda hath he broken in his wrath, and thowen the downe to the grounde: her hyngdome and her prynces hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken all the hozne of Israel: he hath withdrowen his right hand fro the enemy yea, a flambe of fyre is kindled in Jacob, & hath consumed up all rounde about: he hath bent his bowe lyke an enemye: he hath fastened his ryght hande as an aduersary, and euery thyng was pleasaunt to se, he hath smitten it downe he hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

B The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and al his palaces: Yea

yea, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, & fylled the daughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heynesse.

Jer. lxxvi.

* Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hath he put downe. The Lozde hath brought it to so passe, that the hye solempne feastes and dabborches in Sion: are cleane forgotten. In hys heupe displeasure hath he made the hynges and pcedes to be despyled.

The Lozde hath forsaken his owne aultare, and hath abhorred his owne Sanctuarie, and hath gyren the walles of the towne into the handes of the enemye. They: enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lozde as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

C The Lozde thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter of Syon, he sprede ouer hys lyne, & dyde not in his hand, tyl he had destroyed them. Therefore moune the turrettes and the broken walles togyther.

Jer. lxxvi.

Her gates are lonke downe to the ground, her barres are broken, and smytten in sondre, & her hynges and pynnes are carped awaye to the Genydes. They haue neyther lawe nor pprophe-tes, nor yet any vpsion from the Lozde.

The senatours of the daughter of Syon sate vpon the grounde in silence, they haue strawed ashes vpon they: herdes, and gyrded them selues wpyth sackcloth. The maydens of Jerusalem haue downe they: hebes to the ground. Wyne eyes begyn to fayle me thowowe wrpyng, & my body is disquyeted, my luer is poured vpo the earth for the great hurt of my people, seing I chylidren and babes dyd sowe in the stretes of the cytie.

Jer. lxxvi.

D Euen when they spake to they: mothers: where is meate and drynke: for whyle they so lyde, they sell downe in the stretes of the cytie, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in they: mothers bosome.

What shall I saie of the, O thou daughter Ierusalem, to whom shall I saye the: To whom shall I compare the, O thou daughter Syon, to comfort the wpythall: Thy hurt is lyke a mapne fer: who maye heale the.

Jer. lxxvi.

E Thy prophetes haue looked out vayne and foolyshe thynges for the: they haue not shewed I of thy wyckednesse, to lyepe the from captiuitie: but haue ouerladen the, & thowowe falsed scattered the abode. All they that go by the, clappe they: handes at the: byslyng and waggyng they: herdes vpon the daughter of Ierusalem, and say: is this the cytie that men call so fayre: wherein I hole lade set oyle: Al thyne enemyes gaue vpo the, whysperyng and byring they: teeth, sayng let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we looked for, is come, we haue founde and senett.

F The Lozde hath fulfylled the thyng that he was purposed to do: & performed that he had deuyd long ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared: he hath caused thyne aduersarye to triumphe ouer the, and set vpo the home of thyne enemye. * Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lozde, O thou cytie of the daughter Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a riuier, daye and nyght, & st not, and let not the apple of thyne eye leane of. Stande vp, and make thy prayer in the fyrste watche of the nyght, poure out thyne herte lyke water before the Lozde: lyft vp thyne handes for the lynes of thy ponge chylidren, that dye of hunger in the stretes. Beholde, O Lozde, and consy-der, why hast thou gathered me by so cleane: I shall the women then eate they: owne frute: euen chylidren of a spanne longe: What the p:ce-tes and prophetes be sayne thus in the Sanctu-arye of the Lozde: Ponge and olde lye beynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and ponge men are slayne with the swerde, whome thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacion hast put to death: yea, eue thou hast put them to death, and not spared them. Wp neyghbours I are rounde about me hast thou called as it were to a feast daye: so that in the daye of the Lozdes wrath none escaped, neyther was anye left be- beynde. Those that I haue brought and nouris- shed, hath myne enemye destroyed.

The. iiii. Chapter.

I Am the man, that (thowowe the rod of his wrath) haue experience of my- serpe. He droue me forth, and led me: yea into darknesse, but not into lichte: I gaue me on clepe he tourneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My flesh and my shyne hath he made olde, and my bones hath he brused. He hath buplided round about me, and closed me in with gail, and traunyle. He hath set me in darknesse, as they that be deed for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath laped heupe lynes vpon me.

Though I crye and cal piously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my wayes with fouresquared stones, and made my pathes crooked. He layeth waye for me lyke a Were, & as a Lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes and broken me in peces, he hath laped me waste altogether. He hath bent his bow and made me as it were a marke to shote at. The arrowes of hys quyer hath he shot euen into my reynes.

* I am langhed to scoone of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath fylled me wpyth bytternesse, and gyren me woymwod to drynke. He hath smitten my teeth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges, I thought in my selfe: I am vnde- me, there is no hope for me in the Lozde. O re- membze pet my myserie, and trouble, I woym- word and the gail.

Pea thou shalt remembze them, for my soule melteth awaye in me. Whyle I confesse these thynges in my hert I get a hope agayne. Namely it is of I Lozdes mercyes that we are not ve- terly consumed. For truly his pitiful chassyon hath not ceased. Newe mercyes shall the Lozde shewe vpon the earthe in the daye of payge, (O Lozde) great is thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lozde is my porcion, surely my soule: therfore wyl I hope in hym. O howe good is the Lozde vnto the, that put thy trust in hym.

Jer. lxxvi.

The Lamentacions

to the soule that seeth after hym. The good man with stylle and patience carreteth for the health of the Lorde.

D How good is it for a man to take the poke vpon hym from his pounch vpon he lyteth alone, he holdeth still, and dwelleth quyetly vpon hym selfe. He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope. He offereth his cheke to the smiter. He wyl be content wth reproche.

For the Lorde wyl not forsake for ever, but though he punyssh hym: yet accordyng to the multitude of his mercyes, he receyvethe to grace agayne. For he doth not plage, and cast out the chyldren of men from his house.

To treade all the prysoners of the earth vnder his feet. To moue the iudgement of man before the moost hyghst.

To condemne a man in his cause. The Lorde hath not pleasure in such thynges.

What is he then that sayeth: there shulde some thyng be done without the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouth of the moost hyghst goeth not euyl and good.

Wherfore then murmureth the spyng man? let hym murmure at his owne synne.

E Let vs loke well vpon our owne wayes, & remembre our synnes, and turne agayne to the Lorde. Let vs lyft vp our hertes with our handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen. We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be intreated? Thou hast covered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauoure. Thou hast hyd thy selfe in a cloude, that our prayer shulde not go thowowe. Thou hast made vs outcastes and to be despyed amonge the people. All oure enemyes gaue vpon vs.

Fear, and pytie is come vpon vs, yea, decepte and destruction. Wholerpuers of water gush out of myne eyes, for the great hurte of my people.

Myne eyes runne, and can not cease, for there is no rest. O Lorde, when wilt thou loke downe from heauen, and conspyce?

F Myne eyes bryake myne hert because of all the daughters of myepte. Myne enemyes hunted me oute warply lyke a byde: yea and yth with out cause. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pyt, and they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heed, then thoughte I: nowe am I yndone. I called vpon thy name, O lord, out of y^r depe pyt. Thou hast herd my voice & hast not turned away thyne eares fro my lighyng & cryng. Thou hast encluynd thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and hast sayde: feare not. Thou (O Lorde) hast maptapped y^e cause of my soule, and hast redemed my lyfe. O Lorde thou hast seke my blasphemers, take thou my cause vpon the. Thou hast well conspyced howe they go aboute to do me harme, and that all theyr counsailes are agaynst me. Thou hast heare theyr despytful wordes (O Lorde) yea, and all theyr ymaginacions agaynst me.

The lypes of myne enemyes, and theyr deuyls that they take agaynst me, all the daye longe. Thou seest all theyr spytyng: dwone and theyr spytyng vpon: they make theyr songes of no thyng but of me. Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordyng to the wayes of theyr bandes. Spue them an obdinate det, cut thy curse. Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indignacyon, and roote them out from vnder the heauen.

The iiii. Chapter.

How is the golde become so dimme? how is y^r goodlye colour of it so sore chaunge? and the stones of the Altare thus scattered in the corner of every strete. The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honour, and clothed with the mooste precious golde: how are they now become lyke the earthen vessels, whiche be made wth the potters hande? The dragons gnye theyr ponge ones suche with bare byestes, but the daughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wyldernes lyke the Estrached.

The tonges of the suckyng chyldren cleue to the rofe of their mouthes for very thurst. The pong chyldren aske heede, but there is noman that gyveth it them. They that were wont to fare delicately, perishe in the stretes: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make now moch of dong: The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater then the wickednesse of Sodome that todaye was destroyed, and not taken with handes.

Her abstynens (or Nazaries) were whiter then the snowe or mylke: their colour was fresh, red as Cozall, the beautye lyke the Sapphyre. But now their faces be very blacke. Insomuche that thou shouldest not knowe them in the stretes. Theyr synne cleaueth to theyr owne honours. It is wythered, & become lyke a drye stocke. They that be slayne with the swerde are happer then suche as dye of hunger, and perishe awaye, famyshyng for the frutes of the felde.

The women (which of nature are pityfull) haue sodden theyr owne chyldren with theyr handes, that they myghte be theyr meate in the miserable destruction of the daughter of my people. The Lorde hath perfourmed his deuytyl he hath poured oute the furyousnesse of his dyspleasure, he hath kyndled a fyre in Sion, which hath consumed the foundacions therof.

Neither the hynges of the earth, nor all the inhabitours of the world wold haue beleued y^e the enemy and aduersary shuld haue come in at the gates of the ctyte of Ierusalem, whiche neuer thelesse is come to passe for the synne of her prynces, and for the wickednesse of her pyncles, that haue shed innocentes bloode within her. So that blynde men wente combyng in the stretes, and steyned them selues with bloode. They wolde in no wyse touche theyr garmentes. But they cryed vnto every man, fyre y^r staynyng, a waye, get you hence, touche it not. Yea they fled, and crouched from them: yea, they haue sayde amonge the hepyden, they shall nomore dwell in this ctyte.

The countenance of the Lorde hath banysht them, and hal neuer loke moze vpon them.

The tyme wherein Ezechiel prophesied and in what place he was of his kynge and office. The vision of the four beastes.
The vision of the wheles. The vision of the cherubims and of the image above the throne.

I chanced in the thyrtye yere the fyfth daye of the fourth monerthe, that I was amonge the pꝛysoners by the ryuer of Co-and I sawe a vꝛyſon of God.

Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth, made oute the fyfth yere of kynge Ioachins captiuitie.

At the same tyme came the worde of ꝑ Lord, vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the pꝛeſte, in the lande of the Chaldees, by the water of Co-bar: where the bande of the Loyde came vpon hym. And I looked, and behold, a ſtoꝛmy wynde came oute of the North with a great cloude ful of fyre, whiche wyth hys gylſtre lpghtened all rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an Aungell, and as it were the lyneſſe of .iiii. beaſtes, and thys was theyꝝ lphneſſe. They were faſhyoned lyke a man: ſaunge that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Theyꝝ legges were ſtrepght, but theyꝝ ſecte were lyke bullockes ſecte, and theyꝝ gylſtre, as it had be ſapꝛe ſcoured metall. Under their wynges, vpon al the foure corners they had mennes handes. Theyꝝ faces and their wynges were toward the foure corners: per were the wynges ſo that one euer touched an other. When they wete they turned them not aboute: but eche one went ſtrepght ſoꝛwarde. Furthermoze this was the ſimilitude of theyꝝ faces. * vpon the right ſyde of theſe foure, theyꝝ faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the left ſyde they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Aegle. Theyꝝ faces alſo and theyꝝ wynges were ſpꝛed out aboute: ſo that two wiges of one touched ouer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered theyꝝ bodie. Euerye one when it went, went ſtrepght ſoꝛwarde. Where as the ſpyꝛite led them, thyseder they went, and * turned not about in theyꝝ goꝛnge.

The faſhyon and countenance of the beaſtes was lyke hote coles of fyre, and as though burnynge cꝛeſſettes had bene amonge the beaſtes: (this was the viſion) and the fyre gaue a gylſter, and out of the fyre there were lpghtenynge.
When the beaſtes went ſoꝛwarde & backward one wolde haue thought it had lpghtened. Now when I had well conſydered the beaſtes, I ſawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, wyth foure faces alſo vnto the beaſtes.

The faſhyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the ſce. The foure wheles were loꝛned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one went ſoꝛwarde, they went all foure, and turned them not aboute in theyꝝ goꝛnges. They were large, great and horrible

All to remembraunce (O Loyde,) what we haue ſuffred, conſidꝛe, and to loke vpon. Theyr backes were ful of eyes sounded about them all four. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Wherfoore the spirite went, whither went they also:

and the wheles were lyft vp, and folowed them for the spirit of lyfe was in the wheles. When beastes went forth, stode styl, or lyfte them sel-ues from the earth, then the wheles also went, stode styl, and were lyft vp, for the breath of lyfe was in the wheles. About our the beedes of beastes there was a firmament, whych was fast froward as it had bene of the mooste pure Chry-stal, and that was spred oute about vpon theyr beedes: vnder the same firmamente were theyr winges laped abrode one towarde another and two wynges covered the bodye of euery beaste.

And when they wente forth, I heard the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke the noyse of greete waters, as it had bene the noyse of a great God and a rushing togyther as it were of an hoste of men. And when they stode stille, they lette downe theyr wynges. Now whē they stode styl and had lette downe theyr wynges, it thundred in the firmament that was about theyr beedes, about the firmament that was ouer theyr bea-des ther was the fashion of a seate, as it had ben made of sapphir. vpon the seate there sat one lyke a man. I beheld hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre within fro his loynes vppward. And beneath, whē I looked vpon hym vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a bynyng fyre, that gnyeth lyght on euery syde Pea, the bynyng and glyster that lyghened round about, was lyke a raynbowe, which in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glozy of the Lord appeared. When I lawe it, I fell vpon my face, and berkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

¶ The ii. chapter.

¶ This prophet is sent to call the people from theyr exyle.

And then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (O thou sonne of man) and I wyll talke with the.

¶ And as he was communinge w me the spirite came into me, and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I make the chynge that he sayd vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde thou sonne of man: I wyll sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne away fro me: both they and theyr forefathers vnto this daye.

¶ Pea, I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough visages and stiff stomakes: vnto whom thou shalt saye on this maner: Thus the Lord God hath thus spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a froward household) they may knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

¶ Therfore (thou sonne of man) feare them

¶ not, neither be afrayed of theyr wordes: for prophets and thowes are with the. Pea thou dost dwelle amonge scoyppons: but feare not theyr wordes, be not abashed at theyr lokes, for it is a froward household. Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate.

¶ Therfore, thou sonne of man, obeye thou al thynges that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styl necked, lyke as they are a styfnecked household.
Open thy mouth, and eate that I gyue the. So as I was lokinge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me a hande, wherein was closed a booke, the hande opened it before me, and it was wyrt-ten within and without full of carefull moun-nynges: alas, and woo.

¶ The iii. chapter.

¶ The prophet beinge led with the meane of God and with the constant boldnes of the spirit is sent vnto the people that were in captiuyte. The gnyngment of a seate that heareth not the people theyr lynges.

¶ After this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eat that, whatsoeuer it be: pea, eat that booke and go thy way, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel: So, I opened my mouth and he gaue me the booke for to eate and sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belly shall eate, & thy bowels shall be fylled with the booke that I gyue the. Thus dyd I eat the booke, and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. And he sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man,aget the sonne vnto the house of Israel, and shew them the wordes that I comaunde the: for I sende the not to a people that hath a strange unknowe, or harde speche but vnto a house of Israel: Not to many nacyons, whych haue dyuers speches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not.

¶ Reuerendeste if I fear the to those people they wolde folowe the. But the house of Israel will not folowe the, for they wyl not folowe me: yea all the house of Israel haue styffe forebodes, and harde hertes. ¶ Beholde, therfore I wyll make thy face preuaile agaynst theyr faces, and barden thy forebode agaynst: theyr forebodes: so that thy forebode shall be harder then an. ¶ Idomant as a flint stone that thou mayest seare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayd of them, for they are a froward household.

¶ He sayde mozeouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede with thyne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thyne herte: and go to the pylsoners of thy prople, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner.
Thus the Lord God hath spoken: whether ye heare or heare not. With that the spirit toke me vp. And I heard the noyse of a great rushing and remouyng of the most blessed glozye of the Lord oute of his place. I heard also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushed oute a gaynst another: yea, and the ratyng of the wheles that were by them, which rushinge a noyse was very great. ¶ Howe when the spirit toke me vp, and carryed me awaye, I wene wyth an heuy and sorrowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ygghe soone.

¶ And so in the begynnyng of a moneth I dyd, I came to the pylsoners: that dwelt by the water of Codar, and remayned in the place where they

they were: And so continued I among them sent dapes being very sope. And whē the seof dapes were crypted, the Loide sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel, therefore take good hede to the wordes of my mouthe, and geue them warnyng as my commaundement.

E And I saye vnto the concerning the vngodly ma, that without doubte he must dye, and thou gynest not him warning, nor speakest vnto him that he maye turne from his euill waye: and so to lyue. And that the same vngodly man dye in his owne vngodlynes: but his bloodē wyll I requyre of thyne hand. And therfore, if thou geue warning vnto the wicked, and yet he for-take not his vngodlynes: then shall he dye in his owne wickednes, but thou hast discharged thy soule. Nowe if a ryghteous man go from his ryghteousnes, and do the thyng that is euill: I wyll laye a stumbyng bloche before hym, and he shall dye, because thou hast not giue him warnyng: yea, dye shall he in his owne sinne, so that the vertue whiche he dydd before, shall not be thought vpon: but his bloodē wyll I requyre of thyne hand. And therfore, if thou exhortest the ryghteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghte-ous doo no synne: then shall he lyue because he hath receyued thy warning, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Loide vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: Stande vp, and go into the feide, that I maye ther talke with the. So whē I had risen vp, & gone forth into the feide: Beholde, the gloire of the Loide stode there, lyke as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar. Then fell I down vpon my face and the spyrte came into me, whiche let me vp vpon my feet, and sayde thus vnto me: So thy waye and thou thy selfe in thyne house. Behold (O thou sonne of man): there shall chaynes be brought forth to bynde the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyll make thy tongue cleaue to the roote of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and not be as a chyld w them: for it is an obstinate householde.

But when I spake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus sayeth the Loide God, whoso heareth, let hym heare: whoso wyll not, let hym leaue, for it is an obstinate householde.

The. liii. Chapter.

E The besiege of the cite of Jerusalem is signified.
The long continuance of the captiuitie of Israel.
An hunger is prophesied to come in the captiuitie.

I Thou sonne of manne: take a lytle stone and lay it before the, and describe vnto the cite of Jerusalem, howe it is besieged, howe bulwookes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes and an hoorde of men rounde aboute it with engyns of warre.

Moreover, take an yron panne, and set it betwixt the and the cite, in stede of an yron wal.
Then set thy face toward it, to besiege it, & lay ordinaunce agaynst it to bynne it. This shall be a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt sleepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the sinne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dapes appointed, thou shalt sleepe vpon that syde, & beare they synnes. And therfore, I wyll appoynt the a tyme (to put of they synnes) and the nomber of the dapes: Thie hundred & xx. dapes must thou beare of wickednesse of the house of Israel.

And thou shalt full yll these dapes lye downe agayne, and sleepe vpon thy ryghte syde fourtye dapes, and beare the synes of the house of Iuda.

I And I saye vnto the, a pette, a dape (I saye) for a pette wyll I cuer laye vpon the. Therfore set nowe thy face agaynst that besieged Jerusalem, and dis-couer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophesy a gaynst it. Behold, I wyll laye chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not tene the from one side to an other, till I haue ended the dapes of this besiging.

And therfore take vnto the wheate, barley, beanes, gromel seed, William, and fitches, and put these together in a vessel, and make the loues of bzed thereof, accordyng to the nombre of the dapes that thou shalt lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bzed to eat for thie hundred and xx. dapes. And the meat that thou eatest shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twenty species euery dape. This appoynted meat shalt thou eate dailie from the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt also take a certayne measure of water: Namely, of the part of an hin shalt thou drynke dailie from the begynnyng vnto the end. Early eates shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyll toost them at a tyme made of mans donge, that they maye se it. And with that sayd I Loide: Euen it us that the chyldren of Israel eate their despyled bzed in the myddest of the Gentiles, amonge whome I wyll scatter them.

Then sayd I: O Lord God. Behold, my soule was neuer yet slayned: for fro my yowth vnto this houre, I did neuer eat of a deere carcase, or of that whiche was slayne of wilde beastes, neither came ther ever any vncleane flesch in my mouth. Where vnto he answered me and sayde: Wel, than I wyll graunt I to take coves donge for the donge of man, and to toost the bzed with all before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Behold, thou sonne of man, I wyll myspryse all the prouision of bzed in Jerusalem, so that they shall weye they bzed, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue very lytle measure ther of to drynke. And when they haue nomoze bzed nor water, one shall be destroyed with an other, and samely a waye for they wickednesse.

The. lvi. Chapter.

E The rebuke of the heere, by whiche is signified the hereutry of the people. The causes of the anger of God, towards the people.

I Thou sonne of manne, take the then a harpe knyfe: namely, a rasoure.

Take that and shauē the heere of thy head and bearde. Then take the scales and the weyght, and deuide I heere also. And after thou hast accopleyed the dapes of I siege: burne the thyrde parte thereof in the fyre in the myddest of the cite, and cut the other thyrde part in peeces with a knyfe. As for the thyrde parte that remaineth cast it in the wynde, and I wyll dawe out a swerde after them.

The Prophecie

But afterwarde take a pile of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtseye of it and cast it in y^e myddest of the fyre, & burne it in the fyre: Out of the same fyre shall there go a flame vpon the whole house of Israel. Wo to her thus sayth the Lord God: This same is Jerusalem. It is in the myddest of the beethen, and nacions that are rounde about her, but she hath despised my iudgements more then y^e Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacions that lye rounde about her. For they haue caste out myne ordynances, and not walked in my lawes: Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: For so moche as ye haue bene more augmented in nombre of people, then the beethen that dwel round about you: and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kept myne ordynances. & ye haue not liued so rightously as y^e beethen & are rodd about you. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God.

Isa. lxxv. 2.

CI will also come vpon the, I my selfe, I say: for in the myddest of the wil I lye in iudgement in the sygge of the beethen, and will handle the of suche a fallspoon as I neuer dyd before. and as I neuer will do from that tyme forth, and that because of al thyne abominacions. For in the fardres I walde sayne to eate theyr owne sonnes and fones theyr owne fardres. Suche a court will I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunte of the will I scatter into all the wyndes.

Isa. lxxv. 3.

Wherefore, as truly as I lye, sayth the Lord God, sepage thou hast deyled my sanctuarie, with al manner of abominacions, and w^{al} thy shameful offnces. For this cause will I also destroy the. Wyne & oyle shall not ouerle the, neither will I spare the. & One thyde part wythin the shall dye of the pestilence and of hunge: In other thyde parte shall be slayne downe, rounde aboute the with the swerde: The other thyde parte that remaineth wyll I scatter abode to ward all the wyndes, and b^{ys}se out the swerd after them. Thus I wil persecute my indignacyon, and let my wrath agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall know that I am the Lord, whiche with a feruent Ielousye haue spoken it. Wo to her, I wil make the waste and abhored, before al y^e beethen that dwell about the, and in the sight of al them that go by the, so that when I punish the in my wrath, in myne angre, and with the plage of my whole displeasure thou shalt be a very abhominacyon, like a gaspyng and wondyrng stocke, amonge the beethen that lye about the. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and it shall come to passe, wh^{il} I those amonge them the peryllous darter of hunge, which shall be but death. Yea, therefore shall I hate them, because I wil destroy you: I wil encrease hunge, and minishe all the pouison of hieed amonge you. Plages and misery will I sende you: yea, & wilde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloodsheddyng shall come vpon you, and the swerde will I byngne ouer you. Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

Chapter vi.

The word which the people shall playe for the synne of idolatry, the prophecies the remembrance of the remembrance of the people, and theyr belyngment. The destruction of the temple in Jerusalem.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophesye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lord God. O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleyes and dales. Beholde I, I my selfe I saye: will byngne a swerde ouer you, and destroye your hylle places: I will cast downe your alters, and breake downe your ymages. Your slayne men will I laye before your goddes, and the dead carcasses of the chyliden of Israel will I cast before theyr ydols, your bones will I destroye rounde aboute your alters and dwelling places.

Isa. lxxv. 6.

The cities shall be desolate, the hylle chapels layed waste: your alters destroyed and bryght your goddes cast downe, and taken away, your temples layed euen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane rote out. Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe howe that I am the Lord. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the swerde, will I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I will scattere you amonge the nacions. And theyr escape of you shall thynke vpon me amonge the beethen, where they shall be in captiuitie. As for that whorish & vnfaithfull darters of theyr, wherewith they runne awaye fro me: I wil breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theyr, that cōmpt conyngation wyth theyr ydols.

Isa. lxxv. 7.

Then shall they be ashamed and displeased wyth theyr selues, for the wickednes and abhominacions whiche they haue done: and shall learne to knowe that I am the Lord, howe that it is not in vayne, & I the Lord spake to byngne suche misery vpon them. The Lord sayd more ouer vnto me: Smyte thyne shaddes togyther, & stampe with the feet, and say: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wickednes of the house of Israel, for because of them they shall perishe with the swerde, with hunge, and wyth pestilence. Whoso is farre of that dye of the pestilence that is nyr at hande, shall perishe with the swerd: and the other that remaine and that are besieged, shall dye of hunge.

Isa. lxxv. 8.

Thus will I satisfy my wrathful displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe that I am the Lord, when your slayne men lye amonge your ydols, and aboute your alters, vpon all hylle valleyes and toppes of mountaynes, amonge al grene trees, amonge all theyr oled ruyn in the places where they did sacrifice to al theyr ydols. I wil stretch myne hand out vpon them, and will make y^e lande waste. So that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wilderness of Beblothad forth, shew al their habitacions to learne them for to knowe, & I am the Lord.

Isa. lxxv. 9.

Chapter vii.

The word of all the lande of Israel shall be as a curse. The cause of the destruction thereof. The prophet is comyned to bringe the same of the eyes that are at hand.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this manner: The I call, O lone of man. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende cometh vpon the lande of Israel: yea, verily the ende cometh vpon all the corners of the lande. But now shall the ende come vpon the, for I will sende my wrath vpon the, and will punish according to thy wayes, and rewarde after al thyne abhominacions. Mine eye shall not ouersee the, neyther will I spare the: but rewarde the accordyng to thy wayes, and declare thyne abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, one mylere and plage shall come after another, the ende is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for the, beholde, it is come alreadye, thy destruction is carlye come a gaynst the, that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the dape of sedition is harde by, and the crye shall not be as the soundyng agayne of the mountaynes. Therefore I will shortly pouer out my soze displeure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the al thy abhominacions. Mine eye shall not ouersee the neyther will I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and thyne abhominacions shall be punished in myddes of the, to lerne you to know how that I am the Lorde that sayeth. Beholde the dape is here, the dape is come, y haue is run out, the rod shal pteeth, wyde waresh grene, malicious violence is growen vp, and the vngodlye waresh to a staffe. None of the shall remayne ouer, none of the: yches, not one of the: seide and no lamentacion shall be made for them.

The tyme cometh, the dape shal weete nye. Whoso byeth, let hym not reioyse: he that sellet, let hym be soze: for why? Trouble shall come in the myddes of them al: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the thyng that he sold although they lyfe be yet with the lyuing. For when the prophete was preached vnto all the people, none turned from theyr line, and no man toke strengthe to hym agaynst his wychednesse, to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shal ye blow, & make you all ready, but noman shall go to the batayl, for I am with al the whole multitude. The swerde shall be without, pestilence and plague within: so that whoso is in the feilde shall be slayne with the swerde: and he that is in the cytie shall prey with hunger and pestilence. And such as escape, and fle fro among them shall be vpon the hylls, lyke as the doves in the feilde: every one shall be afrayed, because of his owne wychednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, and all knees shall be weake as the water: they shall gird them selues with sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon the, theyr faces shall be confounded: and theyr deaddes balde: theyr spluer shall they cast forth in stretes, and theyr golde shall be despyled: yea, theyr spluer and golde maye not deliuer them, in the dape of the fearful wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satysfie theyr hungry soules neyther fyl theyr emptye bellies therewith: for it is become theyr owne decaye thowoe they wychednesse. And theyr beutiful costly ornaments that God had ordeyned to be theyr greatesse glorie, in it they haue set vp abhominacions vnto theyr ydols. For this cause will I make the and it to be abhoyred. Moreover, I will gyue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoiled: and to the wyched for to be robbed, & they shall destroy it. My face will I turne from them, my treasury shall be despyled: for the theues shall go in to it, and spende it. Make a chayne, for the land is whole despyled with vnrightrous iudgement of innocent blood, and the cytie is full of violence oppresyon.

Wherefore I will brynge the moste cruel tyrantes from among the heathen, to take theyr houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proude to cease, and theyr sanctuary shall be despyled. When this trouble cometh, they shall seeke peace, but they shall haue none. One myschance and sorowe shall folowe an other, and one rumoure shall come after an other. Then shall be seke vspsons in vayne at theyr prophetes. The law shall be gone from the prestes, and wyf come from the elders. The kinges shall mourne the princes shall be clothed with bruyne, and the handes of the people in the lande, shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after theyr own wayes, accordyng to theyr owne iudgements: I will iudge them, to lerne them for to knowe that I am the Lorde.

The viii. Chapter.

An appoynte of the limytude of god. Ezechiel is brought to Ierusalem in the spirit. The Lorde sheweth the people the poyntes of the house of Israel, and the temple of the pyrites.

It happened, that in the syrt yere, the syrt dape of the syrt moneth, I lay in my house, and the lordes of Iuda sayd to me: and the hande of the Lorde god fel euen there vpon me: And as I looked up, I sawe as it were a lykenesse of fyre from his loynes downewarde, and from his loynes vpwarde: it shyned marvelous clere, and lyke an angel to loke vpon. This multitude stretched out an hande and toke me by the heary lockes of my heed, and the spyrte lyft me vp bet wyrt hauen and earth: and brought me in a visyon to Ierusalem, into the entry of the inner porte that lyeth toward the North: there stode an ymage, with whom he shal all thynges in his power was very woth.

And beholde, the gloze of the God of Israel was in the same place: ene as I hadde sene it a soze in the feilde. And he sayde vnto me. Thou some of man, lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the North. Then lyft I vp myne eyes towarde the North, and beholde: belyde the port northwarde, ther was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the very entrynge in. And he sayde furthermoze vnto me: Thou lone of man, seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greatesse abhominacions that the house of Israel comitted in this place, to dyspue me from my sanctuary? But turne the about, and thou shalt see yet greatesse.

yet greater abominations. And with þ brought me to the court gate: and when I looked, behold, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou son of man, bygge thow the wall. And when I bygged thow the wall behold, there was a doore. And he sayde vnto me go thy way in, and loke what wyched abomi-nations they do here. So I went in, and sawe, and beholde, there were all maner ymages, of wojmes and beastes, all ydois and abominations of the house of Israel, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: There stode also before the ymages. x. lordes of the conseil of þ house of Israel, and in the mydd of them stode Jaaznid, the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of the had a censour in his hand, and out of the instace there went a smoke as it had ben a cloude.

* For they saye: Tush, the Loyde seeth vs not, the Loyde regardeth not þ word. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se yet greater abominations that they do. And with that he brought me to the doore of the porte of the Loydes house toward the north. And behold, there sat women mourning for Tamas.
Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greater abominations then these are.
And so he brought me into the inward court of the Loydes house: And behold, at the post of the Loydes house, betwixt the foire entre and the aulnar, there were xxv. men, that tourned theyr backes vpon the temple of the Loyde, and theire faces toward the East, and theire wojs shipped the sunne.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? theynherd the house of Juda that it is but a trylle, to do these abominations here: whilke they fyl the lande full of wyched-nesse, and undertake to prouoke me to anger.
Yea, and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me: Therefore wyll I also do some thyng in my wrauthful displeasure, so that myne eye shal not and though they crie in mine eares with a loud

Hecryed also with a loude voyce men out of the Grete of the upper pon in his hand to the slaughter. Ther was one amonge them that had on hym a lynnen rap-ment, and a wyters ynhoine by his syde.

Then wente in, and stode by syde the byasten and was come down to the thershold of þ house and he called the man þ had the lynnen rapment vpon hym, and the wyters ynhoine by his side and the Loyde sayd vnto hym: go thy waye thoro the city of iherusalem, and let a marke vpon the fashedes of them that mourne and are sorre for all the abominations that be done therein.

And to the other he sayde, that I myght heare:

vnto them: When ye haue despyled the temple, & fylled the court with the flaye, then go poure waye forth. So they went out, and slue downe thow the citye. Howe when they had done þ slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fel downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Loyd God, wyll thou then destroye al the residue of Israel, in the foire displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyched-nesse of the house of Israel & Juda is very great so that the land is ful of bloode and the citye full of vnlawfulness. For they saye: * Tush, the Loyde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not.
Therefore wyll I vpon them: I myne eye shal not ouer se them: neyther wyll I spare them, but wyll recompence theyr wychednesse vpon their heddes.
And behold, the man that had the lynnen rapment
vpon hym and the wyters ynhoine by his side tolde al the matter how it happened, and sayd:

there appered þ similitude of a hole came vpon the thershold of the house: so that þ temple was full of cloude, and the court was full of the spyn of the Loydes glaype: Yea, and when he had bydden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hot coles from the Then the one Cherub reached forth his hande betweene the Cherubyns, and toke thereof, and gave it unto him that had on the linen rayment in his hande: which toke it, and went out. And under the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande. I saw also foure wheles besyde the Cherubynes, so that by every Cherub there stood a whele. And the wheles were (to loke upon) after the fashion of the precious stone of Chariss: yet, (vnto the syghte) they were all foure of one fashion, as yt one whele had bene in another.

When they went forth, they went all foure together, not turninge about in theyr goyng. But where they stode, thither went they after also, so they turned not about in theyr goyng. Theyr whole bodies, theyr backs, theyr handes and wynges: yea, and theyr wheles also were all full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I heard hym cal the wheles. * Every one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an eagle, and they were lified vp above. This is the beast that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns went, the wheles went with them, and when the Cherubyns stode, theyr wynges to lyfte themselves upward, the wheles remayned not behynde but were with them also. Whosoevr when they stode these stode also. And when they were lified vp, the wheles were lified vp also with them for the spyrte of lyfte was in the wheles.

Then the glorie of the Lorde was lified vp from the threshold of the temple and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns shaked with theyr wynges, and lyfte them selues vp fro the earth: so that I sawe when they wente and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorie of the Lorde was vpon the. This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel by the water of Cobar. And I perceived that it was the Cherubyns. Every one had .iiii. faces, and every one .iiii. wynges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the sygure of their faces was euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenance of them. Every one in his goyng went straighe forwarde.

Who they were that seduced the people of Israel, to sayde theyr prophetes, they saye them that they shal be deliuered. The remaing of the beere cometh of God, otherwyse can we not walke in his commaundmentes. He threatneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counsaile.

After this, the spyrte of the Lorde lyfte me vp, and brought me vnto the east porte of the Lordes house. And beholde ther were .xxv. men vnder the doze amonge whome I sawe Jaazniad the sonne of Azur, and Whelchiah the sonne of Bananiad, the rulers of the people. Then said the Lorde vnto me. Thou son of man, these men ymagine myschefe, and a wyched counsaile take they in this cite, saying: Tylde, there is no destruction at hand, let vs buye houses, theyr Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleshe.

Therefore shalte thou prophete vnto them: yea, prophete shalte thou vnto them, O some of man. And with that fell the spyrte of the Lorde vpon me, and said vnto me: Speake, thus saith the Lorde. On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I knowe the ymaginations of your hertes. Many one haue ye murdered in this cite, and fylled the stretes full of the slayn. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God. The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in the cite are the fleshe, and this cite is the cauldron. * But I wil bring you out of it: ye haue feared the swerde, and I will bringe a swerde ouer you sayth the Lorde God. I wil dyspue you out of this cite and deliuer you into your enemyes hand, and wil condemne you. Ye shalte slayne in all the colles of Israel. I wil be auenged of you to lerne you to knowe that I am the Lorde. This cite shall not be youre cauldron, neyther shal ye be the fleshe therein, but in the colles of Israel wil I punyssh you, that you may knowe that I am the Lorde, in whose commaundmentes ye haue not walked, nor kepte myr lawes: * but haue done after the customes of the heathen, that lye rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Whelchiah the sonne of Bananiad died. Then fel I downe vpon my face and cried w a loude voyce, saying: O Lorde God, wilt thou then vtterly destroye al the remnant in Israel: And so the woordes of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner, thou sonne of man, thy brethren, thy kynfolk, and I whole house of Juda which dwel at Jerusalem, saye: With vsa we ye farre from the Lorde, for the lande is gauen vs in possession. Therefore tell the. Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wil sende you far of amonge the Gentyles, and scatte you amonge the nacjons, and I wil hallowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tell them also. Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wil gather you agayne out of the nacjons, and bring you from the countreys where ye be scatted, and I wil gyue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shal come thither. And they shal take away al theyr ydols, and all theyr abhominacions from thence. * And I wil gyue you one herte, and I wil plant a newe spyrte within your bowels.

That stony herte wil I take oute of youre bodye, and gyue you a fleshy herte, that ye may walke in myr commaundmentes, and kepe myr ordynances, and do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God: but loke whole hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abhominacions & wicked luynges thole mens dedes wyl I bring vpon theyr owne heedes, sayeth the Lorde God. After this did the cherubyns lyfte vp theyr wynges, and the wheles went with them, and the glorie of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glorie of the Lorde went vp from the myddest of the cite, and stode vpon the mount of the cite, toward the East. * But the winde toke me vp & in a vision (which came by the spyrte of god) it brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the pylsoners. Then the vision that I had sene vanyshed awaye frome. So I spake vnto the pylsoners me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a fear full tremblinge shalt thou eate the bread, with carefullnesse and sorrowe shalt thou drynke the water. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on this manner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to ylands of Israel: Ye shall eate your bread with sorrowe and drynke your water with drupped. Psea the land with the fulnesse thereof shal be layed waste for the wickednesse of them that dwell therein.

And the cities that now be well occupied, shall be voyde: and the lande desolate: that ye may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Per came the word of the Lorde vnto me againe, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of by wordes is that: which ye vse in the land of Israel, sayinge: Cuius regni sunt diebus are so slacke in commynge, al the visions are of none effecte: Tell them therefore, thus saith the Lorde God: I wyll make that by wordes to crasse so that it shal nomore be comonly vbled in Israel.

But saye thus vnto them: y dayes are at hand that euery thyng which hath bene prophesied shall be fulfilled. There shall no byspon be in daye, neither any prophesie fayle amonge the children of Israel: For it is I the Lord y I spake it: and whatsoever I the Lorde speake, it shal be performed, and not be slacke in commynge.

Psea, euen in your dayes (O ye froward hou-sholds) wyll I drupple some thyng, and drynke it to passe, sayeth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: behold, thou sonne of man. The house of Israel sayeth on this manner. Cuius, as for the billis that ye haue sent it wyll be many a daye as it come to passe. It is faine of per. the thyng that he prophesied.
Therefore say vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God. All my wordes shal nomore be slacke, loke what I speake, that same shal come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

The xliii. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lorde against the false prophetes, which teache the people the counsailes of theyr owne hertes.

The word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, speake, prophesie agaynst those prophetes, that preache in Israel: and saye thou vnto them y prophecie out of theyr owne hertes: heare the word of y Lorde, thus sayeth the Lord God * Woe be vnto those foolys y prophetes y folowe their owne spynne, and speake where they se no thyng, O Israel, thy prophetes are lyke y foxes vpon the hye felde: For they stande not in y gap-pes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battel in the dape of the Lorde. Alayne chinges they se, & tell yes, * to many ayn they preache thynges withal The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Alayne bylions haue ye sent, and spoken false prophecies, when ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it, where as I neuer saye it.

Therefore thus sayeth y Lorde God: Because your wordes be vayne, and ye seche out lyen.
Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde.
Wyne

wynehandes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they shal not be in the counsell of my people, nor wyrtten in the booke of the boue of Israel: neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde God. And that for bycause: they haue dyspersed my people, and told them of peace, where no peace was. One sitteth vpon a walle, and they daube it wyth loose clape.

Therefore tell them whyche dawbe it wyth vntempered moztar, that it shal fall. For there shall come a great moztar of rayne, great hayle stones shal fall vpon it, & a soye storme of winde shall breake it, so shall the walle come downe. What is not that be sayd vnto you: where is now the moztar that ye dawbed it wythall. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll breake out in my wyrdful displeasure with a stormy winde so that in myne angre there shal come a mighty showre of rayne, and hayle stones in my wyrd, to destruye wythall.

As for the walle that ye haue dawbed wyth vntempered moztar, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen wyth the groude: so that the foundation thereof shal remoue, and it shall fall, yea and ye your selues shall perishe in the myddell thereof, to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus wil I performe my wyrd vpon this walle, and vpon them that haue dawbed it wyth vntempered moztar, and then wyll I sape vnto you: the walle is gone, and the dawbers are a wype. These are the prophetes of Israel, which prophete vnto the cite of Ierusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, where as no peace is sayeth the Lorde God. Wherefore, O thou sonne of ma, set thy face against the daughters of the people, whiche prophete out of their owne hertes: and speake thou, prophete agaynst them and sape thus.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Woe be vnto you, that some pyllowes vnder al arme holes, & bolsters vnder the beddes both of yonge and old, to catche soules wythall. For wher ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie, ye promysed them lyfe, and dishonour me to my people for an handfull of barley, and for a peece of bread when ye hylle the soules of them that dye not, & promysed lyfe to them that lyue not. Thus ye dissemble with my people, that beleue your lyes.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, I wyll also vpon the pyllowes, wher ye catche the soules in lying: then wyll I take from your armes, and let the soules go that ye catch lying. Your bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and deliuer my people out of your hande, so that they shall come nomore in your handes to be spoyled and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde. Seeing that with your lyes ye discomforte the hertes of the ryghteous, whome I haue not discomforted. Agayne, for somuche as ye receiue the hande of the wycked, so that he may not turne from his wycked way and lyne, therefore shal ye lye out nomore vaine, nor prophete your owne gyltynges: for I wyll deliuer my people out of your hande, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

The xliii. Chapter.

The Lorde denieth his name to the people for their synne sake. The dysplices of the walle betwixt the Lorde sometime deceiue by false prophetes. & charys of them that lye vnto Babylon.

here reioyced vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, these men beate they: vncleanes in they: hertes, and go purposely vpon the stonbylge blocke of they: owne wyckednesse: shoulde I then answer at they: request: Therefore speake vnto them, and sape: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Every man of the house of Israel, that beareth bys vnclean Pdoles in bys herte, purposyng to stonble in his owne wyckednesse and cometh to a prophet, to enquire any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde my selfe geue answer, accordyng to the multitude of the Pdoles, that the house of Israel maye be snared in they: owne hertes, bycause they be cleane gone from me, for they: abominacions saken. Wherefore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Be converted, forsake your Pdoles, and turne your wyues from your fylthynges, and turne your faces from all your abominacions.

For every man, whether he be of the house of Israel or a stranger, that sojourneth in Israel, whyche departeth from me, and carperth Pdoles in his herte, purposyng to go styll stonbyng in his owne wyckednesse, and cometh to a prophete, for to aske counsaile at me thowse him: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde geue answer, by myne owne selfe. I wyll set my face agaynst that man, and wyll make him to be an example for other: yea, and a commune by worde: and wyll roote hym out of my people, that he maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde: and yet that prophete be dyspued, when he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lorde my selfe haue deceyued that prophete, and wyll stretch out myne hande vpon hym, to roote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punyshed for they: wyckednesse. Accordyng to the synne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led nomore from me thowse errour, and be nomore dyspued in they: wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I they: God, sayeth the Lorde God.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, and goeth forarde in wyckednesse: I wyll stretch out myne handes vpon it, and destroy all the prouyn of they: byed and sende death vpon them, to destroy man and beaste in the land. And though Aor, Daniel, & Job, these the men were among them, yet shal they in they: ryghteousnesse deliuer, but they: owne soules, sayeth the Lorde God.

If I bypunge noysome beastes into a lande to walle it vp, and it be so desolate, & no man may gorderrin for beastes: yf these thye we were also in the lande, as truly as I yue: sayth the Loide God: they shall saue neyther sonnes nor daughters, but be onely deliuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shalbe waste.

¶ O: yf I bypunge a swerde into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the lande: so that I slaye downe man and beast in it, and yf these thye men were therein. As truly as I yue: sayth the Loide God: they shal deliuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but only be saued them selues. Yf I sende a pestilence into the lande, and poure out my fure indignation vpon it in blood, so that I eate out of it both man and beast. And yf Ase, Daniel & Job were therein, as truly as I yue: sayth the Loide God: they shal deliuer neyther sonnes nor daughters, but saue theyr owne soules in theyr tyghthousnesse. Whereouer thus sayth I yue God.

¶ Woche moze when I sende my foure troublous plagis vpon Jerusalem: the swerde, hunger, perillous beastes and pestilence, to destroye man and beast out of it. Beholde, there shalbe a remnant saued therein, which shal bying forth theyr sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shal come forth vnto pon, and ye shall se theyr wape, and what they take in hande, and ye shalbe comforted, as touchyng all the plagis that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shal comforte you, when ye se theyr wape and workes: and ye shal knowe, how that it is not wythout a cause that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I did sayth the Loide God.

As the vngodly man of the vyne tree is cast into the fyre, so sayth he that Jerusalem shalbe burnt.

¶ The word of the Loide came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: what cometh of the vyne amonge al other trees: and of the wyld vyne stocke amonge al other tymber of the groue? Do men take wood of it, to make any worke wale? O: may there a hable be made of it, to hang any thyng vpon? beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be burnt, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it: the myddle is burnt to a shew. Is it mete then for any worke? No. Weinge then that it was mete for no worke, being whole: much lesse may there any thyng be made of it, wher the fyre hath consumed and burnt it. And therfore thus sayth the Loide God: Like as I cast the vyne vnto the fyre for to be burnt, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyl I do wyth them that dwel in Jerusalem and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shal consume the. ¶ Then shall ye knowe, I am the Loide, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the lande waste: because they haue so long offended, sayth the Loide God.

The prophet entreth into the city of the abominations of Jerusalem both to shew the benefites of God toward it. Jerusalem is reprobate of vngodnes for her reprobation by the prophet. He sheweth the wretchednes of other people in comparison of the synners of Jerusalem. The cause of the abominations into which the synners fall. The waye is shewed to the reprobation.

¶ Sayne, the word of the Loide spake I vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: shewe the cite of Jerusalem their abominations, and say: thus sayeth I Loide God vnto Jerusalem. Thy progeny and kynred came out of the land of Canaan: thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Canaanite, thus was the manner of the birth. In the day of thy byrth when thou wast borne, I strynged of thy nauell was not cut of, I wast not bathe in water to make it cleane. Thou wast neither rubbed w salt, nor swabbed in cloutes. No man regarded I so much, as to do any of these thynges for the, for to shewe the such fauour, but I wast vterly cast out vpon I seide: yea, despyled wast thou in the day of thy byrth. Then came I by I and saw the troden downe in thyne owne blood and sayde vnto the: Lye, although thou be despyled in thyne owne blood: yea, cut I (I tell the) sayd vnto the: lye, although thou be despyled in thyne owne blood. ¶ No I platted the, as I blot som of I seide thou arte growen vp, and warden greate: thou hast gotten a marvellous pleasant beauty, thy breasts are com vp, thy heere is goodly growen, where as I wast naked & bare a foer.

¶ Nowe when I went by the, and looked vpon the: beholde, the tyme was come: yea, euen I tyme to wode the. Then spied I my clothes ouer I to couer thy dishonestie. yea, I made an oth vnto I and marred my selfe with the (sayth the Loide God) I so thou becomest myne owne. The I washed I the with water, and pouerged thy bloode from the. I anointed the with oyle. I gave the change of raymentes, I made the shoes of Canaanite: I gyrded the about with white silke I clothed I wyth hercheres. I decked the wyth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy foze beed, earynges vpon thyne eares, I set a beauefull crowne vpon thyne beed. Thus wast thou deckt wyth syluer and golde, & thy rayment was of fyne wythe sylke of needle wythe, and of dyuers colours. Thou dydst eat nothing but synnels, honey and oyle: marvellous goodly wast I and beauefull: yea, euen a very quene wast thou. In somoch I thy beauty was spoken of amonge the deyd, for thou wast excellent in my beauty which I put vpon the. sayth I Loide God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne beauty, & playde the harlot: when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast comyted whozedom with al that wot by I, and hast fulfilled theyr desyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuers colours, & deckt thyne aulcres ther wyth, whereup thou myghtest fulfill thyne whozedom, & and of suche a fashion, as neuer was done, nor shalbe. ¶ The goodly ornaments and iewels which I gave the of myne owne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymagines ther of, and comyted whozedom wythall.

¶ Thy garmentes of dyuers colours hast thou taken, and deckt them ther wyth, myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them. My meate which I gave the, as synnels, oyle, honey: (to fede the wythall) that hast I set before them them for a sweete sauour. And thus came also to passe sayth the Lorde God: * Thou hast taken thine owne sonnes and daughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto them, to be their meate. Is this but a smal whoredome of thine (thinkest thou) that thou slepest my chyliden, and crucst them ouer, to be burnt vnto them? And yet in all thy abominations and whoredoms, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, howe naked & bare thou wast at that tyme, & troden downe in thine owne bloude. After all these thy wickedneses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde)

Thou hast buried the strowe and chyliden in euery place Thou hast buried thy places: yea, at the head of euery strete hast thou buried the same aniler.

Thou hast made thy beney to be abhoyred, thou hast layd out thy legges to curre one that came by, and multiplied thine whoredome. * Thou hast chympted fornication with the Egyptians thy neyghbours, whiche had muche scliffe: and thus hast thou increased thine whoredome, to anger me. Behold, I byd stretch out myne hande ouer thee, and byd * minishe thy stowe of fode, and deliuered the ouer into the wyllies of the Philistines thine enemies, whiche are ashamed of thy abominable waye.

* Thou hast played the whoie also with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable: yea, thou hast (I saye) with them played the harlot, and yet haddest thou not pnyough. Thus hast thou furthermore chympted thy fornication fro the lade of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy lust not satysfied. Howe obstinate is thine herte (sayth the Lorde God) saying thou doest all these wyles of an erraunte whoie: buydynge thy strowe at the heade of euery strete, and thy bodel houses in all places: Thou hast not bene as an other whoie that holdeth scoone of a smal rewarde, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in steade of her husbände. Gyftes are geue to all other whoies, but thou geuest rewarde vnto all thy louers: & offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of al places, and to chympte fornication with the. It is come to passe with the in thy whoredoms contrary to the vse of other women: yea, there hath no such fornication bene chympted after the, seynge that thou proferest gyftes vnto othe, and no rewarde is geuen the: this is a contrary thynge.

Therefore heare the worde of the Lorde, O harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God: For so muche as thou hast set forth thy youth to whoredome & dyscouered thy shame, so shal the whoredome with all thy louers, and with all the ydolles of thy abominacions in the bloude of thy chyliden

* whome thou hast geuen them: Beholde, therefore I wyll gather together al thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe comen: yea, and all them whom thou sauorest, & euery one that thou hatest I wyll (I saye) gather the together rounde about the: & wyll dyscouer thy shame before them that they maye see al thy synnes.

* Wyll couer, I wyll iudge the as a breacher of wedlocke and a murderer, and recompence the thyn owne bloud in wrath & gelously I wil geue the ouer (into the) power, & shall breake downe thy stues, and destroye thy bodel houses: they shall strype the oute of thy clothes, al thy fayre & deutyfull Jewels shall they take from the, and so let the selfe naked & bare: * yea, they shal byng the comen people vpon the which shal stonethe and slay the doome with the; swordes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and pump the in the sight of many women. Thus wyll I make thy whoredome to cease, so that thou shalt geue out no mo rewarde. Shal I make my wrath to be styll, take my gelousye from the, be content and no moie to be dyspleased: seynge thou couldest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in al these thynges? Beholde therefore, I wyll bynge thine owne wayes vpo thine heade, sayth the Lorde God: howbeit I neuer byd vnto the according to thy wickednesse and al thy abominacions. Behold, al the that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe al so agaynst the surche a mother, such a daughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne daughter that hath cast of her husbände and her chyliden: yea, thou arte & sister of thy sisters, which forsoke the; husbendes and the; chyliden. Poure * mother is a Credite, and pour father an Amoite. Thine eldest sister is Samaria, she & her daughters that dwel vpon thy lefte hande.

But thy yongest sister that dwelleth on thy ryghte hande is Sodoma and her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after the; wayes, nor done after the; abominacions: but thou stodest a lytel and very small tyme, & in al thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy sister with her daughters, hath not done so euil, as I and thy daughters. Behold, * the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: Wyde, fulnesse of meate, aboundaunce and ydelnesse: these thynges had she and her daughters. Besydes that they reached not the; hande to the poore and nedye, but were proude, and byd abominable thynges before me: therefore I toke them a waye, as pleased me. Neither hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceded them in wickednesse: In so muche that in comparison of all the abominacions which thou hast done thou hast made thy sisters good women. Therefore thou (whych bydest condempne thy sister) beate thine owne shame, for thine owne offences, that thou hast chympted, more abominable the they byd which in dede are moie righteous then thou art be thou (I saye) ashamed, & beate thy shamefull rebuke: seynge that thou hast prouoked thy sisters in comparison of the ryghte wyfe.

As for the; captiuitie, namely the captiuitie of Sodoma, and her daughters: the captiuitie of Samaria & her daughters: I wyll bynge the agayne, so wyll I also bynge agayne thy captiuitie amonge them: that thou mayst take thine owne confusion vpon the, and be ashamed of al that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her daughters: Samaria and her daughters with thy selfe and thy daughters shalbe broughte agayne to your olde estate. When thou walk in thy payre, and before thy wychednes came to lyght: I woldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, untill the tyme that she shoulde sayth all thy townes, and the dwyllinges whiche thou couldest aboute them, broughte the to shame and confusion: that thou myghtest heare thyne awne filchyness and abhominacion, sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lord God, I shoulde (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyed the oth, and broken the covenante: Nevertheless, I will remember the covenante that I made with the in thy yowthe, in so muche that it shalbe an everlastyng covenante: so that thou also rememberest thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receave of me thy eldes and younger sisters, whiche I wyl make thy daughters, and that be thy covenante. And so wyl I renew my covenante with the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord, that I mayst knowe upon it: be ashamed, & excuse thine owne confusion nomore: when I have forgiven the, al that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xvii. Chapter.

It is possible of the time legio.

In the wordes of the Lorde came unto me saying: Thou son of man, put forth a parable, & a parable speakinge & a parable, unto the house of Israel, and say: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: There came a greater Agie with great wynges, yea, with a myghty longe bodye, a ful of feathers of dyverse colours upon the mounte of Libanus, and toke the best brynche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of the Cedre tree, and carryed it into the lande of Canaan, and set it in a Cytie of merchants. He toke also of the seide of the lande, & plantid it in a frutefull grounde, he broughte it unto grete waters, and set it as a willow tree there. Then byd it growe, and was a grete byne tree, but lower by the grounde whole branches turned into it selfe, and the rotes of it were fastened under it, thus there came of it a byne, & it broughte forth blossoms, & spred out branches.

But there was an other Agie, a grete one, which had grete wynges and many feathers: behold, the rotes of this byne had an hunger after hym, & spred out his branches towardes hym that he myght water her with his orchard that he had plantid. Nevertheless, it was plantid upon a good grounde by grete waters: so (by reason) it shuld have broughte out branches and frute, and have bene a goodly byne.

Speake thou therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Shall this byne prosper? shal not his rotes be plucked oute, his frute be broken of, his grene branches wythered and fade awaye yea, without anye stryde arme of many people, shal it be plucked up by his rotes. Behold, it was plantid: shal it prosper therefore? shal it not be dryed up & wythered: yea, even in the cutting out of his blossoms, as soon as the east wynd bloweth.

Moreover, the wynde of the Lorde came unto me saying: Speake so forthward householde:

knowe ye not, what these thynges do synifye?

Tel them: Beholde, & a kynge of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and his prynces, and led them to Babylon. He toke of the kinges seide, and made a covenante with hym, and toke an oth of hym: The prynces of the lande toke he wyth hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subjection, and not to rebell: but kepe the covenante, and fulfill it. But he fell from hym, and sente his ambassytours into Egypt, that he myght have horses and much people.

Shouldest thou prosper? shouldest thou be safe, that doest such thynges? O shouldest thou escape, that breaketh his covenante? As truly as I live, sayeth the Lorde God, he shal dye at Babylon, in the place where the kynge dwelleth, & made hym kynge: whose othe he hath despyed, and whose covenante he hath broken. Therefore shall Pharaos wyth his great host and multitude of people, mayntayne hym in his warre: whiche they call by dyces, and set up bulwarkes to be streight much people: For saynge he hath despyed the othe, and broken the covenante (where as he yet gave his hande thereupon) and done al these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I live, I wyl byynge myne oth & he hath despyed, and my covenante that he hath broken upon his owne heade. I wyl caste my nette aboute hym, and catch hym in my yarne. To Babylon wyl I carpe him, there wyl I punish him because of the grete offence that he made me. As for those that he from hym out of the hoste, they shalbe slayne with the sword. The residue shal be scattered towardes al the wyndes, and ye shal knowe that I the Lorde have spoken it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyl also take a brynche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyl set it, and take the uppermost twygge, that yet is but tender, and plant it upon a hye hyll: Namely, upon the hye hyll of Syon wyl I plante it: that it maye byynge forth twygges, and geve frute, and be a grete Cedre tree: so that al maner of foules maye buyde in it, and make theyr nestes under the shadowe of his branches.

And al the trees of the felde shal knowe that I the Lorde have broughte downe the hye tree, and setteth the lowe tree up: that I have byyned up the grene tree, and made the hye tree to flopp. Even I the Lorde & I spake it, have also broughte it to passe.

The xviii. Chapter.

It is betwixt that every man shall leave his owne synne. In hym that cometh, is fulfyllen promysed. Death is promysed to the synners, whiche cometh by the synne.

In the wordes of the Lorde came unto me on this maner: What meane ye by this comen proverbe, that ye use in the land of Israel, saying: The fathers have eaten souer grapes, and the chyldrens teeth are set on edge. As truly as I live, sayeth the Lorde God, ye shal use this by word nomore in Israel. Beholde, all soules are myne. Lyke as I father is myne, so is I son myne also. The soule that synneth, shal dye. If a man be goodly, and do the

do the thyng that is equal and right, he eateth not upon the hylls: he lyfeth not hys eyes up to the foule ydols of Israel: he defyleth not hys neygbbours wyfe: he medleth wyth no meſſerous woman: he getteth no bode: he gyueth hys better hys pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth hys meat w the hongry: he clotheh the naked: he leueth not hyng upon vsury, he taketh nothyng oure: he withdroweth his hande from doyng wronge: he dealeth faythfully betwene man and man: he walketh in my commaundementes, and heperth my lawes, and perfourmeth them faythfully.

* This is a ryghteous man: he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ If he now get a sonne, that is a murderer, a shedder of bloude: if he do one of these thynges: (though he do not all) he eateth upon the hylls: he defyleth his neygbbours wyfe: he getteth the poore and neddy: he robbeth and spolieth: he getteth not the better hys pledge agayne, he lyfeth up hys eyes vnto ydols: and medleth wyth abhominable thynges: he lyeth upon vsury, he taketh moreouer. Shall this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Dying he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye, his bloud shall be vpon him.

¶ Nowe if this man get a sonne also, that seeth all hys fathers synnes, whych he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfeth not his eyes vnto the ydols of Israel: he defyleth not his neygbbours wyfe: he vtereth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he neyther spolieth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meat with the hongry: clotheh the naked: he oppresseh not a poore: he receaueth no vsury, nor any thyng oure: he heperth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes. This man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for hys father, because he oppressed and spoiled his bryther, and byd wyche dily amonge his people: so, he is dead in his owne syn. And yet saye ye: Alther for then shuld not this sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therefore, because the sonne hath done equite and ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them: therefore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth shall dye.

¶ The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence: neither shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnesse of the righteous, shall be vpon hym, and the wychednesse of the wyched shall be vpon hym selfe also. * But if the vngodly wyll turne awaye from al hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes and do the thyng that is equal and ryght: doubtles he shall lyue, and not dye. As for al hys synnes that he byd before, they shall not be thought vpon but in hys ryghteousnesse that he hath done, he shall lyue. * For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, sayeth the Lorde God, but rather if he conuerte & lyue? Agayne: if the ryghteous turne awaye from his ryghteousnesse, and do inquite, accordyng to al the abhominacions, that a wyched man doeth: shall he lyue? Al the ryghteousnes that he hath done shall not be thought vpon:

but in the faulte that he hath offended wythal, in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet ye saye: Tully: the waye of the Lorde is not indifferēt. hear therefore ye house of Israel: is not my waye ryght? Or are not your wayes rather wyched? When a ryghteous man turneth awaye from his ryghteousnesse, & medleth wyth vngodlynesse: he must dye therein. Yea, for the vngodlynes that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne, * when the wyched man turneth awaye from his wychednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thyng whych is equal & ryght: he shall save hys soule alpyue. For in so muche as he remembryeth hym selfe, and turneth him from al the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shall lyue and not dye.

And yet sayeth the house of Israel. Tully: the waye of the Lorde is not equal. Are my wayes vngodly? Or ye house of Israel? Are not pour wayes rather vnequal? As for me I wyl iudge euery man, accordyng to hys wayes. O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. * Alther for he conuerted and turne you cleane fro al pour wychednesse so that there no synne do you harme. Cast awaye from you al pour vngodlynesse, if ye haue done: * make you new hertes and a new sperte. Alther for wyl ye dye? O ye house of Israel: syng: I haue no pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

¶ The captiuitie of Ierusalem and of Ieroboam in Egypte by the irons wherby, and by the irons, he tareth out the prophete of the crite of Ierusalem that is past, and of mylke therof that is present.

BUt thou sonne of man mourne thou for the synners of Israel, and say. Alther for lay thy mother syonelle amonge the lyons, and noised her poye ones amonge the lyons whelpes: One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyon, it learned of pople, and to deuoure folke. The hea then hearde of hym, and toke hym in theyr nets, and brought hym in chaynes vnto plase of Egypt. Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comforte was away, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: whych wente amonge the lyons, and became a ferasse lyon: learned to spole and to deuoure folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, and made theyr Cyties waste. In so muche that the whole lande and euery thyng therein, were vtterlye desolate, thowrowe the very voyce of hys roarynge.

¶ Then came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countrees agaynst him, layd theyr nettes for hym, and toke him in theyr pytter. So they bounde hym wyth cheynes, and broughte hym to the kynge of Babilon: whych put hym in prison, that hys voyce shulde nomore be herd vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy blond, plased by water syde: her frutes and braches are growe out of many waters, her stalkes were so stroge that men myght haue made stauces therof for of lpeers: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

¶ So when men sawe that she creaded the depth & multitude of her branches, she was roted oute in displeasure, and caste downe to the grounde. The East wynde dyed vpper frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of: withered & brent in the fyre. But now she is planed in the wyldernesse, in a drye and thyrstie ground. And there is a fyre gone oute of her stalkes, wherby harde brent vp her branches and her frute: so that she hath no more stronge stalkes, to be stanes for officers. This is a pytyous and imple-table thyng.

The xx. Chapter:

¶ The Lorde desireth that he will answer them when they praye for the offence of vngodlynes wherby he best obser-ueth. He promyseth that by a people shall reuenge them cap-tyues. By the word that shall be to come, is signified the burnyng of Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yere the tenth daye of the first moneth, as it happened, that certaine of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou son of man: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: are ye come hyther to aske any thyng at me? I am truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I will geue you an answer. Wylte thou not reprove them? (thou son of man) wylte thou not reprove them?
Shewe them the abominacions of theyr forefathers and tell them.

23 Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, & lyft vp myne hande vpo the sede of the house of Jacob, & shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypt: yea, when I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, & sayd: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to brynge them out of lande of Egypt, into a lande that I had promy-sed for them, which floweth with mylke and ho-ny, and is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other. Then sayd I vnto them. * Caste awaye euery man the abominacions that he hath before him and despye not your selues with the ydolles of Egypt, for I am the Lorde your God.

C But they rebelled against me, and wold not folowe me: to caste awaye euery man the abho-minacions of his eyes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypt. Then I made hym to poure myne in-dignacion ouer them, and to satisfie my wrath vpon them: yea, euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypt. But I wold not do it: for my names sake: that it shoulde not be vnhalowed before the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whome I shewed my selfe vnto them, & I wold brynge them out of the lande of Egypt. Howe when I had carped them out of the lande of Egypt, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed the my lawes, * wherby who so kepeth shal lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixt me & them, & therby to know that I am the Lorde, wherby halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernesse, they wold not walke in my commaundementes, they haue cast away my lawes (which who so kepeth shal lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

¶ Then I made me to poure out myne indignation vpon them: and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wold not do it, for my names sake, lest it shoulde be dishonoured before the heathen, from the which I had carryed them awaye. But I swoze vnto them in the wyldernesse that I wold not brynge them into a lade, which I gaue them: a lade that floweth with mylke & hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabboths, for their heart was gone after their ydols. Nevertheless, myne eye spared them, so I wold not utterly slaye them, & consume them in the wyldernesse. Whereouer, I said vnto the sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walke not in the statures of your forefathers, kepe not theyr ordynances, & despye not your selues wth theyr ydolles for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes and doo them, halowe my Sabboths, * for they are a token betwixt me and you, that ye may knowe how that I am the Lorde your God. As for wythstandynge, they sonnes rebelled agaynst me also, they walked not in my statutes, they kept not my lawes to fulfyll them (which he that doth shal lyue in the) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. The I made me againe to poure out myne indignaci-on ouer them, & to satisfie my wrath vpo them in the wyldernesse. Nevertheless, I withdrew my hande for my names sake, lest it shoulde be vn-halowed amonge the heathen, before whom I had brought them forth I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wold scatter them amonge the heathen, and strawe them amonge the nations, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast aside my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabboths, and lyfte vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers ydols. Wherefore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, & lawes wherow the which they shoulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr owne gyftes: (when I appoynted for my selfe all theyr fyre bozne) to make them desolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ Therefore (O thou soune of man, tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God.) Besyde al these your forefathers haue yet blasphemmed me more and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had broughte them into the lande, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euery bye hill and al the thycke trees: they made there theyr offerynges, and prouoked me wth theyr oblations, makinge swete sauoure there, & poured out theyr bynnie offerynges.

¶ Then I asked them what is the byll altare that ye go to? And therefore is it called the bye place vnto this daye. Wherefore, speake vnto the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde god ye are euen as vncleane as your forefathers, and compt whoredome also wth theyr abominacions.
In all your ydolles, wher vnto ye brynge your oblations, & to whose honour ye burne your chyliden, ye defyle your selues, euen vnto this daye: howe dare ye then come, and aske any que stion at me? O ye householders of Israel, as true ly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) ye get no an swere of me: and as for the thyng that ye go a bout, it shal not come to pass, where as ye say we wyll be as the heathen, and do as other peo ple in the lade, wood & stone wyll be worshyp.

As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, I my selfe wyll rule you with a myghty hande, w a stretched out arme, and with indignacion pow red out ouer you: and wyll byynge you out of the nations and landes, where in ye are scattered, and gather you together with a myghty hnde, with a stretched out arme and with indignacion pow red out vpon you: and wyll byynge you into the wyldernesse of the people, and there I wyll rea son wyth you face to face. Lyke as I punished your fozfathers in the wyldernesse of Egypte, so wyll I punish you also, sayeth the Lord God I wyll byynge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunte. The fozfa thers also, and the transgressours wil I take fr amonge you, and byynge them out of the lande of your habytacion: as for the lande of Israel, they shal not come in it: that you maye knowe howe that I am the Lord.

So to nowe then, sayeth the Lord God) ye house of Israel. Every one of you folowe your pollies, and serue them, sayng ye refuse to obey me. And my holy name shal ye name: vnha lowe with your offerynges and ydolles. For vpon my holy hill euen vpon the hye hill of Isra el sayth the Lord God, shal all the house of Is rael and all that is in the lande, worshyp me: & in the same place wyll I shewre the, & there wyll I requyre your heur offerynges and ffrystynges of your oblacions, wyth all your holy thynges.

I wyll accepte your swete sauoure, when I byynge you from the nations, and gather you to gether out of the landes, wherein ye be scattered: that I may be halowed in you before the heathen and that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lord whych haue byoughe you into the lande of Isra el: yea, into the same lade, that I sware to geue vnto your fozfathers. There shal ye call to re membraunce your owne wayes and al youre y maginations, wherein ye haue bene defyled: and ye shal iudge your selues worthy to be destroy ed for all your wychednesse, that ye haue done.
And ye shal knowe, that I am the Lord, when I enterat you after my name, not after your dic ted wayes, nor according to your corrupt wo rkes. O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lord.

Wherefore, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man: set thy face to ward the south, and speake to the south wynd and saye to the wood toward the south: heare the worde of the Lord, thus sayeth the Lord god Beholde I wyll kindle a fyre in the, that shal consume the grene trees with the drye. A man shalbe able to quenche his flame, but al that lo ueth from the south to the north, shalbe byente therein: and all fleshe shal se, that I the Lord haue kindled it, so that no man may quenche it.

Then sayde I: O Lord, they wold saye of me:
* Cufte, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The xxi. Chapter.

The threateneth the sword, that is to saye, destruction to the citye of Iherusalem. He sheweth the fall of Iheru salem. He is commaunded to prophete the destruction of the chyliden of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the laste the Lord threateneth death vnto Maluchodonosor kinge of Babilon.

The worde of the Lord came to me, sayenge: Thou sonne of ma, set thy face towarde Iherusalem, speake a gainst the Sanctuary, and prophe cy agaynst the lande of Israel, say to the lande of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll drawe my swearde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghteous and the wyched. Seyng the that I wyll rote out of the both the ryghteous & we ched, therfore shal my swearde go oute of my sheath agaynst all fleshe from the North to the South: that al fleshe may knowe how that I the Lord haue drawen my swearde out of my sheath and it shal not be put in agayne.

Wherefore therfore (O thou son of man) that thy lynes crache wythal, yea mourne bytterly for them in theyr presence. And yf they saye: wherefore mournest thou? Then tell them: for I byynge that cometh, at the whiche al hertes shal melle, all handes shalbe litten downe, all stomaches shal faynte, and all knees shal wa re scle. Beholde, it cometh and shalbe fulfilled sayeth the Lord God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophete, and speake. Thus sayth the Lord God: speake. The swearde, the swearde is sharpened and wel scou red. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scou red that it maye be byght. What we then make myth? Agaynst the trybe of my sonne it is gone forth destroyng al trees. He hath put his swearde to the dryghtyng, that good hold may be taken of it. This swearde is sharpened and dryghte, that it maye be geuen vnto the hande of the manslayer. Crye, (O thou sonne of man and house, for this swearde shal smyte my people, & al the rulers in Israel, my people shalbe feared thorowe this swearde. Smyte therfore vpon thy thigh, for it is gone forth to make a tryall.

And what a tryall shal this be, when euen my scepter shalbe reproued? It shal not be sayth the Lord God. Prophete & sonne of ma, and smyte thyne hdes together: make the swearde two ed ged, yea, make it thye edged & manslayers swerd that swaged of the great slaughter, which shal smyte the, euen in theyr prey chabers, to make them abashed & saynt at the hertes, and in al ga tes to make some of the fal. I haue geuen & fear ful sweard. O how dryght & sharpe is it, howe well dryght and mete for the slaughter: Set the some place alone, ether vpon & right hde or on the left, whither so euer thy face turneth I wyll smyte my handes together also and satisfye my wathful indignacion: Euen I the Lord haue sayde it. The worde of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne sayng: Thou son of ma, make & ii.

But the sothsayers shal point to the ryght syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye let men of watre to smyte it with a great noyse, to crye out alack to let batter rames agaynst the gores, to graue vpon dyches, and to make buldwoies.

Remember the, as for the sothsayers, they shal holde it but for vanite. And esteeme them as those to whome they haue often swozne: Not withstandinge he shal remember they wychednesse, so that be ryght they must be takn & wone. Therefore sayth the Lorde God. For so much as ye your selues the we pour offence, and haue opened your wychednes, so that in al your woies men maye se your synnes: therefore are ye come to remembraunce, and ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wyched gypde of Israll, whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wychednesse shal haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the garlande, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the hille is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Puny the, puny the yea, puny the wyl I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfyllid vntyl he come, to whome the iudgemente belongeth, and to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophete, and speake thus sayeth the Lorde God to the chyldren of Ammon, and to theyr blasphemers, speake thou: The sweerde, the sweerde is drawen forth already to the slaughter, and scoured to consume, that it gylteth (because thou haste looked the our vanities, & prophecied lyes) that it maye come vpon the necke lyke as vpon the other vngodly, which be slayne whose daye cam when theyr wychednesse was ful.

Shulde I put it vpon agayner? Aye I wyl puny the, in the lade where thou wast noyshed and boine, and pour myne indignacion vpon þe and wyl blowe vpon the in þe fyre of my wyath, and deliuer þe vnto cruel people, whych are lea-

Wherefore are there in the, that shed bloude, and eate vpon the pyllers, and in the they vse abhominacion.

Is thy herte able to endure it, or maye thy handes defende them selues, in the tyme that I shal hynges vpon the? ¶ The xxiii. Chapter.

Of the fornicacion, that is to saye of the whoredome of Samaria and Ierusalem, vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibab. In comparyson of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacion of Ierusalem is the sycher. The destruction of Ierusalem is prophesied. The aduocacy of both the whoredomes founde out. Theys destruction.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou soune of man, there were two women, that had one mother: these (wher they were yonge) began to playe the harlottes * in Egypt. There were theys byrestes bused, & the pappes of theys maydenhood vnde the Egyptians destroye. The eldest of them was called Oholah, & her yongest syster Oholibab. These two were my wyues, and bare sonnes & daughters. Theys names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Ierusalem that was Oholibab. As for Oholah she began to go a whoring when I had taken her to me. * She was set on fyre vpon her louners the Assirians as her neyghbours which had to do with her, euen the princes and lordes that were deere in costly aray, saye yonge men, lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thow she her whozdom, she cleued vnto al the yonge men of Assiria. Yea, she was mad vpon them, and defyled her selfe with all theys ydoles. Neither crased she from the fornicacion that she vseth w the Egyptians: for in her youth they lay with her, they bused the byrestes of her maydenhood, and poured theys whozdom vpon her. Wherefore * I deliuered her into the handes of her louners: euen y Assirians wher she so louned. These discovered her shame, toke her sonnes and daughters, & smote her with the sword: I nuyll name out the of all her people, and they punished her. Her syster Oholibab sawe this, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue, more than she, and excused her syster in whozdom: she louned the Assirians (which also laye with her) namely the princes, and greates lordes, that were clothed with all manner of gorgeous apparell al lusty horsemen and saye yonge persons.

Then I sawe, that they both were defyled a-lyke. But she increased still in whozdom: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh colours, with saye gyddes about them, & goodly bonettes vnde theys herdes, lohyng all yhe princes (after the maner of the Babylonians, and Chaldees in theys owne lande where they were borne) immediately, as soone as she sawe them, she bent in loue vnde them, and sent messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her, they laye with her, and defyled her with theys whozdom, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them * her whozdom and shame was discovered and sente: then my hert forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also. Nevertheless, she vseth her whozdom euer the longer the more, and remembered the dayes of her youth, wherein she had played the harlote in the lande of Egypt: * she bent in luste vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the flesh of Asses, and theys seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast renued the fylthyngnes of thy youth, when thy louners bused thy pappes, and married thy byrestes in Egypt.

Therefore (O Oholibab) thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll rapt by thy louners (with whome thou hast satysfied thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them together rounde about the: namely, the Babylonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, myghtie men and ryauntes, with all the Assirians: all yonge and saye louners princes and lordes, knyghtes & gentile men, whiche be all good horsemen. These shall come vpon the with horses, charrettes, and a great multitude of people: which shall be harnessed about the on euery syde: with byrest plates, wyldes and helmettes: I wyll punish the befoze the: yea, they them selues shall punish the according to theys owne iudgement. I wyll put my gelousy vnde the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the. They shall cut of thy nose and thyn eares, and the remnant shall sal the, with the sword. They shall carry away thy sonnes and daughters, & the residue shall be bent in the fyre. They shall strype the out of thy clothes and carry thy costly iewels away with them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fylthyngnes and whozdom, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalt couene thyne eyes nomore after the and cast thy minde nomore vpon Egypt. As thus sayth y Lorde: beholde, I wyll deliuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them with whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust which shall deale cruelly with the.

All thy labour shall they take with them, and leave the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whozdom shall come to lyght. All these thynges shall happen vnto the bycause of thy whozdom which thou hast vset amonge y Gentiles, with whose ydoles thou hast defyled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy syster, therefore wyll I gyue her cup in thy hand.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalt drinke of thy sisters cuppe, howe depe and large former it be to f botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scoone, and had as greaue in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dishonour and lozoth, for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cuppe of destruction and w asspunge: the same shalt thou drynde, and suppe it out euen to the dregges: yea thou shalt eat vp the woold peces of it, and so teare thine owne brestes. For euen I haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. For somoch as thou hast forgotten me and cast me asyde behynde the, so beare now thine owne filthinesse and whozdom. The Lorde sayd mozeouer vnto me: Thou son of man, wylt thou not repproue Oholah and Oholibah? Whewe them thei: abominacions namely that they haue vobren thei: wedlocke, and slayned thei: handes with bloude: yea, euen with thei: ydolles haue they commytted aduoutre: and offered them by the fyre thei: owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had bozne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and haue vnbalowed my habbooth. For when they had slayne their chyldren for thei: ydolles, they came the same daye into my sanctuary to defyle it.

Lo, thus haue they done in my house: Besyde all this, thou hast sente thy messengers for men out of farre countries: and when they came thou hast bathed & paynted thine eyes with colours trymmed and set forth thy selfe of the best fashion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed and a table spred before the, wher vpon thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

e. 10. 17. a

¶ Then was there greaue cheare with her to obtayne peace, and though with those men many men came, yet were ther also brought me of Saba from the wilderness: which gaue the bzarettes vpon thei: handes: and sette glazious crownes vpon thei: heedes: and I sayde vnto her: & seing she was strephen in age in her whozdomes: now shall her fornicacions come to an ende with her. And they went into her as vnto a comen harlot. Euf so went they (I say) to Oholah and Oholibah those fylthy women. O al ye f loue vertue and ryghtousnesse, iudge them, punyssh them: as aduouters and murderers, ought to be iudged and punysshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloud is in thei: handes. Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl bynge a greaue multitude of people vpon them & make them be scattered and voyled: thei shall stone them, and goze them with thei: swerdes. They shall slay their sonnes and doughters and burne vp thei: houses with fyre.

Am. ii. 6
e. 11. 1. b

Thus wyl I destroy all suche fylthinesse out of the lande: that all women may learne, not to do after your vnclemesse.

And so they shall lape thei: fylthinesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shall be punysshed for the synnes that ye haue comitted with your ydols, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

¶ The xliii. Chapter.

¶ The piewith the byrge of Ierusalem by a parable of a byrge. The parable of Ezechias wylt bring vnto thei: by a lye of piewith.

In the nyntieth yere, in the fift moneth the tenth daye of the moneth came the word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, wyte vp the name of this day: yea, euen the houre of this present day, when the kyng of Babilon set him selfe agaynst Ierusalem. Whewe that abstinat household: a parable and speake vnto the Thus sayth the Lorde God: Get the a pot, let it on, and powder water into it: put all the peces togyther in it all the good peces: the lorne and the thulde, and fyl it with the best bones. Take one of f best thepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therein. Wilt thou that sayde the Lorde God on this manner: Wilt thou be vnto the bloudy cytie of f pot, wher vpon the rustinesse hangeth, & is not yet scoured away. Take out the peces that are in it one after an other: there made no lottes be caste therfore, for the bloud is yet in it. Wylt thou playne dyne ston hard the poured it, and not vpon the grounde that it myght be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her blonde vpon a playne dyne ston rocke, because it shuld not be hyd, and that I myght bying my wrathful indignacion and vengeance vpon her.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: O woe be vnto that bloudy cytie, for whom euen I my selfe wyl make a great fyre and set moche wood, and kyndle the fyre, and seeth the flesh, & C lypee the pot, so f the very bones shall be byent. Mozeouer, I wyl set the pot empyre vpon the coles, so that his metall shall be byent, and molten also for heat, and the filthinesse of it shall be molten in it, and the drosse of it shall be consumed. Thou takest great payne this to defyle thy self And it wyl not be poured from the exceeding drosse in it: but thezowe fyre shall the drosse of it be purifyed. In thy filthinesse euen in the mischeuous debes thou dost contynue, and because thy filthinesse is abominable, for I haue clesed the but thou art not clesed. Thou shalt not be purged from thine vnclemesse til I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpo the. Euen if I Lord haue so drypled. Yea, it is come therto alreadye that I wyl do it: I wyl not goo backe, I wyl not spare, I wil not be entreated: but according to thy wayes and ymaginacions thou shalt be punysshed: sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man beholde, I wyl take away the pleasure of thine eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neyther mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone but vlc no deedly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonnet, and put on thy shoes vpo thy feet, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bzead. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the mynyng, and at euen my wylt dyed: then vpon the nexte morninge, I did as I was commaunded, and f people sayde vnto me, wylt thou not tell vs what this signifyeth toward vs, for this thou dost for our sake. I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyl sh-spende my Sanctuarie, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thing that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left that fall thowowe the swerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eat no mourning bread: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shooes vpon your feet. Ye shall neither mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye shall be sorrowfull, and one repent with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your Hewetok. For lyke as ye haue done, so when this cometh ye shall do also: that ye maye learne to knowe that I am the Lord God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man In the day whē I take from them their power, their toye and honour, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of their lyues: namely theyr sonnes and daughters, shall not this be knowne? Then shall there one scape, and come vnto the for to shewe the. In that day shall thy mouthe be opened to him which is escaped, that thou mayst speake, & be nomozed. Pea, and I shall be theyr Hewetoken & they may knowe how I am the Lord.

¶ The worde of the Lord was vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reioysed at the fall of Iherusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seir, agaynst Idumea, agaynst the Philistines.

The word of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, let thy face agaynst the * Ammonites, prophesy vnto them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: heare the word of the Lord God. Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as thou speakest ouer my sanctuarie. I ha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel: I trowe it be now desolate: pea, and ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be now led away prisoners: Behold, I wyl deliuer the to the people of the east, that they may haue the in possession: these shall set theyr castles and houses in the. They shall eat the frute, and drynke by thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a stall for camels and of Ammon a shepfolde and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord.

B For thus sayeth the Lord God: In somoche as thou hast clapped with thine handes, and saped with thy feet: pea, reioysed in thine heart ouer the lande of Israel with despite: beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hande ouer the also, and deliuer the, to be spoiled of the hepythen, & rote the out from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: pea, I wyl make the to be layd wast, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as * Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Iuda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be.

¶ Therefore beholde, I wyl open the syde of Moab, and take away theyr strength theyr ctyes, and these coostes of theyr lande, whiche are the pleasures of thy countrey. I namely, Bertheimoth, Baalmon, and Cartahaim, these wyl I open vnto them of the east, that they may fall vpon the Ammonites, and wyl greeue them in possession, so that the Ammonites shall nomoze be had in remembraunce amonge the hepythen.

Euen thus wyl I punyssh Moab also that they maye knowe how I am the Lord.

¶ Whereouer thus sayeth the Lord God: By cause that * Edom hath auenged and cald hym selfe vpon the house of Iuda, & hath done great offence, and auenged hym selfe vpon them therfore thus sayeth the Lord: I wyl reache out my hande vpon Edom: and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Teman vnto Dedā wyl I make it desolate: they shall be slayne with the swerde: thowowe my people of Israel wyl I auenge me agayne vpon Edom, they shall handle hym accordyng to my wrath and indignaciō, so that they shall knowe my vengeance sayeth the Lord God.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as the * Philistines haue done this: name lyke taken vengeance with despitefull stomaches, and of an olde euill wyl set them selues to destroye, therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause al the remnant of the see coost to perishe. A great vengeance wyl I take vpon them, and punyssh them cruelly: that they maye knowe how that I am the Lord which haue auenged me of them.

¶ The xxvi. Chapter.

¶ The prophesyeth that Tyre shall be overthrowen by cause it reioysed at the destruction of Iherusalem: The wyl bringe and aduancement of the marchaundes for the destruction of Tyre.

It happened, that in the eleuenth yere, the first daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge:

Thou sonne of man, because * Tyre hath spoken vpon Iherusalem. I ha, now I trowe the postes of the people be broken: and the towered vnto me: for nowe that she is destroyed, I shall be spyled. Pea, therefore sayeth the Lord God:

Beholde, O Tyre, I wyl vpon the, I wyl bringe a great multitude of people agaynst the lyke as when the see aryseth with his wanes: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towers: I wyl scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: pea, as the dryng place where the fyuers hang vpon theyr nettes by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it sayeth the Lord God. The Scepters shall spore her: her daughters vpon the selde shall perishe with the swerde, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lord.

¶ For thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyl bringe byther Nabuchodonozor (which is the kyng of Babilon, and a kyng of kynges) from the north vpon Tyre: with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a greates multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the land shall be slaye with the swerd, but agaynst the he shall make bulwarkes, and graue vpon dyches aboute the, and lye vpon his hyde agaynst the. His singes and batelrammes shall be prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towers. The dust of his horses shall couer the: they shall be so many, thy walles shall quake at the noise of the horsemen, charettes, and wheles when he cometh to thy postes, as men do into an open ctye.

cytie. With the bones of his boyle sette shall he treade downe all thy stretes.

C He shall slay the people with the swerde, and breake downe the pylers of thy strength. They shall waite away thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaundys. Thy walles shall they breake downe and destroy thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones they timbe & solidacions shall they cast in y water. * Thus wyl I byng the melody of thy songs, and the voyce of thy mynstrelle to an ende so that they shall nomore be herde. I wyl make a bare stone of the: pea, a dying place for nettes and thou shalt neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God: thus hath the Lord God spoken concerning Tyre. The ples shall be moued at y noyse of thy fall, & at the crye of thy sayne that shall be murdered in the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from theyr seates regall: they shall lay a waye theyr robes, and put of theyr costly clothyng. Pea, with trembling shall they be clothed they shall sit vpon the ground: they shall be afrayed at thy sodayne fall, and be abashed at y.

Jer. xlii.

D They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: * O thou noble cytie, that hast bene so greaite occupied of olde, thou that hast bene y strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom all men stode in feare. Howe arte thou nowe so vterly destroyed: Howe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabytours of the ples: pea and the ples the selues shall stande in feare at the ende. For thus sayeth the Lord God: when I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be, that no man dwell in) and when I bynge the deape vpon the, that great waters maye couer the. Then wyl I call the downe vnto them that descende into the pyt vnto a people that hath bene longe dead, and set the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wylderneesse, with them whiche go downe to theyr graues, so that no man shall dwell moze in the. And I wyl make the to be nomore in honoure, in the lande of the lpyng. I wyl make an end of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be found for euer moze: sayth the Lord God.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The prophet is moued to bewaile the desolation of Tyre the stryck out the people of Tyre for the banishing of many chaunces thereto.

I The word of the Lord came vnto me saying: O thou son of man, make a lamentable cōplaynt vpon * Tyre and saye vnto Tyre: thou which art a port of the see, that occupiest with moche people, and many ples: thus speaketh the Lord God, O Tyre, thou hast sayde: what I am a noble cite, thy borders are in the myddell of y see, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of y mount Libanus. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make y mallets, and the oken of Basan to make the rowers.

B Thy borders haue they made of yerey, and of costly wood out of y yle of Cethym. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedle worke out of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy maste and thy hangynges of pelowe sylke, purple, out of the ples of Cilias. They of Sydon and Tyre were thy maryners, and y wyllst in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest and wyllst at Gebal were they that amended and stoped thy shippes. All shippes of the see with theyr shypmen occupied theyr marchaundys in the. The Perses, Libians & Idutens were in thyne host, and helped the to fyght, these hanged vpon theyr wyldes and helmettes with the, these set for the thy beaute.

They of Arad were with thyne host roide aboute thy walles: and the Pygmians were thy watchemen vpon thy towres, these hanged vpon theyr quyuers rounde aboute the walles, and made y maruelous goodly. Charlis occupied the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tyne and leade, and made thy market greaite. Iauan Tubal, & Desch were thy marchautes, which brought the men and ornamente of metall for thy occupyg. They of the house of Togarma brought vnto the at y tyme of thy marre, horse, horsemen and mules. They of * Dedan were thy marchautes: and many other ples that occupied with the, brought the wetters, elephant bones, and Becokes for a present. The Sirians occupied the bycause of thy dyuers wozhes, and increased thy marchaundys, with Smaragdes with scarlet, with nedle worke, with whyte lynnecloth, with sylke, and with chypfall.

Ezech. i.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied with the, and brought vnto thy markettes wheate of Minich, and Baneg, balme, hony, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also used marchaundys with the in the best wyne of Helbon, and with wol by cause thy occupyg was so greaite, & thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, & Desch, haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron reby made, with Cassia and Calamus, according to thyne occupyg. Dedan occupied the in saye tapestry worke and cussyns. Arabia, and all the prynces of Cedar haue occupied with the, in wepe, wetters, and gootes.

The marchautes of Soba and Rema haue occupied also with the, in all costly speces, in all pycyous stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy markettes. Hiram Chene, and Eden, the marchautes of Saba, Affria, & Chelmad were all doers with the, and occupied with the. In costlye raymente of pelowe sylke, and nedle worke (verye pycyous, and therfore pacts and bounde togyther with ropes.) Pea, and in cedre wood, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Charlis were the chiefe of thy occupyg.

Thus thou art ful, and in great wozshyppe, euen in the myddell of the see. Thy robbers shall bynge the into greaite waters, the east wynde shall ouerbeare the in the myddell of the see, so that thy wares, thy marchaundys, thy ryche, thy mariners, thy shipmasters, thy buylders of thy broken places, thy occupers (that brought the thynges necessarie) the men of war that are in the, and al the chmens that perysh in the myddell of the see, in the daye of thy fall. The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of the shypmen.

All

All wher men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr botes, and let the selues vpon the lande. They shall lyte vpon theyr voyce because of theyr make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr bekes, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, and put sackcloth vpon them for: by sake.

They shall moune for the with heritall sorrowe and heuy lamentation: yea, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what crye hath bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is: When thy wares and marchaundise came from the sees: thou gauest all people ynough. The kynges of the earth haue made ryche, thow the multitude of thy wares occupying. But thou art now cast downe into the depe of the see, all thy excoite of people is perished with the. All they that dwell in the ples are abashed at the, and all theyr kynges are afraied: yea theyr faces haue changed colour. The marchautes of the nations wondze at the. In that thou arte cleane brought to noughte and comest nomore vp.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Daniel the prophete is much to be desired: for he is a man of great knowledge, and he will shewe thee the secrets of the Lord.

The word of the Lord came vnto me saying: thou sonne of man, tell the kynge of Tyre. Thus sayeth the Lord God: because thou hast a proude herte, and hast sayde: I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the see like a god, wher as thou art but a man & not god, and yet thou dwellest in thyne owne conceyte, that thou art god: Behold, thou thyselfe thy selfe wyldest that Daniel, that there is no secret hid from the. With thy wysdome and thy vnderstanding thou hast gotten the great welthyngesse, and gathered treasure of silver and golde. With thy great wysdome and occupyinge thou hast increased thy power, and because of thy great rychesse thyne herte is proude.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: For so much as thou hast sayde vpon thyne herte as though thou were God, behold, I wyl byynge enemies vpon the, euen thyr aunes of the hepyen: these shall drawe out theyr swerdes vpon thy beauty and wysdome, and shall defyle thy gloie. They shall cast the downe to the ype, so that thou shalt lye in the myddest of the see, and theyr be slayne. Let se, yf thou wylt save thyselfe, before them that slaye the: I am God, wher as thou art but a man and not God, in the handes of them that sle the. Thou shalt be as the vncircumcised in the handes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Wherefore the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, make a lame table complaint ouer the kyng of Tyre, and tel hym: Thus sayeth the Lord God: thou arte a leale of a lyhenesse, full of wysdome and excellent beauty: Thou hast ben in the pleasaunt garde of God: thou art deckt with all maner of precious stones: with Ruby, Topas, Chrysolite, Jacint, Onix, Iaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle and gold. The beauty and the holes be in the, were set forth in the daye of thy creation. Thou art a sayre Cherub, exalted by the annoynting, stretched wyde out for to court. I haue set the in this dignitie vpon the holy mount of god there hast thou ben, & walked amonge the sayre glystryng stones. From the tyme of thy creatiō thou hast ben ryche excellent, tyll wickednesse was founde in the. * Because of thy great marchaundise, thyne herte is full of wickednesse, and thou hast offended. Therefore wyl I cast the fro the mount of God (O thou couragye Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glystryng stones. Thy herte was proude in thy sayre beauty, and thow thy beauty thou hast destroyed thy wyl dome: I wyl cast the downe to the grounde, and that in the syght of kynges. Thou hast defyled thy sanctuary with the great wickednesse of thy vnyghteous occupyinge. I wyl byynge a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume the: and wyl make the to ashes, in the syght of all them that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquainted with the amonge the hepyen shall be abashed at the, seeinge thou art so cleane brought to nought, and comest nomore vp.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst Sydon: & prophete vnto it, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, O Sydon, I wyl vpon the, and get me honour in the: that it may be knowen, howe I am the Lord: when I punyssh her, and get me honour in her. For I wyl sende pestilence and bloudshedding into her stretes, so that those whiche be slayne with the sword shall lye rounde aboute in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe that I am the Lord. And she shall nomore be a pychinge thowre, and an buryng hyer vnto the house of Israel, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her, and hate her, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: when I gather the household of Israel togyther agayne from the nations amonge whom they be scatred, then shall I be sanctified in them in the syght of the Gentyles, and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my seruant Jacob. They shall dwell safely therein, buyde houses, and plant vineyardes: yea, safely shall they dwell therein: when I haue punysshed all those that despyse them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord the God.

The xxix. Chapter.

The prophete against Pharaon. He propheted the destruction of Egypt, and the overthrowing of the Egyptians. The Lord promysed that he would restore Egypt as gayne after 70. yeres. Egypt is the remeade of hyngs: thus sayeth the Lord God: I will take awaye Egypt.

In the tenth yere vpon the tweluth day of the tenth moneth, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, set now thy face agaynst Pharaon & hyng of Egypt: & prophete agaynst hym, and agaynst the whole land of Egypt. Speake, and tel hym: thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, O Pharaon thou hyng of Egypt of Egypte, I will vpon the thou great dragon that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is myne, I haue made it my selfe. I will put an hole in thy chaunces, and hange all the fish in the waters vpon the scales: after that, I will drawe the out of the waters: yea, and al y fyfth of the waters that hange vpon the scales. I will cast the out of the drye lande, with the fyfth of the waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the feide.

Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken up: but thou shalt be meate for the beastes of the feide, & for the foules of the ayre, that all they which dwell in Egypte maye knowe: that I am the Lorde by cause thou hast ben a staffe of reed to the house of Israel: wher they toke hold of the with theyr hand thou hastest and psychedst them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou hastest & hurtedst the raynes of theyr backes. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: behold, I will hyng a swerde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beast: yea, the lande of Egypte shall be desolate and waste, and theyr shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Because he sayd: the water is myne: I my selfe haue made it. Behold therfore, I will vpon the, and vpon the waters: I will make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate and in a ballyment, from the towne of Syenes vnto the borders of the Moziens lande: so that in forty yeres there shall no foote of man walke there, neyther foote of catel go there, neyther shall be inhabited. I will make the lande of Egypte to be desolate among other waste countreys, and her cyties to lye vpon the fourty yeres amonge other vayne cyties: And I will scatter the Egyptians among the heythen and nations, and browe them in the landes about.

CHAP. XLV.
THE XLV. CHAP.
OF EGYPT.

Agayne: thus sayeth the Lorde God: when the .xl. yeres are expyed, I will gather the Egyptians together agayne, out of the nacions, among whom they were scatred, & will hyng the prisoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Pathures theyr owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea they shall be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalt them selues aboue the heythen: for I will so mynysh them that they shall nomore rule the heythen. They shall nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther pmooue them anye more to wychednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and theyr shall knowe, that I am the Lorde God.

In the .xxvii. yere, the fyfth daye of the fyfthe moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath made his host, with great traunple and labour to come before Tyre: that euery heed maye be balde, & euery shoulder bare. Per hath Tyre gyven neyther him nor his host anye reward, for y great traunple that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: behold, I will gyue the lande in Egypte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, that he may take away al her substaunce, robbe her robbyes, & spoyle her spoyle: to pay his host theyr wages micheal. I will gyue him the lande of Egypte for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At y same tyme will I cause y hope of the house of Israel to growe foresh, and open the mouth agayne among them: that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

The xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypt and of her cyties in desolation.

The word of the Lorde came moze vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophesie & speake thus sayth the Lorde God. Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of y Lorde is come: the darke daye of y Lorde the house is at hande. the swerde cometh vpon Egypte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken a wyfe, and when her foundations are destroyed, the Moziens land shall be afraped: yea the Moziens land Libia and Libia, al theyr comen people, & Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them thow the swerde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: The maynteyners of the lande of Egypte shall fall, the pyde of her power shall come downe euen vnto the towne of Syenes: that they be slayne to wne to the swerde sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreys theyr shall be made desolate, among other waste cyties theyr shall be wasted. And theyr shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I hyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when al her helpes are destroyed. At that tyme shall theyr messengers go foresh from me in theyr pyes, to make the carelesse Moziens afrayed, and so some shall come vpon them according to the daye of Egypte for doubtesse it shall come.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I will make an ende of the people of Egypte thow the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon. He and his people with hym: yea, and the cruell tyrantes of the heythen shall be brought to destroye the lande. Theyr shall drawe oute theyr swerdes vpon Egypte, and fyll the lande full of slayne men. I will drye vp theyr founteyns of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wiche people. The lande and all that is therein, I will destroye thow the enemies. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lorde God: I will destroye the pydles, and hyng the ymages of Aoph to an ende. There shall no more be a pyner of Egypte, and a fearfulness will I sende into the Egyptians lande. As for Pathures, I will make it desolate, and hyndle a fyre in zoan the cytie. So, I will punyssh and poutre my wrathful indignacion vpon Sin whiche is the strengthe of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria will I destroye, and hyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shall be in greute heynnesse, Alexandria shall be rooted out, and Aoph shall haue daye sozowe. The best men of Helopolys and Bubastis shall be slayne with the swerde, and carped awaye captyue. At Caphtis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the scepter of y land of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her daughters shall be ledd a waye into captiui-tye. Thus saith I Iun^r Egypt, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

It happened in the eleventh yeare, vpon the fourth day of the first moneth, that the Lordes word came vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I will breake the arme of Pharaohynge of Egypte: and lo, it shall not be bounde vnto be healed, neither shall any plaister be layd vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swerde. Therefore thus saith the Lord God. Beholde, I will vpon Pharaoh the hyng of Egypt, and bruse his strong arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wyl synke the swerde out of his handes.

As for the Egyptians, I will scatter them among the heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I will strengthe the arme of the king of Babilon, and geue him a swerde in his hande, but I will breake Pharaons arme so that he shal hold it before him vtterously like a wounded man.

¶ Era, I will stablish the king of Babylons arme, and the armes of Pharaon that fall downe that it may be knownen, that I am the Lozde which gync the kinge of Babylon my sword in his hand, that he may dawe it out vpon the land of Egypt, & that when I scate the Egyptians amonge the Gentiles, & scawe the arm of landes about, they may knowe, that I am the Lozde

CA comparison of the prophecies of Isaiah with the prophecies of the 23 others. The prophecies of 19 are common to them both.

Andouer, it happened in the cleuth yeere, the fyrst daye of the thyrde mo-neth, that the word of ¶ Lord came vnto me, in peng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egypt, and to all his people. Al hom art thou like in thy greatnes: Beholde I will washe a Ceddre tree vpon the mount of Libanus with saye bryanches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes whose out very hye: hys topp reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set hym vp on hye. Rode about the rotes of hym ranne thre floudes of water, he sent out by syluel ryuers vnto all the trees of the fride.

25 Therfore was he hyer then al the trees of the feld and thowowe the multitude of waters that he sent fro him, he obteyned many longe bchaun ches. All foules of the ayre made thei nestes in his bchaunches: vnder his bowes genyred al the beastes of the felde, & vnder his shadow dwelte al people. For he & bewtiful was he in his great nes & in the length of his bchaunches, for his rote stode besyde great waters, no Cedre tree might hyde hym. In ppleasaunce garden of God, there was no fyre tree like his bchaunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.

¶ If the trees in the garden of God might not be compared unto hym in his beauty, to saye a goodly had I made hym with the multitude of his branches. In to muche that all the trees in the pleasant garden of God had enuie at hym.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God, for so much as he hath lye vpon hym selfe to hye, and stretched his toppes into the cloudes, and saynge his herte is proude in hys hyghnes, I wyl deliuer him in to the handes of the mygddest among the heathen, whiche shall coere hym out. Accordyng to his wyckednes wyl I cast hym away, & enemye shall destroie hym, and the mygddest men of the heauen shall scatter hym, that hys branches shall lye vpon all moontaynes, and in al valleys his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde & so we out the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from hys dwelinge, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall lye vpon hym, and all the wyde beastes of the felde shall go aboute amonge his branches so that from dens forth, no tree in the water shall attayne to hys hyghnesse, nor reache hys toppes vnto the cloudes, neyther shall anye tree of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto beards shall they all be deliuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Who neuer thus saith the Lord God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wyl cause lamentacion to be made, I wyl couer the depe vpon hym, I wyl stanche his floudes, & the great waters shalbe restrained. I shal cause Libanus to be sorrowful for his sake, and at the trees of the feilde shal be smyren. I wyl make the heathen wake at the sounde of his sai when I call hym downe to * hell, with them that de-scende into the pye. At the trees of Eden, with al the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea, and al theye are planted vpon the waters shal mourne with hym also in the lower habitacions: for they shal go downe to hel with him, vnto them that be slayne with the sword, whiche dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of his arme amonge the hethen. To whom walte thou be lykened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden?
Yet art thou cast downe vnder the erth: amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircumcised, with them that be slayne with the swearde. Euen thus is it with Pharaos and al his people, saith the Lord God.

the Lorde God: * I wyl spede my net ouer the, namely, a greāt multitude of people, thesē shall lande with the aboundance of thy blood, euen to the mountaynes, and the ryuers shal be full of thy blood. When thou art put out, I wyll couer the deaul, and make his starres bymyne. I wyll spede a cloude ouer the sunne, and the moone shal not geue her lyght. All the lyghtes, of heauen wyll I put oute ouer the, and bynyge darkenesse vpon thy lande, saith the Lord God: I wyll trouble the hertes of many people, when I bynyge thy destruction amonge the heptben and countreyes, whom thou knowest not. Yea I wyll make manye people with theyr kynges so afrayde thowost the, that theyr heer shal stand vp, when I shal my swerde at theyr faces. Wodapnyl shal they be astonysed, euerp man in him selfe, at the daye of thy fall. For thus sayth the Lord God, the kyng of Babylons swerde shal come vpon the, with f swerdes of the woithpes wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty amonge the Gentiles shal wast the proude pompe of Egypt, and bynyng downe all her people. All the cattell also of Egypt wyll I destroye, that theyr shal come nomoze vpon f waters, so that nyether mans foote nor beastes clawe shal styre them any moze. Then wyll I make theyr wayes depe, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth the Lord God. When I make the lande of Egypt desolate, and when the countreye with al that is therein, shalbe layd wast, and when I smyte al them which dwel in it, that they maye knowe that I am the Lord. This is the mournynge that the daughters of the heptben shal make. Yea, a sojownde and lamee sacron shal they take vp vpon Egypte, and al her people, sayth the Lord God.

In the xii. yeare, the xv. daye of the moneth, came the woide of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of ma: Take vp a lamentation vpo the people of Egypt, a cast the downe: yea them I say, a the myghty people of the heptben also euen to them: that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe into f graue. Downe (how saye I to enter thou be) a lay the with f vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne with the swerde, shall they lye. To the swerde is he already deliuered: therfore pinche downe to the grounde, he & all her multitude. The myghty woithpes shal speake to him out of the hel: to his helpers that be gone downe and lye vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swerde.

Allur is there a so wyrd bys companye, and theyr graues rounde at our, whiche were slayne and fell all with the swerde, whose graues lye besyde hym in the lowe pytte. his commens are burp'd rounde aboute bys graue, all togyther wounded and slayne with the swerde, whiche men afoze tyme brought feare into the lande of the luyng.

There is Elam also with all his people, & theyr graues round about: whiche al being wounded & slayne with the swerde are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, whiche neuertheless som tyme brought feare into the lande of the luyng: for f whiche they beare their shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Theyr buryall is geuen them, and all theyr people, amonge them that be slayne. Theyr graues are rounde about all them whiche be vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne thowost the swerde: for synges that in tymes past, they made the land of the luyng afrayed, they must nowe beare theyr owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Persia also and Tubal, and theyr people, and theyr graues rounde aboute. These al are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swerde, because afoze tyme they made the lande of the luyng afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge f woithpes & vncircumcised grauntes: whiche to theyr weapons are gone downe to hel whose swerdes are layed vnder their beades. whose wickednes is vpon theyr benes: because that as woithpes they haue brought feare into the lande of the luyng. Yea, amonge the vncircumcised shal thou be destroyed, and lye with them that perished thowost the swerde.

There is f lande of Edom with her kynges and prynces also, whiche with theyr strenght are layed by them that were slayne with f swerde, yea, amonge the vncircumcised, and them whiche are gone downe into the pytte. Whose ouer, there be al the prynces of the north, wyth all the sydonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne.

With theyr feare and strenght they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircumcised among those that be slayne with the swerde, and beare theyr owne shame, with them f be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe when Pharaos seeth this, he shalbe cofortid ouer al his people, that is slayne with the swerde, both Pharaos and al his host. sayth f Lord God. For I haue giuen my feare in the lande of the luyng. But Pharaos and al his people shal lye amonge the vncircumcised and amonge them that be slayne with f swerde sayth the Lord God.

Chapter.

The secret out the office of a curate that preacheth the Gospel. He strengtheneth them that by faith, and bel deneth them with the promise of mercy. The word of the Lord against the remnant of the people, against the multitude of the workers of the prophete.

Gayn, the woide of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou son of man speake to the children of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swerde vpon a land, yf the people of the lande take a man of theyr countrey, and let hym to be theyr watchman, the same man (when he seeth the swerde come vpon the lande) shal blowe the trompet and warne the people.

If a man nowe heare the noyse of the trompet & wyl not be warned, and the swerde come and take hym away, his blood shalbe vpon his owne heed: for he herde the sounde of the trompet, and wolde not take heed, therfore his blood be vpon hym. But yf he wyl receyue warnyng, he shal save his lyfe.

A gayne, yf the watchman se the swerde come and shewe it not with the trompet, so that the people people is not warned: if the sword come then and take any man from amonge them: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his blood wyl I requyre of the watchmans hande.

* And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that where as thou hearest anye thyng oute of my mouth, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wicked: thou wyched, thou shalt surely dye: and I gyue him not warning, that he may beware of his vngodly way: then shall the wicked dye in his owne synne, but his blood wyl I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheless, if thou warne the wicked of his waye, to turne from it, where as he per wyl not be turned from it, then shall he dye because of his syn, but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Pea say thus. Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we are corrupte in them, how shulde we then be restor'd vnto lyfe. Tell them: * As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but moche rather that he shoulde turne from his waye, and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes: O ye of the house of Israel, wherfore wyl ye dye?

O thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of the people. * The ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shal not save him, whensoever he turneth a waye vnto synne. A gayne, the wickednesse of the wicked shal not hurte him, whensoever he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse.

And the ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shal not save his lyfe, whensoever he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his owne rightousnesse, and do synne, then shall his ryghteousnesse be nomore thought vpon, but in synne he shall dye. * A gayne, if I saye vnto the wicked, thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne from his synnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull and ryght. In somoch that the same wicked man giueth synne agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the commandementes of lyfe, and doth no wrong: then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Pea, the synnes that he hath done, shal neuer be thought vpon. For in somoch as he doth newe the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Truly, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, but they lye, where as they owne waye is rather vnyght.

When the ryghteous turneth from his ryghteousnesse, and doth the thyng that is wyched, he shal dye therfore. But if the wicked turne from his wickednesse, doing the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not equal: O ye house of Israel.

* I wyl iudge every one of you after his wayes.

In the twelue yeare, the fyfth daye of the fift moneth of our captiuitie, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cytie is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the eue nyng afore this man, which was escaped, came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntill the morning that he came to me: pea, he opened my mouth. So that I was nomore dumb. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayd: Thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israel, say: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in poss: vpon: nowe are we many, and the land is giue vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the blood haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyt vnto ydols, and haue shed blood: shall ye then haue the lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon your swordes, ye worke abominations, every one defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: and shall he then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wilderness shall be slayne: with sword: whatsoeuer is vpon the felde I wyl geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in fregg holdes and denues, shall dye of the pestilence. For I wyl make the land so desolate and waste and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes of Israel shal be so wast that no man shall traunspire theryn.

* Then shal they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate because of all theyr abominations, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the chyldren of the people that talke of the, by the walles, and in the doores of theyr houses, sayinge one to another. Come, lette vs heare what word is gone forth from the Lorde. These come vnto the, after the maner of a grea people: pea as who sayth they were my people, they lye downe before the, & heare thy wordes, but they do not thereafter, for in their mouthes they make a test of them, and they herte goeth after theyr owne couetous lucre, and as a balet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasant to synge, so shall thou be vnto them: thy wordes shal they heare, but they wyl not do thereafter. Vntill this cometh to passe (for so it cometh in dede) then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

A gayne, the shepherdes and curators that despoyle the flocke of Iuda, and kepe theyr owne. The Lorde sayeth that he wyl visite his dispersed flocke, and gather them to gyther. He reponeth the malice of shepherdes of the flocke, he promyseth the returne of shepherdes of Iuda, and wyl byn peace.

As the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophesy against the shepherdes of Israel, prophesy and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. * Wo be vnto the shepherdes of Israel, that feede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes feede the flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fat, ye haue clothed you with the wol: the best fed haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weak haue ye not holden vp: the sick haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde togyther, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: the lost haue ye not

B Wyl shepe go wandryng upon all mountaynes, and upon euery hyll: yea, they be scattered abrode in all felde, and there is no man that careth for them, or seeketh after them. * Beholde, I wyl loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepberd among the flocke seeketh after the shepe that are scattered abrode, even so wyl I seke after my shepe, and gather them togyther out of all places, where they haue ben scattered in the cloudy and darke day. I wyl bypynge them oute from all people, and gather them togyther out of all landes. I wyl bypynge them into their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the country. I wyl fede them in right good pastures, & vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall they foldes be. Mat. 23.2-3

E And as for you (O my shepe) sayeth the Lorde God, & I wyl put a difference amonge the shepe, amonge the wetters and the goates. Was it not ynough for you to cate vpon the good pasture, but ye must treade downe & crespue of your pasture with your feet also: Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye must trouble the crespue also with your feet?

Thus my shepe must be sayne to cate the thyng, that ye haue troden downe with your feet, and to drynke it, that ye with your feet haue defyled. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyl sener the fatte shepe from the leane: for somoche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders, and runne vpon them with your hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vterly scattered them abrode. I wyl helpe my shepe, so that they shall nomore be spoyled: yea, I wyl discerne one shepe from another. I wyl carye vp vnto them one only shep-berde, euen my seruante * Dauid, he shall fede them, and he shall be theyr shepberde. I the Lorde wyl be theyr God, and my seruante * Dauid shall be theyr Dynner. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Moreover, I wyl make a couenant of peace with them, and bypynge all euyl beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woodes. Good fortune and prosperite wyl I gyue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyll. * I prosperous wyl I make and rayne wyl I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wood may bypynge forth theyr frutes, and the ground her encrease. They shall be safe in theyr lande, and shall knowe that I am the Lorde, which haue broken their yoke, and deliuered them oute of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

They shall nomore be spoyled of shepthen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyl set vp an excellent plant for them, so that they shall suffer nomore hunger in the lande, neyther beare the reproche of the shepthen any more. Thus shall they understande, that I the Lorde theyr God am with them, & that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, sayeth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flock, & ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xxxv Chapter.

The dedication that shall come on the hyll shepe, that is on the ymmons, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

Moreover, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the mounte * shepe, prophete vpon it, and saye vnto it. Thus sayth the Lorde God:

Esa. 63.1-4
Jer. 23.1-8
Luce. 15.4-7

Beholde (O thou mounte shepe) I wyl vpon the. I wyl reache out myne hande ouer the: yea, waste and desolate wyl I make the. Thy ctytes wyl I breake downe, and thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. * For somoche as thou bearest an olde enemyte agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and haste drawen the chyldren of Israel vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for theyr synne. Therfore, as truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: I wyl prepare the vnto blood: yea, blood shall folowe vpon the: * I charge thou layest wayte for blood, therfore shall blood persecute the. Thus wyl I make the mount shepe desolate and waste, and bypynge to passe, that there shall no man go thither, nor come from thence. My mountaynes wyl I fyll with his slayne me: thy hylls, valleyes, and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I wyl make the a perpetual wilbernesse, so that thy ctytes shall not retorne to theyr former estate, that ye may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Ysa. 63.1-4

And because thou hast sayde: what, bothe these nacjons, and bothe these landes muste be myne, & I wyl haue them in possession * where as the Lorde was there. Therfore thus sayeth the the Lord God: as truly as I live, I will handle thee according to thy way, and gloriously I will be as thou hast dealt cruelly with me, that I may be known among them, how I have punished thee. And that thou also mayest be sure, that I, the Lord, have heard all the despytfull wordes, whiche thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, saying: Lo, they are made waste, and given vs to denouer. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boost agaynst me, yea, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, which I haue heard altogether. Whereunto thus sayeth the Lord God: to the saye of all the worldes will I make the waste. * And I will be as thou: O mounte Ber: wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so will I do vnto the also, that whole Edd shall be destroyed, and know, that I am the Lord.

Chap. xxi.

The promise of the destruction of the Gentiles vnto Israel. The Gentiles had used the Jews as to be alcribed to the mercy of God, & not vnto their despytes. God remoueth out of them, that they may make in his own name.

3 Thou sonne of man, prophesye vpon the mountaynes of Israel, & speake: * Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God, because your ene my: hath sayde vpon you: Aha, the hye euersprynge places are now become ours, prophesye therfore, and speake, thus sayeth the Lord God: Seing ye be wastid and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles: which haue brought you into mens mouthes, and vnto an euill name among the people. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lord God: O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleyes and dales, to the voyde wyldernes and desolate cities, which are spoiled, and had in derision on euery syde, among the residue of the heythen: Yea, euen thus sayeth the Lord God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuice agaynst the residue of the Gentiles, and agaynst all * Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession: which also reioyced from the whole herte with a despytfull stomake, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

25 Prophesye therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hilles, to valleyes and dales thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, this haue I deuised in my gelousy and terrible wrath. For so moche as ye haue insured reproche of the heythen, therfore thus sayeth the Lord God. I haue sworn that the Gentiles which be about you, shall beare the: confusion theselues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shote out your bryanches, & brynge forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by that it will come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I tourne me, that ye maye be tyled and sowed.

C I will sende you moche people, which shall be of all the house of Israel, the cyties shall be inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repaired agayne: I will proude you with moche people and cattel: which shall encrease and brynge forth: I will restore you also to your olde estate, and I will be to you more kindnes then euer ye had before: wherby ye shall knowe that I am the Lord: For people will I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue the in possession, and I shall be the: entertainer, so that thou shalt nomore be with them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God: As so moche as they saye vnto you, thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of the people: therfore thou shalt eat nomore men, nei thes destroy the people any moze sayeth the Lord God. And I will not suffer the, for to beare thine owne confusion, among the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reproche of the nacpons, nor cast out thine owne people any moze, sayeth the Lord God.

Howeuer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, when I house of Israel dwelt vpon the: owne ground, they despyled the selues with the: owne wapes and ymaginations: so that in my syght the: wape was like the vncleines of a menstruous woman wherfore. I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, because of the blood that they had shed in the lande, and because of the: ydolles, wherwith they had despyled them selues. I scattered them also among the heythen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. Accordinge to the: wapes, and after the: owne inuencions, so dyd I punish them.

* Nowe when the: were gone vnto the heythen, and come in among them, they dyshonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of the: owne lande? Then spared I my holy name wherby the house of Israel had dyshonoured among the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therfore tel the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake which ye dishonoured among the heythen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I will halowe my great name agayne which among the Gentiles is euill spoken of: for ye pour selues haue dyshonoured it among them. And the Gentiles that knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you be for the: eyes, sayeth the Lord God.

As for you, I will take you from among the heythen, and gather you together out of all countreies, and brynge you agayne into your owne lande. * Then will I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yea, from all your vncleines, and fro all your ydolles shall I cleanse you. A newe herte also will I geue you, and a newe spirite will I put vnto you. As for that stony herte, I will take it out of your bodye, and geue you a fleshy herte. I will geue my spirite among you * and cause you to walke in my commaundementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyll them.

And so ye shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. I will helpe you date of all your vncleannes. I wyll call for the coine, and wyll encrease it, and let you haue no hūgre. I wyll multiplie the frutes of the trees, and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shal haue nomore reproche of hūgre among the heythen. Then shall ye remembre your owne wyched wayes, and your ymaginacions, whiche were not good: so that ye shall thynke that ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abominacions.

But I wyll not do this for your sake (sayth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde God: What time as I shal cleanse you from all your offences, then wyll I make the cities to be occupied agayne, & wyll repaie the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shalbe buylded agayne, which afoze tyme lay waste in the sight of al them that were by. Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cyties are now strong and defended agayne. Then the residue of the heythen that lye rounde about you, shal knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repaie that that was broken downe, and plant agayne that that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wyll do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet ones be found agayne of the house of Israel, & do this for them: * I shall encrease them as a stocke of men. Like as the holy stocke and the stocke of Jerusalem are in the holie solomonic castles: so shall also the wyld waste cities be filled with stockes of men: & they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The xxxvi Chapter.

The propheeye of the buylding agayne of the people, being in captiuitie. He sheweth the vision of the ten tribes with the time.

The hand of the Lorde came vpon me, and carryed me out in the spyrte of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne felde, that lay ful of bones, & heled me roūd about by them: and beholde, the bones that lay vpon the felde were very many, and merueylous byp also. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thynkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered, O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon these bones and speake vnto them. Ye dyde bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Behold, I wil put bryth vnto you, that ye maye lyue: I wil geue you sinowes and make flesh growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: & so geue you bryth, that ye maye lyue, and knowe that I am the Lorde.

Gen. 1. 11

So I propheeyed, as he had commaunded me: And as I was propheeyng, there came a nosse and a great motion, so that the bones ran euery one to an other. Now whil I had looked, behold, they had synowes, and flesh grew vpon them: and about they were couered with skynne, but there was no bryth in them. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophecy thou toward the wynde: prophecy: and speake to the wynde.

Thus sayth the Lorde God. Come (O thou sonne) from the four wyndes, and blowe vpon these saynes, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I C propheeyed as he had commaunded me: then came the bryth into them, & they receyued lyfe, & stode vpon theyr feet, a merueylous great lofte.

Moreover, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones dyed byp, oure hope is gone, we are cleane cutte of. Therefore D propheey thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you out of your sepulchres, and bypge you into the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, and bypge you out of them. My spyrte also wyll I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyll set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde which haue sayd it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke, & wyte vpon it. Vnto Iuda and to the chyldren of Israel his companions. Then take an other stycke and wyte vpon it: Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israel his companions. And then take bothe these together in thynne hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Nowe yf the chyldren of the people saye vnto the wyte: I not thewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answer: thus sayth the Lorde God. Behold, * I wil take the stocke of Ioseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel his fellows, and wyll put them to the stocke of Iuda, and make them one stocke, and they shalbe one in my hande: and the two styckes whereupon thou wytest, shalte thou haue in thynne hande, that they maye be, and shalte saye vnto them.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll take away the chyldren of Israel from amonge the heythen, vnto whome they be gone, & wyll gather them together on euery syde, and bypge them agayne into theyr owne lande: Yea, I wil make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shal haue but one kyng. They shal nomore be two peoples from henceforth, neyther be dryuyed into two kyngdomes: they shal also despyle them selues nomore with theyr abominacions, ydols, and all theyr wyched doinges. I wyll helpe them out of all theyr dwellynge places, wherein they haue synned: and wyll so cleanse them, that they shalbe my people, and I theyr God.

David my seruaunt shalbe theyr kyng, and they all shal haue one shepderde onely. They shal walke in my lawes, and my commaundementes shal they bothe kepe and fulfill. They shal dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea, euen in the same lande shal they, their chyldren, and theyr chyldren chyldren dwell for euer more, and my seruaunt David shalbe their euer lasting kynge. Moreover, I wil make a bond of peace peace with them, whiche shall be unto them an euermore. I will settle them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarie will I set among them for euermore. * Wher dwelling shall be with them: yea, I will be theyr God, and they shall be my people. Thus the heyden also shall knowe, that I the Lorde am the holpe maker of Israel, when my Sanctuarie shall be among the for euermore.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The prophete that Gog and Magog shall come with an appointed host into the lande of promyse. Theyr intent, the rebelling that the coming of Gog was before prophesied of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

Ad the word of the Lorde came unto me saying: Thou son of man, turne thy face toward Gog lande of Magog, which is the cheefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: prophete agaynst hym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * O Gog thou cheefe prince of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I will vpon the, and will turne the aboute, and put a bte in thy cha-wes: I will bynne the forth and all thy host, both horse and horsemen, whiche be all weaponed of the best saspyn, a great people, that handle altogether speares, shylles, and swerdes: the Perles, Horians, and with them the Libians, which all beare shildes and helmets: Sommer and all hys hostes, the house of Chogozma out of the north quarters, and all his hostes: yea and moche people with the.

Therefore prepare the, sette thy selfe in aray with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou the defence. After many dayes thou shalt be vnto, and in the latter pees thou shalt come into lande that hath bene destroyed with the swerde, and nowe is reple-nished agayne with dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whiche haue longe lpen waste: yea, they be brought out of the nacions, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vnto lyke a stormy wether, to couer the land, and as it were a darke cloude, thou with all thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people with the.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagin mischefe, and saye: I will vnto ponde playne lande, seynge they lyt at ease, & dwell so safely: for they dwell without any walles, they haue neither barres nor doores to spyle them, to robbe them, to laye hande vpon their so wel inhabited wildernes agaynst that people, that is gathered together from amonge the heyden, whiche haue gotten cattell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba & Dedan, and the marchantes of Thariss with all theyr worsties say vnto the: Arte thou come to robbe? Halte thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spyle: to take spiler and golde, to carpe awaye cattell and good, and to haue a great praye?

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophete, and saye vnto Gog. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: In this day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe, and shalt come from thy place out of the north partes: thou and moche people with the, whiche ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable foete. Yea, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the land. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I will bynne the vnto my lande, that the heyden maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before theyr eyes.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou arte he of whom I haue spoken aforetyme by my seruantes the prophetes of Israel which prophesied in those dayes and peres, that I would bynne the vpon them. At the same tyme when Gog cometh vnto the lande of Israel (sayeth the Lorde God) shall my indignacion go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousie and hote displeasure I haue deuised that there shall be a great trouble in the lande of Israel at that tyme. The very tydes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

The hylls also shall be turned vnto downe, the stappes of stone shall fall, and all walles shall synke to the grounde. I will call for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes (sayeth the Lorde God): so that euery mans swerde shall be vpon an other. With pestilence and blood will I punyssh hym, I will rayne and hapy stones, fyre, and bymstone will I cause to rayne vpon hym and all hys heape, yea, and vpon all that grete people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnified, honoured, and knowe among the heyden: that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

The xxxix. Chapter.

The whereby the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and his host. The prophete that Gog and his company shall be deuoured of wydes and beastes, wherfore the house of Israel is warned: theyr drayng agayne from captiuitie is promysed.

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, prophete agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * O Gog, thou cheefe prince at Mesech and Tubal, I will vnto the, and I will bynne the with the wyte spere, I will lead the from the north partes, & bynne the vnto the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I will smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy ryght hand. Thou with all thyne heape, and all the people that is with the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I gyue the vnto foules & wyde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there muste thou lye vnto the felde: for enen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

Into Magog, and amonge them that lyt so careles in the ples: will I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I will make also the name of my hostes to be knowe amonge my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euilly spoken of any more: but the very heyden also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holpe one of Israel: Beholde, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde God. This is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

They

They that dwell in the cities of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapons: and burne them: mylles and spares, bowes and arrowes, bylls & clubbes, seuen yeares shall they be burninge thereof, so that they shall elles bynge no speckes from the felde, neither haue neede to be waddinge out of the wood. For they shall haue weapons ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoiled them, sayeth the Lorde God. At the same tyme will I gyue vnto Sog, a place to be buried in Israel, euen the valley where those men go from the east to passerwarde. Those that traualle therby, shall stopp the noyses for beche. There shall Sog & all hye people be buried: & it shall be called the valley of people of Sog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the lande. Yea, all the people of giande shall bury them. O it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be deed buryers, euer goinge thowhe the lande, and appoynt the certayne places to burye those in, which remaine vpon the felde, that the lande may be cleansed. Fro ende to ende shall they seeke, and that seuen monethes long. Now those that go thowhe the lande, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, till the deed buryers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Sog. And the name of the cypse shall be called hamonah (that is a multitude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God. Speake vnto al the foules & euery byrde, yea, & to all the wyde beastes of the felde, heape you togther & come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate fleshe, and drynke bloode. Ye shall eate the flesh of the worthies, and drynke the bloode of the princes of giande: of the wetters, of the lambes, of the gores, and of the oxen that be al slayne at Basan. Eate the fatte pour belly full, and drynke bloode, till ye be broken of the slaughter, wherby I haue slayne vnto you. Kill you at my table with boies and stronge hoilemen, with capraynes and men of warre, sayeth the Lorde God.

I will bynge my glory also amonge the Gentyles, that all the heythen maye see my iudgement, that I haue kept, and my hande wherby I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Israel may knowe how that I am the Lorde their God from that daye forth. And the heythen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde into captiuitie: it was for theyr wychednesse sake, because they offended me. For the whiche cause I hidde my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of theyr enemies, that they myght all be slayne with the swerde. Accordynge to theyr vniuersall and vnfaresall dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hidde my face from them.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: Now will I bynge agayne the captiues of Jacob, & haue mercye vpon the whole house of Israel, & be glorious for my holy names sake. All their confusio and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken awaye, and so safelye shall they dwell in theyr lande, that noman shall make them a frayd. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them togther out of theyr enemies landes, and am praiised in them before many heythen: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God, whiche suffered them to be ledde into captiuitie amonge the heythen, but now haue I brought them agayne into theyr owne lande, & not left one of them ponde.

After that will I hyde my face nomore from them: but will poure out my spirite vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lorde God.

The xl. Chapter.

The redoyning of the cyties of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the xxv. yere of our captiuitie in the begynnyng of the yere, the tenth day of the month: that is the xiiii. yere after that the cytie was smytten downe: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the lande of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and let me downe vpon a meruaylous hye mountain whereupon there was a buiding, as it had ben of a cypse towarde the north.

Therby he caried me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was lyke brasse, which had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a meterod also. He stode in the doore, and said vnto me: thou sonne of man marke well with thyne eyes, hearken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne herte, whatsoever I shall shewe the, for to present that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hither. And whatsoever thou seest thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the meterodde that he had in his hande was fyre cubytes longe, and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buidinge, which was a meterodde, and the heyghe also a meterod. Then came he vnto the east doore, and went vpon the staires, & measured the postes of the doore, wherof euery one was a meterodde thicke. Euery chambze was a meterod longe & brode betwene the chambzes were fyre cubytes. The post of the doore within the porch, was one meterodde. He measured also the porche of the innermost doore, whiche conteyned a meterodde. Then measured he the entrie of the doore, that containede fyre cubytes, & his pillars two cubites and thys entrie stode inwarde.

The chambzes of the doore eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pillars also that stode of bothe the sydes, were of one measure. After thys, he measured the wydnesse of the doore, whiche was ten cubytes, and the heyghe of the doore thytene cubytes. The edge betwene the chambzes was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambzes fyre cubytes wyde of eche syde. He measured the the doze from the eydye of one chambze to another, whose wydenes was .xxv. cubytes, and one doze stode agaynst an other. he made pylles also .i. cubytes hye, rounde about the court doze. Beside the inwarde part vnto the foze entry of the innermoze doze, were fifty cubytes. The chā bzys & theyr pylles wythin, rounde about vnto the doze had fyve wyndowes. So had y^e foze entres also, whose windowes went round about wīn. And vpo the pylles there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into y^e foze court where as were chambzes and paueid woyses, made in the foze court round about. .xx. chambzes vpon one paueid woyshe. Now the paueid woyshe was a longe beside y^e dozes, and y^e was the lower paueid woyshe. After this he measured the bredth from the lower doze, vnto the innermoze court of the outsyde, whych he had an hundred cubytes vpon the east and the north parte. And the doze in the vttermoost court towarde the north, measured he after the length and bredth: hys thye chambzes also on either syde, with his pylles and foze entres: which had euen the measure of the fyrst doze. His heygth was .i. cubytes, the bredth. .xxv. cubytes, his wyndowes and porches wth his date trees, had euen the measure as the doze toward the east: there were seuen steyppes to go vp vpon and theyr porche before them. Now the doze of the inner court stode streight ouer agaynst the doze, that was toward the North east. From one doze to an other he measured .i. cubytes.

After that, he brought me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze toward y^e south: whose pylles and porches he measured, these hadde the fyrst measure: and wth theyr porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the fyrste wyndowes. The heygth was .i. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. wth steyppes to go vp vpo: his porch stode before wth his pylles and date trees on eyther syde. And y^e doze of the inner court stode toward the south and he measured from one doze to an other hundred cubytes. So he brought me into the innermoze court, the doze of the southsyde which he measured: and it had the measure afoze sayde. In lyke maner hys chambzes pylles and fozentres, had euen the foze sayde measure also. And he had wth hys porches rounde about wyndowes of .i. cubytes heygth, and .xxv. cubytes bredth. The porches rounde aboute were .xxv. cubytes longe, and fyue cubytes bredth: and his porche reached vnto the vttermoost court vpo his pylles, there were date trees and eyght steyppes to go vp vpon.

he brought me also into the inmooste court vpon the eastsyde, and measured the doze according to the measure afoze sayd, his chambzes, pylles and porches had euen the same measure as the fyrste had: and wth hys porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was .i. cubytes, the bredth. .xxv. cubytes, hys porche reached vnto the vttermoost court: hys pylles also had date trees on eyther syde, and .viii. steyppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doze, and measured it, whych also had the foze sayde measure. His chambzes, pylles and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heygth was .i. cubytes, and the bredth. .xxv. his pylles stode towarde the vtmost court, and vpon them both were date trees, and .viii. steyppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambze also whose entraunce was at the doze pylles, and there the burnt offerynges were washed.

In the doze porche there stode on eyther syde .x. two tables for the slaughteryng: to slay the burnt offerynges: synofferynges, and trespassofferynges thereupon. And on the outsyde as men go forth to the north doze, there stode two tables. Four tables stode on eyther syde of the doze, that is .viii. tables, whereupon they slaughtered. Four tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offerynges of a cubyte and an halfe longe and bredth, & one cubyte hye: whereupon were layed the vessels and ornaments whych were vied to the burnt and slayne offerynges: when they were slaughtered. And wthin there were holes four fingers bredth, fastened rounde about to hange fleshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offeryng fleshe. On the outsyde of the innermoze doze were the syngers chambzes in the inwarde court beside the North doze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also beside the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambze on the southsyde belongeth to the preestes, that kepe the habytacyon: and thys toward the north: ^{1. par. xxv. 8} the preestes that wapte vpon the altare: whiche be the sonnes of ^{1. par. xxi. 8} Sadach that do seruice before the Lozde in stede of the chyldren of Levi. So he measured the foze court, which had in length an hundred cubytes, and a smoothe in bredth by the four corners. Now the altare stode before the house. And he brought me to the foze entree of the house, and measured the walles by the entree doze, which were fyue cubytes long on eyther syde. The thychnelle also of the doze on eyther syde, was thye cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes: the bredth. .xi. cubytes and vpon steyppes went men vpo to it, by the walles also were pylles on eyther syde one.

¶ The .xli. Chypter.

¶ The desposicion and heyrte of buryng agayne the temple and the other thynges therto belongyng.

After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes whych were of both sydes fyue cubytes thychke, accordyng to the widenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was ten cubytes, and the walles of the doze on eyther syde fyue cubytes. he measured the length ther of, whych conteyned fouertye cubytes, and the bredth. .x. cubytes. Then went he in and measured the doze postes, whych were two cubytes thychke: but the doze it selfe was fyue cubytes, and the bredth of the doze was .x. cubytes. he measured the length & bredth ther of, which were every one twenty cubytes, before y^e temple.

And he sayd vnto me: this is the holpest of al he measured also the wall of the house, whych was fyue cubytes. The chambzes y^e stode rounde about

about the house, were euery one four cubytes wyde: and one stode harde vpon an other, wherof there were: xxxiii. these stode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were, the bygger the wyder, and had stappes thowse them rounde aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboute, that from the lowest, men might go to the best by the mydd chambres. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundation of the syde chambres was a meterode, that is. vi. cubytes hyde. The thynnesse of the syde wall wythoute, conteyned. v. cubytes, and so byd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

But wene the chambres was the wydenesse. xx. cubytes rounde aboute the house. The chambres doores stode ouer agaynst the outwall, the one doze was towarde the north, the other towarde the south: and the thynnesse of the outwall was v. cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldynge that was separated towarde the west, was. lxx. cubytes wyde, the wall of the buyldynge was v. cubytes thynne rounde aboute, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house, whiche was an. c. cubytes longe, and the separated buyldynge with the wall, were an. c. cubytes longe also. The wydenesse before the house, and of it that was separated towarde the east, was an hundred cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buyldynge before & behynde with the chambres vpon both the sydes, and it conteyned an. c. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the foze court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pylers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vnto the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues were spied ouer with boordes: and thus was it aboute the dooze vnto the inmost house, & without also. Yea, the whole wall on euery syde, both within & without was spied ouer with great boordes. There were Cherubins & date trees made also, so that one datetree stode ouer betwixt two cherubins. One cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge alwyde towarde the datetree, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in al the house. Yea, the Cherubins & datetrees were made from the grounde vpon aboute the dooze, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The hye postes of the temple were four square, & the salfyon of the Sanctuarie was & euen as it appered vnto me afore in the vision. & The table was of wood. iii. cubytes hye, and. ii. cubytes longe: his corners, the linge & the walles were of wood. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before the Loide. The temple and the holpest of al had euey of them two bozes, and euery doze had two lytle wyckettes, which were soiden in one vpon an other, on euery syde two. And vpon the bozes of the temple there were made Cherubins and datetrees, lyke as vpon the walles, and a great thynne balke of wood was before on the outsyde of the porche. Vpon both the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes & datetrees, haungre beames and balikes, lyke as the house had.

Col the chambres of the temple by the postes, and the holy thynge.

Then carryed he me out into the forecourt towarde the north, and brought me into the chambres that stode ouer agaynst the backe buyldynge northwarde which had the length of an hundred cubites, whose doze turned towarde the north. The wydenesse conteyned xlvii. cubytes, ouer agaynst the xx. cubites of the innermer court, & agaynst the paue wyche that was in the court, beside al the thre there stode pylers, one ouer agaynst an other. And before this chambres there was a walkynge place of x. cubites wide, & within was a way of one cubyte wyde, and the doores towarde the north. Thus the best chambres were alwaye narrower then the lowest & myddlemoost of the buyldynge, for they bare chambres vpon chambres and stode thre together one vpon an other, not haung pylers like the forecourt: therfore were they smaller then those beneth, & in the myddelst to reken from the grounde vpwarte.

The wall about that stode by the chambres, towarde the vettermoost court vpon the foze syde of the chambres, was. l. cubytes longe, for the length of the vettermoost chambres in the forecourt was. l. cubites also: but the length therof before the temple was an. c. cubytes. These chambres had vnder them an intrance of the east syde, wher by a man myght go into the out of the forecourt thowse the thynne wal of the forecourt towarde the east, ryght ouer agaynst the separated buyldynge: Before the same buyldynge vpon this syde there were chambres also, which had a way vnto them, lyke as the chambres of the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

The intrance, salfyon, and bozes were also of the same maner. Yea, euen lyke as the other chambres doores were: so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye towarde the syngers stappes on the east syde there stode a doze to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambres towarde the north and south which stande before the backe buyldynge: those be holy habitacions, wherin the prestes that do seruyce before the Loide, must eate the moost holpe offerynge: and there must they laye the moost holy offerynge: meat offerynge, syn offerynge, and trespass offerynge: for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therin, they shall not go out into the forecourt: but (singe they be holpe) they shall leaue the clothes of theyr mynistrepon, and put on order garmentes, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth thowse the east parte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with the meterode, whiche rounde aboute contayned. v. c. meterodes: And the north syde measured he, which conteyned rounde aboute euen so moche. The other two two sydes also towarde the south and the west, whiche he measured, conteyned eyther of them fyue hundred metrodeds. So he measured all þe four sydes, where there went a wall rounde about fyue hundred metrodeds longe, & as hyde also whych separated the holy from the unholy.

¶ The xliii. Chapter.

¶ He seeth the gloire of God goynge into the Temple, from whence it had before departed. He murthereth the phylary of the chyliden of Israel, for the whiche they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentance.

S He brought me to the doze that turneth towarde the east. Beholde then cameth the gloire of the God of Israel, from out of the east, whose voyce was like a great noyse of waters and the earth was lychtened with his gloire. Hys syght to loken vpon was as lyke the fyre that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the cyrpe quid haue ben destroyed: and lyke the vision that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the gloire of the Lorde came into the house, thowme the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp and brought me into the innermer court, & beholde: the house was ful of the gloire of þe Lorde.

I hearde one speakynge vnto me out of the house: and there stode one by me, that sayd vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this house is my seat and the place of my fote steps, where as I will dwell amonge the chyliden of Israel for evermore: so that the house of Israel shal nomore be fyle my holy name: neyther they, nor they; kynge, thowme they; whozedom, thowme they; hye places, and thowme þe dead bodies of their kynge: whiche haue buylded they; thesholdes in maner harde vpon my threholdes, and they; postes almost at my postes: and a wal betwixt me and them. Thus haue they despyed my holy name with they; abhomyacions, & they; haue comytted. Wherfore I haue destroyed them in my wrath. But nowe they shal put away their whozedom, and the deed bodies of they; kynge: out of my syght, that I maye dwell amonge them for evermore. ¶ Therfore O thou sonne of man, saye thou the householde of Israel a temple that they maye be ashamed of they; wychednesse and measure the scilces an example therat.

¶ And when they be ashamed of al they; wychednes, then saye we them the fourme and fashion of the temple, the comynge in, the goynge oute, al the maner and description therof. Yea, all the verses and ordynances of it, that they maye kepe & fulfill all the fashions and customes therof.

D This is the description of the house. About vpon the mount rounde about al the corners, it shalbe the holiest of all. Beholde, that is the description and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the altare, after þe true cubyte: which is a spanne longer then an other cubyte, his bottom in the myddle was a cubyte longe and wyde and the ledge that went rounde about it, was a spanne hyde. This is the depyth of the altare. From the ground to the lower steps, the length is two cubytes: and the hyde the one cubyte: and from the lower steppe to the hygher, are four cubytes, and the hyde but one cubyte.

¶ The altare was foure cubytes hye, & from the altare vntowarde stode foure hoines, and it was twelue cubytes longe, and twelue cubytes hyde vpon the four corners: the couerynge of þe altare was fourtene cubytes long and hyde vpon the four corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute had halfe a cubyte, and the bottom ther of rounde aboute one cubyte: his steps stode towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayeth the Lorde God these are þe ordynances and lawes of the altare in the daye when it is made to offere burnt offerings, and to spynkle bloode ther vpon. To þe prestes, to the Leuites that be of the seed of Dauid: and treade before me to do me seruice, sayeth the Lorde God. Vnto these gyue thou a pong bullocke for a synne offering: and take þe blood of hym, and spynkle his foure hoines withal: & the four corners of the altare couerynge, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute, here wylt thou cleanse it, & reconyle it. ¶ Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the synne offering, and burne hym in a seuerall place without the Sanctuary. The nexte daye, take a goate buche, with oute blemyshe for a synne offering, to reconyle the Altare wythall, lyke as it was reconyled wyth the bullocke.

¶ Nowe when thou hast made it cleane, then offer a pong bullocke without blemyshe, and a ramme oute of the flocke without blemyshe also. Offer them before the Lorde, and let þe prest cast salt ther vpon, and giue them so vnto the Lorde for a burnt offering. Seuen dayes shalt thou bynne every daye a goate buche for synne. A pong bullocke and a ram of the flocke, without blemyshe, shal they offer. Seuen dayes shal they reconyle and cleanse the altare, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyed, then vpon the eyghte daye and so forth, the prestes shal offer they; burnt offerings and beist offerings vpon the altare: so I will be merciful vnto you, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ He sheweth what dose of the temple is hure. He is commaunded to upbraid the people with they; offence. The vncircumcised in herte, and in the flesh. Who are to be aduertised to the seruice of the temple: and who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes he wolde haue admytted into the holy place, and also they; offence.

¶ After this he brought me agayne to the outwarde doze of the Sanctuary on the east syde & that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me, this doze shalbe still shut and not openyd for any man to go thowme it: but onely for the Lorde God of Israel: yea, he shal go thowme it, elles shal it be shut styll. The bynce hym selfe shal come thowme it, that he maye cate hynde before the Lorde. At the postche shal he come in, and there shal he goo oute agayne. Then brought he me to the doze vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde the gloire of the Lorde fylled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face.

take diligent hede to all that I will saye vnto the concernynge all the ordynaunces of y^e Lord and all his lawes: ponde well with thyne herte the comynge in of the house and the goynge forth of the Sanctuary: and telle that obdurate houlde of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowe done ynough: & all your abominacions, seynge, that ye haue broughte into my Sanctuarie straunges, ha- ynge vncircumcised hertes and flesch, where thowthe my Sanctuarie is defiled, when ye of- fre me bryade, fat, and blood.

E Thus will I put your abominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kept the holy or- dynaunces of my Sanctuarie: but let keepers of my Sanctuarie, such after your owne mynde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: of all the straungers that dwelle amonge the chyldren of Israel, no straunger whose herte and flesch is not circumcised, shall come within my Sanctu- ary: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me: and haue disceyued y^e people of Israel wth all errors, goynge after theyr Idols: therefore shall they beare theyr owne wickednes. Shuld they be set and ordeyned to minster vnder the doores of the house of my Sanctuarie? And to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burntofferings & sacryfices for the people: to stande before hem and to serue them, seynge the seruyce that they do them, is before theyr ydols, & cause the house of Israel to stumble thowthe theyr wickednes? For the which cause I haue plucked out mye hande ouer them, sayeth the Lord God: so that nothe yet must beare theyr owne iniquity, and not to c. me nye me to serue me with theyr prest- hode, in my Sanctuarie, and most holdest of all that they may beare theyr owne shame and ab- ominacions, which they haue done. Shuld I vse them to be prestes of the house, and to al the seruyce that is done therein? But the prestes, the Leuites, the sonne of * Daboch, that kepe y^e hol- dynges of my Sanctuarie, when y^e chyldren of Israel were gone from me, shall come to me to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offer me the fat and the blood: sayeth the Lord.

D They shall go into my Sanctuarie, & trade before my table: to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Nowe when they go in at the doores of the innermost court: they shall put on linnen clothes, so that no wollyne come vpon them whyle they do seruyce vnder y^e doores of the innermost court and within. They shall haue sayre linnen bonettes vpon theyr heedes, & linnen byches vpon their loynes, which in their labour they shall not put about them. And whyle they go forth to y^e people into y^e outward court, they shall put off the clothes, wherein they haue ministered, and laper them in the habitacon of y^e Sanctuarie, and put on other apparel, lest they vnhalowe the people with theyr clothes.

E They shall not haue theyr herdes, nor nor- ryche the bulke of theyr beare, but rounde their herdes only. * Al the prestes that go into the in- most court, shall drynke no wyne: They shall mary no wydowe, ne yett one that is put from her husbände: but a mayde of the seede of y^e house of Israel, or a wydowe y^e hath had a prest before

* They shall thewe my people the difference betwene the holy and unholy, betwixt y^e clean and vnclean. If any disorde aryse they shall dis- cerne it: and the sentence after my iudgmen- tes. My solimpe feastes, my lawes and ordy- nances shall they kepe, and hallowe my Sab- borthes. * They shall come at no deade person to defyle them selues, except it be father or mother, sennet or daughter, brother or sister, that hath had yett no husband, in such may they be defiled.

And when he is cleansed, there shall be rehered vnto hym seuen dayes: and yf he go into y^e San- ctuarie agayne to do seruyce, he shall bring a sin offering, sayeth the Lord God. * They shall haue an he. linge: yea I my self wyll be theyr beritage elles shall ye gyue them no possession in Israel, for I am theyr possessor. The meat offering, synecoffering, and trespass offering shall they eat, and euery dedicate thinge in Israel. Shall be theyr. The fructifyinges of all the fruct frutes, and all the freewill offerings shall be the prestes.

Ye shall giue vnto the prest also all the fruct fruct of your fruct borne, all I saye, and all that is separated vnto God, al your true offerings: (I saye) shall be the prestes, and also the fructlynges of your dough, that God may prosper the resydue. * But no beed carpon shall the prests eat, nor such as is deuoured of wilde beastes, foules, or cattell.

When ye deuyde the lande by y^e lot, ye shall put asyde one part for y^e Lord to be holy from other landes: name- ly. xxv. a. meterodes longe, & x. a. bryde. This shall be holy as wide as it is round about. Of this part they shall belong vnto the Sanctuarie. v. C. meterodes in all the four corners, and syfte cubites wyde round a- bout to the suburbs: and from this measure na- mely of xxv. a. meterodes longe, and ten. a. bryde thou shalt measure wherein the Sanctu- ary and the holdest of all maye stande.

The resydue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes whych do seruyce in the Sanctuarie of the Lord, and goin before y^e Lord to serue him that they maye haue rowme to dwell in. E Thus sayth the Lorde God. The fyrste daye of the fyrst moneth thou shalt take a ponge bullocke without blemyshe, and cleanse the Sanctuary. So the priest shall take of the bloode of the synnoffring, and spynkle it vnto the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the altar, with the doze postes of the innermost court. The Sanctuary of the Sabbath and of the new moone. For what they do they must go in, come out of the temple.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I doze of the innermost court towards the East shall be shut .x. wyke workynge dayes: but in the Sabbath, and in the daye of the new moone it shall be opened. Then shall the prynce come vnder the doze post, and stande styll without by the doze cheke. So the priestes shall offer vpon hym burnt and helth offerings. And he shall worshyp at the doze post, and go his way forth agayne but the doze shall nomore be shut tyl the eueninge.

On the same maner shall the people of the land also do theyr worshyp before the Lorde without this doze vpon the Sabbathes and new moones. This is now the burnt offering, that the prynce shall bring vnto the Lorde vpon the Sabbath .x. lambs without blemyshe, and a ram without blemyshe, and an Ephab for a meat offering with the ram. As for the lambs, he maye gyue as many meat offerings to them as he wyl: and an hyne of oyle to an Ephab. In the daye of the new moneth it shall be a ponge bullocke without blemyshe: .x. lambs and a ram also without blemyshe: With the bullocke he shall giue an Ephab and with the ramme an Ephab also for a meat offering, but to the lambs, what he maye come by. And euer an hyne of oyle to an Ephab.

When the prynce cometh, he shall go vnder the doze postche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the land come before the Lorde in the hye solempne feast, as many as come in by the north doze to do worshyp, shall go out againe at the south doze. And they that come in at the south doze, shall go forth agayne at the north doze. There shall none go out at the doze where he came in, but shall go ryght forth ouer on the other syde, and the Prynce shall go in and out amonge them. Upon the solempne and hye feast dayes this shall be the meat offering.

E An Ephab to a bullocke, and an Ephab to a ram, and to the lambs, as many as he wyl put euer an hyne of oyle to an Ephab. Nowe when the prynce bringeth a burnt offering, or a helth offering with a fre wyl vnto the Lorde, the east doze shall be opened vnto hym, that he maye do with his burnt and helth offerings, as he doth vpon the Sabbath, & when he goeth forth, the doze shall be shut after hym agayne. He shall dayly bring vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde withoute blemyshe for a burnt offering: thus shall he do euery moonyng.

And for a meat offering, he shall gyue .x. sicke parte of an Ephab, and .x. sicke parte of an hyne of oyle, to myngle with feathers euery moonyng. Per, this shall be a dayly meat offering vnto the Lorde: for an euer lastyng ordynance: and thus shall the lambe, the meat offering and oyle be gyuen euery moonyng, for a dayly burnt offering.

Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde God: If the prynce giue a gyfte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heretage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But if he wyl giue one of his seruantes, some of his heretage, it shall be his to the .x. yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto the prynce: for his heretage shall be his sonnes only.

Upon the borders of Iuda, from the east part vnto the west, ye shall set asyde one porcion of .xxv. W. metredde longe and bryde, lyke as an other porcion from the east syde vnto the west, wherein the sanctuary shal stande.

* As for the porcion that ye shall separate out for the Lord, it shalbe .xxv. W. longe, and .x. W. bryde: which separated holy porcyon shal be longe vnto these: namely to the priestes, toward the north. xxv. W. and toward the west. x. W. bryde, toward the east. x. W. bryde also, and toward the south. xxv. W. longe, wherein the sanctuary of the Lord shal stande. Yea, this same place shalbe the priestes that are of the children, of Sadoch and haue kept my holy ordinance which went not astray in the error of the children of Israel: lyke as the Leuites are gone astray: and thus separated place that they haue of lande, shalbe the most holy, hard vpon the borders of the Leuites. And nexte vnto the priestes shal the Leuites haue .xxv. W. longe, and .x. W. bryde. This shalbe on euery syde. xxv. W. long, and .x. W. bryde. Of this porcion they shal set nothyng, nor make any permutacyon thereof, lest the chyce of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lord.

The other. v. W. after the byedeth that lyeth by the. xxv. W. shalbe comen: it shal belonge to the cite, and to the suburbs for habytacions, and the cite shal stande in the myddest thereof. Let this be the measure toward the north part v. C. and iii. W. toward the south part. v. C. and iii. W. toward the east part. v. C. and iii. W. toward the west part. v. C. and iii. W.

The suburbs hard vpon the cite shal haue toward the north syde .ii. C. toward the south .i. and ii. C. toward the east. i. and. ii. C. toward the west also. i. and. ii. C. As for the residue of the length, it lyeth hard vpon the separated holy ground: namely. x. W. toward the east and x. W. toward the west, next vnto the holy porcion: it is the encrease thereof shal serue for the vi meate: that labour in the cite. They that labour for the welth of the cite, shal mayntayne this also, out of what tyebe soeuer they be in Israel. All that is separated of the. xxv. W. longe and. xxv. W. bryde on the. iii. partes, that shal be put asyde for the separated porcion of the sanctuary, and for the possession of the cite.

The residue vpon both the sydes of the sanctuary & possession of the cite, shal belonge to the prince before the place of the. xxv. W. vnto the east ende, and before the place of the. xxv. W. westwarde vnto the borders of the cite, this shal be the princes porcion. This shal be the holpe place, and the house of the sanctuary shal stand in the myddest. Moreover, fro the Leuites and the cities possession, that lyeth in the mydd of the princes parte: loke what remaineth betwixt the border of Iuda, and the border of Ben Iamin it shalbe the princes.

None of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the west, Shall Ben Iamin haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Ben Iamin from the east syde vnto the west, Shall Simeon haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Simeon from the east part vnto the west shal Iahar haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Iahar from the east syde vnto the west, shal Zabulon haue his porcion. This is the lande with his porcyons, which ye shall distribute vnto the trybes of Israel, sayed the Lord God. Thus wyde shal the cite reache vpon the north parte. v. C. and iii. W. measures. The portes of the cite, shal haue the names of the tribes of Israel. The portes of the north syde, one Ruben, another Iuda, the thyrde Leui. Upon the east syde. v. C. and *iii. The ende of the prophete of Ezechiel.

The booke of the Prophet Daniel.

The fyrste Chapter.

The prophet sheweth the captiuitie of Jehonkim kynge of Iuda. Of the lomen that were in captiuitie: the kynge commaundeth to those whiche of them shoulde be taught the learninge and language of the Chaldees. They are allowed the kynge feeding. Daniel auertheth from the mear of the kynge of Babylon.

In the thirde yere of the raygne of Jehonkim kynge of Iuda, came Nabuchodonosor, kynge of Babylon vnto Ierusalem, and besyged it: and the Lord deliuered Jehonkim the kynge of Iuda in to his hande, with certaine ornaments of the house of God, whiche he carryed away vnto the lande of Sennar to the house of his God, and there he broughte them into his goddes treasure. And the kynge spake vnto Asphana: the cheefe chamberlayne that he shoulde bringe hym certayne of the children of Israel, that were come of the kynge's seed and of pynners, yonge stronge men without any blemish, but saye & well favoured, instruct in all wysdome, compynge and vnderstandynge whiche were able to stande in the kynge's palace to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldeyke.

Unto

The Prophecie

Into these the kynge appoynted a certayne poyson of hye owne meate: and of the wyne, whiche he dronke hym selfe, so to murther them the more: that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these now were certayne of the chyldeyn of Iuda: namely Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. Unto these the chiefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel, Baltasar, Ananias, and Sadrach: Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. But Daniel was at a poynte with hym selfe, that he wolde not be defyled thowhe the kynge meate nor the wyne whiche he dronke. And this he despyed of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he should defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chiefe chamberlayne that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my lord the kynge, which hath appoynted you your meate & drynke, lest he shalde pource sacente: he woulde ly hyng then the other springalden of your age, & so ye shall make me lole my heade vnto the kynge.

Gen. xli. 1.
Leuit. x. 1.

Chen Daniel answered Melchior, whome the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Meshach, and Sadrach, and sayde: O pious but ten dayes with thy seruantes, & let vs haue portage to eate, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and they shal see that care of the kynge meate. And as thou seest, so deale with vs thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter and proued them .x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, they shewed better colour and faster then all the yonge springalden, whiche dyd eate of the kynge meate.

DThus Melchior toke away theyr meate and wyne, & gaue them portage therfore: God gaue nowe these .iiii. yonge springalden connyng and learninge in all scripTURE and wysdome: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandyng of all visions and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was cerryed, that the kynge had appoynted to drynke in these yonge springalden vnto hym, the chiefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor and the king communed with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Meshach, and Sadrach. Therfore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquired of them, he founde them ten tymes better, then all the southsayers and charmers, that were in all his realme. And Daniel abode styl, vnto the first yere of kynge Cyrus.

The seconde Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He called vnto hym forth sayers, and requyred of them both the dreame and the interpretation thereof. They answered that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaunded all the wise men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyred tyme to solute the question: the lord opened his myght vnto Daniel. Daniel in brought vnto the kynge, & sheweth hym his dreame, & the interpretation thereof. Of the euilladynge kynghome of Chalde.

Gen. xli. 1.
Exod. x. 1.
Leuit. x. 1.

In the seconde yere of the reygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, & wherof he was in doubt, & his slepe was troubled. Then the kynge commaunded to call together all the southsayers, charmers, wytches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the kynge his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue cleane forgotten what I dreamed. Upon this the Chaldees answered the kynge in Chaldean speche: O kynge God save thy lyfe for ever. Shewe thy seruantes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chaldees theyr answer and sayde: It is gone from me. If ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame wherof the interpretation thereof, ye shal dye, and your houses shalbe payled.

But if ye tell me the dreame & the menyng thereof, ye shal haue of me gyften, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the signification of it. They answered agayne and sayde: the kynge must shewe his seruantes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceyue of a truche, that ye do but prolong tyme for so much as ye see that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore if ye wyl not tell me the dreame ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne & dissemble with vayne wordes, which ye speake before me, to put off the tyme. Therfore tel me the dreame, and so shall I know, if ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upon this, the Chaldees gaue answer before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thyng, whiche the kynge speareth of: yea, there is nether kynge, prince, nor lord, that euer asked such thynges as a southsayer, charmer, or Chalde: for it is a very harde matter, that the kynge requyred. Neyther is there any, that can certifie the kynge thereof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellinge is not amonge the creatures.

CFor the whiche cause the kynge was wroth with greute indignacyon, and commaunded to bestrope all the wise men at Babylon: and the proclamacyon went forth, & the wise men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquired of Arioch the kynge's steward, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth al ready to kill suche as were wise at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch bepyche then the kinges deputy. Wherby both the kynge proclaimed so cruell a sentence. So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel vp, and despyed the kynge that he myght haue leysure, to shewe the kynge the interpretation, and then came he home agayne and shewed the thyng to Ananias, Meshach, and Sadrach his companions: & they shuld beseech the God of heauyn for grace in this secreete that Daniel and his fellows with other suche as were wise in Babylon, perswaded not. Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght. And Daniel prayd the God of heauyn. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of god myght be prayd for euer and euer, for wysdom and strengthe at his owne. He chaungeth the tymes and ages, & he purteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges, & he giueth wysdome vnto the wise, and vnderstandyng to thole to those that vnderstand. he openeth the depe secret: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in dark-nesse, & for the lyght dwelleth wth hym.

I thanke the, and praye the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou haste sente me wth dome and strengthe, and haste shewed me the thyng, that we desired of the, for thou haste opened the hynge matter vnto me.

Uppon this wente Daniel in vnto Beloch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as be wyse in Babylon, but hynge me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shew the kynge the interpretacion. Then Beloch broughte Daniel in to the kynge in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue found a man among the pyloners of Iuda, that shal shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Belthazar. Telle thou be that canste shewe me the dreame, which I haue seene, and the interpreta-cion therof. Daniel answered the kynge to his face, and sayde: As for this secret: for the which the kynge maketh inquisition: it is neyther the wyse, the socerer, the charmer, nor the deuil con-furer that can certifie the kynge of it. * Onely

God in heauen can open secrettes, and he it is that sheweth the kynge Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes.

The dreame, and that which thou haste seene in thyne dreame vpon thy bed, is this. O kynge, thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shoulde come hereafter. So be that is the opener of mysteries telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrette is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, more then any other kynge, but onely that I myght shewe the kynge the interpreta-cion, and that he myght knowe the thoughtes of his owne herte. Thou kynge sa west, & beholde, there stode before the a great ymage whose sy-gure was maruclous grete, and his vylage grymme. The ymages heade was of fyne gold his byest and armes of syluer, his bodie and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* Thus thou sa west tyll the tyme, that with-oute anye handes, there was hewen of a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to pou-der: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and golde broken all togyther in pec-ces: and became lyke the chaffe of coine, that the wynde bloweth a waie from the soner floures, that they can nomoze be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a grete moun-taine, whych fulfyllerth the whole earth: Thus is the dreame. And now we will shewe before the kynge what it meaneth.

* O kynge, thou arte a kynge of kynges.
* For the God of heuen hath gyuen þa kingdommes strengthe, and maiesty: and hath deli-uered the all thynges, that are amonge the chyldren of men: the beastes of the feilde and the foules vnder the heauen, and gyuen the dominyon ouer them all: Thou art that golden heade. After that there shall aryse an other kynngdomme, which shalbe lesse then thyne. The thyrd kyngome shalbe lyke copper, and haue domynacion in all landes. The fourth kynngdomme shalbe as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron braserth & bre-keth all thynges. Yea, euen as yron beatech eue-ry thyng downe: so shal it beate downe and de-stroye. Where as thou sa west the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kynngdomme, whiche neuer thelesse shal haue some of the yron grounde myxt wth it, for so much as thou haste seene the yron myxt wth þ clape. The toes of the fete that were parte of y-ron and parte of clape, signifyerth: that it shal be a kynngdom, parte ly stronge & partly weak. And where as thou sa west yron myxt wth clay they shal myngle them selues wth the seede of simple people, and yet not contynue one wth a nother lyke as yron wyl not be souldered wth a pote of earde.

In the dayes of these hynge, shal the God of heauen set vp an euerlastyng kynngdomme which shal not perishe, and his kynngdomme shal not be gyuen ouer to another people: yea, & same shal breake, and destroye all the kynngdomes but it shal endure for euer.

And wher as thou sa west, that without any handes there was cut out of the * mounte a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, & earth the syluer and golde in peces: by that harbe the grete God shewed the kynge, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacion of it is sure. Then þ kynge Nabuchod-onosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowd hym selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meat offerynges and swete o-loures vnto hym. The kynge answered Danyel, and sayde: yea, of a truthe your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lord aboue all kynge, and an opener of secrettes: seyng thou canst discouer this mysterye. So þ kynge made Daniel a grete man, and gaue hym many and grete gyftes.

* He made hym ruler of all the countreyes of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated the kynge for Shadrach, misach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in þ land of Babylon. But Daniel hym selfe remayned styl in the court by the kynge.

The iii. Chapter.

The kynge setted vp a golden ymage, whiche he commaunded to be worshipped. Shadrach, misach, and Abednago are accused by cause they refused the hynge's commaundment.
They are brought vnto the hynge and commaunded to worship the ymage, they refuse to do it, and are put into a burnyng ouen. By helpe of God they are deliuered from the fyr. Nabuchodonosor confesteth the power of God after the sight of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, whiche was forty cubites hye, and fyre cu-bites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the feilde of Dura, in the lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather togyther þ dukes lordes and nobles, þ iudges and offycers the debytes and shrewes: w all the rulers of the lande: that they might come to the dedication of the

the pimage, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp: So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, Judges and officers, debities and Queues with all rulers of the lande gathered them together and came vnto the dedicatyng of the pimage. Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

B Nowe when they stood before the pimage, whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel cried out with all his myght: O ye people, kynnedes and tonges, to you be it sayde: when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whiche shalbe blowne, with the harpes, Hawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies and all maner of Quicke, ye fall downe and worshippe that golden pimage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then faileth not downe and boweth hym selfe shall euen in same houre be cast into an hote burning ouen. Therfore when all the folke heard the noyse of the trompettes that were blowne, with the harpes, Hawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies, and all kinde of melody, then all y people kynnedes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden pimage, Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

C Nowe were there certayne men of the Chaldees, that went out then and accused the Jewes and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God sauerhy lpe for euer. Thou beyng kynge hast geuen a commaundement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes harpes, Hawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies, and all the other melodies shall fall downe and bowe them selues, towarde the golden pimage: whoso then fell not downe and worshipped not that he shulde be cast into an hote burning ouen. Now are there certayne Jewes: whome thou hast set out: the officers of the lande of Babylon: namely Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundment, yea they wyl not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that thou hast set vp.

D Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shuld be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: What? O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, wyl not you serue my goddes: nor bowe your selues to y golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Wel, be reioyce hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes Hawmes, psalteryes, symphonies and al the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worship the pimage whiche I haue made. But if ye worshippe it not, ye shalbe cast immediately into an hote burning ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago answered the king and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter, for whyp our God whome we serue: is able to kepe vs from the hote burning ouen (O kynge) & can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes.

E And though he wyl not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyl not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image, whiche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenace of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shuld be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest workes that were in his hote, for to bind Misach, and Sidrach, and Abednago, & to cast them into the hote burning ouen.

So these men were bounde in theyr cotes, boson, shoes, with theyr other garmentes, and cast into an hote burning ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strait, and the ouen was exceeding hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago, & flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three men Sidrach, and Misach, & Abednago fel downe in the hote burning ouen, beyng fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge marueiled and stood vp in al haste: he spake vnto his counsaile and sayde, why not you caste these three men bounde into the fyre? They answered and sayd vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge, he answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men goinge looke in the myddest of the fyre, & nothyng corrupt, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of god to loke vpon.

Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burning ouen, he spake also and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago ye seruantes of the hye God, go forth and come wyther. And so Sidrach, Misach and Abednago went out of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsaile came together to se these men, & vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodies. In so muche that the verye beere of theyr beere was not burnte, and theyr clothes vngauged: yea there was no smel of fyre selte vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: whiche hath sent his aungell, and defended his seruantes, that put theyr truste in him that hath auerted the kynges commaundement and leoparde theyr bodies there vpon, rather then they woulde serue any other god: excepte theyr owne God only.

Therfore I wyl and commaunde, that all people, kynnedes, and tonges, whiche speake any blasphemie agaynst y God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shal dye, and theyr houses shalbe pypled: Because there is no God y may saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sidrach Misach and Abednago in y lande of Babylon.

The .iiii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor dreameth a dreame. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor to put out of his realme: and eateh with beastes. He confesse the power of God, and is reuoced into his kynghome.

Nabuchodonosor the kynge vnto al people, kynnedes, and tonges y dwelle vpon y whole earth: peace be multiplied among you. I thought it good to geue the tokens and maruailous workes, y the hye god hath wrought vpon me.

How great are his tokens, and howe myghte are his wonders: his kingdome is an euerlasting hyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer, and euer.

I Nabuchodonosor beinge at rest in myne house, and sloupyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afraied: & the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the visions of myne heere, troubled me. Then sente I oute a commission, that all they which were of wisdom at Bablon shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the soothsayers, charmers, Caldees, & conurers of deuils: to whom I told the dreame but what it betokened, they coulde not shew me tyl at the last there came one Daniel (otherwyle called Balthazar, according to the name of my God) which hath the spirite of the holpe goddes in hym, to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge:

O Balthazar, thou prince of soothsayers: for so moche as I knowe, that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes, and no secreete is hid from the: tell me therefore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue seene) maye signifie. I sawe a vision in my heere vpon my bedde: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was verpe hye, great and myghty: the height reached vnto heauen, and the brydth extended to all the endes of the earth: his leaues were saye, he had very much frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes thereof. Whortly all creatures fed of it. I saw in my heere a vision vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holpe one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, sayinge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his bryanches, shake of his leaues, and scatter his frute abroad: that all the beastes maye get them a way from vnder hym, and the foules from his bryanches. Reuerbelles, leaue the ground of his rote tyl in fearth, and hynde him vpon the playne felde, with crynes of yron & stele. With the dewe of heauen shal he be wet, and he shal haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wilde beastes.

That mans parte of his shal be taken from hym, and the beastes here shal be giuen hym tyl leuen yeres be come and gone vpon hym.

This errande of the watcher is a commaundement grounde and sought out in the counsell of hym that is moost holpe: to learne men for to vnderstande, that the best hath power ouer the hyngdomes of men, and gyureth them, to whom it lyeth hym, and byngeth the deere outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame that I hyng Nabuchodonosor haue seene. Therefore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifeth: for so moche as all the wyle men of my hyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of the holy goddes is in the. Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) held his peace by the space of one houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So he hyng spake and sayd: O Balthazar, let nether the dreame nor the interpretation thereof feare the. Balthazar answered, sayinge: O my lord, this dreame happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretation to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so great and myghty, whose height reached vnto the heauen, and his brydth into all the world, whose leaues were saye, and the frute moche, vnder the whiche the beastes of the felde had their habitation, and vpon whose bryanches the foules of the ayre dyd ly.

Euen thou, O hyng arte the tree, great and stronge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto heauen, so both thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the hyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angel, that came downe from heauen, and sayd: Hewe downe the tree, and destroy it: yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earth and hynde hym vpon the playne felde with crynes of yron & stele. He shal be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his part shal be with the beastes of the felde, tyl vii. yeres be come and gone vpon hym: This (O hyng) is the interpretation, yea, it is the very deuce of him, that is best of all & it toucheth my lord the hyng.

Thou shalt be cast out from men, & thy dwelling shal be with the beastes of the felde, with grasse shal thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou shalt be wet with the dewe of the heauen: yea, leuen yeres shal come, and go vpon the, tyl I knowe that thou hast power vpon the hyngdomes of men, and gyureth them to whome he lyst. Moreover, where as it was sayd: the rote of the tree shulde be left tyl in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy hyngdome shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power cometh from heauen. Therefore, O hyng, be content with my counsaile, that thou mayst redeme thy synnes with almesse: & thyne offences with mercye to poore people: for this shal be an healyng of thyne errour. All these thynges touche the hyng Nabuchodonosor.

So after xii. monethes, the hyng walked by and do wne in the palace of the hyngdome of Bablon, and sayd: This is the grate cyrpe of Bablon, whiche I my selfe (with my power and strength) haue made a hyngs court, for the honoure of my maiesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the hyngs mouth, there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O hyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken. Thy hyngdome shal departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens companye, thy dwelling shal be with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eat grasse as an oxe, tyl leuen yeres be come and gone ouer the: euen vntyl thou knowest, that the best hath power vnto the hyngdomes of men: & that he may gyure them: vnto whom it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens companye, and dyd eat grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyl his beeres were as great as Egles feathers, and his nayles lyke byrdes claws.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lift up myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne understandyng was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the hyst. I magnified and praised hym that lyueth for evermore * whose power endureth alway, and his kyngdom from one generation to an other: in comparison of whom al they that dwell vpon the earth are to be reputed as nothyng.

* He handleth accordyng to his wyl, amonge the powers of heauen, and amonge the inhabytours of the earth: and there is none that maye resist his hande, or saye: what doest thou? At the same tyme was myne understandyng gyven me agayne, & I was restored to the honour of my kyngdome, to my dignitie, and to myne owneshape agayne. My great estates & pyners sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshipp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kyng of heauen: for all his workes are true, and his wayes ryght. As for those that go on poudrye, he is able to bynge them downe.

The v. Chapter.

Walthazar kyng of Babylon, abusing the wyllys of the temple, seeth an hande wrytyng on the wall. The soylayers called of the kyng, can not expounde the wrytyng: Daniel is called, whiche readyly it, and interpreted it also. Walthazar brings flayne, Danus floureth in his soune.

KYNG Walthazar made a great banquet to his household lordes: with al those that he had made great there, & when he was drunken wth wyne, he commaunded to bynge hym the golden & siluer vessels * which his father Nabuchodonosor hadde taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng and his lordes, wth his queene and concubynes myght drynke therout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem: Then he kyng and his lordes wth his queene and concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne, and played they ydoles of golde, siluer, copper, yron, wood, and stone.

In the verye same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytyng, ryght ouer agaynst the candlestyeke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace, and the kyng sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then he chaunged the kynges countenance, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the soyners of his bodye shoke: & his knees smote one agaynst the other. * Wherefore the kyng cryed myghtely, that they shoulde bynge hym the charmers, Caldees, and counters of decyphes. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, & sayd: Whoso can reade this wrytyng, and shewe me the playne meaning therof: shalbe clothed wth purple, haue a chayne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Vpon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coude neyther reade the wrytyng, nor shewe the kyng what it signified. Then was the kyng sore afrayed, in somuche, that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed.

So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng and his lordes, the queene went by her selfe in the banquet house and spake vnto the kyng, saying: O hyngre, God haue thy lyfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spyrite of the holie goddes within hym, * as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath understandyng and wysdome lyke the goddes. Psea, the kyng Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the soylayers, charmers, Caldees, and readers of destinies, because that such an abundaunt spyrite, knowledge and wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde doubtis) was founde in him, yea, euen in Daniel whome the kyng named Walthazar. Let the same Daniel be sent for, and he shal tell what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kyng & he spake vnto Daniel, and sayde:

Arte thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whome my father the kyng brought out of Iewrye? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the spyrite of the holie goddes experience & understandyng, and that there hath bene greates wysdome founde in the. Nowe haue there bene brought me, wyse and conynge charmers, to reade thys wrytyng, and to shewe me the meaning therof. But they coude not tell me what thys matter signified. Then herde I saye, that thou canst expounde darke thynges, and declare harde doubtis. Well, then if thou canst reade this wrytyng, and shewe me the meaning thereof, thou shalt be clothed w purple, haue a chayne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayd before the kyng: E

* As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, or geue thy ryghtes to an other: yet not the lesse, I wyll reade the wrytyng vnto the kyng, and shewe hym the interpretacyon thereof. * O kyng heare. God the hyst gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitie of a kyng wth worshipp and honour, so that all my people hym reuered and tonges stode in awe and feare of hym by reason of the hyst estate, that he had lent him. For why? he shewe whome he wolde: he smote whom he pleased hym. Agayne, whom he wolde he set vp: and whom he lyst he put down. * But because his herte was so proude, & his stomake set so fast vnto wyfkenesse: he was deposed fro his kyngly throne, and his mayestye was taken fro him. He was shut out from amonge men, his herte was lyke a beastes herte, and his dwellyng was wth the wyde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, & his bodye was wet wth the dewe of the heauen, tyll he knewe, that the hyst had power vpon the kyngdomes of me and settech ouer them, whom he lyst.

And thou hys sonne (O Walthazar) for all thys, hast not submytted thynne herte, though thou knewest al these thynges: but hast magnified thy selfe aboute the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of his house were brought before the that that thou, and thy lordes, wyth thy Quene and thy concubynes, myght dynne wyne thereout. And hast prayed the ydoles of syluer and golde, copper and yron, of wood and stone, whych nyether se, heare, nor vnderstande. As for the God whiche hath made thy breath, and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued hym.

¶ Therefore is the paulme of thy hande sente hyther from hym, to token by thy wippenge. And this is the scripture that is wytten vp. Wane, Thetel, Whares. Now the interpretaciō of the hyng is this: Wane, God hath nombred the hyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou arte wayed in the balancer, and arte founde to lycht: Whares, thy hyngdome is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Perses.

¶ Then commaunded Balthazar to cloth Daniel wyth purple, to hange a chayne of golde about his necke, and to make a proclamation concerning hym: that he shoulde be the ruler of the thyrde part of his hyngdome. ¶ The verpe same myght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, and Darius oute of Media toke in the hyngdome, being lxx. yere of age.

¶ The vi Chapter.

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the landes. The imagination of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamation of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kyng as a traungler. Source: he is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is deliuered by sayth in God. Daniel is accused agaynst the kyng, to be torme in London by the proclamation of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

3 ¶ Pleasid Darius to set ouer his hyngdome an. x. and. xx. lordes, whych shoulde be in all his hyngdome about. About these he sette thre pynces (of whome Daniel was one) that the lordes myght gyue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vnderleasid.

¶ But Daniel excused all these pynces and lordes: for the spyrite of God was plenteous in hym: so that the kyng was mynded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the pynces & lordes sought, to pyche out in Daniel some quarrell agaynst the hyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faute vpon hym. For whych he was so sayebfull, that there was no blame nor dishonour founde in hym.

¶ Then sayd these men: we can get no quarell agaynst this Daniel, except it be in the lawe of his God. ¶ Upon this, went the pynces and lordes togyther vnto the kyng, and sayd thus vnto hym: kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greates estates of the realme, as the pynces, dukes, senators, and iudges, are determined to put out a commaundement of thy kyng and to make a sure statute: namely, that whoso despyeth any petition, either of any God or man (wythin these. xxx. dayes) except it be only of thy, O kyng: the same person maye be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng: confirme thou this statute, and make a wippenge: for the thyng whych the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken.

¶ So Darius made the wippenge: & confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstode that this wippenge was made, he went into his house: and the wyndowes of his wall towardes Ierusalem stode open. There kneeled he downe vpon his knees, thretyng a daye: there he made his petition: & prayd his God, lyke as his maner was to do afore tyme.

¶ Then these men made searche, & founde Daniel makinge his petition, and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kyng, and spake befoze hym concerninge his commaundement, saying: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute that wythin. xxx. dayes whoso requyeth his petition of any God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into the denne of the Lyons. The kyng answered, and sayd: yea, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

¶ Then answered they, and sayd vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the pynners of Iuda, O kyng, regardeth neyther the nor thy statute, for thou hast made: but maketh his petition thretynges a daye. When the kyng herde these wordes he was sore grieved, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to deliuer hym, and put of the matter, vntill the sunne went downe, to the intente that he myght saue hym.

¶ These men perceyvinge the kynges mynde, sayd vnto hym: knowe this (O kyng) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute whych the kyng maketh, maye not be altered. ¶ Then the kyng bad them brynge Daniel: and they cast hym into the Lyons denne.

¶ The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayd: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, coulde he shall defende the. And there was broughte a stone, and layd vpon the hole of the denne, thus the kyng sealed with his owne syngne, & wyth the sygne of his pynnes: that the kynges commaundement concerninge Daniel, shoulde not be broken.

¶ So the kyng went vnto his palace, and ate no meate that nyght, neither was there any mynistrellye broughte in befoze hym, neyther coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the morninge at the breake of the daye, the kyng arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

¶ Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cryed wyth a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea & hyng spake and sayd vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunte of the lyuynge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayd vnto the kyng: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. ¶ Whych God hath sent his angell whych hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For whych myne vnglytynesse is founde oute befoze hym. And as for I, O kyng, I neuer offeded the.

¶ Then was the kyng exceedingly glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was broughte out of the denne, & no manner of hurt was founde vpon hym. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men whych had accused Daniel, the kyng commaunded to brynge them, and to cast them in the Lyons denne: them, they chydre and they wyues. * So the Lyons had the masterye of them, and brake all they bones asondre, as euer they came at the grounde.

* After this, wrote hyngre Darius vnto all people, kynges and tonges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multiplyed with you. My commaundment is, in all my dominion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

* For he is the lypunge God, whyche abydeth euer: his kyngdome shal not faile, and his power is euerlastyng. * It is he that deliuereth and saureth: he doeth wonders and meruailous workes in heauen and in erth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. Chrs Daniel prospered in the raigne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The vii. Chapter.

A vision of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of .iiii. kyngdomes of the world, of the power and course of Antichrist. Of the curia dragg kyngdom of Corthe.

In the first yere of Baltazar kyng of Babylon, saue Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in his heed, vpon his bedde. Whyche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake and sayd: I saue in my vision by nyght, and beholde, the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure great beastes came vnto the see one lyke another.

The first was as a Lyon, and yet had he: Egles wynges. I saue, that his wynges were plucked from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans herte.

Beholde, the second beast was lyke a beare, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had .iii. greute longe teeth, and it was sayde vnto hym: Arise, eat vpon moche fleshe. Then I looked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a Leopard, this had wynges as a foule, * even foure vpon the backe. Chrs beastes had foure beedes, & there was power gyuen hym. After this I saue in a vision by right and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruolous stronge. It had greute yron teeth, it deuoured and destroyed & stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was saue vnto the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hoynes, wherof I toke good heed.

And beholde, there came vpon amonge them an other lyke hoine, before whome there were three of the fyrste hoynes pluckt awaye. Beholde, this hoine had eyes lyke a man: and a mouthe speaking presumptuous thynges. * I looked vnto the f. ates were prepared, and vnto the olde aged sat hym downe. His clothyng was as wyhte as snowe, and the beeres of his heed lyke y. pures well. His thron was lyke the fyre flame, and his wheles as the burninge fyre. There dyewe forth a fyre streame: and went oute from hym.

* A thousande tymes a thousande serued hym. x. tyms ten thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, and the bookes opened. Then toke I heed thereunto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes: which the hoine spake. I behelde vnto the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, * gyuen ouer to be burnt in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye: but they lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I saue in a vision by nyght, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen like the sonne of a man, which wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they brought hym. Then gaue he hym * power and dignitie regall, that al people, tribes and tonges shoulde serue him. * His power is an euerlastyng power, which shal neuer be put downe: and his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My hert was vexed, * I Daniel had a troubled spyrte with in me, & the visions of my heed made me afrayed vnto I gaue me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the trueth, concerning all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretation of these thynges.

These foure gerate beastes are foure kynges, whyche shal aryse out of the earth. These shal take in the kyngdom of the sayntes of the most hest, and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth, chernyng the fourth beast whyche was so farre vnto the other beastes, and so horrible, whose teeth were of yron, & his nayles of hyasse: which deuoured and destroyed and stamped the residue vnder his fete: I desired also to knowe the trueth, as touching the ten hoynes that he had vpon his heed, and this other whyche came vpon afterwarde, before whose face they fell downe they, which hoine had eyes and a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and looked vnto a grymme visage then his fellows. I behelde, and the same hoine made battell agaynst the sayntes, yea, and gat the victory of them vnto the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the cheft sayntes: and vnto the tyme that the sayntes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answer. That fourth beast shal be the fourth kyngdome vpon earth, it shalbe more then al other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe and destroye all other landes.

* The ten hoynes are ten kynges, that shal aryse out of the kyngdome, after whome there shal stande vpon another, wherof shalbe greater then the first. He shal subdue the kynges, and shal speake wordes agaynst the best of all: he shal destroye the sayntes of the most hest: & thyng, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shalbe gyuen vnder his power, * vnto a tyme, two tymes and an halfe tyme.

But the iudgement shalbe kepte, so that his power shalbe taken from hym, for he shalbe destroyed, & perished at the last: As for the kyngdom, power, and all myght that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe gyuen to the holie people of the most hest, * whose kyngdome is euerlastyng: yea, al powers shal serue and obey him. Thus saue exte the wordes. Nevertheless, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged chaunged: but wordes I kept styl in my part.

The viii. Chapter.

A vision of a Ramme betweene a Ramme and an hegoate
The vnderstanding of the vision is of the battell betwene the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the Ramme kynge Antichrist.

In the thyrde yere of the raygne of kynge Balthazar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the first. I sawe in a vision: and when I saw it, I was at Babilon in the chiefe citie, wher lyeth in the lande of Elam: and in the vision, me thought I was by the ryuer of Alai.

Then I looked vp, & sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, wherof had two horns: and these two hornes were hye but one was hyer then another: and the hyest came vp be hynde. I sawe that this ramme pushed wth his hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north and agaynst the southe: so that no beastes might stande before hym, nor defende them from his power: but he dyd as hym lysted, & wared great lye. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an hegoate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous wretched horne betwixt his eyes, and came vnto the Ramme that had the two hornes (wherof I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcelly vpon hym wth his myght. I sawe hym dawe nye, vnto the Ramme, beyng verye fearede vpon hym: yea, he gaue hym such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. After that had the Ramme so much strength as to stande before hym: but he cast hym downe, trode hym vnder his fete, and no man was able to deliuer the Ramme out of his power.

The goate wared exceeding greete, & when he was at the strongeste, his greete horne was broken also. Then grew there other foure such lyke in the strede, towards the foure wyndes of the heauen. Yea, out of one of the leest of these hornes, there cam yet vp another, wherof wared maruelous great toward the south, toward the east, and toward the sayde pleasaunt lande. It grew vnto the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the star-res also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea, it grew vnto the prince of the hoost from whom the dayly offryng was taken, and the place of the Sanctuarie casten downe. And a certayne season was giuen vnto it, agaynst the dayly offryng (because of wickednes) that it myght cast downe the veritie to the grounde, & so to prospere in all thynges, that it went about.

Upon this I harde one of the sayntes speakyng, whiche saynt sayde vnto one that asked this question. Howe longe shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarie and the powre shall so be troden vnder fete? And he answered hym: Vnto the eueryng and the moryng, euen two thousande and thre hundred dayes: than shall the Sanctuarie be clesed agayn.

Nowe when I Daniel had sene this vision and sought for the vnderstanding of it: beholde there stode before me a thyng like vnto a man.

And I harde a mans voice in the ryuer of Alai wherof I had sene afore: & sayde: O Gabriel, make this man to vnderstande the vision. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commyng, and fell doونه vpon my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of mamarche well, for in the last tyme shall this vision be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speakyng vnto me, I wared saynt, so that I sank downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayenge: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the last wraeth: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fulfilled.

The Ramme wherof thou sawest wth the two hornes is the kynge of the Medes and Per-ses: but the goate is kynge of Greke lande: the greete horne that stode betwixt his eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake and foure other rose vp in the strede: it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stand vp foure kingdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kingdomes (whiche vngodlynes is a growyng) there shall arise a kynge of an vnchaste face, wherof shall be wyle in darthe speakynges.

He shall be myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroye aboute measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospere he shall slaye the stronge and holie people. And thowhe his chastynes, falsed shall prospere in his hande, his herte shall be proude, and many one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shall stande vp agaynst the prynces of prynces, but he shall be destroyed wthout hande. And this vision that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the eueryng and the mooryng. Therefore wryte thou vp this syght, for it shall be longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel very saynt, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp I wente aboute the kinges busynesse, and mar-uelled at this vision, neuertheless, now I knewe of it

The ix. Chapter.

Daniel desired to haue that requyred of God, which he had promysed concerninge the returne of the people led out of babilon into iherusalem. A true confession. Daniel is a pious man. Daniel is a pious man. Daniel is a pious man.
The vnderstanding of the vision is of the battell betwene
the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the Ramme kynge Antichrist.

In the first yere of Darius the sonne of Ahasuerus, wherof was of the seede of the Medes, and was made king ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea, euen in his raygne, I Daniel be-gyed to knowe the yearly nombere out of the bokes, wherof the Lord spake vnto Jeremy the prophete: that Ierusalem shulde lye waste. I peeres: and I turned me vnto my God the Lord for to praye and make myne intercession, wth fastyng, sackcloth, and ashes, and prayed before the Lord my God, and knowleged sayenge:

O Lord, thou greete and fearfull God, thou that hepest couenaunt and metest wth them, wherof thou art, and do thy commandementes.

The Prophecie.

Baruc. 1. b * We haue sinned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobediente and gone backe: yea, we haue departed frō al the preceptes and iudgements.

Exmo. 1. b We wolde neuer folowe thy seruantes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kyn- ges & princes, to oure fozfathers and to al the peo- ple of the lande. * O Lorde, ryghteousnes belon- geth vnto the, vnto vs petyrnyth nothyng but open shame: as it is come to passe thys daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Yea, vnto all Israell, wher they be sette o: nre, thowtwe out al the landes: wher- in thou haste throwed them, because of the offen- ces, that they had done agaynst the.

Mal. 1. a Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to oure kinges, & prin- ces, to oure fozfathers, euen to vs all, that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde oure God, pertayneth mercye and fozgouenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe frō byn, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde oure God, to walke in hys lawes, which he layd before vs by hys seruantes the prophetes: yea, al Israell haue transgressed, and gone backe frō thy lawe, so that they haue not hardened vnto thy voyce.

Exo. 17. b. Exo. 17. b. Exo. 17. b. Therefore, the curse and othe that is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses the seruante of God (a- gainst whom we haue offended) is powred vpon vs. * And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst oure iudges & iudged vs: to bynne vpon vs such a great plage as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Ierusalem. Yea, all thys plage, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before the Lorde oure God, that we myghte turne agayne from oure wickednes, & to be learned in the veri- tie. Therefore hath the Lorde made hast, to bynne thys plage vpon vs, for the Lorde oure God is ryghteous, in all hys wordes which he doth: for wyrtten he wolde not berken vnto hys voyce.

Baruc. 1. b * And nowe, O Lorde oure God: that wylth a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy selfe a name whiche remayneth this daye, we haue sinned O Lorde, & done wyckedly agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wylfulfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseeche the) from thy cite of Ierusalem thy ho- ly byll. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for thy wyckednesse of oure fozfathers, in Ierusalem & thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs: Howe therefore, O oure God, heare thy prayer of thy seruante: and his intercession. O let thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that is thy wast: for the Lordes sake.

Exo. 17. b. O my God, encline thyn care, and berken (at the lest for thine owne sake) open thyn eyes beholde howe we be desolate, yea, and the cite also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not cast oure prayers before thee in oure owne ryghteousnesse: no, but only in thy great mercyes. O Lorde: heare: O fozgyue Lorde, O Lorde con- sider, tary not ouer lōge: but for thyn owne sake do it. O my God: for thy cite, and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakyng at my prayers, knowlegynge myne owne synnes, and the syn- nes of my people, makynge so myne intercessi- on before the Lorde my God, for the holy bylles sake of my God: yea: while I was yet speaking in my prayer: behold, the man Gabriel (* who I had sene before in the visyon) came a pynge to me, and touched me aboute the offrynge tyme in the euenynge. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniell sayd he: I am now come to make the vnderstande it. For as soone as thou began- nest to make thy prayer, it was so deuysed, and therefore am I come to serue the. And why? * For thou arte a man greatly beloved.

Therefore, ponde the matter well, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the visyon. Ix. weekes are determined vnto the people and ouer the holy cite: that the wyckednesse maye be con- sumed, that thy synne maye haue an ende that the offence maye be reconciled, and to bynne in euer lastynge ryghteousnesse to fulfill the visyons & the prophetes and aunpnes the moost cly one vnderstande thys then, and marke it well: that from the tyme it shalbe concluded: to go and re- payre Ierusalem agayne, vnto Christ (of the a- nopnted) pynne: there shalbe seuen weekes: The first shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne Ix. weekes: but wylth harde troublous tyme. After these Ix. weekes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in him. The second there come a people wylth the pynne, & destroye the cite and the Sanctuary: and hys ende shall come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde wylth many for the space of a weake: and when the weake is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meat offrynge. * And in the temple there shalbe an abominable desolacion, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shal continue to the ende.

C. The .i. Chapter.

Where appereth vnto Daniell a man clothed in lynen whiche sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

D the thyrde parte of kyng Cyrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwylse called Baltha- ser) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well and perceyued what his visyon was. At the same tyme, I Daniell mour- ned for the space of the weekes, so that I had no lust to cate breade: as for slepe & wyne there came none wythin my mouthe: No, I dyd not once anopnte my selfe, tyl the whole thys weekes were out.

Upon the .xxiii. daye of the fyrste moneth, I was by the greates floud, called * Egypt I lyt by myne eyes, and loke: and beholde a man clothed in lynen, whose lopynes were gydded by wylth fyne golde of Arabye: hys bodye was lyke the Chylolyte stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre hys armes and lere were lyke sayze glysternyng metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the

the voyce of a multitude.

* Daniell alone sawe this vision, & the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a great fear fulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and byd them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe this greates vision, so longe tyl there remayned no moze strength wythin me.

Yea, I lost my colour cleane I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet harde I þ voice of this wordes: and as loone as I harde it, saynt nelle came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayenge vnto me: * O Daniell, thou wilt be loued man: take good heed of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryghte vp, for vnto the am I nowe sente.

And when he had sayd these wordes, I stode vntrembling. Then sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniell: for wher I first day that I dydest set thyne harte to vnderstande, and dydest chaster thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue ben herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou beganst to speake, had not þ prince ouer þ king dome of the Perses wythstande me. xxi. dayes.

But lo, * Michas one of þ cheif pynces, came to helpe me, & I was left to continue ther wyth þ hynges of Persen, & am come to shewe the what shal happen vnto thy people in the later dayes. For it wylde lode yet of the vision be fullylled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the grounde and helde my songe. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayd vnto him, that stode before me, O my Lorde, my tonyes are loosed in þ vpon and there is no moze strength wythin me. Howe may my Lordes seruante the talke wyth my Lorde saynge there is no strengthe in me, so that I can not take my breath vpon this there touched me agayne, one much lyke a man: and comforted me, sayenge: O thou man so well be- loued feare not: be content, take a good hart vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayd: Speake on my Lorde, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wyl I go to fyght wyth the kyng and the prince of the Perses. As loone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekelande shall come. Anewe- lesse I wyl shewe the that thyng, that is false noted in the scripture of truch. And as for yonder matters, there is none that helped me in the, but Michas þ prince.

¶ The xi. Chapter.

¶ A prophete of the hynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypt, and of the hande that of, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that fle into the kyng of Egypt, whome Antiochus the kyng of Syria persecuted, which frequenty was to be Antiochus. For paper of Antiochus.

¶ And in the fyrste yere of Darius of Media I stode by hym, to comforte hym, and to strengthe hym, and nowe wyl I shewe the the truch. Beholde, there shal stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farrer rether then they all. And when he is in the cheifste power of his ryche, he shall prouoke euery ma agaynst the realme of Grekelande. * Then shal there arys yet a myghty kyng, that shall rule wyth greates dominion, and do what hym lyst.

* And as loone as this kyngdome cometh vp, it shal be destroyed, and deuoyd toward the four wyndes of heauen. They that come after hym, shal not haue suche power and dominion as he: but this kyngdome shalbe scattered, yea, euen amonge other then those. And the kyng of the south shalbe myghtyer, then this other pynce. And one shalbe stronger then he, and shal rule this dominion wyth greates power.

And in the ende of yeres, they shalbe ioyned together, and the kynges daughter of the south shal come to the kyng of þ North, for to make frendshipp, but he shal not obtayne the power of that arme, neether shal he be able to endure thow- rowe this myght: but she, and such as broughte her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for this tyme) shal be deliuered vp. Out of the branches of her roote, there shal one stande vp in this trade whiche wyth power of armes shal go thowre the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to his strength. As for they: Idols and pynces, wyth they: costly Jewels of golde & syluer, he shal cary them awaye captiues into Egypt, and he shal raygne moze yeres then the kyng of the North. And when he is come into the kynges realme of þ south, he shalbe saynt to turne agayn into his owne land: wherfore his shes shalbe displeased, & shal gather together a myghty great host of people: & one of them shal come, & go thowre lyke a wa- ter floude: then shal he returne, & go forth wyth despyge and boastynge vnto his owne lande.

¶ Then the kyng of the south shalbe angrye and shal come forth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the north: yea, he shal bynge a greates mul- titude of people together, and a greates heape shal be geuen into his hande: these shal be cary away wyth greates pyde, for so muche as he hath caste downe so many thousandes, neuer belesse, he shal not preyayle. For the kyng of the north shal gather of the newe, a greates heape of people then afore, and come forth, after a certayne tyme and yeres) wyth a myghty host, and erre adyng greates good.

¶ At the same tyme there shal many stande vp agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wyched chyldren of thy people also shal craie them selues (to fullyll the vision) and then fall. So the kyng of þ north shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fenced cityes: And þ power of them of the southe shal not be able to abyde hym, & the beste men of the people shal not be so stronge, as to resyst hym. Wherfore wher he cometh, he shal handle hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shal stande in the pleasant countrie, wyth thow- rowe hym shalbe destroyed: he shal set this face wyth all his power to obtayne this kyngdome, & to be lyke it. Yea, that shal he do, & greeue hym unto the daughters amonge women, to destroy hym. But he shall saye, neither shall he optayne his purpose. After this shall he set his face vnto the Iles & take many of them. A prince shall stoppe hym, to do hym shame, besyde the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne lande, stumbe and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon hym and dyd hym violence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasure kingdome: and after fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, and that neither in wrath, nor in battel. In his steade there shall arise a wyle person, not holde worthy of a kynge's dignitie: this shall come in peaceably, and optayne the kyngdome with saye wordes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynst the prince of the couenaunt.

D So after that he hath taken truce with him he shall handle dysceitfully: that he may get vpon & overcome hym with a small flocke: & so with craftynesse to get hym to the farrest place of the lande, and to deale otherwys, then either by slaughter or by craftynesse. For he shall destroye the thyng, that they had robbed & spoyled, yea, & all their substaunce, ymagynyng thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes, & that for a tyme. His power & harte shall be stered vpon with a great arme agaynst the kyng of the south where thorow the kyng of the south shall be moued then vnto battel, with a greates myghtye host also. Heertheles he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate shall hurt him: so that his host shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

E These two kynges shall be minded to do mischief, and talke of dysceyte at one table: but they shall not prosper, for why? the ende shall not come yet: vnto the tyme appoynted. & then shall he go home agayne into his owne lande with great good, and let his harte agaynst the holpe couenaunt, he shall busye agaynst it, and then returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shall come agayne, & go toward the south. So shall it hapen otherwys then at the fyfte, yet once agayne. And why? the shippes with Iealids shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and cume agayne: that he maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea, he shall turne him, and dye such vnto him as leaue the holpe couenaunt.

F He shall set myghtye men to vnbalowe the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offryng, and to set vpon the abhominable desolation. And such as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter with saye wordes. But the people that wyl knowe they? God, shall haue the overhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandinge amonge the people shall enforme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted with swordes, with fyre, with captiuitie and with the takinge awaye of they? goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vpon with a wyle helpe: but manye shall cleaue vnto them saynedlye.

Yet some of those whiche haue vnderstandinge shall be persecuted also, that they maye be tryed purified and clenfed, tyl the tyme be out: for ther is yet another tyme appoynted. The kynges shall do what him lyst: he shall exalte and magnifie him selfe agaynst all that is God. Yea, he shall speake maruclous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes wherein he shall prosper, so longe tyl the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is beyled already. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women. Yea, he shall not care for anye God, for he shall magnifie him selfe aboute all. In his place shall be worshippe the myghtye stout God: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall be honoure with gold and syluer, with pcyous stones and plesant Jewels.

G Thus shall he do, thorow his stronge sented places, settinge vpon his straunge God whom he confesseth and encreasing his glorie. Such as wyl receaue him, & take him for God, he shall geue them great worship & power: yea & make them lordes of the multitude, and giue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south strue with him, and the kyng of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst him with charrettes, horsemen and with a great navy of shippes. He shall come into the landes, destroye & gorborrow: he shall entre also into the pleasaunt lande: Many cities and countreys shall becare except Edom, Moab, & the best of the children of Ammon, which shall escape fro his hand. He shall stretch forth his handes vpon the countreys, & the lande of Egypte shall not escape him. For thorow his goyng in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the pcyous Jewels of Egypt, Libia, & Ethiopia: & heertheles, the rynges out of the East & the north shall trouble him, for the which cause he shall go forth to destroye and roote out a great multitude. The steeles of his palace shall be pitched betwixt the two seas, vpon the hill of the noble Sanctuary, for he shall come to his death: and then shall noman helpe him.

Of the prophecies the continuacion of the storye, the birthmorte of the prophete Daniel.

In the tyme wyl come also, that the great prince Michael, whiche liueth on the people's syde, shall arise vpon, for: there shall come a tyme of trouble, suche as neuer was, sence there began to be any people vnto that same tyme. Then shall the people be deliuered, yea, all those that be founde wyten in the booke. & Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake some to the euill lastyng lyfe, some to perpetual shame and reproue: & the wylse (such as haue taughte other) shall gylter, as the wyngyng of beauen: & those that haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the starrs, wylde wythout ende.

And thou O Daniel, put vpon these wordes, and scale the booke tyl the laste tyme. Many shall go aboute here & there, and then shall knowlege increas increase. So J Daniel looked, and beholde, ther stode a (as it were) other two, one vpon this woze of the water, the other vpon ponde syde. And one of them sayd vnto hym, which was clothed in linnen, and stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: howe longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderous woizes?

E Then herde J the man with the linnen clo thes, whiche stode aboue vpon the waters of floude, when he helde vp his right and left hand vnto heauen, and swaie by hym whiche lynch for ener, that it shall tarpe for a tyme, two ty mes and halfe a tyme: and when the power of holypeople is cleane scattered abode, then shall all these thynges be fulfilled.

D I hearde it wel but I vnderstode it not.
Then sayde J: O my Lorde, what shall happen after that? he answered: So thy waye Daniel, for these woizes shall be closed vp, and sealed, til the last tyme: and many shall be purified, cleued and tryed. But the vngodly shall lye wyckedly, and those wycked (as ma ny of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstan dyng. As for such as haue vnderstanding, they shall regarde it. And from the tyme forth that I daily offeryng shall be put downe, and the abho minable desolacion set vp, there shall be a .v. cxxx. dayes. * O well is hym that wytereth and commeth to the .viii. c. and xxxv. dayes. So thou thy way now till it be ended: take thy rest and abyde thy lot, till the dayes haue an ende.

C The ende of the Prophecy of Daniel.

The booke of the Prophete Oseas.

C The fyrste Chapter.

C The tyme wherein Oseas prophesied. Oseas by takinge an harte to his wyfe, signified the foolishnes of the people the destruction of the kingdome of Iuda and of the Ierusa lyme, so prophesied.

This is the woize of the Lorde that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Be erry * in the dayes of Oseas Joa chan, Ihuas, and Ieremias kynges of Iuda, and in the tyme of Iero boam the sonne of Ioas kyng of Israel. Kysst when the Lorde spake vnto Ose as, he sayd vnto him: * So thy way, take an har lotte to thy wyfe, and gette chyldren by her, for the land hath committed great whozdom against the Lorde. So he went & toke Gomer, the dought er of Deblaim, which conceived and brought forth a son. And the Lorde sayd vnto him: cal his name Jezrael, for * I wyll shortly auenge the bloud of: Jezrael vpon the house of Iehu, & wyll brynge the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyll I breake the bow of Isra el in the valley of Jezrael.

So he conceived yet agayn, and bare a dought ter: And he sayd vnto hym: Call her name Loz hamah (that is, not obtayning mercy): * for J wyll haue no pitye vpon the house of Israel, but forger them, and put them cleane out of remem brance. * Nevertheless, I wyll haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and wyll saue them euen thowse the Lorde they: God. But I wyll not deliuer them thowse any bowe, sword, bat tyle, doctes, and horsemen.

Now when he had wayned Lozhamah, he conceived agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayd he: call his name Loamp. For why? ye are not my people: therefore wyll I not be your God, and though the nombre of the chyldren of Israel be as the sande of the see, whiche can nether be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is sayd vnto them, * ye be not my people: tuf ther shall it be thus reported of them * they be y coll den of the lymng God. * Then shall y chyldren of Iuda, and the chyldren of Israel, be gathered together agayne, and chose them selues one ged, and then departe out of the land: for great shall be the daye of Israel.

C The ii. Chapter.

C The people is called to repentance.

If your brethren, that they are my pro ple: and your sisters, that they haue obtained mercy. As for your mother ye shall chide with her, and reprove her, * for she is not my wyfe, neither am I her husband: vntill she put away her whoz dome out of my syght, & her adoutrye from ber lystes. If no, I shall strip her naked, and set ber * euen as she came into the woilde: yea, I shall laye her waste, and make ber to be a wyldernes, and slaye ber for thyrs. I shall haue no pitye al so vpon her chyldren: * for they be the chyldren of fornicacyon.

They: mother hath broken her wedlock, and she that bare them * is come to confusyon. For the sayde: I wyll go after my louers that gyue me my water and my bread, my woll and flaxe, myne oyle and my byrnie. But I wyll beoche ber waye with thowes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynd her to re stepes, and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not gette them: she shall seeke them, but not fynde them. * Then shall the saye: wel, I wyll go turne agayne to my first husbande: for at that tyme was I better at ease then now. But this wold she not knowe where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer, and golde, * whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherfore now wyll I take my corne and wyne agayne in they: seasion, and set agayne my wol and my flaxe whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. * And now wyll I discouer her folysnes euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her out of myne handes. Moreover, I wyll take awaye all her myrth: her holy dayes her newe moones, her Sabbothe, and al her so lemnitye feastes: I wyll destroye her byrnyardes and sytters, though she saye: lo, here are my re wardes that my louers haue gyven me. I wyll make it a wood, and wylbe beastes shall eat it up: I wyl punyssh her also for þat dayes of Baal wherein she censed hym, deckyng hym with her carnyges and charynes, when she folowed her lo-uers, and forgar me: sayth the lord.

Wherfore beholde, I wyl call her agayne, byng her into a wilderness & speake frendly vnto her: there wyl I geue her her vyneyardes a-gayne: pea, and the valley of Achor also, to be her hope and comfort. Then shal she say there as in the tyme of her youth, and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the lande of Egypte. Then sayth the Lorde, she shall saye vnto me: O my husbnde, and shall call me nomore Baal: for I wyl take awaye those names of Baal from her mouth: pea, she shal neuer reme-ber theyr names any more. * The wyl I make a couenant with them, with the wylde beastes with the foules of the ayre, and with euery thyng that crepeth vpon the earth.

* As for howe swerde and battayle, I wyl destroye suche out of the lande, and wyl make them to slepe safely. * Thus wyl I marie the vnto myne owne selfe for euermore: pea eue to my selfe wyl I marie the in ryghteousnesse, in equite in louyng kynndesse and mercede. In sayth also wyl I marie the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme wyl I be to my selfe frendly and gracious vnto the heuens, sayth the Lorde: and the heuens shal helpe the earth, and the earth shal helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shal helpe Ierusalem. * I wyl some them vpon earth, for a seide to myne owne selfe: and wyl haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercede. And to them whiche were not my people, I wyl saye: thou art my people: and he shall saye: thou art my God.

The iii. Chapter.

Complaint agaynst the people and the priests of Israel.

Then sayde the Lorde to me: * Go yet thy waye and wov an aduoutrous woman, whome thy neyghboure lo-ueth, as the Lorde doeth the chyliden of Israel: howbeit, they haue refect to straunge goddes, * and loue þat wyne cannes. So I gate her for fyftene syluer penynges and for an homer and an halfe of barley, & sayde vnto her: Thou shalt abyde wth me a longe season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, & loke thou medle with none other man, and then wyl I kepe my selfe for the.

* Thus the chyldren of Israel shal syt a great while without hyng and pynce, without offering and anker, without prest and reuelacion But afterwarde shall the chyldren of Israel comerte next, and seke the Lord theyr God, and Dauid theyr kyng: and in þat latter dayes they shal worship the Lorde, and his louyng kynndesse.

The iii. Chapter.

Complaint agaynst the people and the priests of Israel.

Eate the worde of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Israel. For þat Lorde must punyssh them þat dwel in the lade. And why? there is no trouth, there is no mercy, there is no knowledge of god in the lande: but swearing, lyng, manflaugter, thefte and aduoutrye haue gotten the upper hande: and one gyltyng the foloweth another.

Wherfore shall the lande be in a miserable case, & all they that dwell therein shall be rooted oute.
 The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the see shall dye: Yet is there none that wyl chaunge nor repone an other. For the people rebuketh the prestes, which shuld reforme oother men.

Wherfore stondest thou in the daye tyme, & the prophet with the in the nyght. I wyl byng thy mother to scyence: and wyl my people perish, because they haue no knowledge. Wherfore then that þat haue refused to standyng, the-fore wyl I refuse the also: so that thou shalt no-more be my prest. And for so much as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyl also forget the chyldren. The more they increased in þat multitude, the more they synned agaynst me, therfore wyl I chaunge theyr honoure in to shame. * They eate up the synnes of my people and couerage them in theyr wychednes. * Thus the prestes is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyl punyssh them for theyr wyched wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to theyr owne imaginacions. * They shall eate, and not haue ynough. They haue vled whoredome, therfore shall they not prosper: and why? they haue forgotten the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Whoredome, wyne, and bynkenesse taketh the best awaye. * My people aske counsaile at theyr strokers, theyr stalle must tell them. For a whorish mynde hath deceyued them so that they commit fornicacion agaynst their God. * They make sacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne theyr incense vpon the hyles: pea among the oaks, groues, and bushes, for there are good shadows. Therfore your daughters are becom harlottes, and your spoules haue broken theyr word: I wyl not punyssh your daughters for theyr defyle, and your wyues þat became whores: * I seynge þat farbers them selues haue medled with harlots, and offered wth vnchastites: but þat people that wyl not vnderstand, must be punished.

Though thou Israel arte disposed to playe the harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou shouldest not haue runned vnto Gilgal, & no more gone vp to Bethaem: no more haue sworne, the Lorde spured. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cow. The Lord therfore shal make her fede as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become pas-taker of ydols: well, let hym go, theyr bynkennesse hath put them back, and brought them to whoredome. Theyr rulers loue rewarde, byng (saye they) to theyr owne shame. A wynde shal take holde of theyr fetters: and they shal be confounded in theyr offsprynges.

The v. Chapter.

Complaint agaynst the people and rulers of Israel.

Pe prestes, heare this, take hede, O thou household of Israel: gyue care, O it on hynglyre beate, for it were yere past to se iudgement done: but you are become become a snare vnto Gizzah, and a fyred net vnto the mount of Thabor. They shall sacrifice by heapes: and turne farre from the Lorde, and I haue bene a rebuker of them al. * I know Ephraim well ynough, and Israel is not hyde fro me, for Ephraim is now become an harlot, and Israel is defyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto the Lord, for they haue an whorish harte, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

* But the pyde of Israel wyl be rewarded hym in his face: pea bothe Israel and Ephraim shall fall for they wyckednesse, and Juda with them also. * They shall come with they shepe bullockes: to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde hym, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused hym, and broughte vp bastarde chyldren: a moneth therfore shall deuoure them with they: poysons. Blowe with the shawmes at Gibe, and with trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethanen vpon the ponde- syde of Ben Jamin. In the tyme of plage shall Ephraim be layde waste, therfore dyd I sayth- fully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are y prynces of Juda become lyke them: that remoue the lande markers: Therfore wyl I poure oute my wrath vpon them lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no rpyght of the law: for why they folowed the doctrynes of vngodlye men. Therfore wyl I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Juda a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe his synnes and Juda his disease, * Ephraim went vnto Assur, & sente vnto kynge Iarch: yet coude not he helpe you, nor ease you of poure payne: I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Juda. Euen I wyl spoylle them, and goo my waye. I wyl take them with me, and no man shall rescue them. I wyl go, and retourne to my place, tyll they knowledge that they haue synned, and seke me.

The vi. Chapter.

A prophet called a man to turne to God. The wyckednesse of the people.

If they aduersyte, they shall earlie seke me, and saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde: * for he hath smitten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynd vs vpon agayne: after two dayes shall he quyen vs, in the thyrde daye shall rayse vs vp, so that we shall lyue in his lyght. Then shall we haue vnderstandyng, and endeuor our selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall go for the as the spryng of the daye, and come vnto vs: as the euening and moonyng rayne vpon the earthe.

* Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda, how shall I entreat the: for your loue is lyke a moonyng cloude, and lyke a dewe that goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophetes, & let them be slayne: for my wo- des sake: so that the punishment shall come to lyght. * For I haue pleasur in slouping kynnes, and not in offeryng: pea in knowledge of God more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt and set me at nought. Gilead is a cite of wycked doers of malicious people, and bloude shedders. And as theues armed, wayte for hym that passeth by the waye: such is the counsaile of prestes, which with one agreed counsaile, murder cruellie such as kepe the waye: pea, they darre do all vnspreakable myschefe. * Horrible thynges haue I seene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is defyled: pea, and thou Juda kepest an harlotte for thy selfe, when I retourne the captiuitie of my people.

Of the byres and mannes of the people.

When I vnder take to make Israel hole then the vngodlynes of Ephraim and the wyckednesse of Samaria, cometh to lyght: then go they aboute with lyces: therfore the theste robbeth within: without the spoyles despoyleth. They conspyde not in they: hartes, that I remembre all they: wyckednesse. Howe they: owne inuencions haue be set them, whiche I se well ynough. * They make the kynge and the prynces, to haue pleasure in they: wyckednes & lyces. All these burne in aduoutrye, as it were an ouen that the baker beateh when he hath left kneading, tyll y doue be leauened. Euen so goeth this daye with oure kynnes and prynces, for they begyn to be wood dronken thowde wyne, they vlc familarite with such as deceyue them. They with the ymaginacion of they: hert are lyke an ouen, the slepe is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the moynpuge is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne Judges all they: kynnes are fallen, yet is there none of the that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixt amonge y deatzen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake that no man turneth, straungers haue deuoured his strength: yet, he regardeth it not. He warreth full of graye deetes, yet wyl he not knowe it: * and the pyde of Israel is cast downe before they: face, yet wyl they not turne to the Lorde they: God, nor seke hym for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a doue y begyled, and hath no hart. * Now call they vpon the Egyptians now go they to the Assyrians: but while they be going here & there, I wyl spyed my net ouer the, and drawe them downe as the fowles of paye: and accordyng as they haue bene warned, so wyl I punyssh them. * No be vnto the, for they haue forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought: * I am he that redeemed them, and yet they dissemble with me: They call not vpon me with they: hartes, but y e houlyng vpon they: beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meat and drynke, and me they wyl not obeye: I haue taughte them, and defended they: arme: yet do they ymagine myschefe agaynst me. They turne them selues, but not to the moost hyest, and are become as a broken bowe. They: prynces shall be slayne with y sword, for the malice of they: tonges, such scoynes shall they haue in the lande of Egypt.

The

The Prophecye.

The. viii. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Iuda and Israel, by cause of their synners.

I Et the hoyme to thy mouth, and blowe softly (as an Egle) shall the enemy come agaynst the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my * couenaunt, and transgressed my lawe. Israel shoulde haue sayde vnto me: thou art my God, we knowe the but he hath refused the thyng that is good, therfore shall the enemy folow vpon hym. * They haue ordeyned kynge, but not thow me: they haue made pynces, and I must not knowe of it. * Of they: syluer and golde haue they made the ymages, to byngne them selues to destruction. * Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye, for my wyathfull indignacyon is gone forth agaynst the. how longe wylt thou be, or they can be clenfed. For the calfe came from Israel, the workman made it, therfore can it be no god but euen in peccen shall the calfe of Samaria be broken. They haue sowd wynde, therfore shall they reape a storme.

They seede shall beate no corne, there shall no meale be made of they: encrease: though they reape, yet shall straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shall perishe, the Scythians shall intreate hym as a soule vessel. Synners they went vnto the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wyld Ass in the deserte.

* Ephraim syneth rewarde to get louers, though they byze them amonge the heathen, yet now wyl I gather them vp. They shall begyn to be werped with the burthen of kynge and pynces. Ephraim hath made many altars to do wyckednesse, his altars (I saye) he had to his synne. Though I be we them my lawe neuer so moch, they count it but straunge doctrine. * Where as they do sacrifice, offering the floure, and eatyng it, the Lorde wyl haue no pleasure therein: but wyl remembre they: wyckednesse, and punyshe they: synnes. * Israel turneth agayn into Egypt they haue forgotten hym that made them, they buyde sayre palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge cities: * therfore wyl I sende a fyre into they: cities, and it shall consume they: palaces.

The. ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

I Not thou trumpbe, O Israel, make no bolyng ouer ioyous thynges as do the hearde: for thou hast commytted aduoutie agaynst thy God: who is thy rewarde hast thou loved, more then all the corne floozes.

* Therfore shall they nomore enioye the corne floozes and wyne pyelles, and they: swete wyne shall fayle them. They wyl not dwell in the Lorde's lande: * but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypt, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure out no wyne for a bynne offering vnto the Lorde, neithers geue they hym they: sayne offerings: but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherein all they that eate them are defyled. For the bread that they haue such lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde. What wylt thou do then in the sollemn dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? Lo they shall get them a way for the destruction. Egypt shall receyue them, & Assyria shall bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe they: pleasant & goodes, and burres shall be in they: tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visytacyon is come, the dayes of recompensyng are at hande: And then shall Israel know, that they were deceyued by a prophet foolysch and mad, in a fransye, for the multitude of theyre iniquitye, God shall multiplye enemies agaynst the Ephraim hath made hym selfe a watchman of my God a prophet that is become a snare to do hurt in euery strete, and abhominacyon in the house of his God. They be gone to far, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore tyme * at Gaba: * therfore they: wyckednesse shall be remembred, and they: synnes punyshe.

I found Israel lyke grapes in the wyldernes and sawe they: fathers as the fyre * sygges in the toppe of the sygge tree. * But they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne awaye from me to that shameful ydoll, and are become as abhominable as they: ioners. Ephraim syneth lyke a byrde, so that they: gloze also: In somuch that they shall neyther beget, conceyue, nor beare chyldre. And though they byngne vp anye, yet wyl I make them chyldles amonge men. Yea, who shall come to them, when I departe from them. * Ephraim (as me thynke) is planted in welchynesse, lyke as Tyngus: but now we must be byngne her owne chyldren forth to the mansear.

O Lorde thou shalt geue them: what shalt thou geue them? geue them an vnfruteful wōbe and drye breastes. All their wyckednes is done at * Silgal, there do I abhor them. For the vngreatynesse of they: owne inuencions: I wyl bynne them oute of my house. I wyl louse them nomore, for all they: pynces are vnstapfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, they: roote is dried vp, so that they shall byngne nomore frute: yea, and though they byngne forth anye, yet wyl I slaye euen the best beloued frute of they: bodye. My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedynt vnto hym: therfore shall they go astray amonge the heathen.

The. x. Chapter.

Agaynst Israel and his ydolls.

I Israel was a goodly, & vine, but he hath brought forth vnyructable frute: yea, the more frute he had, the more altars he made: the more good I byd to their lāde the more stend they: shewed they to they: ymages. Their hert is deuided, therfore wyl they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe they: ymages, he shall destroye they: altars. Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge, for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the kynge do to vs? They commune together, and sweare vayne othes: they be confederat together, therfore groweth their punishment as swedes in the fojowes of the lāde. They 15 They that dwell in Samaria haue worshypped the calf of Bethaen: therefore shall the people moune ouer them. Yea, and the priestes also that in theyr welthyngelle reioyced wryth them. And why? it shall passe awaye from them. It shall be brought to the Assyrian, for a present vnto kyng Iereb. Ephraim shall receyue ful punishment. Israel shall be confounded for hyr own ymagynacions. Samaria with hir kyng shall vanyshe awaye as the scomme of the water. The hye palaces of Iuen wher Israel do synne shall be cast downe: the pylles and thornes shall growe vpon theyr alters. * Then shall they say to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylles, fall vpon vs.

16 O Israel, thou hast synned as * Sabaab dyd afore tyme wher they remayned: shoulde not þ battayle then come vpon þ wyched chyldren as well as vpon the Sabaonites? I wyll chasten them, euen after myne owne desyre: the people shall be gathered together ouer them, when I punish them for theyr great wychednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cow that is used to go to plowe, therefore I loured hym, and fell vpon hyr sayre necke: I haue Ephraim, Iuda plowed, & Jacob played the husbunde man. Howe vnto wyghtousnes, and reape the frutes of welldoing plowe vpon your freth lande, for it is tyme to seke the Lorde, tyl he come and rayne rightousnesse vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlynesse, ye haue reaped iniquitie, you haue eaten þ frute of lyes. Wherfore thou puttist thy confydence in thyne owne wayes, and ledest to the multitu de of thy worsthyes: there shall growe a sedicion amonge thy people. All thy stronge cytes shall be layde waste, euen as Salmanna was destroyed with his familiers thozow hym that was auenger of Arbel, in the daye of battayle, wher the mother perished with her chyldren. Eue so shall it go with you (O Bethel) because of poure malicious wychednes. Like as the morning goeth awaye, so shall the kyngde of Israel passe.

Cagaynd the vnythynesse of Israel.

1 When Israel was yonge I loured him * and called my sonne out of þ lande of Egypte. But the more they were called, the more they wet backe: of- feryng vnto ydols of Baal, and censyng ymages. I learned Ephraim to go, & bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me that wolde haue helped them. I led them wryth cozdes of frendshyp, and wryth bandes of loue. I was euen he that lapt the pocke vpon theyr neckes. * I gaue them sodder my selfe, þ they shuld not go agayne into Egypt. And now is Assur theyr kyng. For they wolde not turne vntome. Therefore shall the swerde begyn in theyr cytes: the foye that they haue layde vpon, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that because of theyr owne ymagynacions: and my people shall stande in a doubt wherher to turne them, for when the prophetes called them to the most blyss, not one yet wolde gyue hym hyr gloire.

2 What great thynges haue I gyuen the, O

Ephraim, howe sayethfully haue I defended the O Israel, haue I dealt with the as with * Adamas: O haue I entreated the lyke Seboim? No my hert is ootherwyle mynded. Yea, my mercye is to seruent: therefore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wyathful dyspleasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holp one in the myddest of the, though I came not within the cyte.

The Lorde roseth lyke a lyon, that they may folow hym: yea, * as a lyon roseth he, that they may be asfayde lyke the chyldren of the see, that they maye be scattered awaye from Egypte, as men scatter byrdes: and scayde awaye (as doues) vnto be from the Assyrians lande, and that because I wolde haue them tarpe at home, sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goeth about me wryth lyes, and the house of Israel dyssembleth. Only Iuda holdeth hym with God, and with the true holy thynges.

Cagaynd the wayne trauell of the people.

Ephraim is fed with ayze, and foloweth after the east wind: he is euer increasynge lyes and destruction. They be confederate wryth the Assyrian. * Theyr oyle is carped in to Egypte. The Lorde hath a courte to holde wryth Iuda, and wyll punish the Jacob. After theyre owne wayes, and accordynge to theyre owne inuencions, shall he recourence them. * He toke his brother by the heile, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in his strength he was stilled with God. He * stroue wryth the Aungell, and gat the victoie: so that he prayed and beseyed hym. * He founde hym at Bethel, and there he talketh wryth vs.

Yea, the Lord God of hostes, euen the Lord hym selfe remembred hym. Then tourne to the God, kepe mercye and equitye, and hope thyll in thy God. But thou art lyke the marchaunt, that hath a fals wayght in his hand, he hath a pleasure to occupie extorcion. Ephraim thynketh thus: * Tuly, I am ryche, I haue good ynough: in all my workes shall not one fault be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of þ land of Egypte, and sette the in thy tentes, and as in the hye feastes.

I haue spoken thozow the prophetes, and shewed byuerse visyons, and declared my selfe by the ministracyon of the prophetes. But at Gilead is the abhominacyon, they are fallen to vanite. At Gilgal they haue slayne oxen: as many heapes of stones as they had in theyr lande: for soowes, so many alters haue they made. * Iacob fled into the lande of Syria and Israel serued for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kepte shepe.

By a prophet the Lord brought them out of Egypt, and by a prophet he rescued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to dyspleasure thozow his abhominacions, therefore shall his blood be poured vpon hym selfe, and the Lord his God shall rewarde hym his blasphemys.

The xiii. Chapter.

The

The abominacion of Israel.

When Ephraim spake, the heathen trembled: and he was exalted among the Israelites, but he is come backe to Babil: therefore must he dye. And now they synne more and more: of they: they make them molten ymagines, after the ymaginacions of they: owne baying, that in very ydols and yet all is nothing, but the worke of the craftsman. Notwithstanding, they preache of the same to such as ther sacrificeth: whose wyl kille the calves, offere perfectly. Therefore they shall be as the morning cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth away, and lyke as duste that the wynde wynde taketh away from the flore, and as the smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde God, whiche broughte the out of the lande of Egypt: that thou shouldest know no God but me only, and that thou shouldest have no sauyour but onely me. I toke by thyngent dede of the in the wyldernesse, that by lande. But when they were well fedde, and had enough, they waxed pious, & forgot me: & therfore wyl I be unto them as a lyon, and as a leopard in the wayes to p Assyrians. I wyl come upon them, as a the beare that is robbed of her whelpes, and I wyl breake the stubburne hart of theys. There wyl I denoure them as a lyon yea, the wynde beastes that teare them.

O Israel, thyne iniquitie hath destroyed p but in me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy hynges now, that shuld helpe the in all thy cypresses? yea, and thy Judges, of whome thou saydest: give me a kynge and dynges: (well) I gave the a kynge in my wrath, and in my dyspleasure wyl I take hym from the agayne. The wychednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and dys synne lyeth byd. Therefore shall sorowes come upon hym, as upon a woman that trauplet. An undiscerete sonne is he, for he consydreth not that he shoulde not have bene vable to have endured in the tyme of dys bythe. Had not I defended hym from the graue, and deliuered hym from deathe.

O death, I wyl be thy death: O hel, I wyl be thy styng: yet can I be no comforte, for when he is now the goodlyest among the byrdien, & cast wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shall come downe from the wyldernesse, and dysp up his condyten, and dyspke up his welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shall be layde waste, and wher they are disobeyent unto theys god. They shall perishe with the swerde: theys chyliden shall be slayne, and their women great with chylde shall be rpye up.

The xiii Chapter.

The destruction of Samaria.

Israil, turne the howe unto p Lorde thy God: for thou hast taken a greafe falle thowowe thy wychednesse. Take these wordes wyth you when ye turne to the Lorde, and saye unto hym: O forgue vs all our synnes, receyue vs graciously, and ths wyl we offer the bullockes of our lypyes unto the: I shal be no more our helper, neyther wyl we ryde upon horses any more. As for the workes of our handes, we wyl no more call vps them: for it is thou that get our God: thou the well euer mercy unto the fatherlesse.

O (if they wolde do this) I shoulde deale theys lozes: yea with all my vertt wolde I loue them: so that my wrath shoulde cleane be turned away from them. Yea, I wolde be unto Israel as the dewe, and he shoulde growe as the lylpe and dys roots shoulde breake oute as Libanus. His bryanches shoulde sprede oute abode, and be as fayre as the olyue tree, and smell as Libanus. They that dwell vnder his shadowe shuld come agayne, and growe vp as the coigne: and flourish as the vyne. He shoulde haue as good a name as the wyne of Libanus.

O Ephraim, what haue I to do with ydols any more: I wyl graciously heare hym, and leade hym forth. I wyl be unto the as a grene fyre tree: upon me shalt thou fynde thy frute.

Whoso is wyse shall vnderstande this: and he that is ryghte enstruct, wyl regarde it. For p wayes of the Lorde are ryghteous, such as he godly wyl walke in them.

As for the wyched, they wyl stumbe therein.

The ende of the Prophecye of Osee.

The booke of the Prophecye Joel.

The first Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst the Iewes. He exhorteth the pious to prayer and fastyngs for the mysche that was comming at hande.

This is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phathuel. heare, O ye elders: poude this well, all ye that dwell in the lande: For euer there happened such a thyng in your dayes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tell your chyliden of it, and let them trowe it vnto theys chyliden, and so they to certifye your posteritye therof. Loke what the caterpyler hath left, that hath the greeshopper eaten vp: what the greeshopper left that hath the locust eaten vp: and what p lokust hath left, that hath the blaspyng consumed.

Make vp ye dyghardes, & wepe: moune al ye wyne suppers, because of your sweet wyne: for it shalbe taken away from your mouth yea a mighty and an innumerable people shal come vp into my lande: theys haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, & chaf bones lyke the lionesses. They shall make my vneyardes waste, they shal pil of the baches of my syttees, strepe them bare, cast them away, & make the bryanches wyte.

Make the mone as a virgyn both that gredeth her selfe wyth sacke, because of her bypbe-grame. For the meate and dyspke of the taken

Taken awaye from the house of the Lorde, and the prestes the Lorde's ministers shall mourne. The feide shall be wasted, the lande shall be in a miferable case: for the coine shall be destroyed, & the wyne shall come to confusyon, and the people utterly desolate. The husbandmen and the wyne gardeners shall loke pteouslye, and make lamentacion for the wheate, wine, and barley, and because the harvest upon the feide is so clene destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make greates mone, when the vineyardes and figgetrees be so utterly wasted. Pea al the pomegranates, palm trees, apple trees, and other trees of the feild shall wyther awaye. Thus the mery chere of the chyldren of men shall come to confusyon.

D Speake you, and make your mone, O ye prestes, mourne ye ministers of the altar go your waye in, and sleepe in sackcloth. O ye officers of my God: for the meat and drynke offering shall be taken awaye from the house of your God. Proclamye a fastyng, call the congregacon, gather the elders, * And al the inhabytours of the lande togither into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lord: alas alas, for this daye. And why: the day of the Lorde is at hand, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghty: he shall not the meates be taken awaye before our eyes, the myght also and ioye from the house of our God: The seed shall perishe in the ground, the garner shall lye waste, the flocks shall be broken downe, for the coine shall be destroyed. O what a spghynge make the kyne: the bullocken are in very euill lykynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famished awaye.

O Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness and the flambe hath burnt up al the trees of the feide. Pea, the wyld beasts crye also vnto the: for the water cypers are dried up, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wilderness.

Chapter ii.

The propheth of the commynge and cunctye of the messias. An exhortacion to moue them to conuerse.

Blowe out a trompet in Syon, and crye vpon my holpe hyll, that all suche as dwell in the lande, shall tremble at it. * For the daye of the Lorde cometh, and is harde at hande: a darke daye, a gloomyng daye, a cloudyng daye: pea and as a stormyng daye, lyke as the moornyng spreadeth out vpon the hylls. Namely, a great and myghty people: suche as haue not bene sence the begynnyng, neyther shall be after them for euermore: before him shall be a consumingng fyre, and behynde hym a burning flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him: but behynde hym shall it be a verie waste wilderness, and there is no man that shall escape him: They are to loke vpon lyke barbed horses, and runne lyke horsemen. They shalpe vpon the hylls as it were the sound of charrettes: as the flambe of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghty people redy to the battayle.

B The folke shall be afrayde of hym, all faces shall be as blacke as a potte: They shall run lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Every man in his going shall kepe his araye, and not go out of his path. There shall not one dryne an other, but each shall kepe his owne way. They shall breake in at the wyndowes and not be hurte. They shall come in to the cite, and runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vpon the houses, and appere in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shall quake before him: pea the heuens shall be moued. * The Sunne and the moone shall be darkened, and the starres shall withdraue theyr shynne. The Lorde shall the we his voyce before his dooste, for his doost is greates, stronge and myghty, to fulfyl his commaundement. This is that great and maruailous fearfull daye of the Lorde. * And who is able to abyde it?

Howe therfore sayth the Lorde: * Turne you vnto me with al your hartes, with fastyng, wepyng and mournynge: rent your hartes and not your clothes: Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, * for he is a gracious and merciful, longe suffryng, and of great compassion: and ready to pardon wyckednesse: Then (no doubte) he also shall turne and forgyue, & after his chaunceyng he shall let your encrease remayne for meate and drynke offeringes vnto the Lorde your God.

* Blow out with the trompet in Syon, pso. clapme a fastyng, call the congregacon, and gather the people togither: warne the congregacon, gather the elders, byng the chyldren and suchynges togither. Lette the bypdegrome go forth of his chambze, and shalpe out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lorde betwixt the porche and the altar wepyng, and sayinge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people, let not thy heritage be brought to such confusyon, lest the heathen be lordes therof.

* Wherfore shulde they lape amonge the heathen: where is nowe theyr God?

Then shall the Lorde be glorified ouer his land and spare his people: pea, the Lorde shall answer and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wyl sende you coine, wyne, and oyle, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I wylle nomoze agayne you ouer, to be a reppose amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall dryue hym farre from you: and shalpe hym out into a drye & waste lande, his face towarde the east see, and his backe partes towarde the westmost see: The sinke of hym shall goo vp, and his fylthy corruptyon shall fall vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O lande) but be glad, and reioyce: for the Lorde wylle do greates thynges. Be not ye afrayde neyther (O ye beasts of the feide) for the pastures shall be grene, and the trees shall beare theyr frute: the figgetrees and vineyardes shall gyue theyr encrease.

Be glad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) and reioyce in the Lorde your God, for he hath giuen you a teacher of righteousness: * and he it is that shall sende you downe shoures of rayne, earlye and late in the first moneth: so that the garneres shall be ful of coine, and the prestes plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeares that the grethop

Thus sayeth the Lord: for the and foure wychehednesses of y^e Damascus, I wyll not spare her: because they haue thysed Galaad wth yon slayes. But I wyll sende a fyre into y^e house of Hazael, the same shall consume y^e palaces of Benadab. Thus wyll I breake y^e barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from the felde of Auen: And him that holdeth the scepter out of y^e pleasaunte house: so that the people shall be dyscenn out of saye Siria: sayth the Lord. sayeth the Lorde. For thre and foure wickednesses of * Gaza, I wyll not spare her, because they make the prisoners yet more captyue, and haue dyuyn them into the lande of Edom. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into the walles of Gaza, which shall deuoure her houses. I wyll roote out them that dwell at Asdod, and hym that holdeth the sceptre of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnant of the Philistines shall perishe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. For thre and foure wickednesses of the ciue of * Tyre, I wyll not spare her: because they haue encreased the captiuitie of the Edomites, and haue not remembered the * brotherly conuennunt. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into the walles of Tyre, that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayeth the Lorde. For thre and foure wickednesses of * Edom I wyll not spare hym, because he persecuted his brother with sword, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very long; and so kept indignacion alway by hym. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into Doeman, which shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of the children of * Ammon, I wil not spare them: because they cryt by a womē great with chyld in Galaad, to make the borders of the lande the wyder. Therfore I wyl hynde a fyre in the walles of Rabboth, that shall consume her palaces: with a great crye, in the dape of battaile, in tempest and in the dape of storme, so that they: hyng shall go into captiuitie, he and his wyues together, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

¶ Agayne Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I wyll not spare hym: because he burnt the bones of the kynge of Edom to ashes.

Therfore, wyl I send a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carsoth: so that Moab shall perishe with noyse, and the sounde of a shawme. I wyll roote out the Judge from amonge them, and slaye all his wyues with hym. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre wickednesses of * Iuda I wyll not spare hym: because he hath cast asyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundmentes: for why? they wolde nedes be discryued with the lyes that they: for: fathers folowed. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into Iuda, whiche shall consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I wyll not spare hym, because he hath sold the rpyghtous for moneye, and the poore for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens heedes, in the dust of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meake. The son and the father go to a harlot, to dishonour my holy name, they lye besyde euery aultare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in a house of they: gods they dyvne the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amoytes * before them, that was as hye as the cedars, as strong as the oaks: notwithstanding I destroyed his fruite from aboue, and his roote from vnder. * Agayne, I brought you out of the lande of Egypt, and led you fourty yeres thow the wyldernes, that ye myght haue the Amoytes Landes in possyson. I trayled vpon prophetes amonge your chyldren, and abstayners amonge your yonge men. Is it not so, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lorde? But ye gaue y abstayners wyne to dyvne: yea, ye commaunded the prophetes saying: Prophecy not. Behold, I wyll crash you in sonde, lyke as a waene crasheth that is full of sheaves, so that the swyze shall not escape, neyther the stronger be able to do anye thyng: no, the Gyante shall not saue hym owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, and the swyfe of fore shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as many of stomake as a graunt, shall in that dape be fayne to runne his way naked, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The .iii. Chapter.

¶ The reproche the house of Israel of wychednes.

¶ Hear, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldren of Israel) namely vnto all the tribes whome I brought out of Egypt, and sayde: * you onely haue I excepted from all the generacions of the earth: therfore I wyl vspite you in al your wickednesses. Way wayne walke togyther except they be agreed amonge them selues. * Doeth a lyon roze in the wood except he haue a praye? Or cryeth a Lyons whelp oute of his denne, except he haue gotten somethyng? Doeth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the erth where no fouler is. Taketh a man his snare vpon the grounde afore he catche somwhat? Crye they out Alarm with a trompet in the cite, and the people not afrayed? Cometh there anye plage in a cite, without it be the Lordes doinge? How doth the Lorde God no maner of thyng, but he telleth his secret before vnto his seruantes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyll not be afrayed? Dringe then that the Lord God him selfe speaketh, who wyll not prophete.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Thys lande shall be troubled and besyged rounde aboute, thy strength shall be pluckt from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayeth the Lorde, lyke as an herde man taketh two legges, or a peece of an eare oute of the Lyons mouth: Turne so the chyldren of Israel (that dwell in Samaria) vponge they: couches in the coyners, they: beddes at Damascus, shall be place a dape.

* Heare, and heare receyde in the house of Jacob, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes (that dwyn) I begynne to vspite the wychednes of Israel, I wyl vspite the aultares at Berdel also: so that the hoynes of the aultares shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde. wickedneses of Israel, I wyl not spare hym, because he hath solde the ryghteous for monye, and the poxe for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens beddes, in the dust of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meake. The son and the father go to y harlot, to dishonour my holy name, they lve bryde eury aultare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in y house of theyr gods they dylike the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Idolpetyre before them, that was as hye as the cedertrees, & as strong as the oke: notwithstanding I destroyed his trute from aboute, and his roote from vnder. *Agayne, I broughte you out of the lande of Egypt, and led you fourty yeres thorow the wyldernes, that ye myght haue the Amoytes landes in possesion. I rayled vpon prophetes amonge your chyliden, and abstayners amonge your ponge men. Is it not so. O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lorde. *But ye gaue y abstainers wyne to dymke: yea, ye chymainede the prophetes saying: Prophecy not. Behold, I wyl crafte you in sondre, lyke as a waene crafteth that is full of heaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neyther the stronge be able to do anye thyng: no, the Spauente shall not saue hym out of lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, and the swyft of foot shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as many of sto-make as a gyant, shall in that dape be layne to tunne his way naked, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The iii. Chapter.

¶ The reproche of the house of Israel of wickednes.

Hear, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chyliden of Israel) namely vnto all the tribes whome I brought out of Egypt, and sayde: *you onely haue I excepted from all the generacions of the earth: therfore I wyl vspite you in al your wic-kedneses. Day & nyght walke togyther except they be agreed amonge them selues. *Doeth a lyon roze in the wood except he haue a praye? O cryeth a Lyons whelp out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten somethyng: Doeth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the erth where no fouler is. Taketh a man his snare vpon the grounde afore he catche somwhat? Crye they out Alarum with y trumpet in the cite, and the people not afrayed?
Commeth there any plage in a cite, without it be the Lordes doinge? Now doth the Lorde God no maner of thyng, but he tellet his secret before vnto his seruantes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyl not be afrayed? Scinge then that the Lord God him selfe speaketh, who wyl not prophecy.

Dreache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you togyther vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye le great murder and violent op-pressyon amonge them, for why? they regarde not the thyng that is right, sayth the Lorde: they gather togyther euill gotten goodes, and laye vpon robberye in theyr houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God. Thys lande shall be troubled and besyged rounde about, the strength shall be pluckt from the, and the palaces robbed. Thus sayth the Lorde, lyke as an herdeman taketh y wolegges, or a pece of an eare out of the Lyons mouth: Euen so the chyliden of Israel (that dwell in Samaria) hauynge theyr couches in the corner, theyr beddes at Damascus, shall be pluckt a waye.

*Heare, and beare recozde in the house of Jacob (sayth the Lorde God of hostes) that whē I begynne to vspite the wickednesse of Israel, I wyl vspite the aultares at Bethel also: so that the hornes of the aultare shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde.

The Prophecie

As for the wynter house and sommer house, I wyll synne them downe: and the houses of pury: pea, and many other houses shall perishe, & be destroyed, sayth the Lorde.

The.iii. Chapter.

As against the gateways of Samaria.

Heare this worde ye sayt hym, that be upon the hill of Samaria: ye that do poyse men wrong, and oppresse the neyghbour, ye that saye to your lordes: bypunge bypther, let vs bypunge. Therfore, the Lorde hath sworn by his holynesse. The dayes shall come vpon you, that the enemyes shall carry you away in shyppes, and your posteritie shall be carryed away vpon fshers hokes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after an other, euen the kyngeys palace shall you ouerthrow, to make a way to escape, sayth the Lorde.

Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngreatness: & haue encreased your synnes at Silgal: ye brought your sacrifices in the moynynge, & your trothes vnto the thyrde daye. Ye made a thank-offryng of leuen, ye promysed fcewyl offrynges, and ppeclaymed them. Suche lust had ye. O ye chyldren of Israel, sayth the Lorde God. Therfore haue I gyuen you ydle teeth in all youre cypres, and scarcenesse of byred in all your palaces: yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. When there were but thre monethes vnto this daye, I withhelde the rayne from you: pea, I rayned vpon one cite: and not vpon an other, one peece of ground was moistured wth rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Therfore two: yea thre cities came vnto one, to bypunge water: but they were not satisfied, yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde.

I haue smitten you with drought & blastynge and loke howe manye orchardes, bynepardes, fyg trees and olyue trees ye had: the caterpyller hath eaten them vp. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Restelence haue I set amonge you, as I byd in Egypte: your poyge men haue I slayne wth the swerde, and caused your houses to be taken captiue: I made synnyng saunoure of youre tentes, to come vp vnto your nostrils. Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowne, as I ouerthrowe Sodome and Gomorre: so ye were as a bynde plucke oute of the fyre. Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde.

Therfore, thus wyl I handle the agayne, O Israel: pea, euen thus wyl I handle the. Make ye redy then to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the moystayns, he ordeyneth the wynde he the wetherman what he is aboute to do: he maketh the moynynge and the darkenesse, he treadeth vpon the by places of the earth: the Lorde God of hostes is his name.

The.v. Chapter.

As against the captiue of Israel.

Heare this worde, O ye house of Israel, & why: I must make this more foz you. The virgin Israel shall fall, & neuer ryse vp agayne: she shall be cast downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For this sayth the Lorde God. Where as there dwelt a thousande in one cytie: there shall be left scarce an hundred therein: and where there dwelt an. C. there shall scarce ten be left in the house of Israel. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel: come not at Silgal, and go not to Bersaba: For Silgal shall be carryed awaye captiue, and Bethel shall come to nought. Seke the Lorde, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Ioseph be byent with fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to queneche Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to waimewood, and cast downe rpyghtousnesse vnto the grounde: & ye forsake the Lorde that maketh the. vii. starres, & the Moons, that turneth the nyght into daye, & of the daye he maketh darkenesse. & ye collect the waters of the see, and pouresth them out vpon the playne grounde: & Lorde is his name. Ye rayseth destruction vpon the myghty people, and bypunge downe the stronge holde. But they owe hym euyl wyl: that reponeth them openly: & whoso telletth them the playn trueth, they abhorre him. For so much then as ye oppresse the poore, & rob him of his best sustenancer: & therfore where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwel in them. Maruelous pleasant vyngardes shall you plant, but the wyne of them shall ye not bypunge: and why: for the multitude of your wickednesse & your stoute synnes, I know the rpyght well. Enemyes are ye of the rpyghtous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therfore the wyle must now be sayne to holde his tyme, so wyched a tyme is it.

Seke after the thyng that is good, and not euyl, so shall ye lyue: pea: the Lorde God of hostes shall be with you, accordyng to your owne desyre. & hate the euyl, and loue the good: spt vp right agayne in the porte: & (no doubt) the Lorde God of hostes shall be merciful vnto the remnant of Ioseph. Pfnor sayth the Lorde God of hostes: they shall be mourning in al stretes: pea, they shall say in euery strete: alas, alas. They shall cal the husbandman to lamentation, & such as can mourne to mournyng. In al vnpardes there shall be synnesse, for I wyll come amonge you, sayth the Lorde. Wo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lorde. Wherefore wolde ye haue it? As for the daye of the Lorde, it shall be darke and not clere.

Yea, lyke as when a man runneth from a lyon and a beere meteth meteth hym: or when he cometh into the house, and leanteth his hande vpon the wall, a serpente byteth hym. So shall not the daye of the Lorde be darke: and not clere: shall it not be cloudye, and no wyne in it? I hate and abhorre your holy dayes, and where as ye cense me when ye come togyther, I wyll not accept it. And though ye offer me burnt offrynges & meat offrynges, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for youre sacre thanke offrynges, I wyll not looke vpon them: I wape wth that noyse of the songes. I wyll not heare the playes of mulche: but let that equitie flowe as water, and rpyghtousnesse as a myghty streame. O ye house of Israel, & gaue ye me offrynges and sacrificy, as those forty yeres longe in the wylbernesse per haue ye set up tabernacles to pour * Moloch and ymages of your ydolles: yea, and the statue of your god Rempha, figures whiche ye made to worship them. Therefore wyl I cause you to be carped a waye beyonde Damascus, sayth the Lorde, whose name is the God of hostes.

euen ye that sit in the steele of wylfulness, ye lye vpon beddes of purpyle, and vse youre wantonnesse vpon your couches: ye that cate the best lambes of the flock, and the fattest calves of the zone: ye that synge to the lute, and in playng of instruments: compare your selues vnto * Da-uid: ye that drynke wyne out of goblettes, and anoynt your selues with f best oyle, but no man is fory for Iosephs hurt. Therefore now shal ye be the fyst of them, & shal be led away captiue

Of the captiuitie of Israel and Iona.

When the Lorde God shewed me such a vision, behold, there stode one f made as grethoppers, euen when the coyne was moeyng forth after the kyng had clypte hys shepe. Nowe when they vnderstode to cate vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be merciful

I beseeche the, who shulde elles helpe vp Jacob is brought so lowe. So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: well it shal not be.
Agayne, the Lorde shewed me this vision: behold, the Lorde God called the fye to punishe withal, and it denoued the great depe: yea, it co-sumed a parte atrace. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, holde thynne hande: for who shulde els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe: So the Lorde was merciful therein, and the Lorde God sayde: well, it shal not be. Whereouer he shewed me this vision: behold, the Lorde stode vpon a playsted wall, and a masons trowell in his hande.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Amos, what seest thou, I answered, a masons trowell. Then sayd the Lorde: behold, I wyl laye the trowell amonge my people of Israel, and wyl nomore ouerse them: but the hyschaps of Isaac must be layde waste, and the churche of Israel made desolate, * and for as f house of Jeroboam, I wyl stande vp agaynst it with the swerde. Vpon this sent Amasiah the priest to Berhel vnto Jeroboam the kyng of Israel, saying: * Amos makerh the house of Israel to reuell agaynst the: f land can not a way with his wordes. For Amos sayth: Jeroboam shal dye with the swerde, and Israel shal be led away captiue out of theyr owne lande. And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence: thou that canst se so wel: & fye into the lande of Iuda, get the there thy luyng & prophecy there: & prophecy nomore at Berhel, for it is the kynges chappell, & the kynges court.

Amos answered, and sayde to Amasiah. As but a keeper of cattell. Now as I was breakyng downe mulberryes, and goinge after the cattell, the Lorde toke me, and sayde vnto me: So thy waye, and prophecy vnto my people of Israel.

And therfore heare thou now the worde of the Lorde. Thou sayest: prophecy not agaynst Israel, and speake nothing agaynst the house of Isaac: wherfore thus sayth f Lorde. Thy wyfe shal be despyled in the ctyte, thy sonnes and daughter shal be slayne with the swerde, & thy lande shal be measured ouer with the lyne. Thou thy selfe we may get the poore vnder vs by the depe: money, and the neddy also for thors: yea, let vs sell þ chaffe for coine. The Lord hath sworn agaynst the pyde of Jacob: these wozhen of theys wyl I neuer forget. Shall not the lande tremble, and all they that dwell therein, mourne for this?

Shall not they destruction come vpon them, lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer them as þ floude of Egypte. At the same tyme (sayth the Lord God) I shall cause the sunne to go downe at noone: and the lande to be darke in the clere daye. Your hye feastes wyl I turne to so: owe and your songes to mourning: I wyl bying salt cloth vpon all backes, and baldnesse vpon euery head: yea, suche a mourning wyl I sende them as is made vpon an only begotten sonne: and they shall haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lord God) that I shall send an hungre into the earth, not the hungre of bread, nor the thyrst of water: but an hungre to heare the woide of the Lord, so that they shall go from the one see to the other sea from the north vnto the east, running about to seke the woide of the Lord, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the saye virgines and the younge men perishe for thyrst: yea, euen they that swore in the execrable caise of Samaria: I sayd as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan: and as truly as thy God lyueth at Bersaba. These shall fall and neuer ryse vp agayne.

The ix Chapter.

Thy threatenynge agaynst Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

I sawe the Lord standyng vpon the aulfare, and he sayde: Smyte the doze cheke, that þ posses may make wyth al. For their conetousnes shall fall vpon all they beedes, and they posses ryche shall be slayne with the swerde. They shall not slye awayne, there shall not one of them escape nor be deliuered. Though they were buryed in þ hell, my hande shall fetch them from thence though they clyme vp to heauen: yet shall I cast them downe: though they hyde them selues vnder the toppe of Carmel, yet shall I seke them oute, and bying them from thence: though they clype downe from my syght into the depe of y see, I shall comaunde the serpent, euen there to byte them.
If they go a way befoze they enemyes into cap-tivitye, then shall I comaunde the swerde, there to slaye them. Thus wyl I set myne eyes vpon them: for they haue, and not for they welth.

For when the Lord God of hostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awayne, and all they that dwell therein, must nedes mourne: And why? they destruction shall aryse as euery streame, & runne ouer them, as the floude in Egypte. He that hath his dwelling in heauē, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earth. He that calleth the waters as the see, and pouerth them oute vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lord. O ye chylidren of Israel, are ye not vnto me, euen as the Syrians, sayth þ Lord: haue not I brought Israel out of the lande of Egypte? The Phy-listynes from Capthor: and the Syrians from Ctir: behold, the eyes of the Lord are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it cleane out of the earth. Neuer theles, I wyl not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, sayth the Lord.

For lo, thus I promysse, though I lyfte the house of Israel among al nacions (lyke as they vse to lyft in a lyue) yet shall not þ smallest gra-uell stone fall vpon the earth. But al the wyched doers of my people, that saye: Cushe, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastily vpon vs: those shall perishe with the swerde. At that tyme wyl I buyde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen downe, and hedge vp bys gappes, and loke what is broken, I shall repayre it: yea, I shall buyde it vp agayne, as it was afoze tyme that they maye possesse the remnaunt of Edom: yea, and all suche people as call vpon my name,

Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lord) that the plowman shall ouertake the mower, & treader of grapes him that soweth seede. The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and the hylls shall be fruteful, and I wyl turne the cap-tivitye of my people of Israel: they shall repayre the waste cities and haue them in possessio, they shall plant vyngardes, and dzyph the wyne tyen of, they shall make gardens, and enioye the fru-tes of them. And I wyl plant them vpon they own grounde, so that I wyl neuer roote them out agayne from they lande which I haue gyuen them, sayth the Lord thy God.

The booke of the

Prophete Jonas.

The fyrst Chapter

Of the flight of Jonas when he was sent to preache.
A tempest aperyth and carryth hym in the see the lxxvii discomposure.

the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas the sone of Amithay, saying: Arise, and get thee to Ninive that great cite, and preach vnto them, how that they, wyckednes is come vpon befoze me. And Jonas made hym redy to fflye vnto Tharsis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Joppa: where he founde a shyp readye for to go vnto Tharsis, so he payde his fare, and went aboarde, & he myght go with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde durled a greate wynde into the see, and there was a myghty tempest in the see, so that the shyp was in leape of goynge in peces. Then the maryners were afraid: and cryed euery man vnto his God: and the goddes that were in the shyp, they cast into the see, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gatte hym vnder the baches, where he layed hym downe and slombred.

So the master of the shyp came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: why slombrest thou? All call vpon thy Lode: Of God (happelye) wyllye vpon vs, that we perishe not. And they sayde one to another: come, lette vs caste lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, & the lot fell vpon Jonas. Then sayde they vnto hym: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupation? whence comest thou? of what nation? what costlie man art thou? and of what nation? he answered them: I am an E-bryte, and I feare the Lord God of heauyn, which made both the see and the drye lande. Then were the men exceedinglye afraid, and sayde vnto hym: why dydest thou? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had tolde them) and sayd mozeouer vnto him what shall we do vnto the, that thou maye scape from troubling vs? (for the see wroughte & was troubled) he answered them: take me, and cast me into the see, so shall it let you be in rest, for I wote it is for my sake: that this greate tempest is come vpon you.

Nevertheless, the men assayed withrowynge to bynge the shyppe to lande: but it wold not be, because the see wroughte so: and was so trou-bious agaynst them. Wherefoze they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde let vs not perishe for this mannes death, neyther laye thou innocent blood vnto our charge: for thou, O Lorde hast done euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas and cast hym into the see, and the see left ragynge. And the men feared the Lorde exceedinglye, doing sacrifices and making vowe vnto the Lorde.

swallowe vs, so & ye shal be as though ye had neuer ben. But vpon the mount Sion shal the sal-uation be, and holmes, these shal be holy, and the house of Jacob shall possesse: euen those. * I had them selues afoze in possesyon. Mozeouer, the house of Jacob shal be a foye, the house of Ioseph a flame, and the house of Elau shal be strawe which they shal bynde and consume, so that nothyng shal be left of the house of Elau, the Lord hym selfe hath sayd it. They of the fourth shal haue the mount of Elau in possesyon: and loke what lieth vpon the ground, & what & what shal haue, the playne felde shal Ephraim & Samaria pos-sesse: & the mostaynes of Galaad shall Ben Jamin haue: And this doost shal be the chyldren of Israel prisoners. Howe what followeth from Canaan vnto zereph, and Sepharad, & shal be vnder the subiection of Ierusalem, & the crytes of the fourth shal render it. Thus theyr escape vpon the byll of Syon, shall go vnto punyshe the mounte of Elau, & the kyngdome shal be the Lordes.

The Prophecye

But the Lorde prepared a great fyw, to swallowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fyw thre dayes, and thre nightes: And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God, out of the fyshes belly, and sayd: * In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me out of the belly of hell, I cryed, & thou heardest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the see, and fflou- den compassed me about: yea, all * the waues and rowles of water went ouer me, I thought that I had ben cast away out of thy sight: But I wil yet agayne loke towards thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye a bounte me, & the wordes deere wyapte about myne heed. I went downe to the botome of ffloues, & was barred in with earth for euer. But f, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my soule saynted within me, I thought vpon the Lorde: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne va- nitytes, wyl forsake his mercede. But I wyl do the sacrifice with the voyce of thanksgyving, and wyl pay that that I haue vowed, for whye saluacyon cometh of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysher, and it caste oute Jonas a- gayne vpon the drye lande.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninus. The repentance of the kynge of Ninus.

When came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * vp & get the to Ninus that grete cytie, and preache vnto them the preachinge, whych I haue the. So Jonas arose and went to Ninus at the Lordes commaundement. Ninus was a grete cytie vnto God, namelye of thre dayes iourney. And Jonas went to, and entred into the cytie: euen a dayes iourneye, and cryed, sayinge: There are yet fourty dayes, and then shall Ninus be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninus beleued God, & proclaimed fastyng, and arayed them selues in sackcloth, as well the great as ffloues of them. And the tidings came vnto the kynge of Ninus, which rose out of dys- seate, and byd his apparell of, and put on sack- cloth, and sat hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed and commaunded in Ninus, by the auctorite of the kynge and his lordes, say- inge: * se that neyther man, nor beaste, ox, or shepe taste ought at all: & that they neyther fede nor drynke water: but put on sackcloth both ma- & beast: & crye mightily vnto God: * yea, se that every man turne from his euill waye, and from the wyckednesse that he hath in hande.

Who can tell / God maye turne, and repent, & cease from his seuerer wyrd, that we perishe not. And when God sawe they woked, howe they turned from theyr wicked wayes: * he repented on the euill, wherby he sayde he wolde do vnto them, and byd it not.

Herfor Jonas was soze discontent, & angry. And he prayed vnto ffloues and said: O Lorde, was not this my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my collyre / therfor I hausted rather to dye vnto Charys. * For I know wel ynough, that thou arte a mercifull God, full of compassion, long suffering, & of great kyndnes, and repentest when thou wouldest take punish- ment: And nowe * O Lorde, take my lyfe from me (I beseech the) for I had rather dye then liue. Then sayd the Lorde: art thou so angry / And Jonas gat hym out of the cytie, and sat downe on the east syde thereof: & there made him a boorth and sat vnder it in the shadowe, tyll he myght se what shoulde chaunce vnto the cytie.

And the Lorde God prepared a wyld byne, whych sprang vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his heed, to deliuer him out of his payne. And Jonas was exceeding glad of the wyld byne. But vpon the next morowe a- gaynst the spryng of the dape, the Lorde ordey- ned a worme, whych smote the wyld byne, so that it withered awaye. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruēt east wynde: and the sunne better ouer the heed of Jonas, that he saynted agayne, and wished vnto his soule that he myght dye, & sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to liue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Arte thou so angry for the wyld byne / And he sayd yea, very angry am I, euen vnto the death. And the Lorde sayd: ffloues compassion vpon a wyld byne, wher on thou bestowest: no labour: nor madest it growe, whych sprang vp in one night, and perished in an other: And shouldest thou haue compassion vpon Ninus that grete cytie, wherein there are about an hundred and .xx. The first Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria by the sy- rians.

This is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Michas the Moza- site in the dayes of * Iordan: & I- has and * Ieremias hynges of Iuda: which was shewed him vpon Samaria and Ierusalem.

* heare all ye people, marke this well O earth, and all that therein is. yea, the Lorde God hym selfe be wytnes amonge you, euen the Lorde fro his holy temple. For wher * behold: ffloues shal go out of his place, & come downe, & tread vpon the hye thynges of Ierusalem. The mountayns shal consume vnder him, and the valleyes shal cleane asondre: lyke as was consumed at the fyre, & as the waters run downeward. And al this shal be for the wyckednes of Iacob, & the synnes of the house of Israel. But what is ffloues wickednes of Iacob /

Job, Is not Samaria which is his place of Juda Is not Jerusalem. Therefore I will make Samaria an heape of stones in his place, to laie a house the vineyard: her stones shall I cast into the valley, and discover her foundations. All her images shall be broken downe, and all her garmentes shall be brent in the fire, yea all her idols will I destroy: for why? they are gathered out of the hyze of an whoze and into an whozes hyze that they be turned agai, wherfore I will moune and make lamentation, here and nahed wyl I go: I must moune her the dragons and take sorowe: as the Eryches, for the yze wounde is past remedy. And why, It is come into Juda, and hath touched the porte of my people at Jerusalem already. Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceyue it.

Thou at Batafria, welter thy selfe in the dust and ashes. Thou that dwellest at Sappir, get thence with shame. The proude that boast nomozes for very sorowe: and why, her neygh-bour shall take from her what she hath. The re-belious citye hopeth that it shall not be so euell but for al that the plague shall come from the Lord ruen into the porte of Jerusalem. The greates noise of the charrettes shall cease, that dwell at Lachis, which is an occasyon of the sinne of the daughter of Sion, for in the came up the widednes of Israel. Per, she sente her courtiers into the lande of Seth. The houses of Ipes wyl dyscepe the kynnes of Israel. And as for the thou that dwellest at Mozaia, I shall bying a possessioner vpon the, and the plague of Israel shall reache vnto Odulla. Make the bald, and haue because of thy tender chyldren: Make the cleane balde as an Eagle, for they shall be carped away captiue from the.

The seconde Chapter.

Agaynst the synners agaynst the synfull people.

Who vnto them, I magyn to be harme and deuyse vngacionnes vpon theire beddes, to perforce me it in the clere day for their power is agaynst god. When they couet to haue lande, they take it by vo-lence, they rob men of theire houses. Thus they oppress a man for his house, and euery man for his heritage. Therefore thus sayth the Lord: Beholde against this householde haue I deu-sed a plague, wherout ye shall not plucke youre neches: Ye shall nomoze goo so proude, for it wyl be a very long tyme. In that daye shall this terme be used, and a mourning shall be made ouer you on this maner: We be vnto desolate, the porcion of my people is translated. When wyl be parte vnto vs the lande, he hath taken fro vs. Neuertheless, there shall be no man to deuide the thy porcion in the congregacion of the Lord. Tuthe, holde your tounge (saye they) It shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion, sayth the house of Jacob. Is the spirit of the Lord so cleane awaye: or is he so minded? Truth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto them that lyue right: but my people doth the contrary, therfore must I take part agaynst the for they take away both cote and cloke from the simple. Ye haue turned your selues to fight: the wome of my people haue ye shut out from their good houses, and taken awaye myne excellent gif-tes from theire chyldren. Up, get you hence for here shall ye haue no rest. Because of theire ydolatry, they are corrupte, and shall miserably perishe.

If I were a fleshy fellow, and a preacher of lies and tolde them that they myght sye bybbyng a hollyng, and be dyonken. What were a proper for this people. But I wyl gather thei derre Jacob, and distur the remnant of Israel altogether. I shall cary them one by another as a flock in the folde, and as the cattel in thei stals, that they maye be dysquetyed of other men. Who so breaketh the gappe, he shall go before. They shall break the yze porte, and go in and out at it. The kyng shall go before them, and the Lord shall be vpon the heade of them.

Agaynst the synners of synners, and false prophetes.

As I sayde beate, O ye heades of the house of Jacob, and ye leaders of the house of Israel. Whyd not ye knowe, what were lawfull and ryght? But ye hate the good, and loue the euell: ye plucke of mens shines, and the flesh from theire bones, ye eate the flesh of my people, and flaye of theire: shyn: ye breake theire bones, ye chop them in peeces as it were in to a cauldron, and as flesh into a pot. Now tyme shall come, that when they cal vnto the Lord he shall not heare the, but hyde his face from the because that they owe theire owne ymagynacions, they haue delt so wychedlye.

And as concerning the prophetes, I disceane my people, thus the Lord sayth agaynst them.
When they haue any thing to bite vpon, then they preach that al shall be wel, but yf a man put not some thing into theire mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst hym. Therefore your visyon shall be turned to night, and your prophesying to darkenesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those prophetes, and the daye shall be darke vnto the.
Then shall the visyon seeme to be ashamed, and the soyphaiers confounded: yee, they shall be shame al the packe of the, to stop theire mouthes for they haue not Goddes worde. As for me I am full of strengthe, and of the spirite of the Lord ful of iud-gement and boldnes, to shewe the house of Jacob theire wickednes, and the house of Israel their line.

O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye Judges of the house of Israel, ye that abhorre the thyng that is lawfull, and wiest asyde the thyng that is streyght: Ye that buyde by shon with bloude, and Jerusalem with doyng wronge. O ye Judges ye geue sentence for gif-tes. O ye prestes, ye teach for lucre. O ye prophetes ye prophesy for mony. Yet wil they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lord amonge vs? Tuthe there, can no misfortune happen vs. Therefore shall shon (for your sakes) be plowed like a felde: Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shall be turned to an hye wode.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the calling of the Gentys, and conuersion of the Jewes.

O. O. iii.

In the latter dayes it will come to passe, that the hyl of the Lordes house shall be set up hyer then any moztaine or hilles: Pe the people that prece vnto it, and the multitude of the Gentiles that shall them thither, sayng: Come, let vs go vnto the hyl of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye teache vs his wayes, and we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion: and the worde of God from Ierusalem, and shall geue sentence among the multitude of the heathen, and resourne the people of farre countreys: so that of thei: sweares they shall make ploughe shares, and spythes of theyre speeres.

One people shall not lyfte vp a sworde agaynst a nother: Pe, they shall nomoze learne to fyght: but every man shall sit vnder his vyne parde and vnder his figtre, and no man to frai hym awaye: for the mouth of the Lord of hostes hath spoken it. Therfore where as all people haue walked euery man in the name of his owne God, we wyl walke in the name of our God for euer and euer. At the same tyme, sayth the Lord wyl I gather vp the lame and the out castes, & suche as I haue chastened, and wyl geue yllue vnto the lame, and make of the outcasts a great people: and the Lord hym selfe shall be theyre kynge vpon the mount Sion, from thys tyme forth for euermore.

And vnto the O thou tower of Sion, thou stronge holde of the daughter Sion, vnto the shall it come euen the lordshipp and kyngdome of the daughter Ierusalem. Why then art thou nowe so hupe: is there no kynge in the: are thy counsellors a waye that thou art so pained, as a woman in her traualle: And now, O thou daughter Sion, be soyy, let it greue the as a wife labouryng with childe: for nowe must thou get the out of the Cypre, and dwell vpon the playne fride: Pe, vnto Babylon shalt thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered, and there the Lord shall loose the from the hande of thyne enemies.

Nowe also are there many people gathered together agaynst the sayng: what, Sion is cursed, we shall set our lust vpon her. But they know not the thoughtes of the Lord, they vnderstande not his counsaile, that shall gather them together as the sheues in sheare. Therfore get the vp, O thou daughter Sion, and chuse the out the come: For I wyl make thy borne yon: and thy clauyes shall be, that thou mayst grind many people: they: goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lord, and they: substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The vi. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Ierusalem.

After that shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, O robbers daughter: they shall laye siege agaynst vs, & snyte the widge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. And thou bethleem Ephrata, arte lytle amonge the thousandes of Iuda, Out of the shall come vnto me which shall be the gouerner in Israel, whose outgoyng hath bene from the beginning and from euerylastyng In the meane while he plageth them for a frash vntyll the tyme that they which shall beare ydow bozine: then shall the remnaunt of his bre that be converted vnto the chyldren of Israel. he shall stand fast, and geue lode in the strength of the Lord, and in the victorie of the name of the Lord his God, and when they be converted, he shall magnified vnto the surest parte of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace, so that the Assirya, may come into your lande, and tread in your houses. We shall byng vp. vii. shepherdes and viii. prynces vpon them: these shall subdue the land of Assir with the sword, and a lande of Amrod with they: naked weapons. Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assiran, when he cometh with our land & setteth his fore withyn our borders.

And the remnaunt of Jacob shall be amonge the multitude of people, as the de we of the Lord and as the dyops vpon a grasse, that tarreth for no man and wayeth of no body. Pe, the residue of Jacob shall be amonge the Gentyls, & the multitude of people, as the lyon amonge the brastres of the wood and as the lyons whelp amonge a floche of shepe, which when he goeth forth wyl treadeth downe, treadeth in pces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne hand shall lyft vp vpon thyne enemies, and all thyne aduersaries shall perishe. The tyme shall come also, sayth the Lord, that I wyl take thine hozes from the, & destroye thy charets, I wil breake downe the cietyes of thy lande, and ouerthrowe al thy stronge holdes. Al witchcraftes wyl I rote out of thine hande, there shall no mo soothsaynges be withyn the. Thyne ydols and thyne ymages wyl I destroye out of the, so that thou shalt nomoze bow thy selfe vnto the workes of thine owne handes. Thy groues wyl I pluche vp by thy rootes & breake downe the cietyes. Thus wyl I be auenged also vpon all the heathen that wyl not heare.

Of the restoration to heare the Judgement agaynst Israel be the Lord.

Euen nowe what the Lord saith I saye reproue the mountaynes, and let the hilles heare thy voicer, O hear the punishment of the Lord, yee mountaynes, and yee myddes foundations of the earth: for the Lord wyl reproue his people & reason w Israel. O my people what haue I done vnto the: or wherein haue I hurt the: geue me answer. Because I brought the from the lande of Egypt, and deliuered the out of the house of bondage, because I made Moses, Aaron, & Miriam to leade the: Remember, O my people, what Balach the kyng of Moab had ymagined agaynst the and what answer that Balaam son of Beor gaue him, fro Bethin vnto Sygal that ye maye knowe the louyng kyndnes of the Lord. What acceptable thinges shall I offer vnto the Lord: that I bryng my kntes to the Lord God: what I come before hym with byent offerings and with calves of a yere olde: hath the Lord a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle.

O shall

C O shall I geue my fyist bozme for myne offences, and the fruite of my body for the syn of my soule: I wyl shewe the, O man, what is good, & what the Lord requirerth of the, namely, to doe ryght to haue pleasure in louig hyndnes, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God. The Lordes voice cryeth vnto the cite, and the man that shal be saued considereth thy name. O Lord, herken what is your rodde, and here hym that warneth you. Shuld I not be displeased, for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wycked, and because the measure is mynished: O shulde I iustlye the false balancers, & the bagge of dyscreitful weightes, among those that be full of riches vnryghteously gotten: where the cite seng draile with falshe, speakes lies, & haue dyscreitful tonges in their mouthes.

D Therefore I wyl take in hande to punyssh the, & to make the desolate, because of thy synnes. Thou shalte eate, and not haue ynough: yee, thou shalte bypunge thy selfe downe. Thou shalte flee, but not escape: & those that thou woldest saue, wyl I deliuer to the sword. Thou shalte sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olyues, but oyle shalte thou not haue to anoynt thy selfe withall: thou shalte treade out swete must, but shalte drinke no wyne. Ye kepe the ovpbrynges of Amri, and al the customes of the house of Ahab: ye solowe they pleasures, therefore wyl I make the waste, & cause thy inhabytters to be abhoyred. O my people: & thus shalte thou heare thine owne shame.

C A complaine of the lytic nombre of the tryghuous agaynst the truty ought we not to holde with oure greated frenedes.

I No isme. I am become as one that goeth a gleanyng in the barucke.

There are no mo grapes to eate, yett wold I sayn, with al my hert haue of the beste fruyte. There is not a goody vpon erth, there is not one tryghuous among men. They labour all to shed blud, & every man hunteth his brother to death: yett they saye they do wel, whyle they do euill. As the prince wil, so saith the iudge, that he may do him a pleasure agayn. The great man speaketh what his hert delireth: and the hearers allowe hym. The best of them is but as a thyllie, and the most tryghuous of them is but as a byzar in the hedge. But whyle the day of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be visited, then shal they be wasted away.

Let no man beleeue his frende, nor put his confidence in a brother. Kepe the post of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome, for y sonne shal pue his father to byshonour, the daughter shal speake agaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe agaynst her mother in lawe: and a mans foes shal be euen they of his owne household.

Heretofore I wyl loke vp vnto the Lord. I wyl pacyently abyde God my sauour, my God shal beare me. O thou enemye of myne, reioyse not at my fall, for I shal get vp agayn: and though I lye in darknesse, yett the Lord is my lyght. I wyl beare the punysshment of the Lord: for why, I haue offended him: yett he lye in iudgement vpon my cause, and se that I haue ryght. He wyl bypunge me for to the lyght, and I shal se his rightousnesse.

Wher that is myne enemye shal loke vpon it and be confounded, which now sayeth: Where is thy Lord God? Myne eyes shal beholde her, when she shal be troden downe as the clay in the stretes. The tyme wyl come that thy gappes shal be made vp, and the lawe shal go abrode: and at that tyme shal they come vnto the from Assur vnto the strong cities, & from the stronge cyties vpon the ryuer: from the one see to the other, from the one mountayne to the other.

Not withstanding, the land must be wasted because of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of theyr owne ymagynacions. Therefore fede thy people with thy rod, the flocke of thine heretage, whiche dwell desolate in the wodde: that they may be fedde vpon the mount of Carmel, Basan, and Galad, as afore tyme. Veruelous thynges wyl I shewe them, & lyke as when they came out of Egypte.

This shal the heathen se, and be ashamed for all theyr power, so that they shal laye theyr hand vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. They shal lyche the dust lyke a serpente, and as the wormes of the erth, that tremble in their holes. They shal be afrayed of the Lord oure God, and they shal feare the.

Where is there such a God as thou that pardonest wyckednes, and forgyuest the offences of the remnaunt of thine heretage: he keperh not his wrath for ever: & why his delyte is to haue compassion: he shal turne agayne, and be merciful to vs: he shal put down our wyckednesse, and cast al our synnes into the botome of the see. Thou shalt kepe thy trewth with Jacob, & thy mercy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast swoyne vnto our fathers long ago.

The Lord goeth forth in tempest and stormy weather, the cloudes are the dust of his fete. For like as the thornes that sticke together, and as the dry strawe, so shall the dyonkerdes be consumed together, even when they be full. There come out of the fuche as ymagin in their hearts: and give vngenerous counsel agaynst the Lorde.

Therefore thus saith the Lorde: Let them be as wel prepared: pee, and as many as they can, yet that they be be wren downe, and passe away. The fall of Ninus.

As to the bludchursty cite, which I is al full of lyes and robberye, and wyl not leane of from rauynyng. There a man may here scourgyng rauynyng, the noyse of the whelles, the cryng of the hostes, and the rolling of the charrettes. There the hostesmen get vp with naked swordes, and gyltynge speares: they lieth a multitude slaine, and a great heape of dead bodies: there is no ende of deade corpes: pe, men fall vpon theyr bodies. And that for the great and manyfolde whozdom, of the saye & bewyful barlot: which is a maistris of witchcraft, yee and selleth the people thowse her whozdom, and the nations thowse her wychecraft.

* Beholde, I wyl vpon the (sayeth the Lord of hostes) and wil pul thy clothes ouer thy head that I may shewe thy nakednes among the heathen, & thy shame among the kyngdomes, I wyl cast dyt vpon the, to make the be abhored, and a galyng stocke: yee: al they that loke vpon the shal start backe, and saye: Ninus is destroyed.

Who wyl haue pytie vpon the: where shal I seke one to comforte the: Art thou better than the greates cite of Alexandria: that laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde aboute it: which was strongly flect and walled with the see: Ethiopia and Egypte were her strength: that excedyng great, aboute measure. Affrica and Lybia were her helpers, yet was she dyscuen awaye, and brought into captiuitie, her ponge chyldzen were smytten downe at the heade of euery strete, the lottes wer cast for y most auncient men in her, and all her myghy men were bounde in cheynes. Euen so shalt thou also be dyonken, and byde thy selfe, and seke some hely agayst thyne enemy. Al thy strong ctytes shalbe lyke hygetrees with ripe fygges: which whel a ma shal thet shal fall into y mouth of y eater.

Behold, thy people within the, are but womē the portes of thy land shalbe opened vnto thine enemies, and the fyre shal deuoure thy barres. Wawe water now agaynst the: thou be besieged, make vp thy stronge holdes, go into the clays, tempe the moyster, make strong bulche: * Yet the fyre shal consume the, the swerde shal destroye the.

Thy marchauntes haue ben nombred with the starres of heauen, but now they are as the locusts, and theye theye waye. Thy lordes are as the grethoppers: and the captaynes as the multitude of grethoppers which when they be colde, remaine in f bedges: but when the sunne is vp, they flye away, and no man can tell where they are become. They shepherdes are allepe (O hyng of Assur) thy woorthies are layde downe, thy people is scatterd abrode vpon the mountaynes, and no man gathereth them togyther agayne. his is the heuy burthen, which the Prophecie Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, how long shall I crye & thou wilt not heare? howe long shall I complayne vnto the, suffering wronge, & thou wilt not helpe? why lettest thou me se werpnesse and labour?

* Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryghte: for the lawe is tozned in peces and there can not right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodlye is more set by then the ryghteous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement proceedeth. Behold: amonge the heathen, and loke well, wonder at it, and be abashed: for I will do a thyng in your tyme, which thoughe it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. * For so, I will rase by the Calders, that bytter & swyfte people: whiche shall go as wynde as the lande is to take possession of dwellinge places, that be not theyr owne. A grimme and boysterous people is it, they shall yt in iudgement & punyche. Theyr houses are swifter then the cactes of the mountayne, and byt sozer then the wolues in the euenyng. Theyr horsemen come by greates heapes from farre, they flye hastelye to deuoure as the Agie. They come all tospoyled, oute of them cometh an eastwynde, whiche bloweth and gathereth theyr captaynes, lyke as f sande. They shall moche the hynges, and laugh & pynnes to scozne. They shall not set by any strong holde, for they shall laye ordynance agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a fere the corage vnto them: to go forth and to do moze euyl, and so ascrpe the power vnto the: god.

But thou O Lorde my God: my holy one, thou arte from the begynnyng, therefore shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned them for a punymente, and set them to reprove the mighty. Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayst not se euyl, thou canst not beholde the thyng that is wyched. * Wherefore then dost thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tounge when I wyched deuoureth the man that is better then hym selfe? Thou makest men as the fowle in the see, and lyke as the cecpyng beasts, that haue no guyde, they take vp al with their angle, they catche it in theyr nette, and gather it in theyr parne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therefore offer they vnto theyr nette, and do sacrifice vnto theyr parne: because that thozow it theyr porcyon is become so fat, and theyr meat so plentecus. Wherefore, they cast out theyr net agayne and neuer cease to slape the people.

¶ The ii Chapter.

¶ Of the vision of the prophet. Agaynst polluting, rountous, and other vngodlye.

I stode vpon my watche, and set me vpon my bulworke, to looke and se, what he wolde say vnto me, & what aunswere I shoulde geue hym that reponed me. But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Write the vision plainly vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, may reade it. * For vision is yet farr off for a tyme, but at last it shall come to passe, and not fayle. * And though he tary, yet wayte f for hym, for in very dede he will come, and not be slacke.

Behold, the vngodlye thynketh hym self in saugarde, as in a strong holde: but the iust shall lyue by his saythe. Lyke as the wyne dyceyeth the bronharde: euen so the proude shall fayle, & not endure. He openeth his desyre wide by as the hel, * and is as vnscarpable as deathe. All heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeth vnto hym all people.

But shall not all these take by a prouerbe agaynst hym, and moche hym with a byt worde and saye: Alas vnto hym that heareth vpon other mennes goodes. Howe longe will he lade hym selfe with theyr clape? O howe sodenlye will they stande vp, that shall byt, and awake, that shall be the in peces: yea, thou shalt be theyr praye. * Wherefore thou hast spoyled many heathen: therefore shall the remnaunte of the people spoyl the: because of mens bloode, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the cite, and vnto all them that dwell therein.

* Alas vnto hym, that couetously gathereth euyl gotten goodes into his house, that he maye set his nest on hye, to escape from the power of my fortune. Thou hast deuyled the name of thyne owne house, for thou hast slayne to muche people, and hast wilfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymber that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the buyldyng shall answere. * Alas vnto hym that buyldeth the towne with bloode, & mayntayneth the cite with vngodlye craft. Shall not the Lorde of hostes byng this to passe that the labourers of the people shall be bynt with a greates fyre, and that the thyng where vpon Uo be unto hym that gyueth his neyghbour bypnyke, putting in gal, and making hym byzon hen, * that he maye le his pryncples. Therefore with shame shall thou be defyled, in stede of honour bypnyke thou also, yll thou sombyr with all for the cuppe of the Lordes rpygh bande shall compass the aboute, and shamefull spynge in stede of thy wozshyppe. * For the wronge that thou hast done in Libanus shall ouerwhelme the and the wyld beastes shall make the asfayde / bycause of mennes blood, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the cite, and unto al suche as dwelle therein.

What helpe then wyll the ymage do, whome the workman hath falsly oned? O the vayne cast ymage, wher in because the craftesman putteth his trust, therefore maketh he domme podels. Uo unto hym y sayeth to a peece of wood: arylf and to a dumme stone, stande vp: For what instruction maye suche one gyue? Beholde, it is layde ouer with golde and siluer, and there is no breath in it. * But the Lord in his holp temple is he, whom all the worlde shalde feare.

The iii. Chapter.

A prayer of the prophete Iheremie for the ignorant.

I Lord, when I hearde speake of thee I was asfayde. The worke y thou haste taken in bande, shall thou perseuourme in his tyme. O Lord: when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wythe thou thyndest upon mercy, God commeth from Chemā, and he holpe one from the mounte of Iherusalem: Selah.

His glory couereth by: heauens, and y earth is full of by: people. His wyne is as the sunne, & beames of lyght go oute of his handes, there is bys power byd. Destruction goeth before hym arylf a pestilent sycknesse goeth from bys sete. * He standeth and meassureth the earth. He lo- herth, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of the world fall downe to pouidre, and the hilles are sayne to bowe them selues, for his goynges are euerlastyng and sure.

I sawe that the paupers of the Mozyans, and the tentes of y land of Madian were veried for weynesse. Wast thou not angry, O Lord in y waters? was not thy wythe in the floudes, and thy dyspleasure in the see / yes, when thou sattest upon thy horse, and when thy charettes had the victory. Thou thewdest thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest prompted with an othe unto the trybes: Selah.

Thou dydest drupde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were asfayde, the waterstreame went awaye, the depe made a noyse at the lisyng up of thyne hande.

The sunne and moone remayned still in theyr habitation. Thyne arrowes went out glistering and thy speares as the wyne of the lyghtenyng.

Thou trodest downe the lande in thyne anger and byd. It thylf the bearchen in thy dyspleasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne annoynted. Thou smotest downe y breed of the house of the vngodlye, and discouereddest bys foundacyons, euen unto the necke hym. of Selah.

Thou dydest streyke thezowthe with his sceptre the heedes of his playne people, whiche come as a storme wynde to scatter me abrode, and are glad when they maye eate by the poore secretly. Thou makest a way for thyne horses in the see euen in the myddest of the great waters. When I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones coruupt, I am asfayde where I stande. O that I might rest in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo by unto our people, whych all are ready prepared.

For the fyg trees shall not be grene: and the bynes shall beare no frute. The labour of the olyue shall be but lost, and the lande shall bypnyge no coyne: the shepe shall be taken out of the folde and there shall be no cattell in the stalles. But as for me, I wyll be glad in the Lord, and wyll reioyce in God my sauyour. * The Lord God is my strength, he shall make my feete as the feete of hartes: and he whych gyueth the victory shall bypnyge me to my bye places, syngyng vpon my plaimes.

The booke of the Prophete Sophonny.

The first Chapter.

A rebukynge agaynst Iuda and Iherusalem bycause of theyr podeltey.

Ihis is y worde of the Lord, which came unto Sophonny: the sone of Chusi, the sone of Gedolia: the sone of Amariah the sone of Jehichiah, in the tyme of Josiah, the sone of Amon kynge of Iuda. I wyll gather vp al thynges in y land (sayd the Lord) I wyll gather vp man and beaste: I wyll gather vp the soules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the see: for the great decaye of y wyched, and wyll vterly destroye the men oute of the lande, sayd the Lord.

I wyll stretch out myne hand vpon Iuda, and vpon all such as dwelle at Iherusalem. Thus wil I rote out y remnant of Baal from thy place, and the names of the Remurins and yreskes, yea, and such as vpon theyr house toppes wozshype bowe them selues unto the hoste of bent which sweare by the Lord, & by theyr Walchon also: whych shal abacke from the Lord, and neyther seke after the Lord, nor rega tchym.

Be still at the presence of y Lord God for the daye of y Lord is at hand: yea the Lord hath prepared a daye of offering, and called his gessen thereto. And thus shall it happen in the daye of y Lordes daye of offering. I wyll visyte y pynces: the kynges chyldren: and all such as weare straunge cloynges. In the same daye also wyll I visyte al thole that treade ouer the theshold, so proudly, wherbyll they? Lozdes house with robbery and falsch. At the same tyme (sayeth the Lozde) there shall be herde a great crye from the * sythe porte, & an howlyng from the other porte, and a great murdher from the bylles. Howle ye that dwell in the myll, for all the merchant people are gone, and all they that were laden with syluer, are roted out.

At the same tyme wyll I seke thowme Jerusalem with lanternes, and vyssye them that contynue in they? bygges, and lape in they? dettes: * Tush, the Lozde wyl do neyther good nor euell. They? goodes shall be spoyled, and they? houses layde waste: & they? shall buyde houses, and not dwelle in them, they? shall plante vineyardes, but not drynke the wyne thereof.

For the great * dape of the Lozde is at hande, it is harde by and cometh on a pace. Hoysible is the tydynges of the Lozdes dape, then shall the giant crye out: for that day is a daye of wraoth, a dape of trouble and heynesse, a dape of utter destruction and myscry, a darke and glomyng dape, a cloudy & stormy dape, a daye of the nople of trompettes & warms, agaynst the stronge cyties and hye towres. I wyl byynge the people into such veracyon, that they? shall go aboute lyke bynde mennre, because they? haue synned agaynst the Lozde. They? blood shall be shedde as the dust, and they? bodies as * myxe. * After they? splure noz they? golde shall be able to deliuer them in that wraithfull dape of * Lozde but they? whole lande shall be consumed thow the tyme of hys gelousye: for he shall soone make cleane ryddance of all them that dwell in the lande.

The ii. Chapter.

The moueth to returne to God, prophesyng into the one destruction, and to the other dystruccion.

Wampyne poure selues & seache, O thou nacyon, that hast no deliuer to the lawe, o? they?nge go forth that God hath concluded, & o? the tyme come wherin man shall passe away as the dust: o? the fearfull wraoth of the Lozde come vpon you: pea, o? the dape of the Lozdes soze displeasur come vpon you. Woe the Lozde al ye micheberted vpon earth, ye that worke after his iudgements: seke eygherousnesse. * seke lowynesse: that ye may be deliued in the wraoth full dape of the Lozde: * for Gaza shall be destroyed, and Ascalon shall be layde waste. They? shall cast out blood at the none dape, & Accaron shall be pluckt vp by the rootes.

Woe vnto you that dwell vpon the see cooste ye murtherous people: the woide of the Lozde shall come vpon you. O Canaan thou lande of the Whilistines, I wil destroye the, so that there shall no man dwelle in the any more, and as for the see coost, it shall be herdmenmes corages and desperolde: pea, it shall be a porcion for such as remayne of the house of Iuda, to fede ther vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shall they? rest towarde nyght before the Lozde their God shall visyte them, and turne away they? captiuitie: I haue herde the despyte of Moab, and * blasphemys of the chyliden of Ammon, how they haue shamefullye intreated my people, and magnified * the selues within the borders of they? lande. Therefore, as trulye as I lue (sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel) Moab shall be as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorrah: euen dyre thorne hedges, salt pyttes, and a perpetuall wyldernesse: The residue of my folke shall spolie them, the remnant of my people shall haue them in possession. * They? shall happen vnto them for they? pride, because they? haue delt so shamefullye with the Lozde of hostes people, and magnified them selues abouether. The Lozde shall be grymme vpon them, * and destroye all the goddes in the lande. And al the Iles of the heathen shall wypp hym, every man in hys place.

Pe Mozians also shall perishe with my sword yea, he shall stretch out his hande ouer * north, and destroye I Iur. * As for Amur, he shall make it desolate, dyre and waste. The flockes and all the bestes of the people shall lye in the myddest of it: pellicanes and storkes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shall syng in the wyndowes, and rauenys shall sit vpon * balkes, for the borders of Cedie shall be ryuen downe. This is the proude and carelesse cytie, that saith in her heart: * I am, and there is ely none. O how is she made so waste, that the bestes lye there in: who so goeth by, mocketh her, and poynteth at her with dysfynge.

The iii. Chapter.

Agaynst the gouernours of Jerusalem, of the cattynge of all the Genyis. A conuente to the residue of Israel.

Woe to that abhomyable, fylthy, and cruell cytie: which wyl not heare, noz be reformed. Her truste is not in the Lozde, neyther wil she holde her to her God. her rulers within her, are as rooyng * lyons: her iudges are as * wolues in the euenynge whiche leaue nothyng behynde them tyll the mozowe. her prophetes are lyght persones and vnfaithfull men, her prestes vnhalowe the sanctuary, and do wronge vnder the pietence of the lawe. But the iust Lozde that doth no vnyngde, was amonge them, every mozyng he wyngs them his lawe clearly, and ceassed not. But the vngodly wyl not learne to be ashamed. Therefore wyl I roote oute this people, and destroye they? towres: pea, and make they? streates so voyde, that no man shall go therein. They? cytye shall be broken downe, so that no body shall be lefte, noz dwell there any more.

I sayde vnto them: O feare me, and be contente to be reformed. That they? dwellynge shulde not be destroyed, and that there shoulde happen vnto them none of these thynges, wherewith I shall visyte them. But neuer theles, they? stande vpon early, to folowe the fythynes of their owne ymaginacions. Therefore, ye shall wayte vpon me (sayeth the Lozde) vntill the tyme that I stande vp: for I am determined, to gatere the people, and to byng the kyngdomes together, that I may powre oute myne anger, pea all my wraithful & displeasur vpon them. * for all the woide shall be consumed with the tyme of my gelousye

The fyrſte Chapter.

The tyme of the prophecye of Aggeus. An exhortacion to buyde the temple agayne.

In the ſeconde yere of king Darius, in the fyrſt moneth, the fyrſt day of the moneth, came the word of the Lord by the prophet Aggeus vnto Zoꝛobabel the ſonne of Salathiel pꝛyncer of Iuda, and to Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedech the hie pꝛieſt ſaying. Thus ſpeaketh the Lord of hoſtes, and ſayeth. This people doth ſaye. The tyme is not yet come to buyde vp the Lordes houſe. Then ſpake the Lord by the Prophete Aggeus, and ſayde. * Ye your ſelues can ſynde tyme to dwell in ſtyled houſes, and ſhall this houſe lye waſte? Conſyde nowe your owne wayes in your hertes (ſayeth the Lord of hoſtes): * Ye ſowe much, but ye byng litle in: ye eat, but ye haue not ynough, ye bynche but ye are not fylled: ye becke your ſelues but ye be not warme: and ye that earneſt any wages, putteſt it in a broken purſe.

Thus ſayeth the Lord of hoſtes. Conſyde your owne wayes in your hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, ſeeke the wood, and buyde vp the houſe: * that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I may ſee the myne honour, ſayth the Lord. Ye ſoked for muche and lo it is come to litle, and thoughte ye byng it home, yet do I blowe it away. And why ſo? ſayeth the Lord of hoſtes.

* Euen becauſe that my houſe ſpeth ſo waſte, & ye runne euery in in vnto his owne houſe. Where ſo; þ heant is ſo; bydden to gꝛue you any dewe and the earth is ſo; bydden to gꝛue you encreace. * I haue called for a byowth, both vꝛs the land, and vpon the mountaynes, vpon a corne, vpon wyne and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that the ground bynggeth togyth, vpon men and vpon cat tell, yea, and vpon al handye labour.

Nowe when Zoꝛobabel the ſonne of Salathiel, & Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedech the hie pꝛieſt with the remnant of the people, herd the voyce of the Lord theyꝝ God, and the wordes of the prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lord theyꝝ God had ſente hym) the people vꝛs feare the Lord. Then Aggeus the Lordes aungell ſayde in the Lordes meſſage vnto þ people. * I am wꝛth you ſayeth the Lord.

* So the Lord waked vp the ſpyte of Zoꝛobabel the pꝛyncer of Iuda, and þ ſpyte of Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedech the hie pꝛieſt and the ſpyte of the remnant of all the people: that they came and laboured in the houſe of the Lord of hoſtes theyꝝ God.

The Booke of the Prophete zacharye

The fyrste Chapter.

The moneth the people to returne to the Lorde, and stretch the wyckednesse of theyr fathers. He praye guerd Chyrche and his apostles.

In the eyghte moneth of the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Abdo, the Prophete, sayinge: The Lorde hath ben soze displeased at poure forefathers. And sape thou vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Turne ye vnto me (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. * Be ye not lyke poure forefathers, vnto whome the prophetes cryed afoze tyme sayinge. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: * Turne you from poure euyl wayes, and from your wycked pmagnacions. * But they wolde not be aar nor re-garde me sayeth the Lorde. What is nowe become of poure forefathers, and the prophetes? are they yet styll alpye? But byd not my wodes and statutes (whyche I commaunded by my seruauntes the prophetes) touche poure forefathers: vpon this, they gaue answer and sayd: lyke as the Lorde of hostes deuyd to do vnto vs, accordynge to our owne wayes and pmagnacions, euen so hath he deit wyth vs.

Vpon the xxiii. day of the xi. moneth, which is the moneth Sebat, in the second yere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Abdo the prophete, sayng, I sawe by nyght, and lo, thre sate one vpon * a redden horse, and stode styll amonge the myrre trees, that were benethe vpon the grounde, and behynde him were thre redden speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayd I, O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked wyth me, sayde vnto me. I wyll shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amonge the myrre trees answered and sayde.
These are they whome the Lorde hath sente to go thowowe the world. And they answered the aungel of the Lorde, that stode amonge the myr-reres, and sayde. We haue gone thowowe the world: and beholde, all the world dwelleth at ease, and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes aungell gaue answer and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how longe wylt thou be vnmercifull to Jerusalem, and to the cytyes of Iuda: * With whome thou hast ben dyspleased nowe thet the scoze and ten yeres. So the Lorde gaue a louyng and a chofortable answer vnto the aungell that talked wyth me. And the aungell that communed wyth me, sayde vnto me: Crye thou, & speake. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. I am excedynge grefoule ouer Jerusalem and Syon, and soze dyspleased at the carelesse heathen: * For where as I was but a lytle angrie, they byd they best that I myddes destrope them. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord I wyll

came out of the lande of Egypte: and my spirite shall be amonge you, feare ye not.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Yet ones moze wyl I shake heauen & earth, the see, and the drye lande, yea: * I wyll moue all heathen, and the coforte of all heathen shall come, and so wyl I fyll this house with honoure, sayth the Lorde of hostes. * The syluer is myne, and the golde is myne, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.
Thus the gloze of the last house shall be greater then the fyrst, sayth the Lorde of hostes: and in this place wyl I gyue peace, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The xxiii. daye of the nyth moneth, in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto the prophete Aggeus, sayinge.
Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes. After the priestes concernynge the lawe, & sape: * yf one beare holy flesch in his cote lap, & with his lap do touche the breade, potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meate, shall he be holy also? The priestes answered & said: No. Then sayd Aggeus: Now yf one bringe despyled & a dead carcase touch any of these: shall it also be vncleane? The priestes gaue answer, & sayd: yea, it shall be vncleane.
Then Aggeus answered & sayd: euen so is this people & this nation befoze me, sayth the Lorde: and so are all the workes of theyr handes, yea, and all that they offere, is vncleane.

And nowe (I praye you) consydre from this day forth, and how it hath gone with you afoze or euer there was layde one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde: that when ye came to a coze heape of. xx. busshelles, there were scarce ten: * and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure oute l. pottes of wyne, there were scarce. xx. For I smote you with hete, blastynge and drye stones, in all the labours of your han-des: yet was there none of you, that wold turne vnto me sayeth the Lorde. Consydre then from this daye forth afoze: namely, from the xxiii. daye of the nyth moneth, vnto the day that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layde: marke it well, * is not the seed yet in the barne? haue not the vynes the fygrees, the pomgrana-tes, and olyue trees be yet vnfertile, but from this daye forth, I shall make them to prospere.

Whereouer the xxiii. day of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayng: Speake to zojobabell the pynce of Juda, and sape: I wyll shake bothe heauen & earth, and ouerthrowe the seat of the kynghomes, yea and destrope the myghty kyngdome of the heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charrettes, and those that syt vpon them, so that both horse and man shall fall downe, euery man thowowe his neygh-bours swerde, and as for the, O zojobabell (sayth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Ba-lachiel my seruaunte: I wyll take the (sayeth the Lorde) at the same tyme, and make the as a scale, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

The ende of the prophete of Aggeus.

Jech. xlii. * I will turne me agayne in mercy towards Jeruſalem, ſo that my houſe ſhall be builded in it, ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes, yea, and the plumer ſhall be layde abroad in Jeruſalem, ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes.

D Crye alſo, and ſpeake, thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes. O ye cryes ſhall be in good proſperitye agayne, the Lorde ſhall yet comforte vpon and ſhale Jeruſalem: Then lyſt I vpon my eyes and ſawe, and beholde, foure hornes. And I ſaid vnto the aungell that talked with me, what be theſe? he answered me, * Theſe are the hornes whiche haue ſcattered Iuda, Iſrael, and Jeruſalem abroad. And the Lorde ſetted me four earrent. Then ſayde I, what wyll theſe do? he answered and ſaid, Theſe are the hornes whiche haue ſcattered Iuda abroad, that no man durſt laye vpon his head: But theſe are come to ſcattere them awaye: and to caſt oute the hornes of the Gentyles: whiche lyſt vpon theſe hornes ouer the lande of Iuda, to ſcattere it abroad.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the enuoyage of Jeruſalem and Iuda.

J Lyſt vpon my eyes agayne, and lohe: and beholde, * a man with a meaſure line in his hande. Then ſayde I, why? theſe goeth thou? and he ſayd vnto me: To meaſure Jeruſalem, that I may ſe how longe and how broad it is. And beholde, the aungell that talked with me, wente bys waye forth. Then wente there out an other aungell to meete hym, and ſayd vnto hym: Runne ſpeake to this yonge man, and ſaye: Jeruſalem ſhall be inhabited without any wal, ſo: the very multitude of people & cattel that ſhalbe therein. * Yea, I my ſelfe (ſayeth the Lorde) wyll be vnto her a wal of fyre rounde aboute, & wyll be honoured in her.

B O get you forth, O ſyre from the lande of the north, ſayeth the Lorde, yea & whome I haue ſcattered in to the four wyndes vnder heauen, ſayeth the Lorde. ſaue thy ſelfe. O ſpyon: thou that dwelleſt with the daughter of Babylon, for thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes. After that gloriouſ power hath he ſent me oute to the ſpy then, whiche ſpyied you: for who ſo toucheth you, ſhall touche the apple of my eye. Beholde, I wyll lyſte vpon my hande ouer them: ſo that they ſhall be ſpyied of thoſe whiche afore ſerued them, and ye ſhall knowe, that the Lorde of hoſtes hath ſente me.

C Be glad, and reioyce, O daughter of ſpyon for lo, * I am come to dwell in the myddelt of the, ſayeth the Lorde: at the ſame tyme there ſhall many heathen cume to the Lorde, and ſhall be my people. Thus wyll I dwell in the myddelt of the, and thou ſhalt knowe that the Lorde of hoſtes hath ſente me vnto the. The Lorde ſhall haue Iuda in poſſeſſion for his parte in the holy grounde and ſhall choſe Jeruſalem yet agayne. * Let all ſerue the ſpyll before the Lorde, for he is ſpyll out of his holy place.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the value and bye estate of Chryſt, vnder the ſygne of a ſpyll the people. A prophecy of Chryſt.

Ad he ſetted me Ieſua ſpye preſt ſtandynge before the aungell of the Lorde, * and ſatan ſtoode at bys ryght hande to tryſte hym. And the Lorde ſayd vnto ſatan: the Lorde reſpouſe the (thou ſatan) yea, the Lorde that hath choſen Jeruſalem, reſpouſe the. Is not this a bande taken oute of the bye: Howe Ieſua was clothed in baclean ſayment, and ſode be fore the aungell whych answered and ſayde vnto thoſe that ſtoode before hym: Take awaye the ſoule clothes from hym. And vnto hym he ſayde: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy ſynne from the and wyll deſce the with chaunge of ſayment. he ſayde mozeouer, let a ſayze mytre vpon bys head. So they ſette a ſayze mytre vpon bys head, and put on clothes vpon him, and the angel of the Lorde ſtoode there. Then the angel of the Lorde teſtified vnto Ieſua, and ſpake: thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes. If thou wyll dwelle in my wayes, and kepe my watche: thou ſhalt rule my houſe, and kepe my courtes, and I wyll gyue the place amonge theſe ſtand here. Heare (O Ieſua) thou ſpye preſt, thou and thy ſcendes that dwel before the ſay: they are wonder vpon people. Beholde, I wyll byryge forth the braunche of my ſeruant: for lo, the ſtone that I haue layde before Ieſua: vpon one ſtone ſhalbe leuen eyes. Beholde I wyll hew hym out (ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes) and take awaye the ſigne of the land in one day. Then ſhal every man cal to his neighbour vnder the vine and vnder the fig tree, ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the viſyon of the golden candleſtycke and the expoliſion thereof.

Ad the aungell that talked with me came agayn, (and) waked me vp, as a man that is rayſed out of bys ſlepe and ſayd vnto me: What ſeeſt thou? And I ſayd I haue ſeene, & beholde a candleſtycke al of golde with a boult vpon it and ſeven lampes therein, & vpon every lampe ſeven ſtalkes. And two olpue trees ſtode by, one vpon the ryghte ſyde of the boult, and the other vpon the left ſyde. So I answered, and ſpake to the aungell that talked with me: ſayeng, O my Lorde what are theſe? the aungell that talked with me answered and ſayde vnto me: knoweſt thou not what theſe be? and I ſayde: No my Lorde he answered & ſayde vnto me: This is the woide of the Lorde vnto ierobabel, ſayeng: * ſet theſe thoſe an houſe of me, no: thou rowe ſtrength, but thoſe we my ſpyer, ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes. What arte thou? great mountayn, before ierobabel: thou muſt be made even. And he ſhall byryge vpon the ſpyll & ſtone, ſo that men ſhall crye vnto hym good lucke good lucke.

Mozeouer, the woide of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayeng: * The bandes of ierobabel haue layde the foundation of this houſe: bys handes ſhall alſo ſynſte it, * that ye may knowe how that the Lorde of hoſtes hath ſente me vnto you. For he that hath bene deſpyed a ſpyll ſealon, ſhal reioyce, when he ſeeeth the ſpyll weyde in ierobabel.

D 3020 babels hand. The seven eyes are the lordes which go thorow the whole world. Then answered I, and sayde vnto hym: what are these two olyue trees vpon the ryght and left syde of the candle styche? I spake mozeouer, and sayde vnto hym: what be these two olyue bzaunches, (which thow we the two golden pyppes) emptye them selues into the gold? he answered me and sayde: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd: no, my Lorde. Then sayde he: * These are the two olyue bzaunches, that stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

C The v Chapter.

C The v chapter of the second booke, signifyinge the rule of the church, and such as abuse the name of God by the vntion of the measure to signyfyen the brynnyng of Iuda to Babylon.

I S I tournd me, lysteinge vpon myne eyes, and lohed, and beholde, a flynge booke. And he sayde vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a flynge booke of twentye cubytes longe, and ten cubytes bryde. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all thynges shall be iudged after this booke, and all weathers shall be iudged accordyng to the same, and I wyll byng it forth (sayth the Lord of hostes:) so that it shall come to the house of the threfe, and to the house of hym that falsly sweareth by my name: and shall remaine in his house, and consume it, wyth the tymbre and stones thereof. Then the Angell that talked with me went forth, and sayd vnto me: lyste vpon thyne eyes, and se what is this that goeth forth? And I sayde: what is it? he answered: this is a measure goyng out. he sayde mozeouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon the whole earthe) to loke vpon: And beholde, there was lyste vpon a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde: this is vngodlynesse. So he sett her into the myddest of the measure, and threw the lompe of leade into y mouth of the measure.

D Then lyste I vpon myne eyes, and lohed: and beholde, there came out two women, and fwynde was in theyr wynges: for they had wynges like the wynges of a stork, and they lyste vpon the measure betwyxte the earthe and the heauen. Then spake I to the angell that talked with me: whither wyll these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me: into the lande of * Synear to buyde them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

C The vi Chapter.

C The vi chapter of the second booke, signifyinge the prosperite of Iuda byng domes.

I Mozeouer, I turned me, lysteinge vpon myne eyes, and lohed, and beholde, there came foure charettes, ouer, from betwyxte two hylls, whiche hylls were of hyasse. In the fyrste charet were * redde horses, in the seconde charet were blacke horses, in the thyrde charet were whyte horses, in the fourth charet were horses of dyuers colours, and stronge.

Then spake I, and sayde vnto the Angell that talked with me: O Lorde, what are these? The Angell answered, and sayde vnto me: * These are the iiii wyndes of f deaul, whiche be come for to stande before the ruler of all the earth. That with the black horse went into the lande of the north, and the white folowed them, and the speckled horses went forth toward the south. These horses were verie stronge, & went out, and sought to goo and take theyr tourneye ouer the whole earth. And he sayd: get you hie, and go thorow the world. So they went thorowout the world. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, saying: behold: these that go toward the north, shall spyl my wyath in y north countrey.

And the woide of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Take of thy pypponers that are come from Babylon: namely, Belshai, Tobiah, and Idaia: and come thou the same day, and go vnto the house of Josiah, the sone of Shophony. They take golde and siluer, and make crownes therof, and set vpon the heed of Iesua, the sonne of Josdech the hye priesst, & speake vnto hym. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, the man whose name is * the bzaunche: and he that shall spyunge vpon after hym, shall buyde vpon the temple of the Lorde: yea, euen he shall buyde vpon the temple of the Lorde. * he shall beare the payle, he shall lye vpon the Lordes trone, and haue the dominion.

* A priesst shall be also vpon his trone and a peaceable coslape shall be betwyxte them both. And the crownes shall be in y temple of the Lord for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaiah and Ben, the sone of Shophony, and suche as be sarr of, shall come and buyde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe, howe that the Lorde of hostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye wyll hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

C The vii Chapter.

C The estimation of fadyng without merite, the despyng of charite, and the ordinayre of the people.

I Happened also in the fourth yere of kyng Darius, that the woide of the Lorde came vnto zacharye in the fourth daye of the nynt moneth, whiche is called Casen: what tyme as Darasat and Rogomlech and the men that were wyth them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lorde, and that they shulde saye vnto the priesstes, whiche were in the house of the Lorde of hostes, and to the prophetes. I shoulde I wepe in the * fyfth moneth, and abstayne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres. Then came the woide of the Lorde of hostes vnto me, sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the land, & to the priesstes, and saye: whye ye fasted & mourned in the fyfth and vii moneth (now this lxx yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? when ye dyd eate also and drynke, dyd ye not eate and drynke for youre owne selues? Are not these the wordes, whiche the Lorde spake by hym prophetes afore tyme when Ierusalem was yet enuayted, and with the, the and the cyties to side about her: while there dwell men both towards the south and in the playne countreys.

E And the worde of the Lorde came vnto zacharie, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Execute true iudgement: shewe mercy and longunge kyndnesse: every man to his brother. Do the wyddowe, the fatherlesse, the straunger and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyne euill agaynst his brother in his herte. * Neuer thelesse, they wolde not take hede, but touned their backs, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr hertes as an adamant stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes: * wherby the Lorde of hostes sent in bys holpe spirite by the Prophets afoze tyme.

D Wherefore the Lorde of hostes was verie wroth at the. And this is it come to passe: that lyke as he spake and they wolde not heare, euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayeth the Lorde of hostes: but scattered them amonge all Gentyles, whome they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there traunspyled no man in it neyther to nor fro: for that pleasant lande was utterly layed waste.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the returne of the people vnto Ierusalem, and of the mercy of God towards them: Of good woordes. The calling of the Gentyles.

S The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: I was in greute groloupe ouer syon: yea, I haue bene verie grolous ouer her in a greute displeasure, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I wyll tounne me agayne vnto syon, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Ierusalem: * so that Ierusalem shall be called a fapthfull and true cytie, the hyll of the Lorde of hostes. Yea, an holpe hyll.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne, in the stretes of Ierusalem. Yea, and such as go with stauys in their handes for very age. The stretes of the cytie also shalbe full of yonge boyes, and damysels, playing vpon the stretes.

I Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: yf the residue of this people thynke it to be vnpowable in these dayes: * shoulde it therfore be vnpowable in my syght. sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll deliuer my people from the lande of the east and west, and wyll bypunge them agayne: that they maye dwell at Ierusalem. * They shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God, in truthe and yfthoumille.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: let yowre handes be stronge, yf that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes: wherby be in these dayes, that the foundation is layed vpon, the Lorde of hostes house, that the temple maye be buylded. For why? * before these dayes, neyther men nor cattrell coulde wynter anye thyng, neyther myght any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let every man go agaynst his neighbour.

Neuerthelesse, I wyll now intreate the residue of this people nomore as afoze tyme, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * but they shall be a seede of peace, the vyrgynarde shall gyue her frute, the ground shal gyue her encrease, and the heauens shall gyue theyr dew: and I shall cause the remnant of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that yf he as ye were a curse amonge the heythens (O ye house of Iuda, and ye house of Israel) euen so wyll I deliuer you, that ye shalbe a blessing: feare not but let your handes be stronge.

E For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: lyke as I deuyd to punyssh you: what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and spared not. Euen so am I determined now in these dayes: for to do well vnto the house of Iuda and Ierusalem, therfore feare ye not. Now the thynges that ye shal do are these: * Speake every man the truthe vnto his neighbour, execute iudgement trulpe and peacea blye within your postes, none of you ymagyn euill in his herte agaynst his neighbour, and loue no false othes: for all these are the thynges that I hate, sayeth the Lorde. And the word of the Lorde of hostes came vnto me, sayinge: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fyfth, the faste of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous byreastes vnto the house of Iuda: only loue the truthe and peace.

D Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet come people: and the enbaptours of many cyties, and they that dwell in one cytie, shal go to an other, saying: * Cyp, let vs go and praye before the Lorde, let vs see the Lorde of hostes. I wyll go with you: yea, moche people and myghtye heythens shall come and see the Lorde of hostes at Ierusalem, and to praye before the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: In y tyme shal .x. men (out of all maner of language of the Gentyles) take one Iewe by the hemme of his garmente, & saye: we wyll go with you, for we haue heerde, that God is amonge you.

The ix. Chapter.

The church of the Gentiles. The coming of the Church to Ierusalem in an alle.

I The worde of the Lorde shall be receyued at Abiache, and Damascus shall be his cerryng: for the eyes of all men and of the trybes of Israel. Shall loke vnto the Lorde. The borders of hemah shal be harde therby: Tirus also and Sidon, for they are very wyse: * Tirus shal make her self stronge deape by hylls as the lande, and golde as the clape of the stretes. Beholde, the Lorde shal take her in, and haue her in possession: * he shall smite downe her power into the see, and she shalbe consumed with fyre: This shall Ierusalem be, and be afrayed. * Saza shalbe very sope, so shall Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusyon. For the kynge of Saza shall perishe: and at Ierusalem shall no man dwell,

Strangers

B Strangers shall dwell at Iddod, and as for the pyde of the philistines, I shall roote it out. * They: bloode wyl I take a waie from they: mouth, and they: abominacions from amonge they: teeth. Thus they shall be leste for our God: pea they shall be as a pynce in Iuda, & Acoson lyke as a Jebusite. And so wyl I compasse my house rounde about with men of war, goinge to and fro: that no oppressour come vpo them any moze. For that haue I sene now wyl myne eyes.

 Reioyse thou greatiue. O daughter Syon, be glad, O daughter Ierusalem. For lo, I kyng cometh vnto the, euen the ryghteous and Saupour: lowlye and symple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, and vpon the sole of an asse. I wyl rote out the charctres from Ephraim, and the hoise from Ierusalem. the battaylehowes shall be destroyed. he shall gyue the doctryne of peace vnto the hepythen, * and his dominion shall be from the one see to the other, and from the floudes to the ende of the worlde.

E Thou also shalowe the bloude of thy covenant, wylt let the prisoners out of the: ppyte wherein is no water. Tourne you now to the stronge holde pe that be in prison, and longe soze to be deliuered. And this daie I wyl bapng the worde, that I wyl rewarde the double agayne. For Iuda haue I bent one as a bowe: for me, & Ephraim haue I spyled. Thy sonnes, O Syon, wyl I rayse vp agaynst the Syches, and make the as a gyaunte: swerde, the Lozde God shall be sene aboue them, and his dartes shal go forth as the lyghdynng. The Lozde God shall blowe the trompette, and shall come forth as a royme out of the south.

D The Lozde of hostes shall defende them, they shall consume and deuoure and subdue the with * syngre stones. They shall dypke and rage as it were thowowe wyne. They shall be spyled lyke balsens and the hoynes of the aulter. The Lozde they: God shall deliuer them in the dape as the floche of his people. For the pycious stones of a diademe, they shall be set vpon ouer hys lande. O how prosperous and goodly a thyng shall that be: The cozne shal make the pong men chereful and the newe wyne the maydens.

The x Chapter.

E The people is moued to requyre the doctryne of the Lozde. The Lozde promyseth to vpyte and comforte the house of Iuda.

R Aye the Lozde then vpyntes to gyue the latter rayne, * so shall the Lozde make bygyhte cloudes, and gyue pou rayne ynough for all the encrease of f felde. For dayne is the answer of Iddod. The sorbsapere se lyes, and tell but dayne dreames, the comfort that they gyue is nothyng worth. Therfore go they astraye lyke a floche of shepe, and are troubled, because they haue no * shepherdes. My warthful displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I wyl vpyte the gootes. For the Lozde of hostes wyl graciously vpyte his floche the house of Iuda, and holde them as a goodly sayre hoise in the battayle. * Our of Iuda shal come the helme: the nayle, the battayle-bowe, and all the princes togyther. They shall be as the gyauntes, whiche in the battayle terade downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shall fygth, for the Lozde shall be wylth them, so that the hoysen shall be confounded.

I wyl comforte the house of Iuda, and piersue the house of Ioseph. I wyl turne them also, for I ppyte them, and they shall be lyke as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lozde am they: God, and wyl beare them. Ephraim shall be as a glass, and they: bert shall be cherefull as thowowe wyne: pea, they: chyl-dren shall se it, and be glad: and they: bert shall reioyse in the Lozde: I wyl blowe for them and gather them togyther: for I wyl redeme them. They shall encrease, as they increased afore. I wyl sowe them amonge the people, that they maye thynke vpon me in farre countreyes: they shall lyue with they: chyliden, and turne agayne I wyl byngre them agayne also out of flande of Egypt, and gather them out of Assiria. I wyl carry them into the lande of Silead, and to Libanus, and they shall want nothyng. he shall go vpo the see of trouble, and smyte the see waues so that all the floudes shall be dyed vp. The pyoude byngng of Assur shall be cast downe, and the scerpere of * Egypte shall be taken awaye. I wyl comforte them in the Lozde, that they maye waike in his name: sayeth the Lozde.

The xi Chapter.

E The destruction of the temple. The case of the faythful is commeth to Iuda by the father. A gracious vtyon agaynst Ierusalem and Iuda.

Q Den thy dozes, O Libanus, & the type I maye consume thy Cedretrees. Houle yefyretrees, for the cedar is fallen: pea all p proude are wasted awaye. Houle (O ye ohetrees of Balan) for the mighty stryg wood is cut downe. Men maye deare the shep-herdes mourne, for they: glozpe is destroyed. Men may deare the yons whelpes roze, for the pyde of Jordan is wasted awaye.

Thus sayeth the Lozde my God: fcede the shepe of the slaughter, whiche shal be slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it so: no synne, but they that sell them saye: The Lozde be thanked, I am ryche: pea they: owne shep-herdes: spare them not. Therfore wyl I nomme spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayeth the Lozde) but so, I wyl deliuer the people, euery man into hys neygbbours hande, and into the hande of his kyng: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of they: handes I wyl not deli-uer them.

I my selfe fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore floche verely) and toke vnto me two stanes, the one is called lounng kynndesse, the other is called destroyer, and so kepte the shepe. The shep-herdes I put out of offyce in one mouthe, for I myght not awayne with them, neyther had they any deliuer in me. Then sayd I: I wyl fede you nomore * the thyng that dyeth, let it dye: and that that wyl perpe, let it perpe: and let the remnauntes eate, currye one the fleshe of hys neygbbour. I toke also my lounng meche strafe was broken in that daye.

saye vnto a shepherde in the lande, whiche shall not seeke after the thynges that he loseth, nor care for such as go astray, he shall not deale the wolf

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ The worshippe of the Church under the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kingdome of the Lorde.

Behold, the daye of the Lorde cometh that thou shalt be spoiled and robbed, for I will gather together all the heathen to fight agaynst Jerusalem, so the cytie shall be wone, the houses spoiled, & the women despoiled. The halfe of the cytie shall go a waye into captiuitie, and the residue of the people shall not be caried out of the cytie. After that shall the Lorde go forth to fight agaynst those heathen, as me vnto fight in the day of battel.

Then shall his feet stande vpon the mount Oli-uete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem And the mount Oliuete shall cleaue in two, east-warde and westwarde, so that there shall be a great valeye, and the halfe mount shall remoue toward the north, and the other toward the south. And ye shall flye vnto the valeye of my hylls, for the hylls of the hylls shall reach vnto that. Pea, shall ye be as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Osiab kynge of Iuda. And the Lorde my God shall come, and all sayntes with hym.
In that day shall it not be light, either cleare or dymme. * Thus shall be that special daye which is knowen vnto the Lorde, neither daye nor night but aboute the cōsumynge tyme it shall be lighte.

* In that tyme shall there water of lyfe runne out from Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them to-warde the east see, and the other halfe toward the westmost see, and shall continue both somer and wynter. * And the Lorde hym selfe shall be kyng ouer all the earth

At that tyme shall there be one Lorde onlye, & his name shall be but one. Then shall go aboute the whole earth, as vpon a seide from Sibra to Bennod, and from the south to Jerusalem. She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place: fro Bē Iamims pozt, vnto the place of the first pozt, and vnto the corner pozt: and from the towne of Hananiell, vnto the kynges wyne presses.

There shall men dwell, and there shall be no more curlyng, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabyted. This shall be the plage, wherewith the Lorde will smyte all people, that haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, they shall be consumed a waye, though they stand vpon the fete, they eyes shall be corrupt in theyr holes, & theyr tong shall consume in theyr mouth.

In that daye shall the Lorde make a greate sedicion among them, so that one mā shall take another by the hande, and lape his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. * Iuda shall fight also agaynst Jerusalem, and the goodes of all the heathen shall be gathered together rounde about: golde and syluer, and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shall this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the bestes that be in the doost, lyke as yonder plage was. Eue-ry one that remaineth then of all the people, whych came agaynst Jerusalem, shall go vpon earthe, to worshyp the kyng (euen the Lorde of hostes) * and kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacyon vpon the earth goeth not to Jerusalem for to worshyp the kyng (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. If the kynges of Egypt go not vp, and come not, it shall not rayne vpon them neyther.

Thus shall be the plage wherewith the Lorde will smyte all the depe then, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: pea, thus shall be the synne plage of Egypte and the synne plage of all people that go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that tyme shall the rydynge gear of the horses be holy vnto the Lorde, & the hettles in the Lords house shall be lyke the basens before the auter: pea, all the hettles in Jerusalem and Juda, shall be holy vnto the Lorde of hostes and all they that slape offsprynge, shall come and take of them: & they shall sleepe therein. And at that tyme there shall be no more Cananites in the house of the Lorde of
hostes.

¶ The first Chapter.

¶ A complaint agaynst Israel and her pries-tes.

Ihe deuere burthen whych the Lorde hath brought agaynst Israel by Malachy. I haue loued you sayeth the Lorde, & yet ye say: Wherfore hast thou loued vs?
* Was not Elau Jacobs bzocher sayeth the Lorde: * yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Elau: * yea, I haue made his hylls wast, and his heritag a wylderne for dragons. And though Edom saye: weill, we are destroyed, we will go buyde vpon agayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) * what they builded, that brake I downe so that it was called a cursed lade, and a people, whome the Lorde hath euer ben angry withall.

Your eyes haue sene it, & ye your selues must confesse, that the Lorde hath brought the lande of Israel to great honoure. * Should not a sone honoure his father, and a seruante his master?
* If I be now a father, where is myne honour?
If I be the Lorde, where am I feared: sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Nowe to you pries-tes, that despyse my name.
And ye saye: wherein haue we despyed thy name? In this, ye offere vncleane bread vpon myne auter. And ye will saye: wherein haue we offered any vncleane thinge vnto the? In this ye saye: that

that ye say the altar of the Lord is not to be regarded. If ye offer the blinde, is not that euill? And if ye offer the lame and the syche, is not that euill? ¶ Yea, offer it vnto the pyner, shall he be concerned with the, or accept the person, sayeth the Lord of hostes.

C And now make your prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. What he regarde your persons, thynke ye, sayeth the Lord of hostes: ¶ Yea, what is he amonge you, that wyl do so muche as to shut the doore: or to hynde the fyre vpon myne altar: for noug he? ¶ I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the Lord of hostes: ¶ and as for the meatofferyng, I wyl not accept it at your hand. ¶ For from the rising vp of the sunne vnto the goinge downe of the same, my name is great amonge the Gentyls: yea in euery place shall there sacrifice be done, and a cleane meatofferyng offered vnto my name: for my name is great amonge the heathen sayeth the Lord of hostes. But ye haue vnholowed it, in that ye say, the altar of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thinge that is set there vpon not worthy to be eaten.

D Now saye ye: It is but labour and trauayle and thus haue I thought frame of it, sayeth the Lord of hostes: offeringe robbery. yea, the lame and the syche. Ye haue brought me in a meatofferyng, shuld I accept it of your hande, sayeth the Lord: Curled be the dyssembler, which hath in hym for the one that is a male, & when he maketh a vow, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lord: for I am a greaue hynde sayeth the Lord of hostes: and my name is fearful amonge the heathen.

The ii. Chapter.

Chapitainyng agaynst the pnyshment of the people.

A And now: O ye pnyshes: thys comaiment toucheth you: yf ye wyl not heare it, nor regarde it, to que yf glorie vnto my name, sayeth the Lord of hostes. ¶ I wyl sende a curse vpon you, and wyl curse your blessinges: yea, curse them wil I. yf ye do not take heede. Beholde, I shall corrupte your seed, and cast donge in your faces, euen the donge of youre solempne feastes, and it shall cleane fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe, that I haue sente thys commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt whiche I made with Leui, myght stande sayeth the Lord of hostes.

B I made a couenaunt of lyfe and peace with hym, thys I gaue hym, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he did feare me, and hadde my name in reuerence. The law of truth was in his mouth, and there was no wychednes founde in hym: he walked with me in peace & equity, and byd euen many one awaye from theyr synnes. ¶ For in the pnyshes lypes shuld be sure knowlege, that men maye seke the lawe at hym mouth, for that messenger of the Lord of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Therefore wyl I also make you to be despyled, and to be of no reputacion amonge al the people, because ye haue not kept my wayes, but haue bene parcial in the lawe.

¶ Haue we not all one father? haue we not one God made vs: why doth euery one of vs then despyle hym owne brother, and so breake the couenaunt of our fathers? Nowe hath Juda offended: yea, the abhominacion is done in Israel and in Ierusalem: for Juda hath despyled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whiche he loued, & hath kept the daughter of a straunge God. But the Lord shall destroye the man that doth thys: (yea, both the master and the scholer) out of the tabernacle of Jacob, with hym that offereth by meatofferyng vnto the Lord of hostes. Nowe haue ye brought it to thys poynte agayne, that the altar of the Lord is couered with teares, weeping and mourning: so that I wyl nomore regard the meatofferyng, neyther wyl I receyue or accept any thinge at your hande. And yet ye saye wherfor? Euen because that where as the Lord made a couenaunt betwixt the and thy wyfe of thy youth, thou hast despyled. ¶ Yet is she thyne owne companion and maried wyfe.

¶ So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent spyrite. What dyd then the one? he sought the seed promysed of God. Therefore loke well to your spyrite, and let no man despyle the wyfe of hym youth. Pleson barest her, & put her away sayeth the Lord God of Israel, & gaue her clothyng for the scoone, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Loke wel then to your spyrite, & despyle her not: ye greue the Lord with your wordes, and yet ye saye: where wyf hall haue we greued hym. In thys that ye saye. All that do euill are good in the syght of God, and such please hym. Or els where is the God that punyssheth.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the messengers of the Lord John the baptist of the daye of the Lord, and of elias.

Behold, I wyl sende my messenger, wherof shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord: whome ye wolde: shall come to hym to ple, yea: euen the messenger of the couenaunt whome ye longe for.

¶ Beholde, he cometh sayeth the Lord of hostes. But who maye abyde the daye of hym cominge? Who shall be able to endure, whil he appeareth? For he is lyke a goldsmithes fyre, and lyke wallers sope. He shall set hym downe to trye & to cleanse the synner, he shall purge the chyliden of Leui, & purifie them lyke as golde & syluer, & they may bring meatofferynges vnto the Lord in ryghteoulnes. Then shall the offeringe of Juda & Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord lyke as from the begynnyng: & in the peaces afore tyme, I wyl come and punyssh you, and I my selfe wyl be a swyre wytnesse agaynst the wychedes: agaynst the aduoucers, agaynst false swaswearers: yea, and agaynst those that wrong-fully kepe backe the byschoppes butte: whyche were the wyddowes & the fatherlesse, & oppresse the straunger, and feare not me sayeth the Lozde of hostes. For I am the Lozde that chaunge not. and ye, (O chyldren of Jacob) wyll not leaue of. * ye are gone a waie from myne ordynances, and sence the tyme of yowre forefathers haue ye not kepte them.

C Turne ye now vnto me, and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lozde of hostes, ye say: wherein shal we turne? shulde a man vse falsed and dysceite wth God as ye vse falsed & dysceite wth me: yf ye saye v. herein v. we dysceite wth the. * In Erthes and beaues offerynges. * Therfore are ye cursed wth perury, because ye dyssemble wth me, al the lozte of you.

* Bynge euery Tythe into my barn, that there maye be meate in my house: and proue me wthal (sayeth the Lozde of hostes) yf I will not open the wyndowes of heauē vnto you, and poure you out a blesynge wth plenteousnesse. Yea, I shal reioyce the consumer for your sakes so yf he shal not eate up the frute of your ground neyther shal the vynegarde be baren in the feild sayeth the Lozde of hostes: In so much that all people shal saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shalbe a plesaunt lande sayeth the Lozde of hostes.

Ye speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayeth the Lozde. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayde.

It is but lost labour, to serue God: * What profit haue we for keepynge bys commandementes, and for walkynge humbly before the Lozde of hostes? * Therfore maye we say, that the proude are happye, & that they whych deale wth vngodlynesse, are set up: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: The Lozde considereth and heareth it. Yea, it is before hym a memoiall booke wyrtten for such as feare the Lozde, and reindye bys name: And in the daye that I wyll make (sayeth the Lozde of hostes) they shalbe myne owne possession: and I wyll fauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth bys owne sonne, that doeth hym seruyce. Turne you therfore, & consyde what dyscreence is betwixt the righteous and vngodly. betwixt hym that serueth God, and hym that serueth hym not.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Marke, the daye cometh that shal burne as an ouen: and all the proude, yea, and al suche as do wyckednesse, shal be strawe and the day that is for to come, shal burne them up (sayeth the Lozde of hostes) so that it shal leaue them neyther roote nor bzauche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shal that summe of ryghteousnesse arysse, and heath shal be vnder bys wynges: ye shal go forth, and multiplye as yf fat calves, ye shal treade downe the vngodly: * for they shalbe lyke the aswes vnder the soles of your fete in y days that I shal make sayeth the Lozde of hostes.

Remember the lawe of Moyses my seruaunt * whych I commaunded vnto hym in Oreb for all Israel wth the statutes and ordynances. Beholde, I wyll sende you * Elias the prophet before the commynge of the daye of the great and fearful Lozde. * he shal turne the hertes of the fathers ¶ Josias holdeth Pasche. After hys death in Jeronias hys sonne made kynge in his stead: whiche kynge of Egypt putteth out, and setteth in his brother Noothim. Jerusalem is destroyed: and Jeronias is taken.

Ad Josias held pfeast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lorde & slewe the Pascheouer the. xiiii. daye of the fyfthe moneth. He let pfeastes also in order (accozdyng to the) daye curles) beynge arrayed in longe garmetes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto the Leuytes the holpe mynysters of Israel, that they shulde halowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy Arke of the Lorde, in the house of hys Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buyded, and sayd: Ye shal nomore beare the Arke vpon your shulders. Nowe serue your Lorde and take the charge of his people of Israel, after your vyllages and your trybes: accozdyng as kynge Dauid the kynge of Israel, hath ordeyned, and accozdyng as Salomon hys sonne hath honozablye prepared: yee, loke that ye all do seruce in the temple accozdyng to the) ordynge & dystribucion of the pyncepsall me whiche are appoynted out of the tribes, so do seruce for the chyldren of Israel. * Kyll the Pascheouer, and prepare offerynges for your brethren, and do accozdyng to the commaundement of the Lorde, whiche was geuen vnto Moyses. And vnto the people I was founde, Josias gaue. xxx. thousande of shepe lambs, kyddes, and goates, and thre thousand orf. These the kynge (of hys kynglye lybertye) gaue vnto the people, accozdyng as he had promysed: and to the pfeastes for the Pascheouer, he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oren. Mozeouer Jeronias, and Semelias, and Nathanaell, hys brethren, and Hasabias, Jehiel, & Josabab gaue them to the pascheouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thynges were broughte to passe, the pfeastes and the Leuytes stode goodly in the) ordyng: & had the vleuened bread thorowe out the trybes. And after the ordynge of the pyncepsall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the syght of the people, accozdyng * as it is wyrtten in the booke of Moyses, and so they roasted the Easter lambe as accozdyng was. As for the thankeofferynges and the offer, they dyght in the kettels & pottes, and set them before the people with good wyll, & afterwarde before them selues & the pfeastes. For the pfeastes offered the fat vntill the tyme was crypyed, but the Leuytes prepared for them selues & for the) brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holpe syngers also, the chyldren of Asaph stode in the) order, accozdyng as Dauid deuyfed. Mozyd Asaph, zachary, & Buthum, which were appoynted by the kynge. Mozeouer the potters & doze hepers stode by the doozes and that dyligently, so that none went out of hys standynge and seruce: for the) brethren (the Leuytes) prepared for them.

Thus were all thynges perfourmed, that belongeth to the offerynge of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Pascheouer and offered thankeofferynges besyde the sacryfyce of the Lorde accozdyng to the commaundement of kynge Josias.

So the chyldren of Israel whiche were then present helde an honourable Pascheouer, and the feaste of swete breade seuen dayes longe. Yee, suche a Pascheouer was not kepte in Israel from the tyme of the pphete Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel, helde not suche an Easter as thes whiche kynge Josias held, and the pfeastes the Leuytes, the Jewes, and all Israel, of al the that were at Jerusalem. And in the epyghtene peare of the rapgne of Josias was this Pascheouer kepte. And wyth a perfecte herte vndyng Josias order all hys woordes, before the Lorde, and the thynges that were wyrtten of hym in tymes passe, concerning those that synned and were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before al people: & that sought not the worde of the Lorde vnto Israel. * After all these actes of kynge Josias, wharao the kynge of Egypt went vp & came toward Carmis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete hym. Then sent the kynge of Egypt to Josias, saying: what haue I to do with the kynge of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thy way home agayne in al hast. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vnto his charett, but vnder-toke to fyghte agaynst hym, & harkened not vnto the worde of the prophet, whiche he told hym out of the mouth of God, but pyttched battayle agaynst hym in the felde of Megiddo. And the pynces pleased to kynge Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto his seruantes. Carry me away out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediately his seruantes toke hym away out of the fronte of the battayle. Then sat he vp vpon the seconde charett, came to Jerusalem, dyed and was buryed in hys fathers sepulchre. And in all Iury they mourned for Josias, yee, the rulers also whiche they wyues made lamentacion for him vnto this day. And this was done euer kyll in Israel.

These thynges are wyrtten in the booke of the scoyres of the kynges of Juda, namely al the actes and woordes of kynge Josias, hys kyngly power & maicesty, hys vnderstandynge in the lawe of God, & what he dyd, yee, thynges whiche are not wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Israel and Juda. * And the people toke Jeronias the sonne of Josias, & made hym kynge in steade of Josias his father, when he was. xxiij. yere olde. And he raygned ouer Israel. iij. monethes. And the kynge of Egypt put hym downe, & he shulde not raygne in Jerusalem, and rapled vp a tace of the people: namely, an hundred talentes of syluer and one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypt also made Joachim hys brother kynge of Juda, and Jerusalem. As for them of the kynges counsell wyche the kynge hym selfe and zaraeles hys brother, he toke them and caryed them awaye prisoners into Egypt.

and Jerusalem, and he dyd euell befoze the Lozde. After this Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vp, & bound hym with bandes of yron & carped hym vnto Babylon. Nabuchodonosor also toke al the vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lozde, & all the Jewels, & carped them vnto Babilo, & brought them into his owne temple at Babilo. Of his uncleannes & ungodlines it is wytten in the booke of the actes of the kyn-

So after a yere Nabuchodonosor sente and caused hym to be brought vnto Babylon with the holy vessels of the Lozde & made Sedechias his brother kynge of Iuda and Ierusalem, when he was xli. yere olde, and he raygned. xi. yere.

Jer. 39. 1.

And he dyd euell also in the syght of the Lozde and cared not for the wordes that were spoken vnto hym by the prophete Jeremy, at the mouth of the Lozde. And where he had made an oth vnto king Nabuchodonosor, he forsooke hym selfe and fell fro hym hauynge a spyneche & a herte, & transgressed all the statutes & ordynances of the Lozde God of Israel. The rulers also & the heades of the people of the Lozde dyd muche euell, & became vngodly, moze then the heathen, beyng defyled in all maner of abhominacions: Pea, & defyled the holy temple of the Lozde at Jerusalem. And the God of theyr fathers sent his messengers vnto the, to turne them backe: and to cal them agayne from theyr synnes: for he wold sayne haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Howbeit they had hym messengers in beryspon: and loke what God spake vnto them by hym prophetes, they made but a spozte of it. They dwelt on so longe tyl the Lozde was wroth with hym people for theyr vngodlines, & tyl he caused the kynge of the Chaldees to come vp, which he was theyr yoge men with theyr swerde per, euen in the compasse of theyr holy temple, & spared no body, neyther yoge nor olde, neyther mayden nor yonge man, but they were al deliuered into the powze of the kynge of the Chaldees, & al the holy vessels of the Lozde & the kynge treasures toke they and carped them vnto Babilo. As for the house of the Lozde, they went vp in to it, and bzente it, and bzake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldynges & brought them to naught, and the people that were slayne with the swerde, they carped vnto Babylon.

Thus became they prisoners and boundmen of the kynge of Babilo, tyl they were deliuered & raygned for themselves, & wher the wordes of the Lozde were fulfilled, whiche he promysed them by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy, and tyl the lande had her rest: namely all the tyme that lape wast, had it rest and quyetnes. lxxvi. yeres.

The .ii. Chapter.

¶ Cyrus greeueth licence to the Jewes to resound to Jerusalem, and restoreth the temple of the Lozde. After that he had sent letters vnto Artaxerxes: whiche accuse the Jewes for burninge of the temple: and for the buyldyngs hymum of babilo the seconde yere of Darius.

Dowe when kynge Cyrus raygned ouer the Persians, & wher the Lozde wolde perfourme the word that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy: the Lozde raysed vp the sperte of Cyrus, the kynge of the Persians: so he caused his wytyng to be proclaimed thorow out hym whole realme, saying: Thus sayeth the kynge of Persians: The Lozde of Israel that the Lozde hath made me kynge of the lande, and commaunded me to buyld hym an house at Jerusalem in Jewry. Whether be any now of your people the Lozde be with hym, & go vp with him to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute that place shal helpe them, whether it be of gold, or syluer, or with gyses, with houses and necessary catel, & al other thinges that are brought to a freewill to the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem.

Then the pryncypall men out of the trybes & byllages of Iuda, and Ben Jamin stode vp: so dyd the prelates also and the Leuites (whome the Lozde had moued) to go vp, & to buyld the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem. And they that were about them helped the with all maner of gold, and syluer, and catel also, & with many lyberall gyses, and this dyd many one, whose mynde was stirred up thereto. Kynge Cyrus also brought forth the vessels, and ornaments, that were halowed vnto the Lozde (which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon had carped awaye from Jerusalem and consecrated them to hym Idol, and ymage) and deliuered them to Gedehiabarus, hym treasurer, and by hym they were deliuered to Salamanasar the debyr in Jewry. Nowe in the tyme of kynge Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia, these men: Balamus & Gedehiabarus, Sabellius Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius the scribe, and other that dwell in Samaria & in other places vnder the dominion thereof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherein they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jewry & Jerusalem. The letter was made after thys maner. Whiche letter saluantes Rathimus, the scribe, Sabellius the scribe, & other iudges of the court in Celosia, and Phenices. Be it knowne & manifest to our lozde the kynge, & the Jewes whiche are come vp from you vnto vs into the rebellyous and wyched cytie begynne to buyld it agayne, & the walles about it, & to set vp the temple a newe. Nowe yf this cyrie and the walles thereof be set vp agayne they shal not onely refuse to geue trybutes and taxes, but also rebel vnto us agayn the kynge. And for so muche as they take this in hande nowe aboute the temple, we thoughte it treason, to thynke no scoone of it but to shewe it vnto our Lozde the kynge, and to certifie hym thereof: to the intent that yf it please the kynge, he maye cause it to be sought in the bookes of olde

D These folowynge are they, that wente up from Chelmei at Thelarsa (whose princes were Carmelam and Careth) and myghter not shewe forthe they: cytyes & hyndes, howe they were of Israel: the sonnes of Dalarus, & sonnes of Eubien, the sonnes of Archodanus. Of the priests that executed the office of the priesthode, & were not founde: The sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Abdin, whiche married one of the daughters of Phariel, and were named after hym. The wytyng of the same hyndes was founde in the regestes of they: generacion, but it was not founde, & therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of the priesthode. Also them sayd Achemias, and Acharnas that they shoulde haue no porcion in the Sanctuary, till there rose up an hye priest, that were wel instructe in the playne clearenesse and truth. Of al Israel (beside seruantes and maydens) there were xlii. W. ii. C. & xl. Nowe were there of seruantes & maydes. vii. W. iii. C. & xxvi. Of synngynge men & synngynge women there were two hundred and. lxx. Four hundred &. xxx. Camels seven thousande, and. xxvi. donkeys, Two hundred. &. xlv. Gules. xlv. W. and. xxv. Asses.

E They: headen also and the rulers in the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem, and wolde buyde and set up the temple of God agayne in hys place, they gaue (after they: habylite) unto the temple, to the treasure, and to the scrupce of the Sanctuary. xli. W. posides of golde. lxxv. thousande of silver, and an hundred priestes garments. And so dwelte the priests and the Leuytes and the people that went out to Jerusalem, and in the countrey there aboute, the synngers also & the postes, eury one of Israel in hys owne lade.

¶ So when the seventh moneth came: and when the chyldren of Israel were eury man at hys busynesse, they came all wyth one assente in to the court whiche was before the East doze. And there stode Iesua & sonne of Josedec, & hys brethren the priests, and Zorobabel, the sonne of Salathiel, and hys brethren, settynge up an auter, to offer burntelacrifices vpon it, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses.

There came people also of other countreys & the heathen out of all landes, to set vpon the alter in his place, and offered sacrifyces and burntelacrifyces vnto the Lorde in the moynynge. And so they helde the fraste of tabernacles, as it is commaunded in the lawe. And dayly offered they as accordynge was, and made the sacrifyces appoynted, the offeringes also of the Saboths, and of the newe Moones, and all holpe feastes.

¶ And all they that bowed offeringes vnto the Lorde, begane at the newe Moone of the seventh moneth to offer vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buyde. And they gaue vnto the masons & carpenters, money, meate, & drynke wyth chearfulness, vnto them of Sydon, also & Tyre, they gaue carres, & they shuld carry Cedre trees, from Lybanus to be lopyes, and beames and that they shoulde make wyppes in the haven of Joppe, accordynge as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus kynge of the Persians.

And in the secorde yere, they came into the temple of God, at Jerusalem. ¶ In the secorde moneth began Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, & Iesua the sonne of Josedec, & their brethren the priests and Leuytes: and al they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of captiuite of Babylon, & layed the foundacyd of the temple, in the newe Moone of the secorde moneth in the secorde yere, & they were come into Jewy & Jerusalem. And they apoynted & Leuytes (that were aboute xx. yere old) vnto the scrupce of the Lorde, so Iesua and hys sonnes, and hys brethren, al the Leuytes stode together, and pertourned the lawe and ordynance in the house of the Lorde.

And the priests stode, and had they: garments & trompettes, and the Leuytes, the sonnes of Asaph, had cymbales, geuyng thanks and prayes vnto the Lorde, accordynge as Dauid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned.

And the longe that they byd synge vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. ¶ Synge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, & hys goodnesse vpon Israel endureth for euer. And al the people blewe out wyth trompettes, & sage wyth loude voyces prayynge the Lorde together, in the rearynge of the house of the Lorde. ¶ There came also fro amonge the priests & Leuytes the rulers and elders accordynge to the trybes & hyndes (suche as had bene the house afore) to the buydynge of this temple with great crye, & great mournynge many also wyth trompettes & great ioye: In so muche, that the trompettes myghter not well be herde for the wepyng & mournynge. For the churche people blewe goodly vpon the trompettes.

¶ Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Judah and Ben Jamin, to knowe what that troptynge & noyce of shawmes myght be. And they perceyved that it was the which were come agayne out of captiuite, & wolde buyde the temple vpon a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to Zorobabel, and Iesua, and the rulers of the vyllages, & sayde vnto the. What we buyde with you also? For we likewise haue heard your Lorde, & we walke after the same maner from the dayes of Zibareth the kynge of Assyria, which brought vs hither. Then Zorobabel and Iesua, & the rulers of the vyllages of Israel, sayd vnto them: It is not mete, for ye shoulde buyde the temple of our God with vs, we our selues alone wyl buyde vnto the Lorde, lyke as Cyrus the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the land layde them selues agaynst those that were in Jewy, heide vpon the buydynge from them, layed wayte vpon the pynelpe, stoppede suche as broughte any thyng to them, forbad them to buyde, & bynded those that that made them passage, that the buyldinge shulde not be synned: and thus continued so longe as kynge Cyrus ruled: and so they put of the buyldinge, for the space of two peeres, vntill the raigne of kynge Darius.

The vi. Chapter.

Aggeus and Zachary prophets. They buyld the temple with our lot of dyssidence: by the commandment of Darius.

IN the second peere of the raigne of Darius. * Aggeus, and zacharye the sonne of Abdo, prophesied vpon them in Jewry, and Jerusalem, in the name of God of Israel: * Then zozobabel, the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua, the sonne of Josedei, shode by & beganne to build the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem, when the prophetes of the Lozde helpe them. At the same time came Disennes the vnderthene in Siria, and Phenices, with the lanlozdes and hys companions, and sayde vnto them, Who ha the bydden & commaunded you to buyld the house to make the rooffe and al other thinges agayne? And who are the woiche men: that buyld them? Neuertheles, the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of the Lozde, that they wolde not be lette (though they were psonned thereto) but buylded on styl: vntill the tyme that kynge Darius were certified there of, and an answer receaued from hym. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius was after this maner.

Disennes the vnderthene in Siria, and Phenices, and the lanlozdes with theyr companions, whych are hed rulers in Siria, and Phenices, send theyr salutation vnto Darius & kynge Cyrus. We certifie the Lozde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem where we founde them buylding the great house of God, and the temple, with greete costly free stone, and with goodly tymber for the walles per, they make greete haste with the woiche, and helpe one another, & it goeth forth the prosperously in theyr handes, and with great diligence & worship it is made. Then asked we the elders who had commaunded the, to make up house and the buyldinge: and thus we dyd, to the entente that we myghte certify the perfectly, and wyte vnto the, the names of those that were rulers of the woiche. So they gaue vs thus an swere: we are the seruautes of the Lozde, whych made heauen and earth, and as for this house, it hath bene buylded and set up afore tyme by great and myghtie kynge of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, & sined agaynst the God of Israel, he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon the kynge of the Chaldees whiche brake downe the house and bent it, and carped awaye the people prisoners vnto Babilon. * Neuertheles, in the first peere that kynge Cyrus reigned at Babilon, Cyrus the kynge wrote & commaunded, to buyld up the house agayne, and al the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor carped awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and appoynted vnto hys owne temple, these broughte Cyrus forth agayne, and deliuered them to zozo-babel and to Salmanasar, the vnderthene: to maundayng them, that they shulde buyng those same ornaments agayne to Jerusalem, into temple & beginning from tyme forth, to buyld temple agayne, in hys owne place. Then Salmanasar layde the foundacyon of the Lozdes house at Jerusalem, & euer sence they haue buylded, and yet is not ended. And therfore, O kynge if thou thynkest it good, let it be sought in the lybraries and rolles of kynge Cyrus. If it be founde then, that it is done with the counsell and consent of kynge Cyrus, and if our lozde the king be so minded, let him writ vnto vs therof.

* Then commaunded kynge Darius to seeke in the lybraries: and so at Egbarbanis in a litle cytye of Medea there was founde: suche a wyrtynge. In the first peere of the raigne of Cyrus the same kynge Cyrus commaunded the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agayne, and obours there to be made continual vnto the Lozde, whose byght shalbe .x. cubytes and the bredthe .ix. cubites, and .iiii. square with the breuen stones, with a losse of timber of the same countrey: yee, with a newe loff, and the expences therof to be geuen of the house of kynge Cyrus, and the ornaments of golde & siluer that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, where they were afore. Disennes also the vnderthene in Siria, & Phenices, the payntes, and theyr companions: & the other the head rulers in Siria & Phenices, shal not medle nor haue any thing to do with place. * Cyrus haue commaunded also, that they shal buyld the house of the Lozde hole by: and haue ordayned them, to helpe those that be come out of captiuite: tyll the house of the Lozde be synned: and out of the trybute and taryng that is yearly rapled up in Siria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe of the offering of the Lozde: and the same to be deliuered vnto zozobabel the offycer, that he therewithall may ordayne oren, rammes, lambes, and coyne, salt wyne, and oyle, and that continually euerie peere: after the expences. * Whych the prestes shal be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made daylie, thus shalbe geuen vnto them without delaye, & they may offer sacrificies dayly to the hest God, for the kynge and for hys seruautes and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclaimed also on euery syde, & whosoever breaketh or despyseth this commaundement of the kynge, shalbe hanged vpon a galowes (made of hys owne good) and al his goodes shalbe seased vnto the king. The Lozde therfore whose name is there called vpon roote out, and destruy al the kynges, and people that undertake by violence to hinder same, or to deale vncartiously with the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem. * Darius the kynge haue ordayned & these thinges shalbe done with al diligence.

And they performed all thynges that were the commandment of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kynges of Persia.

B And thus was oure house synghed vnto the firste daye of the moneth Adder in the vii. yere of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel, the prestes and Leuites, and sother that were come out of captiuite: and such as were ioynd vnto them, did according as it is writen in the booke of Wyses. And in the dedycacyon of the temple, they offered an. C. Oxen, two hundred rammes, iiii. C. lambes, and xii. goates, for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after the number of the trybe of Israel. The prestes also and the Leuites stode arayed in theyr priestly garments, after the triben, ouer all the woiches of the Lorde God of Israel, accordinge to the boke of Wyses, and the posters by all the doores.

C And the chyldren of Israel (with those that were come out of captiuite) helde the passoure the fourtene daye of the first moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that came out of captiuite were not all sanctified together. But the Leuites were sanctified together, and so all they that came out of captiuite, kylled the Easter lambe for their byerthen for prestes and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel, that came out of captiuite and escaped from all the abhominacyons of the yarden, soughte the Lorde, and kepte the feast of the vnleuened brende seuen dayes longe, eating and drynkyng and were mery before the Lord that the Lord had turned the deuyce of the king of Assyria, and comforted theyr handes to the woiches of the Lorde God of Israel.

The viii. Chapter.

Esdras counsell the people to assemble and remember the lawe, and to be diligent in the lawe. They hope the best of the tabernacle.

1, en. viii.

Ed after hym* when Artaxerxes the kynge of the Partians raygned there went vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Sarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiah, the sonne of Shallu the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achisob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abihu the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazer, the sonne of Aaron the firste prest. This Esdras wente up from Babylon, for he had good vnderstandinge in the lawe of Moyses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, so he taughte and done in dede. And the kynge fauoured him, and byd hym great worshipp and honoure, after all hym desired. There wente up with hym also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the prestes, of Leuites, of the synghers, posters, and synners of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yere of the raygne of kynge

Artaxerxes, in the v. moneth, that is in the vii. yere of the raygne, they wente from Babylon in the new moneth of the v. moneth and came the byr waye to Jerusalem after hym commaundement, lyke as the Lorde had wyspered theyr iourney. For in these dayes gat greute instructyon, that he shuld leaue none of the thynges be hynde, which are in the lawe and commaundement of God. And he taughte hole Israel all righteousnes and iudgementes.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, a deliuered the wytynges (that were come from Artaxerxes the kynge) to Esdras the prest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. And thus is the coppye of the letter: Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth hym greetynge vnto Esdras the prest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Offrende thou good will, I haue ordeyned and charged yf there be any of the Jewes, of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which desired and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he maye do it. Therfore, yf any be mynded to be of the company, let the come together, and go with the lyke as I am contente and my seuen frendes, my counsellors to se howe they do at Jerusalem and in Jewrye, and howe they wynges accordinge as thou hast, in the lawe of the Lorde, and so byng the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promised to Jerusalem, and al the syluer and golde that is in the country of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem with the thing that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Per, that the same syluer and gold maye be gathered, and orn. Rammes, Oxen, and goates, and other that belonge to these thynges: and that they may offer sacryfices vnto the Lorde, vpon the altare of the Lorde which is at Jerusalem.

And what soeuer thou and thy byerthen wilt do with the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordinge to the commaundement of the Lorde thy God, and lyke wyse with the holpe of the house of the Lord thy God, for the scrupce of the house of the Lord thy God, and other thynges what soeuer is necessary for the woiche of the temple that shalbe geuen of the kynges treasure, so he what thou wilt thy byerthen wilt do with the golde and syluer, that do after the wyse of the Lorde. And I kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenicia that whatsoeuer Esdras the prest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde both wyte, it shalbe geuen him, tyll an. C. talentes of syluer, and of gold in lyke maner. Of coyne also an. C. measures and tyll an. C. vessels of wyne, and other plentrous thynges without number. Let al thynges be done after the lawe of the best God, that the wyath of God arpe not in the realme of the kynge and his sonnes. I commaund you also that ye require no taxe nor tribute of the prestes, Leuites, synghers, and ministres of the temple, nor of the wytynges, and that noman haue auctorite to medle any thing against the. As for Esdras let thou iudge and arbitere in the hole lande of Syria and Phenicia, after the wyse of God, and learne

1 al such as are ignorant in the lawe of God the Lord, and let all them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punished: whether it be with death, or payne, to be bodden in mony, or to be banished.

1. Esdr. vi. a Then sayde Esdras the wyrtter: * Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath geue so good a mynde and wpli into the herte of the kynge to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his counsell, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordyng as the Lord my God helpeth me, & chose me out of Israel to go with me. * And these are the heades after they: hyndes and houses of they: fathers that went up wyth me fro Babylon out of the kynge dome of Artaxerxes. Of the sonnes of Phares: Serisontus. Of the sonnes of Semirath, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid: Accus, the sonne of Cecilia:

1. Esdr. vi. b Of the sonnes of Phares, zachary, and with hym there turned agayne an. C. and .l. men. Of the sonnes of the captyane of Moabild, zary, & with hym .ii. C. l. men. Of the sonnes of zacharys: Rechomias, zecholi, and wyth hym .ii. C. l. men. Of the sonnes of Salamaasias, Sotholie, lxx wyth hym: Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zaryas, Wihelie, and wyth hym lxx. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias, Zehely, and wyth hym .ii. C. .i. xlii men. Of the sonnes of Baania, Salimoth, the sonnes of Josaphia, and wyth hym an hundred and thre scoze men. Of the sonnes of Beer, zacharie, Bebel, and wyth hym two hundred and. viii men. Of the sonnes of Elead, Johannes, Ezecham, and wyth hym an hundred and tennemen. Of the sonnes of Adomicam, those that were f last, and these are they: names. Eliphalam: the sonne of Sebel, and Semelag, and wyth hym lxx men. All these called I together by the water Chia where we pyched our tente thre dayes: & there I mustred them.

1. Esdr. vii. b * As for the sonnes of the preastes and Leuytes, I founde none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, & Eccelom, and Walmam, & Malobam and Canaathan, and Samea, & Josibimathā, Eunaga, zachary, Wololamun (these were the elders and men of experyence) and I sent them woide f they shulde come vnto Loddus, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddus and to his byethen, & to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs such men, as myght execute the preastes office in the house of the Lord our God, and wyth the myghtye hande of oure Lord God, they brought vnto vs men of good experyence, from amonge the sonnes of Moalytis, the sonne of Leni, the sonne of Israel, Sebeliam, and the sonnes and bys byethen Ashin, & Anin, of whom there were. xliii. From amonge the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananeus, & their sonnes were. xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, and the pynce pall men f mynstred for the woike vnto the Leuites in the temple two. C. xx. men

1. Esdr. vii. a * whose names are all tokened vp in wyrttyng.

* Then commaunded I a lassyge vnto the ponge men before the Lord, that I myght deliue of hym a prosperous iourney, & a good way for vs: yet, for vs: for oure chyldren and for the Catell, because of the lapynges awayte, and I durst not requyre of the kynge men of horse and of foote: to conuey vs safely agaynst our enemyes, for we had sayde vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lord our God shulde be wyth them that seke hym wyth they: hole herte. And there fore, we soughte God oure Lord earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer, And I separated from amonge the rulers of the people, and from the preastes of the temple. xlii. men and Sebelia, and Alania, and .x. men of they: byethen wyth them. And weped them the golde and the syluer and all the preastly ornamentes of the house of our God, whiche the kynge and his counsell: and bys pynces and whole Israel had geurn. And when I had weped it, I gaue them an. C. l. talentes in syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of gold and of golden vessel, seuen tymes twentye and vesselles of other metall (ye, of good metall) xlii. gylsterpynges as the golde, and sayd vnto they: ye are holy vnto the Lord, and the vesselles are holy, and the golde, and the syluer is promysed vnto the Lord God of oure fathers.

We dylygently nowe, and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the preastes, to the Leuites, and to f pynce pall men of the cytyes of Israel in Jerusalem and in the chamber of the house of our God.

1. Esdr. vii. b * So the preastes and Leuites whych receaued of me the golde, the syluer, and the vessel, brought it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the Lord. And from the cytye of Chia, we brake vp the twelue daie of the fyrst moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when the thryde daie was past, they weped golde and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daie, vnto Marimoeth the sonne of Joze the preast, and wyth hym was Eleazar the sonne of Whincas, and wyth them were Josabbus the sonnes of Jasnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, & certayne of the Leuytes to the number and to the weyght, and the weyght of them was wyrtten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuyte, they offered sacrifice vnto the Lord the God of Israel: euen twelue oren for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes lxxii. shepe. xlii. goates for synne, twelue kyne for a thank offering all to the sacrifice of the Lord. And the kinges commission deliuered they vnto the stewardes and deputies of the kynge, and to the vnderthyues in Celocysia, and Pdenyers.

1. Esdr. vii. a * Nowe when those thynges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacyon of Israel, the pynces, the preastes and Leuites, the strange people and indwellers of the lande haue not put a waye they: vnclemesse, from the Cananites herethes byethes, from the Moabites, Egyptians, and Edomites. For both they and they: sonnes haue mingled them selues with the daughters of them, and the holy seede is myxt wyth the outlandyshe heathen

The thyzde booke

¶ Since the beginning of thez raygne haue p-uenied & beades bene partakers of their wickednes As soon as I had herd these thynges, an-medly I rent my holre garmentes: & pulled out the beare of my heade and my bearde & late me downe sorrowfull and dry. So al they that were moued thezowe the woide of p God of Israel, came vnto me, and sat by: ful of heuynes vntyl the eueninge sacrifice. Then stode I vp from sitting, hauing rent clothes and the holy garmentes, knelt downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto the Lord, & sayde: O Lord I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for ouer synners are become many vpon our bea-des: and our wychedneses are exalted vnto the heauen, for synce the tyme of oure fathers, we are in greute synne vnto this daye. And for the synners of vs and oure fathers, we wyth our vye thens and wyth our pzeakes haue bene deliue-red vnto the kynges of the earth: into the sword and into captiuyte, and became a spoyle wyth confusion and shame vnto this day. And now O Lord God, howe greute is thy merce that we haue gotten of the: in that thou hast lette vs a name and a root in the place of thy Sanctuary, to dyscouer oure lyghte in the house of the Lord oure God, and haue geuen vs meate at all tymes of oure mynistracion. And when we were in captiuyte we were not forsaken of the Lord oure God: but he made the kynges of the sea gracious, & fauorable vnto vs: so that they gaue vs vnto us, and meate, pee, and leane to buyde by the temple of our Lord God agayne to repaire the wasted places of Sion: & to dwel in Ieruyte and Jerusalem. And now O Lord what shal we saye: haunge all these thynges in posselion: For we haue broken the comma-ndementes: which thou gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruantes the prophetes saying The land that ye govnto and thatis geuen you for an heritage to haue in posselion, is defiled with the vncleennes and fylthynesse of the heathen and with their abhominacis haue they po-luted it altogether. Therfore, shal ye not ioyne your daughters vnto theyz sonnes, nor marie your sonnes vnto theyz daughters. Woze ouer ye shal not seke to make peace wyth them, that ye maye encircle and eat the best, in the land, and that ye maye deuide the inheritaunce of the lād vnto your chyldren for euer moze. And for the thyng that now happened vnto vs, it cometh all for our wyched woiches and greute synnes yett hast thou geuen vs such a roote that we are come agayne into oure lande, and we are so wy-ked that we haue broken thy statutes & comma-ndementes agayne: and myngled oure selues with the vncleennes of the outlandish heathen.
 O Lord art thou angry wyth vs? wyte thou rote vs cleane out: that our rote & name remay-ne nomoze? O Lord God of Israel thou art true for our rote endureth yett vnto this present day And beholde, now we are before the in our syn-nes, now we can be not stande before the in them.
 And when Elshas wyth his prayer hadde knowledged the synne, wepyng and saying that upon the ground before the temple, there gar-red vnto hym from Jerusalem a greute multitude of men and women, of yong men, and may-dens, for there was a very greute wepyng, and mourninge in the congregacyon. And when Je-chonias the sonne of Iehely one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayde vnto Elshas: we haue synned agaynst the Lord, because we haue ma-rryed outlandish women of the heathen. Now art thou ouer al Israel. We wyll sweare an oth therfoze vnto the Lord: that we shal put away all our wyues which we haue taken of the heathen, wyth theyz chyldren, lyke as it is appoy-ned by our foze elders. Stand by then, open thou it & declare it playnly vnto vs, accordyng to the lawe of the Lord, for p matter belongeth vnto the and we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Elshas arose, and toke an oth of the rulers, of the pzeastes, and of the Leuites and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they swore

The .ix. Chapter.

¶ After Elshas had ren the lawe, the people put a waye theyz drauing wyues and then returned every man mete to his owne dwellinge.

¶ When Elshas stode vp from p court of the temple, wythout, and went into the chamber of Ionathas the sonne of Abasus, and remayned there & dydeat no meat, nor doynk dysynche: for the multitude of the wychednes of p people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Jewry and at Jerusalem, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem oute of captiuyte that whosoener came not to Jerusalem wythin two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgemente of the old Lordes of the counsell) his goodes shuld be taken from hym, and be excluded from the cogregacyon of the captiuyte. And in the dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the twen-tie dayes of the .ix. moneth. And the whole mul-tytude sat trymblinge in the court of the temple for it was wynter. So Elshas rose vp, and sayde vnto them, ye haue done vnyghteouslye in p ye haue taken outlandish wyues, to marynge, & so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And no we knowlege the same, & geue piasse vnto the Lord God of our fathers, & persourme bys wil departinge from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cryed p hole multitude wyth a loud voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but forsomuche as the people are many, and the wynter heere, we maye not stande without the house: Agayne thez woiche is not a thyng that can be finished in a day or two. For we be many, that haue sinned in these thynges. Obyrne therfore that the rulers of the multitude, & they that dwel wyth vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues & the pzeastes also and iudges of every place may stande in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wyath of the Lord in thez busines.

¶ Then Ionathas the sonne of Ety, and O-zas & Tharam receaued the charge of this matter, and Bozozanus and Leius, & Sabathus helped them thereto. After thez, all they stode vp

up that were come oute of captiuyte. And Esdras the preast chose vnto hym the pynce pall men from among f fathers accordyng to they names, & in the newe moneth of p. x. moneth they sat together, to examine this matter. And so the matter was a detremynynge (concernynge the men that had outlandyde wyues) vntill the newe moneth of the first moneth. And of the prestes that had myrte them selues wth outlandyde wyues there were found. * Of the sonnes of Iesu, the sonnes of Joseder, and hys byethren. Wazreas, Eleazer, Jozibus, & Joadeus, whych offered them selues to put a waye they wyues and to offer a rame for their ignoraunce. And of the sonnes of Semeri, Halseas, and Elies, & Jeelech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Socera, Limostas, Hismaen, Rathanea, Justo, Jedbus, & Calas. And of the Leuites, Josabbus, Semetis, & Colnis, Caletas, Ractas, Colnas, & Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuary. Eliarib, Zabarhus. Of the porters, Ballumus, and Tolbanes. And of Israel, of the children of Koro, Ol and Remias, & Geddias, and Melchias, Micheus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias, and Bonas. And of the children of Jolam, Chanias, zachary, Jetzreus, Joddius, Erimoth, and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jathaim, Eliadas, Liasamus, and Jochias, Larimoth, Waddis, & Thebedias. And of the sonnes of Jeebes, Johannes, Amantias, Jabbias, and Emmenus. And of the sonnes of Banus, Olamus, Waluchus, Jedbus, Jafub, Alabus, & Jeremoth. And of the sonnes of Adi, Baratus, & Wocollas, & Caleus, & Raanas, Wastus, Wathathias, Besel, Banus, & Manalles. And of the sonnes of Rave: Rones, Afeas, Melchias, Saneas, Simo Ben Jamin, Walchus, and Marras. And of the sonnes of Alom Carianeus, Wathathias, Banus, Eliphalach, Manalles, Semet. Of the sonnes of Banus Jeremy, Woodias, Abzamas, Joril, Banas, Pelias, Jona, Warymoth, Eliasib, Wathancus, Eliazis, Ozius, Dielus, Semedius, Jambis, and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Robeus Jodelus, Wathathias, Wababus, Jechda, Sedmi, Jellus, and Banas. All these had taken oute landyde wemen to mariage, & they put them a waye with they children. The prestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israel, dwelte at Jerusalem and thowout all the lande, in p newe moneth of the seuenth moneth, and the children of Israel were in they dwellinges: And the whole multitude came together, vpon the floore at the East syde of the holpe porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Esdras p hys preast and reader, that he wold byng the lawe of Moyses whych was geuen of the Lozde God of Israel. So Esdras the hys preast broughte the lawe vnto the whole multitud, to man and woman, to all the prestes that they myght heare the lawe, & in the newe moneth of the vii. moneth. And he red in the floore that is before p holpe porte of the temple, from the morning early vnto the eveninge, before men and wemen. And they applyed they mynde all vnto the lawe. And Esdras the preast and reader of the law stode vpon a pulpet of woode, whych was made therfore, and vpon hys ryght hand there stode by hym Wathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Elias, Ozechias: & Balsamus vpon hys left hand stode Kalbeus, Misael, Malachias, Abuchas, Sabus, Sabadias, and zachary. Then toke Esdras the booke before the whole multitude, for he was the pyncepal and had in moost honour of them al. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode al streyght vpon they feete. So Esdras prayed the Lozde the most by est God, the Almyghty God of hostes. And al the people answered: Amen: and helde vp they handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth, & prayed the Lozde. And Jellus, Benas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbathus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozabus, Ananias, and Hilius, the Leuites lift they handes upwarde and bowed they faces to the grounde, & prayed the Lozde. Those were they whych taught the lawe of the Lozde, & red the lawe of the Lozde in the congregacion: and euery man set them before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Esdras the hys preast and reader, and to the Leuites that taught the multitude, sayng: Thys daye is holpe vnto the Lozde, and all they that had hearde the lawe wepte. So Esdras sayde: * Depart your way then, and eate the best and drynke the swetest, and send giftes vnto them that haue nothing: for this daye is holpe vnto the Lozde, & be ye not soze, for the Lozde wyl byng you to honour. Then went they they waye eue ry chone, and bydeate and drynke, and wre mery, and sente rewardes vnto them that had nothing, that they also myght eate wth gladnes for they were excedyng reioysed for the wordes that were redde vnto them in the lawe. And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the feast, accordyng to the countaunt of the Lozde God of Israel.

The fourth booke

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: go thy waye and shewe my people their synfull dedes: and they: chyliden they: wyched nesses whych they haue done agaynst me, that they maye tell they: chyliden chyliden the same for the synnes of they: fathers are increased in them. And why: they haue forgotten me, & haue offered vnto straung goddes. Am not I euen he that broughte them out of the lande of Egypte from the house of bondage? But they haue provoked me vnto wrath, & dyspised my counceils. Will thou oute then thy heate of thy heade and caste alleuell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedyent vnto my lawe.

It is a people without learnynge and nout toun. Howe longe shall I forbeare them, vnto whome I haue doone so muche good? Wanne kynnes haue I destroyed for they: sakes: Pharaon with his seruantes and al his powre haue I smytten downe & slayne: Al chynacions haue I destroyed and rooted out befoze them, and in the East haue I broughte two landes and people to nange, euen Tyre and Sidon, and haue slayne al they: entymes. Speake thou therfoze vnto them sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I led you thozow the se: and haue geuen you sure streets, sence the begynnyng. I geue you Moyses to be your Capteyne, and Aaron to be the preast: I geue you light in a pillar of fyre: and greate wonders haue I doone amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me: sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Almightye Lorde: I geue you quayles to eate, & tentes for your socoure. Neuertheles ye murmured: and ascribed not the victorie of your enemyes vnto my name: yet, the same day do ye yet murmur. Where are the benefites, that I haue done for you? When ye wer hongrye in the wylidernes, & dyd ye not crye vnto me? Why haste thou broughte vs into this wylidernes to hpy vs? It had bene better for vs to haue serued the Egypciens, then to dye in this wylidernes. Ther had I pytie vpon your mouynnges. And geue you Hanna to eate. Ye did eate Angels fode. When ye were thursty, dyd not I geue the bearde stone, and caused water to flowe thereoute? For the heat I couered you wth the leaues of the trees. A good pleasaunt fat lande geue I you: I caste ouer the Canytes the Philistines & Philistines befoze you. What shall I do moze for you sayeth the Lorde?

Thus sayeth the Almightye Lorde: when ye were in the wylidernes, in the water of the Amorytes, beinge a thyrst, and blasphemynge my name, I geue you not fyre for your blasphemies but cast a tre into the water, and made the riner swete. What shall I do vnto y? O Jacob: Thou Juda woldest not obeye me. I will turne me to another people, and vnto those wyl I geue my name, that they may kepe my statutes. Seinge ye haue forsaken me. I will forsake you: When ye desyre me to be gracious vnto you, I shall haue no mercey vpon you. When ye call vpon me: I will not heare you. For ye haue dyspised your handes wth bloude, and your fete are swyfte to commyte many slaughtre, Ye haue not forsaken me (in a manner) but your owne selues, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Almightye Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her daughters, & as a nurse her yong babes that ye wolde be my people, & I wolde be your God: that ye wolde be my chyliden, & I shuld be your owne father? I gathered you together as an henne gathereth her chyliden vnder her wynges. But now what shall I do vnto you? I shall cast you out from my face. When you offere vnto me, I will turne my face from you for your solempne feaste dayes: your new moones, and your circuncisions haue I forsaken. I sente vnto you my seruantes the Prophetes whom ye haue taken & slayne, & to some they: bodies in peces whost bloud I will require of your handes sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Almightye Lorde: your house must be desolate: I will cast you out as I wind doth the strawe, your chyliden shall not be fruitful, for they haue dyspised my commaundement: and done the thyng that is euill befoze me: Your houses wyl I geue vnto a people that shall come, and they that neuer hearde me shall beleue in me: and they vnto whom I neuer thewed token: shall do the thyng that I commaundeth. They haue sene no prophetes, yet shall they cal they: synnes to remembrance, & knowleg them. I reposit me vnto the grace: I will do for the people which is come, whose chyliden reioyse i gladnes, & though they haue not sene me wth vobeye eyes, yet in sperte they beleue the thyng that I saie. And now by order, behold what great worship, & is the people & community from the east, vnto whom I wyl geue the duke dome of Abraham: Nabac, and Jacob, of Oseas, Amos, and Wycheas, of Joel, Abdy, Jonas, Naum, and Abach, of Sopponye, Aggeus Zachary, and Malachy (whych is called also an angel, or messenger) of the Lorde.

The ii. Chapter.

The Synagoge syneth haue wth her owne chyliden. The Gentiles are called.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: I brought this people oute of bondage, I geue them my commaundementes, by my seruantes & prophetes: whych they wold not hear, but dyspised my counceils. The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto them: So your waye ye chyliden, for I am a wyddowe and forsaken I broughte you by wth gladnes, but wth sorrow and heauynesse haue I lost you: for ye haue synned befoze the Lorde your God, and done the thyng that is euill befoze hym. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wyddowe and forsaken: go your waye O my chyliden, and aske mercy of the Lorde. As for me O father, I call vpon the for a witnes ouer the mother of these chyliden which wold not kepe my couenaunte, & thou bringe them to confusion: & they: mother to a spoyle, that she beare nomore. Let they: names be scattered abroad amonge the heathen. Let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thoughte scozne of my couenaunt.

Woe be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest the vnrpygdeous unrighteousnes by the. Thou wyched people remember what I dyd vnto Sodom, and Gomor, whose lande is turned to pyttch and ashes: Euen so wyl I do vnto al the, that heare me not, sayth the almyghty Lozd. Thus sayth the Lozde vnto Edoas: tell my people, I wil geue them the kyngedome of Ierusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel: They gloze also wyl I take vnto me: and geue them the euer lastyng tabernacles, which I had prepared for those. The tree of lyfe shal be vnto them a swete smellynge opntment: they shal netter labour nor be wery. Sope pouer wape, and ye shal re ceane it. Wap for your selues a few dayes that they may dwell therein.

Bowe is the kyngedome prepared for you therfoze watch. Take heauen and erth to wytn nes for I haue broken the euell in pces, and cre ated the good, for I lyue sayth the Lozde. Wo ther embrace thy chyldren, and bynge them vp wyth gladnes: make theyr sette as fast as a pyl ler, for I haue chosen the sayth the Lozde.

And those that be deade wyl I rayse by a gayne from theyr places, and bynge them out of the graues. For I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chyldren for I haue chosen the sayth the Lozde. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruantes Esay and Jermy, after whose counceyl I haue sancty fied and prepared for the. xii. trees with diuers frutes, and as many welles: flowing with mylke and honny. vii. mountaynes, wherupon there growe roses & lylics, wherin I wyl fyll my chyl dren with ioye. Execute iustyce for the widow be iudge for the fatherles, geue to the poore, de fende the comfozles, clothe the naked: heale the wounded, and syche: laughe not a lame man to scoyne, defend the crepel, and let the blynd come into the lycht of my clernes: wherlocuer thou fyndest I dead, take them and bury them, and I shal gene the, the fyrst place in my resurrection holde styl (O my people) and take thy reste

C for thy quietnes is come. Rede thy chyldren, O thou good nurse, stablyste theyr sette. As for my seruantes whom I haue geuen the, there shal not one of them perishe, for I wyl seke them fro thy nombze, vnto the selfe.

For when the daye of trouble and heauyness commeth, other shal wepe & be sorrowfull, but thou shalt be mery and plentuous. The heathen shal be gelous but they shal be able to do nothing agaynst the, sayth the Lozde. My handes shal couer the, so that thy chyldren shal nose the fyre euerlastyng. Be ioyful, O thou mother wyth thy chyldre, for I wil deliuer the sayth the Lozd Remember thy deade chyldren, for I shal brynge them out of the earth, & shewe mercy vnto them for I am mercyfull, sayth the Lozde Almighty Embrace thy chyldren, vntyll I come and shewe mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer: and my grace shal not faile.

I Edoas receaued a charge of the Lozde by pon the mounte Oreb, that I shoulde go vnto Is rael But when I came vnto Israel they set me at naught, and dyspysed the commaundemente of the Lozde. And therfoze I saue vnto you, O ye hearthen that hear and understand. Loke for your shepharde, he shal geue you euerlastyng rest, for he is nye at hande, that shal come in the ende of the world, We redy to the rewarde of kyngedome, for the euerlastyng lycht shal shyne vpon you for euermore. Ale the wadowe of this world, receane the ioyfulness of your gloze, I testifie my fauour openly: O receane the gyft that is geuen you, and be glad, geuynge thanckes vnto hym: that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Aryse vp, and stande fast: beholde, the nom bre of those that be sealed in the sealt of I Lozd whych are departed from the wadowe of the world, and haue receaued gloryous garments of the Lozde. Take thy nombze O syon, and put vpon the purpyle, whych haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lozde. The nombze of the chyldren whom thou longest for, is fulfilled: be seche the power of the Lozd, & the people which haue be ne called from the begynnyng, maye be halowed.

I Edoas saue vpon the mounte syon a greate people whom I coude not number, and they al prayed I Lozd with songes of thankes geuyng. And in the myddest of them ther was a yong ma of an hye stature, moze excellent the all they, & vpon euery one of theyr brades be set a crowne, and was euer hyer and hyer, whych I maruelled at greatly. So I asked the Angell, and sayde: wy: what are these? he answered & sayd vnto me: These be they, that haue put of mortal clothing, and put on the immortall and haue testified and knowledged the name of God Howe are they crowned & receane the rewarde

Then sayde I vnto the Angell: what ponge person is it, & crowneth them, and geueth them the Palmes in theyr handes? So he answered, and sayd vnto me it is the sonne of God, whom they haue knowledged in the world. Then began I greatly to comende them, that stode so styf for the name of the Lozd. And so the angel sayd vnto me: Go thy way, and tellyng people, what manner of thynges: and howe greate wonders of the Lozde thy God, thou hast sene.

Chapter. iii.

The wondrous workes whiche God dyd for the people of Israel, & howe maruelled that God sufferd the Babylonians to haue rule ouer hye people, which yett are spynners alio.

In the xxx. year of the fal of the cite I was at Babylō, and lay troubled vpon my bed, & my thoughtes came vpour my herte: for I saue the de solacion of syon, and the plentuous wealth of them that dwelte at Babylon, & my syet was soze moued, so I began to speake fearefull wordes to the most hygh, and sayde O Lozd Lozd, thou spakest at the begynnyng whē thou plantedst the earth (& that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundemente vnto the people, and a hodge vnto Adam, whych was a crea ture of thy handes, and hast vnto hym the bryth of lyfe, and so be lyued befoze the, & thou leddest hym into Paradyce: whych garden of pleasure thy ryghte hande had planted, & euer the earth was made: And vnto hym thou gauest commandement to loue thy waye whyche he transgressed, & immediately thou appointedst death in hym, & his generations. Of him came nacions: trybes, people, and kynnedes, oute of number. * And every people walked after their owne will, and by dyce thynges before the: & as for the commandmentes they dispised the.

But in proceſſe of time thou broughtest the water floude, vpon those that dwelt in þ world and destroyedst the. And lyke as the death was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these flouretheies one of them thou leſteſt, nameſpe Noe, with his household, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened þ when they þ dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiplye, & had gottē many children, and were a great people, they began to be moze vngodly then þ fyrſte floure when they all lyued so wychedlye before the, * thou dydest choſe the a man frome amonge them: whose name was Abraham: him thou louedst, and vnto hym only thou shewedst thy will, and madeſt an euerlaſting couenaunt with hym, promyſyng him that thou wouldest neuer for sake his ſede. And vnto him thou gaueſt Iſaac: vnto Iſaac also thou gaueſt Iacob, and Eſau. As for Iacob, thou didest choſe hym, and put baſt Eſau. * And so Iacob became a great multitude.

C And it happened that when thou leddest his ſede oute of Egypt: thou broughtest them vnto the mount Syn, bowynge downe the heauens ſetting faſt the earth, mouynge the ground makinge the depthes to ſhake, and troublinge the world. And thy gloꝝ went thowoe foue portes of fyre, and earthquakes, and wyndes & coldes: þat thou myghte geue the lawe vnto the ſede of Iacob, and by thynges vnto the generation of Iſrael. And yet thoueſt thou not a waye frome them that wyched herte, that thy lawe myght byng ſoþh true in them. For the fyrſt Adam baſt a wyched herte, transgreſſed: and was overcome, and so be al they that are borne of hym, * Thus remayned weakened with the lawe in the hertes of the people, with the wychednes of the roote: so that the good departed awaye and the euill abode ſtyll. And the tymes paſſed awaye, and the peeres were broughte to an ende. * Then dydest thou callye the vp a ſonne called Dauid, * whome thou commaundedſt to buyde a ctye vnto thy name, and to offeꝝ vpon incenſe and ſacrifyce vnto the chereyn. Thys was done now many peeres. Then the inhabitants of the cite ſoſone the, & in al thynges bydruen as Adam and al his generacyon had done, for they also had a wyched herte.

D And so thou gaueſt thy ctye ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. See they of Babylon then better and moze righteous then thy people that they ſhall therfore haue the domynyon of Syon: For when I came there and ſawe theſe vngodlyneſſe, and ſo greaſe wychedneſſe: that it coulde not be nombꝝed: yee, when my ſoule ſawe ſo many euell doers (in the .xxx. peere) my herte ſayled me, for I ſawe, howe thou ſuffereſt them in ſuche vngodlyneſſe, and ſpareſt the the wyched doers, but thyne owne people haſt thou rote oute, and preſerued thyne enemyes, and thys haſt thou not ſhewed me.

E I cannot perceaue howe thys happeneth. Do they of Babylon then better: then they of Syon? Is there any other people that knoweth the ſauynge that people of Iſrael? O: what generation haſt thou beloued thy couenauntes, as Iacob? And yet they rewarde appereth not, and they labour haſt no fruyte. For I haue goone deare and there thowout the heathen, and I ſe that they be ryed and welthy, and thynke not vpon thy commandmentes: Wyle they thou ſeeſt our wychednes nothe in the balauance and they alſo that dwell in the world, and ſo ſhal thy name be no where ſounde but in Iſrael. O: where is there a people vpon earth, that haſt he not ſpynned before the? O: what people haſt thou kept thy commandmentes? Thou ſhalt finde that Iſrael by name haſt kepte thy preceptes: but not the of her people and hearthen.

F The .iii. Chapter.
The Angel reproueth Iſaiah, becauſe he ſaith to ſee into the profounde iudgements of God.
And the Angel that was ſent vnto Iſaiah (whose name was Elſay) gaue me an anſwer and ſayde: thy herte haſt taken to much vpon it in this world, and thou thynkeſt to comprehend the waye of the hyſte. Then ſayde I: Per, my Loyde. And he anſwered me, and ſayde I am ſente to ſhewe the theſe wayes and to ſette forth the ſymptomes before the, wherof yf I canſt declare me one, I wyl ſhewe the alſo the way, that thou deſyreſt to ſe. And I ſhall ſhew the frome whence the wyched herte cometh. And I ſayde: Tell on my Loyde. Then ſayd he vnto me: So thy waye, weye me the weyght of the fyre, or meaſure me the blaſte of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is paſte. Then anſwered I, and ſayde: What man bozne, is able to do that? Why requireſt thou ſuch of me? And he ſayde vnto me: If I quid aſke the howe depe dwellyngeſ are in the ſee? O: howe greaſe waterſpynges are vpon the ſymmentes? O: howe greaſe waterſpynges are in the begynnynges of the depe? O: whych are the out goyngeſ of Paradyſe? Peradventure thou wouldeſt ſaye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe or hell, neyther dyd I ever clyme vp to heauen, ſeuertheleſſe now haue I aſked the but onely of fyre, and wynde, and of the daye, where thowoe thou haſt traunſyle, & frome the which thou canſt not be ſeperated, and yet canſt thou geue me none anſwere of them.

He ſayde moze ouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and ſuch as are growen vp with the canſt I not knowe: howe ſhal thy beſſel then be able to comprehend the waye of the hyſte, and nowe outewardelye in the corrupte world, to vnderſtande the corrupcyon that is euident in my ſyghte. Then ſayd I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all: then that we ſhulde lyue in wychednes, and to ſuffeꝝ, & not to knowe wherfoꝝ. He anſwered me and ſayde: I wente in a wold

In a wood, and the trees toke such a deuice, & sayd: Come let vs go, and fyghte agaynst f see that it maye departe awayne before vs, and that we maye make vs yet mooze woddys.

The floudes of f see also in lyke maner toke thys deuice, and sayde: Come let vs go vp, and fyghte agaynst the trees of the woode that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thoughte and deuice of the wood was but wayne and nothyng worth, for the fyze came & consumed the wood: The thoughte of the floudes of f see, came lyke wyse to noughte also, for the lande stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge nowe betwixt these two, whom woldest thou iustifye, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & sayde: Clerely it is a folysh thoughte that they both haue deuysed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and f see also hath bys place to beare bys floudes. The answered he me, and sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the woode, and the see to his floudes, euen so they dwell vpon earth maye vnderstande northynge but that whych is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, may on lyfe vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beseeche the, O Lord let me haue vnderstanding: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy bye thynges, but of such as we daily medle withal, namelye wherfoze that Israel is blasphemous of the heathen, & for what cause the people, whom thou hast euer loued, is geuen ouer, to be punished of vngodly nations: and why the lawe of oure fathers is brought to noughte and the wyrtten covenantes come to none effecte, and passe awaye oute of the world as the grethoppers, & oure lyfe is a very frate, & we are not worthy to optayne mercye. What wyll he do then vnto bys name, whych is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked questyon.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The moze thou searcheste, the moze thou shalt maruell, for the world hatheth fast to passe awaye, & can not comprehend the thynges that are promysed for the ryghteous in tyme to come, for this world is full of vnyghteousnes and weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges wherof thou askest me, I wyll tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruction therof is not yet come. If the euell nowe that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and if the place where the euell is sowen, passe not awaye, then can not thyng come that is sowen wyth good. For the coue of euell seede hath bene sowen in the bert of man fro the begynnynge, and howe muche vngodlynes hath he broughte vp vnto thys tyme, and howe much shall be yet byrnyge for the vntill he come into the barne.

Wondere nowe by thy selfe, why f come of euell seede is cut downe, howe greate a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayde: Howe & when shall these thynges come to passe? Wherfoze are oure yeaues se we and euell? And he answered me, say-enge: Hast not thou to much vpon the byest, for thy hallynes to be a bouehim is but wayne, thou makest to much ado. Wpd not the soules also of the ryghteous aske questyon of these thynges in their holynes, saying: Howe longe shall I hope of this fashon: When cometh the frute of my barne and my reward? And vpon thys Jeremi-el the Archangel gaue them answer, and sayde: Euen when the nombze of the seedes is fylled in pou, for he hath weyed the world in f balaunce: in measure & nombze hath he measured the time and moneth it not vntil the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I & sayd: O Lord howe are we full of synne, & for our sake paradyse is not, that the barne of the ryghteous shall not be fulfilled, because of the synne of the that dwell vpon earth.

So he answered me & sayd: So thy waye to a woman wyth chylde, & aske of her, when she hath fulfilled her nyne monethes, if her chyld be born may kepe the byrth any longer within her. The sayd I: O Lord, that can the not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secrete places of soules are lyke the preue chambze of a woman that tra-nayleth, and maketh hast, when the tyme of necessitye of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doth she hast to deliuer it if it is chynitted vnto her. Like what thou besyest to se, it shall be shewed the fro the begynnynge. Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy syght and if it be possible, & if I be mete therfoze, shewe me then whether there be mo to come the is past, or moze past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, & I shall expounde f symilitude vnto the. So I stode and behold, an whote burnynge ouen went ouer before me: & it happened f when the flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there wente ouer before me a watery cloud, & sent downe much rayne wyth a storme: & when f stormy rayne was past f dro-pes remayned styll. The said he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is moze then f dro-pes, & as fyre ex-cedeth f smoke, eue so the measure of the thynges that are past hath the vpper hande. Then went the dro-pes and the smoke aboue: and I prayde & sayde: maye I lyue (chynched thou) vntill that tyme? O what shall happen in thole dayes? he answered me, and sayd: As for the tokens wher-of thou askest me, I maye tel the aparte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe the, for I am not sent therfoze.

¶ Eldras and the Angell comen together.

Euerthelelle, as concernynge the to kens, marke this: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shall be taken in a greate nombze, and the waye of the frute shall be byd, & the lande shall be barre from sayth: but iniquyte shall haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast sene nowe, and as thou hast hearde longe ago. And the lande that thou seest nowe to haue rule, shall thou shortly se wast. But yf

God graunte the to lyue, thou shal see after the thyde trompet that I shal come sodenly wyne agayne in the nyght, and the more that tymes in the daye, & bloude shall dysp out of the wood, and the stone shall geue dys voyce, & the people shal be vnquyer: & euen he shall rule, whome they hope not, & dwell vpon earth, & the soules shall lye & I shal come to cast out dys hyde, & make a noyse in Ierusalem, whych many shall not knowe, but they that all heare the voyce therof.

There shal be a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shal be oft sent agayne, & the wyld beastes shall go theyr way, and monstrous we-men shall haue monstres, and salte waters shal be founde in the swete: one frende shall fyghte a-gaynst another: then shal dys & vnderstandyng be dys and put asyde into theyr secreete places, & shal be sought of many, & yet not be founde: then shal vnryghteousnes & voluptuousnes haue the upper hande vpon earth. One lande also shall as he another, & saye: Is ryghteousnes gone throrowe the? And it shal say: No, & the same tyme shal men hope, but nothyng opraue: they shal laboure, but theyr wayes shall not p'osper.

To we the such tokens I haue leue and yf thou wilt praye agayne, and wepe as nowe, and faste seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thynges. Then I awaked, & a fearefulness went throughe all my bodye, & my mynde was feble & carefull, so that I almost sounded wythall. So I Iungel that was come to talke wyth me, helde me, comforted me, and let me vp vpon my fete.

B And in the seconde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Wher hast thou bene? and why is thy countynance so heuy? Knowest thou not that Israel is commytred vnto the in the lande of theyr captiuitie? Al then and eate, & forsahe us not, as the shepheard that leaueh his flocke in the handes of the wyched wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: So thy wayes from me & come not nye me: and he berde it, and as I sayde: so wrote he his waye from me. And I fasted seuen dayes, mournyng and wepyng, lyke as Aleyel the angell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened that I thoughten of my dert were be-rytuous vnto me agayne, and my soule recea-ued the sperte of vnderstandyng, and I began to talke wyth the moost hyghet agayne, & sayd O Loide Loide, of euery wood of the earth and of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneparde: and of all landes of the whole woylde, thou hast chosen the one pit, & of howes of the grounde, thou hast chosen the one lyue: & of all the depthes of the see: thou hast fylled the one ryuer: and of al buylded cyties thou hast halowed wypon vnto thy selfe: & of al the soules & are created, thou hast named the one doue, and of all the cattell that are made thou hast prouyded the one shepe: & amonge al the myltitude of folkes: thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto thys people whome thou loudest, thou gaueste a lawe, that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Loide, why hast thou giuen thys one people ouer into manye? And vpon the one root thou hast prepared o ther, and why hast thou scattered the one onely people amonge many, whych treade them downe, yee, whych haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenantes.

And thoughe thou were enemy vnto thy people, yet shouldest thou punyche them wyth thyne owne handes. Nowe when I had spoken these woydes, the Iungell that came to me the nyght afoze was sente vnto me, and sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thyng that I saye and I shall tell the moze. And I sayde: Speake on my Loide. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou art soze vbered and troubled for Israels sake. I ouer-thou that people better then him that made the?
And I sayde: No Loide: but of very greife and compassion haue I spoken. For my raynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue expe-rence of the waye of the mooste hyghet, and to seke out parte of dys iudgemente. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayest not. And I sayde: Wherfoze Loide? Wherunto was I bozne then?
O why was not my mothers chyldbedd then my grane? So had I not sene the myserte and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: Romye the thyngges that are not yet come: gather me together & drowpes: that are scattered abrode, make me the floures grene agayne, that are wythered, open me the thyng that is closed: and byng me forth the wyndes, that are shut vp, shewe me & ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thyng, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O Loide Loide, who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not dys dwellinge wyth men.
As for me, I am vnto the: how may I the speake of these thynges wyder of thou askest me.

D Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgemente or in the ende, the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde, O Loide, yet arte thou nye vnto them that haue no ende:
and what shal they do that haue bene before me, or we that be nowe, or they that shal come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyl lyken my iud-gement vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of the last, euen so is there no swyftnesse of the fyrst. So I answered and sayde: couldest thou not make those that haue bene made, and be nowe, and that are for to come in one, that thou myghtest thewe thy iudgemente the soner?
Then answered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haue aboute the makere, neyther make the woylde holde them at once, that shal be created.

And I sayde: Howe hast thou sayd then vnto thy seruaut, & thou lyuinge maker, hast made the creature lyuinge at once, & the creature bare it: euen so myghte it nowe also beare them & be pyesent, at once. And he sayd vnto me: I the chyldbedd of a woma, & say vnto her: If & byng it for the chyldren, why dost thou it not together, but one after another? Whye her therfoze to byng to bynge forth. 2. children at once. And I saide we can not, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childer vnto the earth: for those that be sowne vnto it by p[ro]cesse of tyme. For lyke as a ponge childe maye not bynge forth the thyngges that belonge to the aged: euen so haue I ordeined the worlde whych I made.

And I asked and saide: Whyngest thou hast nowe geuen me a way. I wil speake befoze the, for our mother of whom thou haste tolde me is yet ponge and nowe she byaweth nye vnto age he aunswere me and sayde: A she a woman þ beareth children, & she shall tell the. Shape vnto her: wherfoze are not they (whome thou haste nowe bynged forth) lyke those þ were befoze þ but lesse of stature? And she that aunswere the:
They that be bozne in þ yowth of strenght, are of one saydon, & they þ are bozne in the tyme of age, (when the childer sayeth) are other wyse.
Consider nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were befoze you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures whych nowe begin to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strenght of yowthe. Then saide I: Loyde I beseeche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruante, by whome doest thou visite thy creature?

The. vi. Chapter.

The Angel instructed Eldras, and grueh hym answers to his questions.

I And he saide vnto me: In the beginnyng when þ grounde was made befoze the worlde stode, & euer the wyndes blew, befoze it thondred, & lychtened: & euer the foundations of Paradise were layde, befoze the faire flowers were sene, & euer þ moucable powers were flablyshed, befoze the innumerable multitude of Angels were gathered together, & euer þ bygh nesses of the ayre were lycht up, afore the measures of the firmat were named, & euer þ chimneys in Sion were hote, & of the present peaces were sought out, & of euer the inuencions of the þ nowe synne, were put asyde, befoze they were sealed þ nowe gather sayd for a treasure: the did I consider & ponder al these thynges, & all they were made thozowe me, & thozowe none other: by me also they be ended, & by none other. Then aunswere I & saide: whych shall be the parting of sander of the tyme? & when shall be the ende of the firste, & the begynnyng of it þ foloweth And he sayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob & Esau, were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde firste the helle of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Jacob is the begynnyng of it that foloweth. The hande of man ber wyte the helle and the hande. Other question: Eldras aske thou not.

I aunswere then & saide: O Loyde Loyde, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, I beseech the shewe thy seruante the ende of thy tokens wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght so he aunswere and saide vnto me: Stande by vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce & sounde. There shall come a greate noyse, but the place wher thou standest shall not be moued And therfoze when thou hearest the woyses be not afraied, for of the ende shall the woyses and foundation of the earth be vnderstande. And why: the woyses shal trbleth and quakethe for it knoweth, þ it must be chaunged at the end And it happened, þ when I had herde it, I stode by vpon my fete: and hehened, & beholde, there was a voyce, that spake, & the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it saide: Beholde, the dayes come, that I will begynne to byawen nye, & to visite them that dwell vpon earth, & will begynne to make inquisycon of the, what they be that haue burnt equite with vnrightheousnes, & when þ lorde estate of Sion shall be fulfilled: & whi þ world þ shall vanishe away: shall be ouersealed, the wil I do these tokens

The bookes shall be opened befoze the firmament, & they shall se all together, & the children of a yere olde shall speake wyth their voyces:
the women wyth childe shall bynge forth vntymely children of the 01 foure monethes olde, & they shall lye: & beailed by: and suddenly shall the sower places appere as þ vnsowne, the fullouse houses shall suddenly be founde emptye, and the troyete shall geue a sounde, whiche when euerpe ma heareth, they shall be hastily asyde.
* It that tyme shall frendes fighte one against another lyke enemyes, and the earth shall stand be in fcare with them.

The springes of the welles shall stand still, & in. in. houres they shall not renne. Whosouer remayneth from all these thynges þ I haue tolde þ, shall escape, and se my saluacion, & the ende of poure worlde. And the men that haue receaued shall se: they þ haue not tasted death from their by: th: & the hert of the indwelle: & shall be chaunged, & turned to another meanyng, for euil shall be put out, & dyscreit shall be quenched. A s for faith, it shall flourish, corrupcion shall be euertome & the truth, whych hath bene so long wout frut, shall be declared. And it happened whi he tolde me, þ I loked demurely vpon him befoze whi I stode, & these wordes saide he vnto me: I am come to the tyme of þ night so to come.

If thou wilt praye yet moare, and sake seuen dayes agayne: I shall tell the moare thyngges, and greater then befoze: for thy voyce is hearde befoze the hyghest for why: the myghetie hath sene thy rpygheous dealyng, he hath sene also thy chaustie, whych thou hast had euer sence thy yowthe & therfoze hath he sente me to shewe the all these thynges, & to sape vnto the. C Be of good comfort, and feare not, & haste not with the tymes that are past to thynke vaine thynges, & make not haste of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, & fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I myght fulfil the thynges: whiche he tolde me. In the viii. nyght was my hert vexed with in me agayne. And I began to speake befoze þ hyghest: for my spyt was greatly set on fier, & my soule was in distresse, & I saide: O Loyd, þ spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnyng saye vnto the, that it groweth muche moulde vnto of earthen vessels are made, but litle of it that gold cometh of. Euen so is it with the woorde of thyngs woode. * There be many created, but fewe shal be preferred. Then answered I & sayde: Then swalowe by the wynde (thou soule) and deuoure the vnderstandyng, for thou art agreed to heren & to geue care, & wyllyng to prophete: for thou hast no longer space geuen the, but onely to lyue. O Lorde, wylt thou not geue thy seruant leaue, that he may pray before the, and that thou mayest geue seed vnto oure herte, and buyde oure vnderstandyng that there may come fruite of it: and that every one whiche is corrupte, and beareth the state & and place of a man, may lyue?

For thou art alone, and we al are one woode in thy handes. lyke as thou hast sayde & lyke as the body is fashioned nowe in the mothers wombe, & groweth the members & thy creature is preferred in fyre & water: & nyne moonethes doth thy woode suffer thy creature which is fashioned in her: but the thyng that preferreth, and it that is preferred shal bothe be kept together: and when tyme is, the wombe deliuere the thyng that is kepte and growen in her.

For thou hast commaunded the bestes to geue milke vnto the frut, that the thyng which is created and fashioned, may be nourished for a tyme: & then thou dyspolest & ordrest it wth thy merce, byngest it by wth thy ryghteous-nesse: nuturest it in thy lawe, and resourrest it wth thy vnderstandyng, moste ift it as thy creature, & makest it lyuyng as thy woode. Wherupon then that I bestoirst him, which wth so great labours is created & fashioned thow wth thy co-mmandement, I couldest lyghtly ordayne also, & the thyng which is made myght be preferred.

And this I spake now of all men in general as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose saue I am sayd: & of thine inherite as for whose cause I mourne: & of Israel, for whome I am wo-ful: and for Jacob: for whose saue I am greued therfore begin I to pray before the, for my selfe & for the, for I se the sal of vs: euen of vs, & d well vnder the. But I haue herd & swiftnesse of Iudge which is to come: therfore heare my voice, & vnderstande my wordes: & I shal speake before the.

This is the begynnyng of the wordes of Elihu, before he was created. O Lorde thou that dwellest in euerlastyngenesse, whose eyes are lyfte vp in the ayre, whose throte is exceadyng hye, whose gloire and magnyfyce may not be comprehended, before whom the hostes of heauen stande wth trembluyng, whose hepyng is turned in wyne and fyre, whose word is true whose talkyng is steadfast, whose commaun-dement is stronge, whose ordynance is fearful, whose lookes dyeth by the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melte away and whose truth beareth witness: O heare the prayer of thy seruant, and marche wth thyne eyes the pericion of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue I wyl speake, & so longe as I haue vnderstandyng, I wyl aunswere & looke not vpon the synnes of the people whiche serue in the tynthe. Haue no respect vnto the wychede synnes of the heathen, but to the dy-lyze of those that hepte thy testymonyes wth sozowes. Thynke not vpon those that haue walked fapnedlye before the, but vpon them, whych wth wyl haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy them, whiche haue had beastly maners, but to looke vpo the that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacon at them, whiche are whosre the beastes: but loue them, & alway put theyr trust in thy righteounesse and gloire: for we and oure fathers haue all the same synnes & disease, but because of our synnes I walt be called merciful

For if thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou walt be called merciful, where as we haue no wozenes of ryghteounesse: for the ryghteous whych haue layde by manye good wozeches together, shall oure of theyr dedes receaue reward. For what is man, & thou wouldest take dyspleasure at him? O what is I corruptible mortal generation, & thou wouldest be so rough toward him

* For of a truth there is no man among the that be bozne, but he hath beault wychedly, and among the fapthfull there is none whiche hath not done amysse. For in this (O Lorde) thy righ-teounesse and thy goodnesse shal be praysed & declared, if thou be merciful vnto them, which are not ryche in good wozeches.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Some thynges hast thou spoken a ryght, & accordyng vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wyl not verry-ly consyder the wozeches of them, whych haue sinned before the death, before I iudgement, before destruction: but * I wyl reioyse ouer the woode & thought of the righteous. I wyl remembere also I pylgrymage, & holpe makyng & I reward. lyke as I haue spoken now, so shal it come to passe. For as I husband man soweth much seed vpon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thyng that is sowed or planted is not al kept safe, neyther doth it al take roote: Ene so is it of them that are sowed in the woode, they shal not all be preferred.

I answered then and sayd: If I haue founde grace, then let me speake lyke as the husbunde manes seede perpereth, if it receaue not rayne in due season, or if there come to muche rayne vpon it: Euen so perpereth man also whiche is created wth thy handes, and is lyke vnto thine owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose saue thou hast made all thynges, and lykened hym vnto the husbunde mans seede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lorde: but spare the people & haue mercy vpon thine owne inherite auncer O be merciful vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Thyngges present are for I present, & thynges to come for such as be to come. For I lacketh yet moche seyng thou mayest loue my creature about me.
I haue of tymes drawen ny vnto the, but neuer to I vnrightheous. In this also I art maruelous before the best in that thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becometh the, and hast not regarded thyne thyne owne selfe, that thou art had in such honnour amonge the righteous. Therfore shall greate wretchednesse and myserie come vpon them & in the latter tyme shall dwell in þe world, because they haue walked in greate pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke oute glory for such as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradyse opened: the tree of lyfe is planted, & tyme to come is prepared, plenteuousnesse made ready, a cytyens buylded for you, and rest is prepared: pece, perfecte goodnesse and wysedome.

The rote of euil is marched from you, the weakenesse and moeth is byd from you, & into hel shal eth corruption in forgetfulnesse. Sozowes are vanished away: & in þe ende is shewed þe reasur of immortalytie. And therfore aske þe no moze questiōs concerning þe multitude of the that perish. For they haue rane libertye, despised þe iust thoughte sozme of his law, & forsahe his wayes.

Sozouer, they haue troden downe þe righteous, & as sayde in theyr herte, that there is no God: yea, and that wittingly: for they dy.
For lyke as the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euen so is tyme and payne prepared for the. For it was not his wil þe men shulde come to naughte: but they whiche he created, haue despised the name of hym that made them, and are vnehauefull vnto hym, whyche prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgement now at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto seue namely vnto the and suche as be lyke the.

Then answered I & sayde: Beholde, O Lord nowe hast þe shewed me the multitude of the toheng, which thou wilt begyn to do at the laste: but at what tyme & when þe hast not shewed me.

The. ix. Chapter.

¶ Eldras hath vpon hym shewed vnto hym.

I answered me then, and sayde: ¶ I desire thou the tyme dyspente in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whyche I haue tolde the before, so shalte thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherein the byeste will begynne to vplet þe world, which he made. And whē there shalbe lene an earthquake & vprose of the people in the world, then shalt þe wel vnderstande þe most byeste spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen fro the begynnyng.

For lyke as all that is made in the world hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest. Euen so the times also of the byeste haue playne begynnynge in wonders, and sygnes, and the ende in woekynge and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shalbe able to escape by his woekes and by sayth: wherein þe haue beieued, shalbe preferred from the sayde peryls and shal se my sauour in my lande, and within my borders: for I haue halowed me fro the world. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche now haue abused my wayes, and they that haue caste them oute dyspente, shall dwell in paynes.

For suche as in theyr lyfe haue receaued be nefites, & haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyche they had yet fre dome, and when they had yet open lyfure of amendement & conuersyon, and vnderstode not but dyspensed it: the same make knowe it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomoze careful, howe the vngodly shalbe punished, and howe the righteous shalbe saued, and whole the world is: and when it is. Then answered I: & sayde: I haue tolde before, & nowe: I speake & wilt speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them whyche perishe, then shalbe saued, lyke as the floure is greater then the choppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the herbe: as the floures be, so are the colours also: suche as the woekeman is, such is the woeker: and as the husbandman is him selfe, so is his husband also, for it was the tyme of the world.

And when I prepared for them that are nowe, as euer the world was made, wherein they shulde dwell, then was there no man that wytstode me. Nowe when euery one was, and the maker also in the world which is nowe prepared, and the moneth that reafeth not, and the lawe whyche is vnsceacheable: theyr maners were corrupte. So I considered the world, & beholde, there was peryl, because of the thoug-tes, that were come into it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wyne-berpe of the grapes, & plante, from among ma-nye generacions. Let the multitude perishe then, whyche are growen vp in wayne: & let my grape and wyneberpe be kepte: euen my plants for wyth great labour haue I made it vp.

¶ Therfore, if thou wilt take vpon the yet scul dayes mo (but þe shal not fast in them) go thy way then into the felde of floures, where no house is builded: and eate only of the floures of the felde, fast no fleshe, dysynhe no wyne, but eate þeape vnto the byeste continually: so wilt come, and talke with the.

So I wente my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, & vnto eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of þe same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth and began to talke before the byeste, and sayde O Lord, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, thou hast declared & opened, thy selfe vnto our fathers, in the wyldernes, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypte, and thou spakest sayng: heare me O Israel, and make my woordes thou serde of Jacob. Beholde, I saw my lawe in you, & it shal bring frute in you, & þe shalbe honoured in it for euer. For our fathers whyche receaued the lawe kepte it not, & obserued not thy ordynan-ces & statutes, and the frut of thy law was not declared: for it might not: for whyt was thine * For they receaued it, perished because they kept not the thyng that was sown in them.

as the see a ship, as a vessel meate & drinke, that when it perysheth as is broken wherein a thing is sown, as wherein any thinge is put: & thynge also perysheth & are broken: which are sown as put therein. But vnto vs it hath not hapned so, for we haue receaued the lawe, perysheth in synne: and oure herte whiche also receaued the lawe: notwithstandinge, & the lawe perysheth not: but remaineth in his labour.

And when I considered these thynges in my herte after this maner, I looked about me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryghte syde, * I sawe a woman, whiche mourned looze, made greate lamentacion, and wepte with lowde voyce: her clothes were rente in peeces, and she had ashes vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayd: wherfore wepest thou? Why artest thou so soze and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me: Why let me bewaile my selfe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am soze vexed in my minde, and broughte vnto lowe. And I sayde vnto her: What a plecth thou? Who hath done any thyng to thee? tell me: She sayde: I haue bene vnfaythful and barren, and haue had an husbnde thys yeres. And these thys yeres I doo nothinge elles save and nyghte, and all houres: but make my prayer to the hys. After thys yeres God berde me thys handmayden, and looked vpon my miserie, considered my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of hym, so was my husbnd also and all my nryghbours, and we gaue greate honoure vnto the myghte. And I nourished him with great traunple. And when he grew vp and came to the tyme, that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feast.

The. i. Chapter.

As it happened, that when my sonne wente into hys chambze, he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthwe we all the lyghtes, & all my nryghbours rose vp to comforte me.

Then toke I my rest vntill the seconde day at nyght: & when they had al rested, & they myght comforte me, I rested & also rose vp by nyghte, & fled, & am come hether into this felde as I seest & am purposed not to come in the cty, but to remaine here & nether to eate nor drynke, but continuallye to mourne and faste, vntill I dye.

Then let I my meditations and thoughtes fall that I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou sayst the woman: seest thou not oure heuynesse and mournyng, and what happeneth vnto vs? Howe shon oure mother is all woful and soze: and how she is cleane broughte downe and in misery: for we be all nowe in heuynesse and make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull.) Is for? & heuynesse? thou takest it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth and she shal tel the & it is she whiche ought (by reason) to mourne, for the sal of so many that growe vpon her.

For frome the begynnyng all men are boyn of her, and other shal come: and behold they walke almost all into destruccyon, and many of them shal be rooted oute.

Alho shulde then (by reason) make more mournyng then she, that hath losse so greate a multitude: and not thou whiche arte soze: but for one. But yf thou woldest say vnto me: Why mournyng is not lyke the mournyng of the earth: for I haue losse the fruyte of my bodye, whiche I bare with heuynesse: but the earth is accordyng to the maner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth agayne into her as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: lyke as I haste boyn, with traunple and sorowe, euen so the earth all frome the begynnyng geueth her fruyte vnto man, for hym that made her. And therfore wytholde thy sorowe and heuynesse by thy selfe, & loke what happeneth vnto the heare it strongly. For if thou iudgeth the marke and ende of God, to be righteous and good, and receaueste his counsaile in tyme, thou shalte be commended therein. So thy waye then into the cite to thy husbnde.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyl I not do: I wyl not go into the cite: but here wyl I dye. So I communed more with her, and sayde: do not so, but be comforted, & folowe me, for howe many salles hath shon? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seest that oure Sanctuarie is layed wast, oure aulere broken, oure temple destroyed, our playmyng of instrumentes and singyng layde downe the chancel: & vnyng put to silence, oure myght is vanyshe awaye, the lyghte of oure candel: syche is quenched, the Arke of the couenante is taken from vs, al oure holpe thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vnto oure vs, is dishonoured: oure chyldzen are put to shame our preastes are vnted: our Leuytes are caried awaye into captiuitie: our virgins are defiled, and oure wyues rauished: our ryghteous men spoyled: and oure chyldzen destroyed: our strong men are broughte in bondage, and oure strong wathys are become weak: and shon (which seale is the greatest of al) is loosed vp from her: whiche for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore make of thy great heuynesse and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the myghte maye be merciful vnto the: & that the hys maye geue the rest from thy labour and traunple. And it happened, that when I was talkyng wyth her, her face dyd shyne and glister, so that I was afrayed of her and mused what it might be. And immediatly she cast out a great voyce, verie fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I looked, & beholde, the woman appered vnto me nomore: but there was a cite buylded, and a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacion.

Then was I afrayed, and cryed, with a loude voyce, and sayde: Where is the Angel? which came to me at the fyrst? For he hath led me to come in many consideracions & bygh thoughtes, & myne ende is turned into corrupcion: and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakyng speaking these wordes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me: and I sape as one that had bene deade, and myne vnderstandyng was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and comforted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the, and why is thine vnderstandyng veyed? and the vnderstandyng of thy herte? and wherfore arte thou soope? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken me, and I haue doone: accordyng vnto thy wordes, I went into the fride, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. he sayd vnto me: Stande vp, and be manlye, and I will geue the exhortacyon.

Then sayde I: speake vnto me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I dye in wayne: for I haue sene that I knowe not, and heard that I do not knowe. O: Shall my vnderstandyng be dyscyned, and my mynde? But nowe I beseeche the that thou wylt shewe thy seruauit of this world. he answered me then, and sayd heare me, and I will enforme the, and tell the wherfore thou art asrayed, for the best hath opened many secret thynges vnto the.

he hath sene that thy wayes are eyght, and that thou takest sorowe contynualy for thy people: and makest great lamentacyon for syon: and therfore vnderstande the vilyon, which thou sawest a litle while ago after this maner. Thou sawest a woman mouynge, and thou hast comforted her: neuertheless nowe seest thou the likenesse of a woman nomore, but I thought test there was a cytye buylded: and lyke as she tolde the of the sal of her sonne: so this is a sounswere. The woman whome thou sawest is syon: and where as she tolde the, that she hath ben thy thynges vnfertull and barren, those are the thynges wherin there was no offering made in her.

But after thy thynges, Salomon builded her and offered, and then bare the barren a sonne. And where as she tolde the: that she noysshed hym woth laboure, that was the dwellynge of Ierusalem. But where as she tolde the sonne dyed when he came into her chambr, that is the sal of Ierusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse howe she mourned for her sonne: what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou art sope in thy mynde, and suffrest fro thy heart for her, so hath he shewed the her clemente, and the sayntnesse of her beauty.

And therfore I had the remayn in the felde where no house is buylded. For I knewe that the best woulde shewe thes vnto the: therfore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundacion nor building is. For in the place where the best wyl shewe his cytye, there shal be no mans buyldyng. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne herte be asrayed, but goo thy waye in, and se the gloriouse saye buyldyng, and howe greate it is, and howe greate thou thinkest it, after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalt thou heare as much as thyne eares may comprehend. For thou arte blessed above many other, and art called with the best as the ferue

But to morowe at nyght thou shalt remayne here: and so shall the best shewe the visyons of hygh thynges, which we wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earth, in the last dayes. So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he commaunded me.

Ecce xi. Chapter.

In this chapter and in the two nexte chapters he sheweth of certain visyons, and of the interpretacyon thereof.

When sawe I a dreme: and beholde, I here came vp from the sea an Eggle, which had twelue wynges, and thre heades: And I sawe and beholde, he spredde his wynges ouer all the earthe, and all the windes of the ayre blew in them, so they were put together agayne.

And I beheld, and oute of his fethers there grew out other lyke contrarie fethers, & he desceended, the head in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the reyside.

Wherouer I sawe, that the Eggle flew with his wynges, and raygned vpon earthe, & ouer all them that dwelle vpon the earth. And I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, and no man spake agaynst him no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also the Eggle stode vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sounde with his fethers, and a voyce saynge after this maner: watche not all together, slepe euery man in his owne place, and watche for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last. neuertheless, I sawe, that the voyce went not oute of his heades, but from the myddest of his bodie. And I nombred his contrarie fethers, and beholde, there were eyght of them. And I looked, and beholde vpon the eyght syde there arose one fether: and raygned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that when it raygned, the end of it came, and the place ther of appered nomore. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, and raygned, and had a greate tyme: and it happened, when it raygned, the end of it came also lyke as the first, so that it appered nomore.

Then there came a voyce vnto it, and sayde heare thou that hast kept in the earth so longe this I saye vnto the: befor: thou begynnest to appere nomore. There shal none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the third and raygned as the other afore, & appered nomore also. So went it with all the reyside one after another, so that euery one raygned, and then appered nomore. Then I looked, and beholde in proccesse of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the eyght syde, that they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but within a while they appered nomore: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After this I looked and behold, the twelue fethers appered nomore and the two wynges, and there was no more vpon the Egles body, but two heades that rested and lyce fethers. Then saw I also that the fyre fethers were parted in two, and remained vnder the head, that was vpon the eyght syde: for the foure contynned in the place. So I looked, and beholde: they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. The was there one set vp, but shortly it appered nomore, and the seconde was lone awaie then the thyrde. And I beheld, and loo, the two thoughte also by theim selues to caryne, & why they so thoughte, behold, they awaked one of the heades that were at rest: namelpe, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled wth hym, & the heade was turned with them, & were by hym, & byd eat vp the two vnder wynges & woulde haue ragned

E But this heade put the hole earthe in feare and bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelte vpon earthe with muche labour, and he had the gouernance of the world, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I lohed, and beholde the head & was in the myddest, sodaynly appered nomore, lyke as the wynges, then came the two heades, whiche ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelte therein. And I behelde, and lo the heade vpon the ryghte syde deuoured & was vpon the lefte syde. And I heard a voyce which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consyde & thyng that thou seest. Then I sawe and behold as it were a Lyon that roareth, rennyng hasty-ly out of the wood, and he sent oute a mannes voyce vnto the Begle, and saide: heare thou: I wyl talke with the, & the byggest shall say vnto the: Is it not thou that haste the victoie of the foure beastes, whom I made to raign vpon earth and in my world, & that the ende of their tymes myght come thowme them?

D And the fourthe came, and ouer ranne al the beastes that wer passe, and had power ouer the world with great fearfulnesse, & ouer the hole compass of the earthe with the moste wyched laboure, and so longe tyme dwelte he vpon the earthe with dyscreit, and the earthe haste thou iudged not with trouth. For thou hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurte & peacable and quyet: thou haste loued spere, & destroyed the dwel-lynges of theun that broughte forth the frute, and hast caste downe the wallies of such as byd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongfull dealinge and blasphemie come vp vnto the highest: & thy wyche vnto the myghty. The byest also hath lohed vpon the proude tymes, & beholde they are ended and they: abominacions are fulfilled.
And therfore appere no more thou Begle, and thy horrible wynges, & thy wicked fetters, & thy vngreuous heades, & thy synful clawes, and all thy vaine body, & the earth may be refreshed, & come agayne to her selfe: when she is deliuered from thy violence: & that she maye hope for the iudgement and merce of hym that made her.

The. xii. Chapter.

AD it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Begle I sawe, and beholde, the heade that afoze had the vpper hande, appered no more: neyther byd the foure wynges appere any more, that came to hym and were set vp to caryne: & the byng dome was small and full of vyroure. And I sawe & beholde they appered nomore, and the whole body of & Begle was byent, and the earthe was in greates feare. Then I awaked out of the trance of my mynde, & from great feare, and sayde vnto my spiryte: Loo, this hast thou gent me in that thou searcest oute the wayes of the byest: loo, yet am I wepy in my mynde, and verie weake in my spiryte, and lytle strenght is there in me, for the greates feare that I receyued this nyght.

Therfore now I wyl beseeche the byest that he wyl comfort me vnto the ende: & I sayde Lord Lorde, if I haue founde grace before thy syght and if I am iustified wth the before many & ther, & if my prayer be come vnto the face of thy face, comfort me then, and shewe me thy seruante the interpretation and plain differene of this horrible syght, that thou mayst perfectly comfort my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpre-tacion of this syght. The Begle whome thou sauest come vnto the sea, is the byng dome whiche was sene in the visyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him: for nowe I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a byng dome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all byngdomes that were before it. In the same byng-dom shall twelue bynges raigne one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to caryne & shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: & this doo the twelue wynges signifye, whiche thou sawest. As for the voyce & I spake, and that thou sawest goo oute from the heades, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after & time of the byng dome there shall aryse greates stry-wynges, and it shall stande in parrill of falling.
Reuerchelesse, it shall not yet fall, but shall be set into his begynnyng. And the ryght vnder wynges whiche thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, & in hym there shall aryse eight bynges, whose tyme shall be but smal, and their yeres swyfte, and two of them shall perishe. But when the myddest tyme cometh, there shall be four kept in the tyme, when bys tyme begyn-neth to come, & it maye be ended, but two shall be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest the heades re-fryng: this is the interpretation. In bys laste shall the byest rapt vnto the byng domes, & call many agayne into them, and they shall haue the dominyon of the earth, and of those & dwell ther in, with much labour aboue all those that wer before them. Therfore are they called & heades of the Begle: for it is they that shall byng forth his wychednesse agayne, and & shall persourme and synne his laste. And where as thou sawest that the great heade appered nomore, it signifyeth: that one of them shall dye vpon his bed and yet with pain, for the two & remain shall be slayne with the sword. For the sword of & one shall deuoure the other, but at the laste, shall he fall thowme the sword hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnder wynges vpon the heade that is they, whome the by-est hath kepte vnto the ende: this is a small byng dome,

kyngdome & full of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawest rising vp, oute of the wood, and roaring and speaking vnto the Aegle, and rebukynge hym for his vnryghteousnesse, is the wynde whiche the hyghest hath kepte for them and for theyr wychednesse vnto þe ende he shall repproue them, & rent them asunder befoze them. For he shall set them lpyng befoze the iudgement, and shall rebuke them: for the respydue of my people shall be deliuer with trouble, these þe be persecuted ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull, vntill the comynge of the daye of iudgement: wherof I haue spoken vnto þe from the begynning. This is the dreame þe thou sawest: and this is interpretacion. Thou only hast bene mete to know the secret of the dyest.

D Therefore wyte all these thynges that thou hast sene in a booke, and hyde them, and teach them the wyse in the people, whose vertes thou knowest maye comprehend and kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seven dayes mo, that it maye be thewed the whatsoeuer it please the hyghest to declare vnto the: and wite that he went his waye.

And when all the people perceyued, that the seven dayes were past, & I not come again into the cytie, they gathered them al together, from the leest vnto the mooste, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? & what euell haue we done agaynste the, that thou forsakest vs, and syttest here in this place? For of all the people, thou only art leste vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candle in a darcke place, & as an haueyn & shippe preserved from þe tempest. Haue we not elles aduersyte pynough, but thou must forsake vs? Where is not better for vs: that we had bene brynte wyth dyon? For we are not better then they that dyed there: and they wepe with loud vopce. Then answered I them, and sayde: We of good comferte, O Israel, & be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come into this place to praye, because of the myserte of Israel, that I myghte see the mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuary. And now go your waye home every man and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went theyr waye into the cytie, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styll in the felde seven dayes, as the Angel had me, and bydeat only of the flowers of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in thoir daus.

The xliii. Chapter.

And it happened after the seven dayes that I dreamed a dreame by nyghte. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the sea, that it moued al the flouds th. rof. And I looked, and beholde, the man was stronge, and increased with the cloudes of drachyn: and when he turned his countynance to consyder, al the thynges trembled that were sene vnder hym: and when the vopce went out of his mouth, all they brynt & brarde hym lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered together a myltitude of men oute of nombie, from the four wyndes of the heauen, to fyght agaynste the man that came out from the sea. And I loked and beholde, he graued himselfe a great mountayn, and stowe vp vpon it. But I wold haue sene þe border or place wherout the hyl was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that al they whiche came to fyght agaynst hym, were sore afrayed & yet they ourte fyght. Aenethelle, when he sawe the fearenesse & vpolence of þe people he neither lyfte vp his hande nor helde a swerde nor any weapon: but onely (as I sawe) he sente oute of his mouth as it had bene a blaste of fyre & oute of his lippes the wynde of the flame: & oute of his tong he caste out sparches & stormes: & they were all myte together: the blaste of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, & the great storme, and fell with a rushe vpon the people, whiche was prepared to fyght, & brynt them vpon every chone so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothing sene, but only duste and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same manne come downe from the mountayn, and calling vnto hym another peaceable people, and there came muche people vnto hym: some were glad some were sorre, some of them were bound, so þe they were carped and brought forth.

Then was I syche thow w great feare, and I aaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruant all thy wonders, from the begynnyng and hast counted me worth, that thou myghtest receyue my prayer: the we me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I consyder in my vnderstandynge: woe vnto them þe that be leste in those dayes, and much moze woe vnto them that are not leste behynde, for they that were not leste were in heynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layde vp in the latter dayes whiche shall happen vnto them, and to those that are not leste behynde. Therefore are they come into greete paylles and many necessytes lyke as these dreames declare. Per is it easer, that he whiche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe a waye as a cloude oute of the woide, and nowe to see the thynges that shall happen in the laste.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretacion of the fyght that I shewe the, and I wyll open to the, the thyng that thou hast requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are leste behynde, & this is the interpretacion. He that taketh away the parrell in that tyme, hath kepte hym self. They that be fallen into harme are suche as haue workes and saye vnto the mooste myghte. Knowe this therefore, that they whiche be leste behynde, are moze blessed then they that be deade. This is the meanyng of the visyon. Where as thou sawest a man coming vp from the drepe of the see, the same is he whome God the hyghest hath kepte a great s. son: whiche by his owne selfe shall deliuer his creature

The. iiii. booke.

creature and he shall orde them that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest, that out of his mouth there came a blast of wynd, fyre and flood: and howe that he lyft vp neyther sword nor weapon, but that the rushing in of hym destroyed the hole multitude, that came to fyght against hym: it signifieth, that the dayes come when God wyll deliuer them that are vpon earth and in a traunce of mind shal be come vpon the that dwel in the earth. And one shal undertake to fyght agaynst another, one cytie agaynst another, one place agaynst another, * and one people agaynst another one realme agaynst another.
Whiche this cometh to passe, the which tokens coe p I shewd before: & then shal my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man.
And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shal in theyr owne launde leaue the battayl that they haue one agaynst another, and an innumerable multitude shal be gathered together as they that be willing to come, & to ouercome hym by fyghtyng. But he shal stande vpon the toppe of the mounte syon. Nevertheless, syon shall come, and shal be shewed, being prepared and buylded for all men like as thou sawest the tpy grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shal rebuke the people, that are come for theyr wyckednesse, with the tempeste: and for theyr euell ymagynacions: and theyr paynes wherwith they shal be punished, are lykened vnto the flame: and without any labour shal be destroyed them, even by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peacable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes which were carryed away prisoners out of theyr owne launde, * in the tyme of Oleas the kyng, whom Salmanaasar the king of Assyria toke prisoner, and carryed them ouer the water, and so came they into another launde.

But they gaue them this counsaile, that they shoulde leaue the multitude of the heathen and to go forth into a farther countrey, where theyr mannynde dwelt: that they myght there keepe theyr statutes, whiche they neuer kepte in theyr owne launde. And so they entred in at the narrowe passages of the water of Euphrates, & so God shewed tokens for them, * and held styll the flood tyl they were passed ouer, for thow the countrey, there was a great way: namely of a yere, and a halfe iourney for the same regyon is called Alareth. Then dwelt they there vntill the latter tyme: & when they come forth agayn the hyghest shal holde styll the springes of the flood agayn, that they may go thow, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be left behynd of thy people, are those that be founde within my boilder. Nowe when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal defende his people & remayne, and then shal he shewe great wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lord, Lord, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man commynge vp from the deape of the see? And he saide vnto me: Lpke as thou canst neyther see out nor knowe these thynges that are in the depe of the sea, euen so mayest thou not see my sonne, or those that be with hym, but in the tyme of the dape.

This is the interpretacion of a dreame whiche thou sawest, therfore thou only arte lyghtened for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, & applied thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it.

* Ty lyke haue thou ordered in wyse dome, and
* haue called vnderstandyng thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyghest. After the dayes, I wyl shewe & more and talke with & more at large: pre, deuyce and wonderous thynges wyl I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth vnto the felde, grynnyng praise and thankes greatly vnto God, because of this wonders whiche he byd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and such as is in tyme, and there I sat the dayes.

The. v. Chapter.

God appereth to Elias in the bush, & sheweth hym what he shal do

Vpon the thirde day I sat vnder an Oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush and said: Elias Elias. And I sayde: here am I Lord, and I doo vp vpon my feete. Then spake he vnto me: in the bush byd I appere vnto Moses, and talked with hym when my people serued in Egypt. And I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought hym vpon the mount syon, wher I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous wozkes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the end, and commaunded hym sayng These woordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I saye vnto the, that thou lay vp in thyne herte the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions whiche I haue shewed the, for thou shalt be receyuer of all, thou shalt be turned, and remayne with my counsell, and with such as be lyke the, vntill tyme be ended. For the woilde hath loste his yowth, and tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is druyded into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone already, and halfe of the tenth parte yet remayneth there that whiche is after the halfe of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and orde thy house, and reforme thy people: comforte such of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruccyon, let go from the, most all thoughtes: cast a way the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: lay vp in some places the thoughtes that are most beuy vnto the, and haue the to flye from these times: for such euell & wyckednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shal they do muche worse.

* For the weaker & the woilde and the tyme is the more shal synne and wyckednesse increase in them that dwell vpon earth. For the truth is fled farre a way & lyeing is hard at hande. For now hasteth the daye to come, that thou hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lord, I wyl goo as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme & people which are present. But they that shal be bozne afterwarde, who

who wyl exhozte or rebuke them? Thus the woꝛlde is set in darkenes: and they ſ dwel ther in are without lpyghte. for thy lawe is kyndled: becauſe no man knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or ſ ſhalbe done. Pl I haue founde grace before the, ſende the holy ghoſte into me and I ſhall wyte all that hath bene done in the woꝛlde ſyns the begynning whiche was wyten in thy lawe, ſ men maye ſynde ſ path, and ſ they which wyl lpyc in ſ latter daies, may lpyc

And he answered me ſaying: So thy wape gather the people together, and ſaie vnto them that they ſe the not ſo forty daies, but loke thou gather many bore trees, and take with ſ ſwarea, Dabſia, Selemia, Scanus, and Aſiel: theſe ſyre whiche are reby to wyte ſwiftly, ſ come herber, and I ſhal lpyght a candle of vnder ſtandynge in thyne hert, whiche ſhall not be put oute tyll the thynges be perſourmed whiche ſ ſhalt begyn to wyte. And then ſhalt ſ declare ſome thynges openly vnto the perfecte, ſ ſome thynges ſhalt thou ſeue ſecretly vnto ſ wyſe To moꝛow this houre ſhalt ſ begyn to wyte.

C Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together ſ ſayd heare theſe woꝛdes. O Iſrael: Oure fathers at the begynnyng were ſtraungers in Egypt from whence they were delpyered, and receiued the lawe of lpye: whiche they he pre not, whiche ye alſo haue traſſeſſed after them. Euen was this lande, ſ the lande of ſpon part: demonge you by lot to poſſeſſe. But your fathers and ye your ſelues alſo haue done vnpyghteſſeſſe, and haue not kept the wayes whiche the hygh- eſt commaunded you. And ſo ſomuch as he is a righteous Iudge, he toke from you in tyme the thyng that he had geuen you. And nowe are ye here and your byethen emonge you. Therfore yf ſo be that ye wyl ſubdue your owne vnder- ſtandynge, and reſortme your herte ye ſhalbe kept alpye, and after death ſhall ye obtaine mer- cy. For after death ſhall the iudgement come, when we ſhal lpyc agayn: ſ then ſhall ſ names of the righteous be manifeſt, and the woꝛches of ſ vngodly ſhalbe declared. Let no man ther- fore come nowe vnto me, noꝛ aſke any queſtion of me theſe ſoꝛtye daies.

D So I toke the ſyre men (as he commaunded me) and we wente into the ſelde, and remayned there. The nexte daie a voyce called me ſaying Edoas: open thy mouth, and dꝛynke ſ I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde: he reached me a full cuppe whiche was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lpye. And I toke it and dꝛanke. And when I had dꝛonke it, my hert had vnderſtandynge and wylcome grete in my bꝛest: ſo my ſpyte was kept in remembꝛaſſe, and my mouth was open- ed and ſure nomoze. The hygh- eſt gaue vnder- ſtandynge vnto ſe ſyre men, ſ they wyote the hye thynges of the nyghte, whiche they vnder- ſtoode not. But in ſ nyghte they byd eate bread as ſoꝛ me I ſpeake in the daie and helde not my tonge by nyghte. In ſoꝛtye daies, they wyote two hundred and ſoure bookes.

And it happened when the ſoꝛtye daies were fulfilled, ſ the hygh- eſt ſpake, ſaying: The fiſt that thou haſte wyten ſpake openly the woꝛd thy and vnwoꝛthy maye reade it. But kepe the lxx laſte, ſ thou mayeſt ſeue it oulye to ſuche as be wyſe emonge thy people. For in them is ſ ſpyng of vnderſtandynge the fountayn of wyl- dome ſ the ſtreame of knowlage. And I did ſo.

The pꝛophete ſaie that euery people ſhall haue a wyſe man to ſerue vnto them.

Behold, ſpeake thou in the eares of my people the woꝛdes of prophecie whiche I wyl put in thy mouth, ſay- eth the Loꝛde: and cauſe them to be wyten in a letter, ſoꝛ it is the truth. Feare not the ymaginacyons agaynſt the. Let not the vnſaythfulneſſe of them trouble the, ſ ſpake agaynſt the. For all the vnſaythfull ſhal dye in they: vnſaythfulneſſe. Behold, ſaith the Loꝛde I wyl bynge plagis vpon the woꝛlde, the ſweard, hunger, death, and deſtruction, ſoꝛ wychedneſſe hath the vpperhand in all ſ earth and they: ſamefull woꝛches are fulfilled.

Therfore ſayeth the Loꝛde: I wyl holde my tonge nomoze vnto they: wychedneſſe, whiche they do ſo vngodly: neyther wyl I ſuffre them in the bynges, that they deale withall ſo wy- hedly. Beholde, ſ the innocent blood of ſ iſ- teous complayn continually: ſ therfore, ſaith the Loꝛde I ſhal ſurely auenge: ſ receiue vnto me all the innocent blende from amonge them.

* Behold, my people is led as a ſtocke of ſhepe to be ſlayn. I wyl not ſuffre them now to dwel in Egypt but wyl bynge them ouer with a mighty hande ſ a ſtreched out arme, and ſmitte it with plagis as afore and wyl deſtrope all ſ lande of it. Egypt ſhall mourne and the founda- cyons of it ſhalbe ſmytten with the plague ſ pun- yſhmente that God ſhall bynge vpon it.

They that tyll the grounde ſhall mourne, ſoꝛ they: ſeedes ſhalbe deſtroped: the ſowes the bla- ſyng and haile, ſ an horrible ſtar. Woe woꝛth ſ woꝛlde and them ſ dwel therein, ſoꝛ ſ ſweard ſ they: deſtruction draweth nyꝛe, ſ one people ſhal ſtand vnto fygte agaynſt another ſ ſweardes in they: handes. For men ſhalbe vnſtedfaſte ſ ſome ſhall doo vyolence vnto other: they ſhall not regard they: lpyng and pyꝛneſſe, the wayes of they: doyngeſ and handlyngeſ in they: pow- er. I man ſhal deſpye to go in the cytie and ſhal not be able. For becauſe of they: pyꝛde ſ cyꝛies ſhalbe byoughte in ſcare, the hauſes ſhall waue ſ men ſhalbe aſtraide: I man ſhall haue no pytie vpon his neyghboure, but one ſhal pyꝛonke an other vnto battayle to ſpoyle they: goodes, be- cauſe of the hunger of byꝛade, and becauſe of the greates trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth, whiche are from the vꝛy- ſyng, from the ſouth, from the Eaſt, and Ly- banus to turne vnto them, and reſtoze the thyng- es ſ they haue geuen the. Like as they do pet this daie vnto my choſen, ſo wyl I do alſo, and re- recompence them in they: boſome. Thus ſaith the Loꝛd God: My pyꝛght hande ſhall not ſpare the the synners, and my sword shall not cease out of them that shed innocent blood upon earth. The fier is gone out from his wrath, & hath consumed the foundations of the earth, & the sinners lyke the strawe that is kindled. Who worth the that synne, and kepe not my commandementes, sayth the Lord: I wyl not spare them. So your waye ye chyldren from violence, desyle not my Sanctuary: for the Lord knoweth all them & synne agaynst hym, and therefore delucreth be them vnto deathe and destruction: For nowe are the plagis come vpon the world, & ye shall remain in them. For God shall not deliuer you because ye haue synned agaynst hym.

E Beholde, an horrible visyon cometh from the East, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, & the people of Arabies with many charrettes, and the multitude of them shalbe as the wynde vpon the earth that all they which heare them ragynge in theyr wyth, maye feare and be afrayd and as the wilde bores out of the wodde, so shal they go oute, and with great power shal they come, and stande fyghtyng with them: and shall waste the poepon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, and not remembre their byrth, and shal turne about swarig together in a great power to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, & kepe seilence at theyr power, & walke, and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shal beleage the and consume one of them, & in their hoste shalbe feare and drede, & stryke amonge theyr kynges.

A Beholde, cloudes from the East, and from the North, vnto the South, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and fozme. They shal smite one vpon another: & they shal smyte at the great starr vpon earth and theyr starr, & the bloude shalbe from fweard vnto the helye: and the smoke of man vnto f Camelles lytter: And there shalbe greates fearfulness & trembling vpon earth, & theyr le the wrath, shal be afrayde, & a trembling shal come vpon the.

And then there shal come great raines from the South, & from the North, & parte from the Weste, & from the stormy wynde from the East and shal put them vpon again, & the cloud which be raised vpon in wrath, & the starr to consume toward the East and West wynde shalbe destroyed: and the great cloudes shalbe lyfte vp, and the myghtye cloudes full of wrath and the starr that they may make all the earth afraid and them f dwell therein, and they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible starr, fier and hyle, and dryng swarden, and many waters: that all felde maye be full, and all ryuers, and they shal breake downe f cyties & walles, mountaynes and hylls, all trees, wodde, & the grasse of the medowes, & all their frute. And they shal go stedfast vnto Babilon, & make her afraid: they shal come to her and beleage her: the starr and all wrath shal they poure out vpon her.

Euen shall the duste and smoke go vp vnto the Heuen and all they f be about her: shal be walle her: and they shal remain vnder her shal do seruice vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Aspa, that comfortelle thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babilon, & arte a worshipper of her persone: Woe be vnto the f wretch, because thou hast made thy selfe like vnto her, & haste deckt thy daughters in whozdom, & they might triumphe please thy louers, which haue alwaye despyed to commit whozdom with the: thou hast folowed the abhominable cyrie in all her whozres and inuencions.

Therefore sayeth God: I wyl sende plagis vpon the, wedowhed, pouerte, hunger, warren and pestilence, to wast thy houses with destruction and death, & the gloze of thy power shalbe dreyed vp as a floure, when the heate ryseth that is sent ouer the: Thou shalt be lyche as a poore wyfe that is plagued & beaten of women: so that the myghtye & lower shal not be able to receyue the. Woe be I hate the sayth the Lord: yf thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, exaltynge the stroke of thy handes, & sayde ouer theyr deach, when thou wast broken: set forth the bewtye of thy countenance.

The reward of thy whozdom shalbe recompensed the in thy bolome, therefore shalt thou receyue reward.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen, (sayth the Lord) euen so shall God do vnto the, & shal deliuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shal dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall thorow the sword. Thy cyties shalbe broken downe: and all thyng shal perishe with the sword in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shal dye of hunger, & eat theyr owne fleshe, & drinke theyr owne bloude for very hunger of bread & thurst of water. Thou unhappy shalt come thorow the see, and receyue plagis agayn.

In the passage they shal caste downe the slayne cyrie, and shal rote oute one parte of thy lande: and consume the poepon of thy gloze. They shal treade the downe lyke stuble, and they shalbe thy fyre, and shal consume the: thy cyties and thy lande, thy wodde and thy frutefull trees shal they burne with f fyre. Thy chyldren shal they carye awaye captiue, and loke what thou haste, they shal spoyle it, and marre the betwyte of thy face.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The Quene shall pynne.

Woe be vnto the Babylon & Asia, & woe be vnto the Egypt and Siria gyde your selues with clothes of sacke and heare, and mourne your chyldren, be soze, for your destruction is at hand. A sword is set vpon you, and who wyl turne it backe? A fyre is kindled amonge you, & who wyl quench it? Plages are sente vnto you, & what is he that wyl dryue the awaye? May any man dryue away an hongry Lyon in the woode? May any man quench f fyre in stuble when it hath begunne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arrowe, f is shot of a stronge archer? The myghtye Lord sendeth the plagis, and what is he that wyl dryue them awaye? The fyre is kindled and gone forth in hys wrath, and what is he that wyl quench it? he shall cast lyghtenynge: and who shall not feare? he shall thunder and who shall not be afrayed? The Lord shall threaten, and who shall not utterly be beaten to powder at his presence? The earth quaketh, and the foundacyon thereof the see aryleth wth wyth waves from the depe & the foudes of it are unquyet and the fishes ther of also befoze the Lord, and befoze the gloze of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghte hand & holdeth the bowe, hys arrowes that he shoteh are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

B Beholde, the plagis are sente, and shall not turne agayne, til they come vpon earth. The fyr is kyndled and shall not be put out, tyl it consume the foundacyons of the earth. Lyke as an arrowe wythch is shot of a myghty archer, retureth not back ward: euen so the plagis that shall be sent vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Who is me, who is me, who wyl deliuer me in those dayes? The begynnyng of sorowes and great mournynge: the begynnyng of death and great death, the begynnyng of warres, and the poweres shall stande in feare: the begynnyng of euils and they shall tremble every one. What shall I do in these thylges: when & plagis come? Behold hunger, and plage, trouble, & angurthe are sent as scourges for amendement. But for all these thylges they shall not turne from theyr wickednes, nor be alwaie mynde full of the scourges.

C Beholde, vntyl now shall be so good chepe vpon erth, that they shall thynke them selues to be in good case, & euen then shall myschefe grow vpon earth, warres, death, & greates dysquyetnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perysh of hunger, and the other that escape the hunger, shall the sword destruye, and the dead shall be cast out as dunge & there shall be no man to consoyte them. For the earth shall be waste, and the cyties shall be cast downe, there shall be no man left to tyll the earth and to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall pluche them of and gather them? The grapes shall be rypp, and who shall treade them? For al places shall be desolate of men, so that one man shall be lyke to se another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole cytye there shall be ten left, and two in the felde: wythch shall hyde them selues in the thylke bushes, & in the clystres of stones, lyke as when there remayne the of foure olpyes vpon the olpye tre, or as when a vyneparde is gathered, there are leste some grapes of them that dylygently soughte the wyneparde.

D Euen so in those dayes there shall be the of four left for them that search theyr houses wth the sword. And the earth shall be left wast and the feldes thereof shall waxe olde, and her dayes that al her pathes shall growe ful of thornes: because noman shall traunple there the wyne. The daughters shall mourne, daupnge no byde gromes: the wemen shall make lamentacion, hauing no husbundes, the daughters shall mourne hauing no helpe of theyr bydgrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and theyr husbundes shall peryshe of hunger. Ope seruantes of the Lord heare these thylges, and marke them. Beholde, the wyrd of the Lord, & because it: beholde the plagis draw nre, and are not slake in taryng. Lyke as a traunplyng womā which after the nyne moneth byngreth foze a sonne, when the pouer of byrth is come an hour two of the also the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chyld cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twynchyng of an eye. Euen so shall not the plagis be slake to come vpon erth, and the worlde shall mourne and sorowes shall come vpon it, on euery syde. O my people heare my wyrd: make you redy to the battell: and in all euil beuail as pylgrymes vpon erth. & he & sellet hys byrth as one that wyl leale.

Who so occupyeth marchaundrye: as he that wyntereth not, and he that buydeth: as he that shall not dwell therein, he that so weth, as one that shall not reape: he that twynketh the vyneyard as he that shall not gather the grapes, they that mary, as they that shall get no chyldren, & they that mary not: as the wyddowes: and therefore they that labour, labour in vayne. For strallgers shall reape theyr fruytes, and spoyle theyr goodes, ouerthowen theyr houses, take theyr chyldren captiue, for in captiuyte and hunger shall they get chyldren. And they & occupy their marchaundrye w robbery, how longe deche they theyr cities, their houses: theyr posselions, and persons: the more wyl I punysh them for theyr synnes: sayth the Lord. Lyke as an whoze enureth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquyte, when she decheh her leife, & shall accuse her to her face: when he cometh that decheh, which shall make inquisition for al synne vpon earth. And therefore be ye not lyke therunto, nor to the wyches thereof: for or euer it be longe: iniquyte shall be taken a waye out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall rapne amog you.

E Let not the synner say, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpon hys head which sayth befoze the Lord God and hys gloze: I haue not synned. Beholde the Lord knoweth all the wyches of men, theyr ymagynaryons, theyr thoughtes, and theyr dectes. For he spake but the word: let the earth be made, & it was made, let the deaul be made and it was made. In hys wyrd were sterres made and he knoweth the number of the. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures there of: he hath mesured the see, & what it containeth he hath put the see, in the myddell of the waters, and wth hys wyrd hath he hanged the erth vpon the waters. He spredeth out & heand like a vawter, vpon the waters hath he found it. In the desert and wyde wyldernes hath he made springes of water, and poles vpon the toppes of the mountaynes, that the foudes myght power downe from the stony rokes to water the earth. He made man, and put him here in the myddell of the bodye, and gaue him byrth, lyfe, and vnder standyng, yee, and the spere of the Almyghty God, whiche made all thylges, and hath created ched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth.

 He had with you ymagynacions and inuentions, and to that ye thynke when ye synne and wolde hyde your selues. Therefore hath the Lord searched and sought out all your doctres, and he shall bewaite you all. And when your syn-nes are broughte forth, ye shall be ashamed before men, and your owne synnes shall be your accusers in that daye. What wyl ye do (as how wyl ye hyde your synnes before God, and his Angelles) Behold, God him selfe is the iudge feare hym, leaue of from your synnes, and forget your unrighteousnes, and medle no mare with them: so shall God leade you forth, and deliuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the brate of a great multitude is hyndled our you and they shall take awaye certayne of you, and from the yde with Idols, and they that consent vnto them, shall be had in dyspyson, lauged to scorn, and crosed vnder foote.

For vnto the places there shall be a place and in the nexte cytye a greate insurrection, vpon those that feare the Lord. They shall be lyke mad men, they shall spare none, they shall spoyle and wast such as feare the Lord, their goodes shall they take from them: and shut them out of their houses. The shall it be knowne who are my chosen, and they shall be tried as the gold in the fyre heate. O ye my beloued, sayth the Lord: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyl de-liuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dispayre not, for God is your captayne.

Also so heareth my commandementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not your synnes waye you downe, and let not your unrighteousness be left by. Also be vnto them that are laboured vnto they synnes, and tangled in theyr mychthines: lyke as a seide is hedged in with bushes, and the path therof covered with thornes, and that no man maye trauayle thow and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre and byent of Esayas.

The booke of Tobias.

¶ The first Chapter.

¶ Tobias beinge taken prisoner, fortyneth the labor of truth. The matter and chapter of Tobias, is the maner of hym in his youth, he taketh a wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He is cured of his blind-nesse. He and his wyfe are taken to the land after the death of Sennacherib the kynge of Assyria.

Tobias was of the trybe and cytye of Asyrtah, which lyeth in the hye countreyes of Galile a boue Naalon, the waye to waarde the waye haung the citie of Asyrtah vpon the left syde.
 Though he was taken prisoner in the dayes of Salmana-sar kynge of the Assyrians, neuertheles beinge in captiuite, he forsooke not the waye of trueth.
 In so much that whatsoeuer he myght get, he parted it dayly with his fellowe prisoners and with them that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger then all the trybe of Asyrtah, yet he was not behaue hym selfe chydely in his doctres. And when all the other wente to the golden calves, which Jerobobam the kynge of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fledd all theyr companies, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lord, and there wold he praye the Lord God of Israel, saythfully offering of all his fyre frutes and crybes, so that in the thyrde yere he mynistred all the crybes vnto strangers and conuerteres. These and such lyke thynges he did obediuntly accorde to the lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke out of his owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whome he called after his owne name, and taught him from his youth vp, to feare God, and to refrayne from all synne.

Nowe when he was with his wyfe, his sonne and with all his kynred was come into captiuitye vnto the cytye of Ninus, what tyme as they al did eate of the meates of the heathen, he kept his soule, and was neuer defyled in theyr mea-ters. And forsomuch as he was mynistful of the Lord in all his doctres, God gaue hym fauoure in the syghte of Salmansar the kynge, which gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he libertye to do whatsoeuer hym lyst.

So wente Tobias vnto all them that were in dyspyson, and comforted them, and gaue them wholsome exhortacions. And when he came to Ragas, a cytye of the Medes, haung ten ta-lentes of syluer of thynges wherewith the kynge had honoured him, some amonge a great company of people of his kynred, one came which was of his owne trybe beinge in necessitye he gaue hym the sayde weyght of syluer vnder an hande to syngre.

After a longe season when Salmansar the kynge was deade, and Sennacherib his sonne reigned in his steade: which hated the chyldren of Israel, Tobias went dayly thowheoute all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue hym gooden to carrye one of the, as much as he might be fed the hungry, clothed the naked, and bury-ed the deade and slayne and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came a-gayne, he fledd out of Jewrye what tyme as God punished hym for his blasphemie and in his wyth slew many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was told the kynge, he commanded to slaye him, and toke awaye all his goodes. Neuertheles, Tobias was hymselfe and with his wyfe fledd hym was hymselfe naked, for there were many that loved him. But after xij. dayes the king was slayne of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restoyred to hym.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias prayeth for his frendes as heer God to a banquet at last. He is reposed of his frendes. He seeth God more then the hye. He is comforted by the prym, upon and fauourance of God. He is hymselfe made hym.

After

After those thynges vpon a solemne day of the Lord, Tobias made a good feaste in his house, and sayd vnto his sonne: So thy waye and bring hether some of our fyber, such as feare God, that they maye make merry with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father, that one of his children of Israel lay slayne vpon the strete. And immediatly he leapte fro his table lefte the feast, came fastyng to the dead corse, toke him and bare him preuily into his house, & when the sunne was downe he myghte safely burie hym. And when he had hyd the corse, he did eate his meate with moun-nyng & feare, remembryng the wordes, that the Lorde sayde by the prophete Amos: pour thy feastes shalbe turned to sorow and heynesse.

But when the sunne was downe, he went his waye and buried hym. Then all his neygh-bours rejoyced hym, sayyng: It is not longe sence it was commaunded to slaye the: because of this matter, & haste scarce escaped the daunger of death, & burstest thou the deade agayne? Ne-uerthelesse, Tobias fearyng God moare then the kyng, tooke the bodies of the slayne, & hyd them in his house, & buried them at myddnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had visited the deade, & was weete, came home, & layde hym downe by the wall and slepte. And whyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warne dunge out of the swalows nest, so that he was blinde. This temptaciō did God suffer to happē vnto him, that they whiche came after myghte haue an example of his patience lyke as of holie Job. For in so much as he euer feared God from his yowthe vp, and kept his commaundementes, he grudged not agaynst God, that the plague of blindness chaunced vnto him, but remained steadfast in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

C For lyke as blessed Job was had in derisyon of hynges, euen so was he laughed to scozne of his elders and kynfolkes, whiche sayde: vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes, & buried the deade? But Tobias rebuken them, & spake: Waye not so, for we are the children of holy men, and looke for the lyfe, whiche God shall geue vnto them that neuer turne theyr becke frome hym. Anna his wyfe wente dailye to the weaynyng worke, and looke what liuyng she could get with the labour of her handes, she broughte it. And it happened that she toke a hys and broughte it home.

D And when her husbāde heard it crye, he sayd: looke that it be not stolē, for soze is agayne to the owters: for it is not lawfull vs to eate or to touche anye thyng of theste. Then was his wyfe angrie and sayd: Howe is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy almes dedes are manifeste. With these and suche lyke wodes dyd she caste hym in the tēde.

The .iii. Chapter.

The prayer of Tobias. Anna the daughter of Raguel is slaundered of her fathers seruantes. The prayer and sayyngs of Anna. And also the innocēcy and chasty-ty of her. The prayer of Tobias and Anna his wyfe.

Then Tobias toke it brutly, & with teares: beganne to make his prayer sayyng: O Lord, thou arte ryghte-ous, & all thy iudgements are true per, all thy wayes are mercy, faith-fulnesse and iudgement. And now O Lord: be mindful of me, and take no vengeance of my synes, nether remember my misdeades, nether the mysdeades of my elders. For we haue not bene obediente vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled, brought into captiuity, into death, into derision, & shame vnto al na-cyons, amonge whome thou hast scattered vs.
And now O Lord, thy iudgements are great for we haue not done accordyng to thy commaundementes, nether haue walched innocently be-foze the. And now O Lord, deale with me ac-cordyng to thy wyl, and commaunde my sperte to be receaved in peace, for moze expedient were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

B At the same tyme it happened that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Ragas a city of Me-des was slaundered of one of her fathers bandmaydens: namelike, that she shulde haue had seuen husbādes, which as sone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuill called As-modeus. Therfore, when she rejoyced the may-den for her faulte, she answered her sayyng: God let vs neuer se sone no daughter of the more vpon ea: th, thou killer of thy husbādes. Wile thou slay me also, as thou hast slaine seuen men?
At this voyce went Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she nether eate noz dranche, but continued in prayer and besoughte God with teares that he wolde deliuer her frome this rebuke.

C Upon the thre daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayed the Lorde sayyng: Blessed be thy name, O God of oure fathers, whiche when thou arte wroth: we west mercy, & in tyme of trouble thou shouldest the synners of them, & call vpon the. Vnto the O Lord turne I my face, vnto the lifte I vp myne eyes, I beseeche the O Lord, lose me oute of the bondes of this rebuke, or elles take me vterlye a waye from of the earth. Thou knowest Lord that I neuer had desire vnto mā, & that I haue hepte my soule cleane from all vncleynesse luste, I haue not hepte companye with those & passe their tyme in spoze, nether haue I made my selfe partaker with them & walke in light behauiour Neuerth: lesse an husbāde haue I consented to take, nor for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

D Nowe peraduenture ether haue I bene vnworthy of them, or elles were they vnnete for me, for thou happily hast kept me to another hus-bāde. For why: thy counsell is not in power of man. But whosoever loueth the and serneth the aryghte, is sure of this, that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryng and yf he endure in patience, he shall haue a re-warde and be hyghly crowned: and yf he be in trouble, than God (no doubte) shal deliuer him and yf his lyfe be in chastenyng, than he shall haue leane to come vnto thy mercy.

Ec For thou

The booke.

For thou hast no pleasure in our dampnation: & why? after a while thou makest the weeper sorer & slyl: after weeping & bewailing thou givest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israel be praised for ever. At the same tyme were both their prayers heard in the syght of the maiestie of the first God. And Raphael the holy Angel of the Lord was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God.

The. iiii. Chapter.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be heard, & he might live, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias and sayd vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, & laye the in thine herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh away my soule, bury thou my bodye & holde thy mother in honour all the dayes of her lyfe. For I oughte to remember what and howe great paines she suffred for the in her wombe. And whil she hath also fulfilled the tyme of her life, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and beware lest at any tyme I present vnto synne, & lest thou lett off the comandementes of the Lord our God. Geue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: & so shall it come to passe that the face of the Lord shall not be turned away from the. Be mercifull after thy power. If I haue much, geue plentifully: if thou haue little, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of thy litle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good reward in the day of necessitye. For mercy deliuereth fro all synne & from death, & suffereth not the soule to come in darknes. A greates comforte is mercy before the hygh God, vnto all them that thereto.

My sonne, kepe the wel from all whoredome & (be thy wyfe) lest that no fauer be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde began all destruction. Whoso ever worketh anye thyng for the, immediatly geue hym his paye, & loke that thy byrd seruantes wages remaine not by the ouer nyghte. Looke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng that thou wouldest not another man shoulde do vnto the. Eate thy bread with the honger and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bread and wyne vpon the burpall of the ryghteous, & do not thou eate and drynke thereof with the synners. A sheuer counsell at the wyse.

Be alwaye thankefull vnto God, and beseeche hym that he wyll order thy wayes, & that what soeuer thou desyrest or takeste in hande, it maye remaine in him. I certifie the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I deliuered ten talentes of silver vnto Sabelus, at Rages a cytie of the Medes, and hym hand wytyng haue I by me. And therfore seeke some means, howe thou mayest come by him, and receaue of hym the sayde wyryght of synce and geue hym his hande wytyng agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: true it is, we leade beare a poore lyfe: but greates good shall we haue, if we feare God, and departe from all synne: and so well.

The. v. Chapter.

¶ The substance of yonge Tobias to his father, whiche he sent into Rages. An Angell accompanyng with hym in his journey.

When answered Tobias his father and sayd: father: all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do as that wylygently. But howe I shall requyre this money I can not tell. Neither doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What coulde I geue him? And as for the waye therther I neuer knewe it. Then his father answered hym, & sayde: I haue his hande wytyng on me which when thou shewest hym, immediatly he shall paye the. But go thy waye now, & get the some saythfull man to go with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lyuyng. Then went Tobias out, & vnder the steepe he founde a sayre yonge man standing, gyded by, and as it were one ready to take his journey. And he knew not that it was an Angell of God, but saluted hym and sayde: From whence arte thou, thou good yonge man. He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye I leade vnto the countre of the Medes? He answered I knowe it well, & all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Sabelus, & dwelleth in Rages a cytie of the Medes, which lieth vnder the mount Egbatanis. Tobias sayde vnto him: I pray the tary for me, tyl I haue told my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in and tolde his father all. At the whiche his father meruayled and prayde, that he wolde come in vnto hym.

Nowe when the Angell came in, he saluted hym, and sayd: Ioye be with the for ever moare. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that lyt here in darknesse, & se not the lyght of heauen? The yonge man sayd vnto hym: Be of good chere, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: Canst thou bypunge my sonne to Sabelus, vnto the cytie of Rages in Medea? And when thou comest agayne, I shall paye the thy paye. And the Angell sayde vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne & bypunge him to the agayne. Then Tobias answered him: tell me, I pray the, of what house or of what tribbe art thou? The Angell Raphael sayd vnto him: A chiefe & after I hymned of an byrdlyng, or lehest I a gyde for thy sonne to go with hym? But I make not careful, I am Azarias the sone of great Hananias. And Tobias answered & arte come of a great kindred: but I pray the be not displeased, & I desyre to know thy hymned. The angel said vnto him: thy sone that I leade forth lately, & bypunge him hile to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias and sayd: wel go on your waye, and God be in your journey, & his Angel bear you company. So when they had prepared all thynges, & they wolde take with them in theyr journey: Tobias bad his father and his mother his mother saith well, and they wente on theyr waye togethe. Nowe when they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: The fate of oure age hath thou taken awaye, & sente hym frome vs. Wolde God that mony had neuer ben, for the whiche thou haste sente hym awaye. If we had bene consente wyth our pouertye, this had bene great ryches vnto vs. I we sawe oure sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thynne eyes shall se him. For I truste, that the good Angel of God shall beare hym companye, and order wel all the thynges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother lette of from wepyng, and helde her tonge.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Yong Tobias is deliuered from the fyth by the Angel, the Angel requyeth Tobias to take Anna to his wyfe.

T Tobias wente on his waye, & a dogge folowed hym, and the fyfte nyghte they abode by the water of Tygrys. Then wente he oure to walke bys feete, and beholde there came forth an horrible fyth to deuourc him. Of whom Tobias was afraide: and cryed with a lowde voyce, sayinge: Loide, he commeth vnto me. And the Angell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and drawe hym to the. And he byd so, and drew hym vpon the lande. And the fythe beganne to leape at his feete.

Then sayde the Angell vnto him: take oute the bowels of this fythe, & as for the herte, the gaul and the lyuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary & good for medicine. Tobias byd so, & rosted the fythe, & they toke hym with them in their iourney: & residue they salted, as much as was sufficient for them, tyl they came to Raguel a cytie of the Greeses. The Tobias asked the Angell, & sayde vnto him: I pray the brother Azaria tell me whereto are these thynges good of the fythe & thou haste bydden me kepe.

The Angell aunswere hym, and sayde: If thou layest a peece of the herte vpon the coales, & smoke therof bymeth awaye all maner of euill synetes, whether it be from man or from womā so that from thenceforth the same shall come no more vnto them. The gaul is good to annoint or to drye the eyes withall, where as there is any blemyshe in them, so that they shall be whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym, where wylt thou & we remaine? The Angell aunswere and sayde: Here is a nye kynsman of thynne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath nether sone nor daughter but her. All this good belongeth vnto the & thou must marrye her, & therfore desire her of her father, & he shall geue her the to wyfe. The aunswere Tobias as he sayd: As I vnderstand, he hath bene married vnto. vii. husbādes, & they al are dead: & I haue herd say the deuyl slew the. I am afraide therfore, lest such thynges happen vnto me also: whiche yf it came to passe (sayng I am the only sonne of my father & my mother) I wold byng them in their age with sorowes to their graues.

Then sayde the Angell Raguel vnto him: heare me & I wyl tell the what they be, of whiche the deuyl hath power. Namely, they that receaue marriage of such a fashyō. & they whiche God out fro them, & fro theyr bett & geue the selues to their owne lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, whiche haue no vnderstandyng: vpon such hath the deuyl power. But when thou takest her, & arte come into the chamber, withholde thy selfe from her the dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto nothyng but vnto prayer w her.

And in the fyfte nyghte, roste the lyuer of the fythe, & the deuyl shall be driven awaye. The seconde nyghte shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patryarches. The thyrde nyghte shalt thou optayne the blessing of God so that whole chyliden shall be borne of pon. After the thyrde nyghte take the mayden in the feare of God: and moze for the desire of chyliden, the for any fleschly luste: that in the seed of Abraham & mayest optayne the blessinge in chyliden.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Yong Tobias and the Angel come to the house of Raguel, he requyeth Raguel's daughter to wyfe, and obtayneth her.

When went they into Raguel, whiche receiued them ioyfully. And whē Raguel tolked vnto Tobias he sayd vnto Anna his wyfe. How lyke is this yonge mā vnto my synners sone? And when he had spokē this he sayd whence be ye good byrthens? They sayde: Of the trybe of Nephtaly, oute of the captiuitie of Babilone. Then sayd Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They said: yee, we know him wel. And whē they had spoken much good of him, the Angell sayd vnto Raguel Tobias of whome thou askest is this yonge mans father.

Then Raguel bowed him selfe downe: and wepte, toke him aboute the necke, & kyssed him, & sayd: Gods blessing haue I my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, & Sara his daughter wepte also. Now when they had tolked togethe, Raguel bad hyl a wether, & to make a feast: And when he prayed them to lye downe to sypner, Tobias sayd: I wyl nether eate nor drynke here this day except the first graunt me my petition, & promise me to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Raguel herde this, he was astonied: for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other. vii. men. & went in vnto her, & he began to feare, & it shulde chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, & gaue the yonge man no aunswere, the Angell sayde vnto hym: Feare not to geue hym thy daughter, for vnto this man I feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doubt not but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in this syngher, and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intente, that thys daughter of myne, myghte be married in her owne kynred, accordyng to the lawe of Moyses.

And nowe doubt thou not, but I wyl geue her vnto the: So he tooke the righte hande of his daughter, & gaue her vnto the ryghte hande of Tobias, and sayde. The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be wryth you, ioyne you together, and fulfill his blessing in you. And they toke a letter & made a writing of the mariage: And then made they merre, and praysed God.

And Raguel, called Anna his wyfe vnto him, and bad her prepare another chambze, and therer he brought Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayd he vnto her: Be of good cheere my daughter, the Lorde of heauen geue thee lope, for the heauynesse that thou haste suffered.

The viii. Chapter.

The Angel syneth the deuyll. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to praye: and they praye this daye before they lye together.

I Owe, after that they had supped, they broughte the yonge man into her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the Angel: & tooke out of his bagge, a peece of the leuer of the fishe, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the Angel Raphael toke holde of the deuyll, & sente hym awaye, & bounde hym in the wyldernesse of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & sayd: Let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, to morowe, and euermorowe: for these thre nyghtes wyl we reconyle oure selues wryth God, and when the thyrde holpe nyghte is paste, we shal ioyne together in the dutye of mariage. For we are the chyldzen of holy men, and we may not come together, as the heathen, that knowe not God.

Then stode they vp bothe together, and besought God earnestly, that he wold preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of our fathers, prayed be thou of heauen and earth of the see, welles and fountes, and of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the earth, & gauest hym Eua for an helper. And now Lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnesse that I take this wyfe of myne to wyfe but onely for the loue of chyliden, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd haue mercy vpon vs (O Lord) haue mercy vpon vs & let vs bothe come hole and sounde together to a good age.

And aboute the coche crowynge it happened, that Raguel called his seruantes, & they wente with him to make a graue. For he sayde it is chaunced now vnto him peradventure, as it dyd vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be deade, that I maye burie hym afoze the lyghte daye: So he sente a mayden to se, which when she came into the chamber, founde them hole & sounde, slepyng together. And so she came agayne, and broughte good tidynges. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe praysed the Lord, and sayde: Prayed be thou O Lord God of Israel for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thoughte. For thou haste dealt mercifully with vs, and putt awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs, & haste shewed mercy vnto ponde two belourd. O Lord cause them to magnifye & more perfectlye, and offer the sacrifice of thy praise, and of their health: that all people maye knowe that thou onely arte God in all the earth.

And immediatlye, Raguel commaunded his seruantes to fil the graue & they had made wryth earth afoze it was lyghte, & bad his wyfe prepare a feaste, and to make ready all thynges that were necessarie for meate, to such as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slaine and meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remayne with him two weekes. As for al the good & he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, & made this writinge, that the halfe which remained, shoulde fall vnto Tobias after they death.

The ix. Chapter.

The Angel goeth to Sabelus at the house of Tobias, to paye his money, and receaue the letter.

Then Tobias called vnto hym the Angel whom he thoughte to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye the heren vnto my wordes: If I shoulde geue my selfe to be thy seruante, I shal not deserue thy prouidence. Auert the leste, I beseeche the & thou wylte take the beastes & the seruantes, & go vnto Sabelus in Rages the cytye of Medes, & deliuer hym his hande writinge, & receaue the money of hym, & praye hym to come to my mariage. For thou knowest thy selfe, & my father dothe nombe the dayes: & yf I tarye one daye to longe, he wyl be loze in his mynde. Nowe sayst thou how earnestlye Raguel hath requyred me, so that I can not saye hym nay.

Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruantes, and two camels, and wente vnto Rages the cytye of the Medes: & when he had founde Sabelus, he gaue him his hande writinge, and receaue all the money. He tolde hym also of Tobias the sonne of Tob, howe all thynges had happened, & caused hym to come wryth hym to the mariage. Nowe when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sitting at the table: & he leaped vp, & they kissed one another: and Sabelus wepte, & praysed God, and sayde: the blessinge of the God of Israel, haue thou for: thou arte the sonne of a righte vertuous and iuste man, & of one that feareth the God, and geueth great almes. And blessing haue thy wyf and youre elders, that ye maye le your chyliden & youre chyliden chyliden, vnto the thyrde and fourth generacion, & youre seed be blessed of the God of Israel, whiche rapyneth wryld with oute ende. And when they all had sayde Amen: they wente to the feaste, but wryth the feare of the Lorde helde they the feaste of the mariage.

The x. Chapter.

Tobias and his wyfe are fitt for the carrying of theys sonne. Raguel taryeth agayne Tobias with his wyfe.

Owe whyle yonge Tobias made a long taryng by reason of his mariage his father was ful of care and heauynesse, and thought what shoulde be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so long? O why?

Why shulde he be kepte so long there? Par-adventure Gabelus is dead, and no man will geue him the mony. Thus beganne he to be very sorrowful, he and Anna his wyfe with him, and beganne to wepe bothe together, because their sonne was not come againe vnto them at the daye appointed. As for his mother, she we-pte with dycomfortable teares and sayde: Who is my sonne: Wh what ailed vs to sende the a waye into a straunge countrey, thou lyght of oure eyes, thou staffe of oure age, thou comfort of oure lyfe, thou hope of oure generacyon: Seeinge all the thynges we haue are onely in the we shulde not haue sente the a waye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tounge, and be not discomfited, oure sonne is hole and sounde: the man that we sente hym wythall is sayefull ynoughe. Neuerthelesse, he might in no wise be comforted but day lye wente oute, loked aboute, and went aboute all the stretes, whereby he thoughte he shulde come againe: that if it were possible he might se him commynge a farr of. But Raguel said vnto his sonne in lawe: O tary heere, I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias to tell him that thou arte in good health. Tobias said vnto him: I am sure, my father, a my mother counte euery day, a theyr hertes are sope.

So when Ragu prayed Tobias wyth manye wordes, and wold in no wyse heare him he deliuered Sara vnto him, a the halfe parte of all his good, in seruantes, and hande may-dens, in sheepe, in Camels, and in hyne, a much mony, a so sente him a waye fro him with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holpe Iungell of the Lorde be with you in youre iourneye, a bypnye you forth safe and sounde, that ye may finde al thynges in good case wyth youre elders, a that myne eyes maye se youre chyldren afoze I dye.
So the elders embraced thei daughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortynge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her hus-bade, to rule wel her household, to kepe her house in good order, and to serue her selfe lawrielle.

¶ The xi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias leuynge hys wyfe and household in the imprisonment, cometh befor the Angel. The dreame of his mother looking after her sonne. He is ioyfully receaued of his father and mother. Sara cometh fower dayes after

They were now goynge home warde agayne, vppon the xi. daye, they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ainiue.
And the Angel sayd: Brother Tobias, thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore if it please the, we to wyll go befoze, a let the household wyth thy wyfe a the cattell come loffte and faper after vs. And when Tobias was contente they shulde go befoze, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gaulle of the fyre wyth the, for it shal be necessarye. So Tobias toke of a gaulle, a they wente their way But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dailly by the waye syde vpon the topp of an hyll, frome whence she might se farrre about her. And while she was waypynge there, for hys commynge, she looked a farrre of and anone she perceaued her sonne commynge, and ranne a told her husband sayinge: Beholde thy sonne cometh. And Ra-phael said vnto Tobias: A s foonne as thou commeste into the house, immediatelye wythppe the Lorde thy God, and geue thanckes vnto him: then go to thy father, and kisse him, and stricke hys eyes ouer with the gail of the fyre, p thou hast brought with y. For be sure, that his eyes shall strepghte waye be opened, and thy father shall se the lyght of heauen, and shal reioyce at the syght of the. Then the dog y had bene with them in thei iourney, ranne befoze, a came as a messenger, and wagged his taile for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne and rombled with hys fete, and gaue a seruaunte hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed hym, he and his wyfe and they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Nowe when they had wythpyped a thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of a fishes gal, a annointed his fathers eyes: a taried halfe an houre, a then began the blemyshe to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene y wyhte shyn of an egge: which Tobias toke, and drew from his eyes: and immediatelye he receaued his sight.

Then they prayled God, he and hys wyfe and al they that knew him. And Tobias sayd: O Lorde God of Israel, I geue the prayse and thanckes, for y hast chastened me, and made me hole. And loo nowe I do se my sonne Tobias.
A fter seven dayes came Sara his sonnes wife also hole and sounde wyth all the household a cattell, with Camels and muche monney of his wyues, and with the monney that he had recea-ued of Gabelus, a he tolde hys father a his mother all the benefytes, whych God had done for hym, by the man that led him. Achoz also and Rabath, Tobias sister sonnes came, and were glad, and reioiced with hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seven dayes they made merue, a and were ryghte ioyfull euerychone.

¶ The xii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias cometh vnto his father the plesured that the Angel had hym. He ariseth vnto the iungell halfe the garden that he brought wyth hym.

Then Tobias called hys sonne vnto him and sayde: What may we geue this holy man, that went with the?
Tobias answered hys father and sayde: Rather, what rewarde shall we geue him? O what thyng can deserue his benefytes: he hath bene my guide, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the mony from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife, he dyone the euil spyte from her, he hath bene an occasyon of gladnesse to her father, and mother: he deli-uered me, that I was not deuoured of the fyre: he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, yea, we al haue receaued great good of hym. Howe shulde we wo:thely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, p thou wyll desire him, p haplye he wyll vouchsafe, to take wyth hym the halfe of al that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, take him aspre, and beganne to pray hym, that he wolde be contente to take in good woorth the halfe parte of all that they had broughte.

B Then sayde he secretly vnto them. Praise ye the God of heauen, and geue thankes vnto him befoze all men lyuynge, for he hath shewed his mercede vnto vs. It is good to hyde the hynges secretes, but to shewe and praise the woiches of God, it is an honourable thing. Water is good with saltyng, and mercy is better then to haue by treasures of golde. For mercy deliuereth from death, cleneth spynne, and causeth to finde euerylastyng lyf. But they þat synne & vnrigh- troulesse, are the enemies of their owne soule.

Wherfoze I tell you the truthe, and wyll hyde nothyng from you. When thou praydest with teares, and burydest the dead, and ledest thy byrner, & hydest the dead in the house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myghtest burye the in the nyght: I offered thy prayer befoze the Lord. And because thou walke accepte and beloued of God, it was necessarye, that temptacyon shuld trye the. And nowe hath the Lord sente me to heale the & to deliuer Sara thy lones wyfe fro the euil spere. For I am Raphael an Angel, one of the seuen that stande befoze God.

When they hearde this, they were soze a- frayed, and trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the Angel Deace be with you, feare not. Wher as I haue lene with you, it is the wyl of God: geue praise vnto the Lord and thankes vnto hym.

*¶ St. Math. 23
Jhn. 7. 14*

¶ You thought that I byd * cate and dyspuche with you, but I wile meate that is inuysible, & dyspuche that cannot be seue of men. Nowe ther soze is the tyme that I muste turne agayne vnto him, that sente me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell oure all his wonderous woiches.

And when he had spoken those woiches, he was taken a waye oute of thei syghte, so that they came him nomoore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces, by the space of thre houres, & praised God, when they arose vpon they tolde all hys wonderous woiches.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias the eldier prayeth thankes vnto God.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouth and praised the Lord and sayde: Grate arte thou O lord for euermore, and thy kyngedome wolde wythout ende: for thou scourgest & healest, thou ledest vnto hel, and dyspynge out agayne: & there is none that maye scape thyne hande. O geue thankes vnto the Lord, ye chyldren of Israel, & praise him in the syghte of the heathen. For among the heathen whych know hym not hath he scattered you, to the intent þe shoulde shewe furthe hys mercurious woiches, and cause them for to know, that there is none other God Almyghty but he. Be that chaste- neth vs for oure mysdoes, & for his owne mer- cy take shall he lene vs.

B Consider then, howe he hath dealte wryth you, and praise hym with feare and dyede, and magnifye the euerylastyng kyng in your wo-

ches I wyll praise hym euen in the lande of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfoze O ye sinners, & do rightousnes befoze God, & be sure þe wyl shewe his mercy vpon you. As for me, and my soule, we wyl reioyce in God. O praise the Lord all ye hys chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, & be thankfull vnto hym, O Jeru- salem þe cytie of God, the Lord hath punyshed the for the woiches of thyne owne handes. O praise the Lord in thy good thynges, & geue thā- kes to the euerylastyng God, þe maye buyde vpon his tabernacle agayne in the, & he maye call agayne vnto the, al such as be in captiuitie, and þe thou mayest haue ioye for euermore. With a sayer lichte shall thou wyne, and al the endes of the world shall honour þe. The people shall come vnto the from farre, they shall bypunge gyffes, and woishyppe the Lord in the, and thy lande shall they haue for a sanctuarye, for they shall call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that dyspyle the, and C all that blasfeme the, shall be condepned: but blessed shall they be that buyde the vpon. As for the thou shalt reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shall be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they al that loue the and that be glad of thy peace. Praise thou the Lord O my soule, for the Lord oure God hath deli- uered his cytie Jerusalem from al her troubles. I wyll counte my selfe happye, if my feid re- mayne to se the ciuynesse of Jerusalem. The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded wryth Sa- phyre, & Somaugode, and all the compass of her walles wyth precious stones. Al her streets shall be paved w white marble ston. & in al the streets shall Ilclupa be songe. Praise be the Lord, whiche hath exalted her, & his kyngdome maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkyng.

¶ Tobias prayeth the destruction of Antioch. & to shewe the returne to Antioch after the desolacyon of hys father & mothe.

¶ After þe Tobias had gotten his light agayne, he lyued. xlii. yeres, & sawe his chylders chyldren. Nowe when he was, C. x. ii. yere olde, he dyed: & was buried honourably in Antioch. For whē he was. lvi. yeres of age he lost the syghte of his eyes, & whē he was lx. yere olde, he gat his syghte agayne. The resydue of hys lyfe led he in ioye, and increased well in the feare of God, and departed in peace. But in the houre of his death he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, & vii. yonge wyngaldes hys sonnes chyldren, & sayde vnto them: The destruccyon of Antioch is at hande, for the woide of the Lord cannot faile: and oure byrth þe are scattered out of the land of Israel, shall come ether agayne. And þe hole lāde of it þe hath ben wast, shall be fil- led: & the house of God þe was byent in it, shall be buylded agayne: & all such as feare God, shall re- turne ether: & heathen also shall for sake their ydolles and come to Jerusalem, & dwel there, & all the kynges of the earth shall be glad of her, and woishyppe the Lord God of Israel.

And therfoze

C And therfore my chyldren, heare youre father: serue the Lorde in the truth, seke after his wyll, and do the thynges that please hym. Commaunde your chyldren, that they do right geue almes: be mynde of God, and euer to be thankefull vnto hym in truth, & with al they power: heare me now therfore my chyldren, and abyde not heare: but in what daye soeuer ye haue buried your mother besyd me, get you from hence. For I feare the wyckednesse of it shall bynne it to destruction and ende.

D After the death of hys mother, Tobias departed away from Ninus, with his wyfe and chyldren, & with his chylders chyldren, & came agayne to his father & mother in lawe, & found them hole & in good age, & toke the care of them. And he closed their eyes, & was beye vnto Ba gules goodnes, & sawe the fyfte generation, and hys chylders chyldren. And when he was. xxix. years of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, & his kynfolkes buried hym. And all hys posterite continued in a good lyfe, & holy conuersacion so that they were loued & accepted both of God and man: and of all the people of the lande.

The . xxiij . Chapter.

C The byrthing of Sargathani. The victory of Nabuchodonosor agaynst Arphaxat. The messenger of Nabuchodonosor to the king of Assyria.

A Rphaxat the kyng of the Medes subdured manye people vnto hys dominion, and buylded a noble stronge cyyte, whych he called Sargathani: The walles of it made he of fre stone, foure squared, seuen square bites hygh, and thyrty cubites bryde. He made towres there vpon an hundred and thyrty. But vpon the foure corners every wyche was twentye foote broad. He made the pyllars in the heigh, lyke as the towres. This kyng trusted in hys myghty hoost, and in his glayous charettes.

B So in the twelue year of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, whych raygned in the great cyyte of Ninus, fought agaynst Arphaxat, and ouercameth hym in the great felde called Bagau, besyde these twyttes & Egypt, and Iudas in the felde of the kyng of the Elphes.

C Then was the kyngedome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his bert was lyfte vp: and he sente vnto al them ydwellers in Celycia, in Damascus, in Libanus, & vnto the heathen that dwelt in Carmel & Cedar, & to such as dwelt in Galile in the great felde of Eshelion, to all them that dwelt in Samaria, and beyond the water of Iordane vnto Ierusalem and the hole lande of Iesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all wold one consent wolde not agre vnto him, and sent the messengers agayne emptye and put them a waye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng toke indignacyon at all those landes, and swore by hys throne, & by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreys.

The . ii . Chapter.

C Holofernes to the king of Nabuchodonosor to shew all the myghte, the preparation and perfute of Holofernes.

In the thyrtyeth year of kyng Nabuchodonosor, vpon the twelue day of the fyfte moneth, it was draught in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wold defende him selfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, al his captaynes, and men of warre and shewed them hys secreete counsaile, and tolde them that his purpose was, to bynne the hole earthe vnder his domynyon. Nowe when they were all contente with hys sayinge, Nabuchodonosor the kyng called Holofernes, the chefe capayne of hys warres, and sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the world, and specially agaynst those that haue dyspyed my commaundement. Thou shalt spare no realme, all stronge cyytes shalt thou bynne in subieccion vnto me.

Then Holofernes called toge ther all the capaynes, and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldiers vnto the hooste (lyke as the kyng commaunded hym) namely an hundred and twentye thousande fyghtynge men vpon foote, and twelve thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All hys ordynance sente he afore w an innumerable multitude of camels: so that the hooste was well prouyded for with oren, and small cartell, and that without number. He caused cojne to be prepared oute of all Syria for his hooste. Muche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he tooke hys iourneye, he and all hys hooste with charettes, horsemen, & archers, of whome there were so many, that they covered the grounde of the lande, lyke the grethoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, whych lyen vpon the lefte syde of Celycia: & so he wente vp into all they castels, and wanne every stronge holde. As for the welthe cyyte of Melorhus, he brake it downe and spoiled all the chyldren of Charsis, and the Ismalynes, whych laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpon the south syde of the lande of Chelon. He wente ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hyge cyytes that were there, from the broke of Hambyetl a ma come to the see: & he tooke the borders in frome Celycia, vnto the coastes of Japhet towarde the south: he caried awaye all the Wadyantes, and spoiled all they goodes, and whosoever wythstode hym he slewe them with the swerde.

After this he wet downe into the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, and brake vp al the cojne and all the tress, and caused the bynes to be cut downe. And the feare of him fell vpon al them that dwelt vpon the earth.

The .iii. Chapter.

How the kinges became wroth agaynst holofernes. And how they came to the temple of babilon.

When the kinges and princes of al cyties and landes sent they Embassadors: nameley they of Syria, Mesopotamia, Siria, Babil: and Lybia, and Cecilia, which came to holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wrath cease toward vs. It is better for vs to serue the greatesinge Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then that we shulde dye and be slayne: and receaue great hurte. All oure cyties and possessions al mountaynes and ryles, felde, great and small castell, shep goates houses, and camels, all oure goodes, and house-holdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiectyō be it al together. We oure selues also, & oure chyldren wyl be thyne owne, come vnto vs a preceable ioye, and vse oure scrupce at thy pleasure.

Then came holofernes, downe from the mountaynes with hostemen, & greatesinge, and conquered all stronge defended cyties and all that dwelt in the lande and out of al cyties he tooke stronge men, and soche as were meete for the warre to helpe him. There came such a feare also vpon those countreys, that the indwellers of all the cyties, the princes and rulers, and the people together wente forth to meete him as he came, & receaued hym honourably with garlandes, & torches, & daunces, tabettes & pipes.

And the kinge, though they dyd this, yet myght they no swage his rigorous stomache: but he destroyed their cyties, and bewed downe their woodes. For Nabuchodonosor the kinge had commaunded hym that he shulde roote out all the goddes of the land: to the intente that he onely myght be callid and taken for the god of the nations: which holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So went he thowhe Siria, Babil, and thowhe all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, and came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Sabaa, and Serptopolie, and soke they cyties and remayned there thre dayes wherein he caused all the hole multitude of his host to be gathered together.

The .iiii. Chapter.

How holofernes was wroth agaynst the Jewes. And how he sent to the kinges of Syria, and to the kinges of the mountaynes.

When the chyldren of Israel dwelt in Jewry heerd this, they were soze afrayde of hym. There came such a trembling also & feare vpon them that they loosed he shuld do vnto the cytie of Ierusalem, and the temple of the Lozde, as he had done to other cyties and their temples. So they sent into all Samaria round aboute vnto Iericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, and made faste the townes with walles, and prepared cozne, for them agaynst the battayle.

Eliachim also the piasse, wrote vnto all them that dwelt toward Eshelion (which lieth ouer agaynst the great felde by Dothan) and vnto all those by whome men myght haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wherby there myght be anye waye and passage to Ierusalem, & that they shulde holde bylygent watche where anye strayer was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israel by an Eliachim the piasse of the Lozde had commaunded them. And al the people cryed earnestly, and humbled theyr soules with fastynges and prayeis, they and their wyues. The piasse put on berry clothes, and layde the yonge babes before the temple of the Lozde, and couered the altar of the Lozde with an berry cloth. And with one accord they cried vnto the Lozde God of Israel, that theyr chyldren shulde not be geuen into a praye, and theyr wyues into a spolie, that their cyties shulde not be layed waste, and that theyr Sanctuary shulde not be unhallowed, and so they to be ashamed and rebuke vnto the heathen.

Then Eliachim the piasse of the Lozde wente rounde aboute al Israel: and spake vnto the saying: Be ye sure, that the Lozde wyl heare your prayeis, & ye continue to faste in fastynges and prayeis in the sight of the Lozde. Remembre howe the seruante of the Lozde, wyche ouerthrew the Amelchires (that trusted in their myghte and power, in their hoste in their hyldes, in theyr chaerres & hostemen) not with weapons, but with prayeis. Euen so shall all the enemies of Israel be, & ye continue in this waye that ye haue begunne. So vpon this exhortacion, they fasted in prayer before the Lozde. In so much that they which offered burnt sacrifices vnto the Lozde, offered the offeringes vnto the Lozde, beyng araied in berry clothes, & had a shew vpon their beades. And they al besoughte God from theyr hole herte, & he wolde viset his people of Israel.

The .v. Chapter.

How holofernes was wroth agaynst the Jewes. And how he sent to the kinges of Syria, and to the kinges of the mountaynes.

Now came to holofernes the piasse of the warre of the Assyrians that the chyldren of Israel prepared them selues to make to be many, & howe they had stopyed to bylyge betwixt the mountaynes. Then of all wyche bynge wyth, and called all the bylyge possidors, and the captaynes of Ammon, and sayd vnto them: Tell me, what people is this, that heareth in the mountaynes? What is theyr power? What manner of hoste haue they? Who is theyr captayne? And why do they bylyge vs more then all those that dwell in the East? and come not forth to meete vs, that we maye receaue vs with peace? Then Achamen doctore of al the Ammonytes answered, with this: O piasse, please the to heare, I wyche, ascribed before concerning this people dwel in the mountaynes, and there shal no lye go out of my mouth.

This people is of the generation of Chal-dees, they dwell first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde wolde not folow the goddes of theyr fathers þe were in the lande of the Chaldees, & so forsoke theyr the custome of theyr forefathers (whyche had many goddes) and worshipped one God, that made heauen & earth: whyche also commaunded them that they shulde goo from thence, and dwell at Haran. Now when there came a dereb into the hole lande, they went doun to Egypt and there they dwelte foure hundred yeres, in the whiche they multiplied greatly, that theyr hoste myghte not be nombred. And when the kyng of Egypt oppressed them, and subdued them in byppling of hye epties wth mahyng of clare and bypche, they cryed vnto God theyr Lozde, whyche punished þe hole lande of Egypt with dyuers plagues.

Nowe when the kyng of Egypt let them goo theyr waye, and the plage ceased, and then folowed after them, to take them and to bypng them agayne into his seruyce, while they were slpyng a waye, the God of heauen opened the see so that the waters floode faste vpon bothe sydes as a wall, and these wente thowoe the bottom of the see byp the bodde. In the whiche place when an innumerable people of þe Egyptians, folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters: that there remayned non one to tell them that came after, howe it happened. So when this people was passed thowoe the red see, they came into the wilderness of mount Synay, where neuer man myghte dwell afoze, and wher the sonne of man neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myghte drinke, and for the yeres had they meat from heuen. Wher soeuer they went (without bowe and arrow, without buckler or sword) their god fought for them, & caused the to haue the victorie. Yea, no man was hable to hurt this people, except it were, þe they departed vnfaithfully from the worshypping of þe Lozde their God. But as oft as they worshipped any other besyde theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be poyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusion. Reuerthelesse, as ofte as they were sorpe for theyr departing from þe worshypp of their God, the same god of heauen gaue them power and strengthe to withstande theyr enemyes.

Moreover, they due the kyng of the Canaanites, Jebusites, Pherepites, Herpites, Eupites, and Amozites, & al the myghtie in Belshon and toke theyr landes and cyties in possession: and so longe as they lymed not in the syghte of theyr God, it went well wth them, for theyr God hateth vnryghteousnesse. For in tymes past when they went out of the waye whiche God had geuen them, that they shoulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuers battayles of many nacions, and many of them were carped awaye prysoners vnto a straunge countrye. But nowe lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lozde theyr God, & are come together again out of the countries where they were scattered abode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell therein: and as for Jerusalem where þe Sanctuarie is, they haue it agayne in possession.

And therfore my Lozde, make dysgent inquisition, if this people haue done wyckednes in the syght of theyr God, then let vs goo vngaynsse them, for doubtelesse theyr God shall deliuer them into thy handes, & subdue them vnto thy power. But if this people haue not displeased their God, we shall not be hable to withstande them, for theyr God shall defende them: and so shall we be a shame to all the world.

Now when Achioz had spokt out these wordes all the great men of holofernes were wroth and thought to slay hym, & said one to another: What is he this, that dare saye, þe chyldren of Israel are hable to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kyng, & his hoste: where as they are vncapabled people, without strengthe, or vnderstandyng of the feates of warre. That Achioz therfore maye know that he hath disceiued vs, we wyl go vnto the mountaynes: when þe myghty men of them are taken, he also shall be there with the sword, that all people maye know, þe Nabuchodonosor is the god of the earth, & that there is none other without hym.

¶ Achioz is compeled into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tryed to a tree, but is saved by the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achioz is comforted of the Jewes.

When they had leste of speaking, holofernes toke soze indignacion, & said vnto Achioz: For so much as þat prophesied vnto vs sayng: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of theyr God, I wyl we the þe there is no god but Nabuchodonosor. Yea, we wyl slay them all as one man, & also walte per the with them thowoe the sword of the Assirians, & all Israel shalbe destroyed wth the, and then þe walte seie, that Nabuchodonosor is the lozde of the whole earth. Then shall þe sword of my knyghte hode go thowoe thy sydes, and thou shalt fall dounne styte amonge the wounded of Israel, & shalt not come to thy selfe agayne but be vtterly destroyed with them. But if thou thyselfe thy prophesie to be true, whyd it þe then change thy colour why art thou a trappe? Thou shalt see that my wordes are not hable to be perfourmed. But that thou mayest knowe that þe walte seie these thynges with them, behold: from this houre forth wyl I sende the to ponder people, that when the punishment of my swerde (whiche they haue worthely deserued) falleth vpon the, thou mayest be punished with them.

So holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achioz, & carpe hym to Bethulsa, & to deliuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then holofernes seruantes toke hym and wente thowoe the playne feilde. But when they dyde we myght vnto the mountaynes, the syngers casters came out agaynsse them. Reuerthelesse, they gat them a way by the syde of the mountayne, and bounde Achioz hande and foot to a tree, and so left hym bounde with wy

Nowe when the chyldren of Israel wente downe from Bethulia, came vnto hym looked hym, broughte hym into Bethulia: sette hym in the mydd of the people, and asked hym what the matter was. that the Assyrians had leste hym bounde.

C Othias, the sonne of Micha: of the trybe of meon, and Charmin (whiche is also called Sothouel) were the principall rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achioz stode in the myddest of the wenaunters, & beset them all: he tolde them, what answer he gaue holofernes to & saying that he asked hym, and how holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayng: & how holofernes hym selfe was wrothe, & commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Assyrians: that when he overcame the chyldren of Israel, he myght commaunde Achioz also to be put to deat he with dyuers tormentes, because he sayde the God of heauen is the; defender. And when Achioz had playne-ly tolde oute all these saynges, all the people fel downe vpon the; faces, praisynge the Lord and poured oute the; prayers together vnto the Lozde, with a generall complaint and wepyng, and sayde: O Lozde God of heauen and of earth, beholde the; pyde: and looke vpon oure lowynesse, & consyder howe it standeth wth thy saintes, & make it to be knowne, that & for sakest not thos, whiche holde them fast: by the and howe that thou byngest them lowe & presume of them selues, & make the; host in the; owne strength. So when the wepyng & pray-er of the people (whiche they had made the hole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achioz sayng: The God of oure fathers, whose power and strengthe thou hast prayed, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather see the; destruccyon. When the Lozde our God then shall geue his seruantes the; libertie: God be also with the amonge vs: so & if it please the, thou with all thyne, maist dwell with vs.

Nowe when Othias had ended the counsaile: he toke hym into his house, and made a grete supper, called the elders to it: & so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together which make the; prayers all the night longe in & congrega-tyon, and besought the God of Israel for helpe

C The vii. Chapter.

¶ Bethulia is besyged of holofernes. The people requyre help of God. They of Bethulia would geue oute the cite for want of water. The prayer of the people with lamentacion.

In the next daye holofernes commaunded his hoste to go vp agaynst Be-thulia. There was an. C. and. xxi. & fpyghtynge men on fote, and. xxi. & horsemen, helyde the preparynge of them that were donne: and came to them on euery syde out of the countreyes & cyties whiche he had ca-ken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayle agaynst the Assyrcies, and came on the hyl side, vnto the top & looked ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place whiche is called Bel-ma, vnto Chelmon & lyeth toward Chelion.

Nowe when the chyldren of Israel sawe so grete a multitude of the Assyrians, they fell downe flat vpon the ground, strowed ashen vpon the; heades, & prayed with one accord, & the God of Israel woulde shewe his mercye vpon his people. And so they toke the; weapons and sat betwene the mountaynes in the narrow place, & kepte the waye, daye and nyghte. But whyle holofernes was goynge about, he found the water spynge, whiche from the South syde was conueyed into the cytie by a condyte: the; commaunded he to bygger another waye, and to cut the; condyte in sonder. There were welis also not farre from & walles, whiche they used secretly, moze for pleasure then for necessity.

C Then wente the Amorytes, and the Moabytes vnto holofernes, and said: The chyldren of Israel truste neither in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, and kepte the mountaynes & hylles. That thou mayst overcome them therfore, withoute the stryking of any battaile, let men to kepe the welles, & they shalwe no water oute of them: so shalt thou destroye them withoute swearde, or at the leste they shalbe so feble, that they must be sayne to geue ouer the cytie, whiche they thinke not habie to be wonne for so much as it lyeth in the mountaynes. These wordes pleased holofernes well and all his menne of warre, and he sette an hundred that euery well rounde aboute.

D And when the; watche had endured twen-tye daies, the Cyterians and al & had water, say-led them & dwelte in the cytie of Bethulia, so & in the hole cytie they had not drynke ynoughe for one day, for the people had water geuen the dapipe in a measure. Then came the menne and we men, yong perones, & chyldren all vnto Othias, and sayd all with one voyce: God be iudge bet wyrt vs and the, for thou hast delt euill w-vs: thou woldest not speake peccably wyth the kyng of & Assyrians, therfore hathe the God solde vs in their handes, & there is nomā to helpe vs where as we are broughte downe beset the; eyes in this, and great destruccyon. Therfore gather nowe together all the people that be in the cytie, & we maye all peise oure selues wyl-lynglye vnto the people of holofernes, for better it is that we be captiue and prayse & Lozde with oure lyues, then to be slayne and perishe, and to be laughed to scoyne & shamed of euery man, when we se our wyues & chyldren dye be-foze oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this day to recorde: & the God of our fathers (whiche punysyth vs accordynge to the deservynge of oure synnes) and geue pon warnynge, that ye geue vp the cytie nowe into the power of holofernes hoste, that oure ende maye be wozte with the swearde, whiche els shall endure longe, for want of water and for the; str.

E When thei had spoken out these wordes, there was a grete wepyng & howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man: and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto god with one voyce, sayng: we haue sinned with our fathers we

We haue done amysse, we haue deise wychedly. Thou arte gracious, haue mercye vpon vs: punyssh our vnyghteousnesse wth thyne owne scourge, and geue not those ouer þ knowlage þ vnto a people whiche know þ not, lest they say amonge the heathen: where is theyr God.

And when they were so werpe with thys cryyng and wepyng, that they helde theyr tonges. Othas stode vp with watry eyes, and saide: O take good hertes vnto you, (dere bryethen) and be of good chere, and let vs waite yet thes fyue dayes for mercye of the Lozde peraduenture he shall put away his indignacyon, and geue glo-ry vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not wth thes fyue dayes are past, we shall doore as ye haue sayde.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ Of the vertuous woman Iudith whiche reppreth the avarice of the heathen because they tempted the Lozde. Also how she wonne the courage and breake the people, and sheweth her counsel against the enemyes of the Jewes.

AND it happened when these wordes came to the eares of Iudith a wydow, whiche was þ daughter of Merari, the sonne of Ioor, the sonne of Israhel, the sonne of Elay, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedon, þ sonne of Rayholm, the sonne of Achirob the sonne of Melchias, the sonne of Euan, þ sonne of Bathania, the sonne of Malachiel, þ sonne of Shimeon the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly daruel. For whyle he was bindyng the Jewes together in the feld the beate came vpon his head, and he died at Bethulia, his cytie, and there was he buried besyde his fathers.

Nowe was Iudith his desolate wydowe thys yeres and fyve monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her selfe a pryue chambry, where she dwelt, being closed in with her maydens. She ware a smocke of heare and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbothe, and newe moones: & the solempne dayes that the people of Israhel kepte. She was a very fayer and bewtyful person. Her husband also had left her greate ryches, a plenteous howsholde, great vnmoueable posselions and many catel. This Iudith was a woman of a very good repute with every one, for she feared the Lozde greatly, and there was no bodie þ spake an euill worde of her.

When this Iudith heard, howe Othas had promysed the people, that after the fyfte day he wold geue vp the cytie vnto the Assyrians, she sent for the elders Chambyr, and Charmy, and when they came to her, she saide, what thyng is this, wherein Othas hath consented, þ yf God helpe not wthin fyue dayes, he wyl geue ouer þ cytie to the Assyrians. What are ye þ ye tempt the Lozde. This deuyce prayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh hym to wathe þ dyspleasure. Wyl ye let the mercye of the Lozde a tyme, and appointe hym a daye after your wyl.

¶ Heurthelesse, for so muche as the Lozde is pacyente, let vs rather repente, pouryng oute teares, and beseechyng hym of grace. For God threateneth not as a man, neither wyl he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs hartely sal downe before hym, & serue hym with a meke sperte, and w wepyng eyes saye vnto the Lozde þ he deale with vs according to his owne wyl and mercy: þ lyke as our herte is nowe vered, and brougt lowe row the pynde of them, it maye be so consofited thowhe his grace: in somuche as we folow not the synnes of our fathers, whiche forsoke theyr God, & worshipped other goddes: for the which synne they perished with the sword, were spoiled and brougt to shame, of all theyr enemyes. As for vs we knowe none other God but onely hym, for whose comferte let vs tary with me here. He shal requyre and make inquisition for our bloude, from the veracyons of our enemyes he shall bring downe all the heathen, that ryle vp agaynst vs, and put them to dishonour, and the Lozde our God.

Therfore dere bryethen, sepyng ye are the honourable and elders in the people of God, vnto whome all the people haue respecte, and vpon whome the lyfe of the people standeth, lyfte vp theyr hertes wth your exhortacyon that they maye call to remembraunce, howe our fathers also in tymes past were tempted, þ they myght be proued, yf they worshipped theyr God a tyme. They ought to remember, howe our father Abraham bringe tempted, and tryed thowhe many trybulacyons, was founde a louer: and frende of God. So was Isahar, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they þ pleased God being tryed thowhe many troubles, wer founde stedfast in saythe. Agayne, they that receyued not theyr temptacyons with the feare of God: but putte theim selues forth, with vnpercyency and murmyng agaynst the God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of serpentes. And therfore wuld not we vnder take to be auenged for the thyng þ is done vnto vs, but consyder: that all thes punysshmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes and misdeedes. Seleyng also that this correccyon cometh vnto vs, as to the seruantes of God, for amendeunte, and not for oure destruccyon.

Then sayde Othas, and the elders vnto Iudith: all that thou spakest, is true: and no man can repproue thy wordes. Pray þ for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou arte an holy woman, & fearest God. And Iudith sayde vnto them: Seynge: ye knowe þ my wordes are of God, then proue my counsel & deuise, yf it be of God: & be-leeue god þ he wil bring my counsel to good end.

Thus haue I deuyced: Ye shall stande thys nyght before the porte, and I wyl gooe forth wth Abiamy mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God: that he wyl graciously remembre his people of Israhel wthin fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, aske ye no questyons of it: tyll I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothing els but pray vnto the Lozde your God for me. Then Othas, the pyner of the people of Iuda, saide vnto her: Goode thy waye in peace, the Lozde be with the: that that the maye be auenged of our enemyes. And so they wente from her agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Iudith for the victorye.

Owe when they were gone they waue, Iudith went into her closet: put on an deape smocke, strewed ashen vpon her head, fell downe before the Lozde, and cryed vnto him sayng: O Lozde God of my father: O Symeon whiche gauest hym a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemyes that vsed violence & wylfulnesse, and that rauished the vyrgyne and put her to byshonestye. Thou that gauest they: wnes into a pray, and they: daughters into captiuitie, and all they: pray for a spoyle vnto thy seruantes, whiche bare a zeile vnto y: helpe me wyddom. O Lozde my God I beleche the. For thou haste done all thynges from y: begynning and loke what thou haste taken in hand and deuyled, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgements are done in thy euerlastyng forknowlage. O loke now vpon the armyes of y: Assyrians lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpon the hoste of the Egyptians, when they bringe weaponed, persecuted thy seruantes, and put they: truste in they: charrettes, horsemen: and in the multitude of they: men of warre. But thou lokest vpon they: hoste, castyng a thycke darchenesse before them: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

25 Euen so Lozde let it go with these, y: truste in the power & multitude of they: men of warre in they: charrets, arrows, and speares, & know not that y: only art our God, whiche destroyest warres from the begynning, & that thou arte y: Lozde. O lyfte vp thyne arme nowe, lyke as euer from the begynning, & in thy power byng they: power to naught: cause they: myghte to fall in thy wyath. They make they: hoste, that they wyl vnhalow and despyle thy Sanctuary and to waste the tabernacle of thy name, & to caste downe y: house of thyne auter, with they: swerd. Byng to passe. O Lozde y: the wyde of the enemye be cutte downe with bys owne swerd, that he maye be taken with the snares of his: yes in me, and y: thou mayst smyte hym with y: pypes of my lone. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I may dispyse hym and his strength and y: I maye destroye hym.

This shall byng thy name an euerlastyng remembraunce, yf the hande of a woman ouerthrowe hym. For thy power. O Lozde standeth not in the power of men, neyther haste thou anye pleasure in the strengthe of horses. There was neuer proude persone that pleased y:, but in the prayer of the humble and meke, hath thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lozde of all creatures, heare me poore woman: callyng vpon the, and puttyng my truste in thy mercede. Remember thy conuynce. O Lozde: and mynster wordes in my mouth, & stablysh thy deuyce in my heart that thy house maye contynue still in holynesse and that all the heathen may knowe that thou art God, and that there is none other but thou.

The x. Chapter.

Judith beareth her selfe to go in belyf. The storyng that the elders gaue Iudith, whiche was in lode to y: Iudith.

And when she had lefte of cryng vnto the Lozde, she rose vp from y: place where she had lye flat before the Lozde: and called her mayden, wente downe into her house, layde the deape cloth from her, put of the garments of her wyddowhede: washed her bodye, anointed her selfe with precyous thynges, of sweete sauour: brydled y: plaistered her deare: set an houe vpon her head, & put on suche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, sylppers vpon her fete, armeletes: spanges: earpynges: syngerspynges, & decked her selfe with all her best arraye.

The Lozde gaue her also a special bewtye & fayrnesse: for all this deckyng of her selfe, was not done for any voluptuousnesse, & pleasure of the fleshe: but of a ryght discrecyon and vertue therfore byd the Lozde increaseth her bewtye: so that she was excellyng amiable, & well sauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her mayde also a bottel of wyne, a pot with oyle: pottage, cake breade and cheere, & went her waye.

25 Nowe when she came to the poste of the citye, she founde Olyas, and the elders of the citye waypyng there. Whiche when they sawe her, they were astonied, & marvelled greatly at her bewtye. Neuerthelesse, they asked no quethyng on at her, but let her goo, sayng: The God of our fathers geue the bys grace, and wyth his power perfourme all y: deuyce of thy heart, that Ierusalem maye reioyce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombze of the holy & ryghteous. And all they that wer there, layde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made her prayer vnto the Lozde, and went out at y: poste she and her mayde.

And as she was goyng downe the mountayne, it happned that aboute the spyng of y: daye, the spyers of the Assyrians met wyth her, and toke her, sayng: whence comest thou? O whether goest thou? she answered: I am a daughter of y: hebrues, & am fled from them: for I know that they shalbe geuen vnto you to be spoiled: because they thoughte scozne to yelde them selues vnto you, that they myghte fynde mercede in youre spyghe. Therfore haue I deuyled by my selfe after this maner: I wyl go before the wyner Holofernes, & tell hym all theis secretes, and wyl weete him, howe he may come by them and wyne them, so that not one man of his hoste shall perpeyre.

And when these menne had heard her wordes, & conspyred her fayre face they were astonied (for they wondred at her excellent bewtye) & layde vnto her: Thou haste saured thy lyfe by syndyng ouer his deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to our Lozde: & bethou sure, that when thou comest vnto hym, he shall intreat the well, and thou shalt please hym at the better. So they

So they brought her into Holofernes pauplyon, and tolde hym of her. Nowe when she came in before hym, immediatly he was overcome: and taken with her bewere. Then laide his seruauntes: who wolde despyle the people of Je-wes, that haue so fayre women. Shuld we not by reason fyghte agaynst thein for thes? So when Iudith sawe Holofernes, speyng in a canappe, that was wrought of purple lyke: gold smaragde, & peryous stones, she looked faste vpon hym and fell downe vpon the earth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne at theyr Lozdes commaundment.

The. xi. Chapter.

Holofernes requyreth of Iudith the cause of her coming: which groweth hym a iustitie answer.

Ihen sayde Holofernes vnto her: Because of good chere, and feare not in thyne perce, for I neuer hurte man & wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge.

As for thy people, yf they had not despyled me I shulde not haue yftee vp my speare agaynst them. But tell me now, what is the cause that thou art departed from them, and wherfor: art thou come vnto vs.

And Iudith sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden, for yf thou wilt do after the wordes of thy handmay-den, the Lozde shall bryng thy matter to a prosperous effect. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lozde of the lande lyueth, & as truly as hys power lyueth, which is in the to & punishment of all men that go wyonge, all men shall not only be subdued vnto hym thow the, but all & beastes of the felde. For all the people spake of thy pudent actiuitie, and it hath euer bene repo-red, howe thou only arte good and myghtye in all his kyngdome, and thy dyscrecion is comen ded in all landes.

The thyng is manifest also, that Achro-spake, and it is wel knowe, what thou commaun-dest to do vnto hym. For this is playne and of a suertie, that our God is so warth with vs, by the reason of our synnes, that he hath thewed by hys Prophetes vnto the people, howe & for they synnes he wylly deliuer them ouer vnto & enemye. And for so muche as the chyldren of Israell, knowe that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are sore afrayed of the.

They suffre great hunger also, & for want of water, they are deade now in a maner. Woze ouer, they are apointed to slape all theyr catell that they maye dyspyle the bloude of them, and are purposed to spend all the holy ornaments of theyr God (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for coyne, wyne, and oyle. Seyng nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, & they must nedes be destroyed. Whiche when I thy handmayden perceyued, I fled from them and the Lozde hath sent me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden woz shipped God euen now here besyde the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I wylly make my prayer vnto God, & he shal tell me when he wylly reward them theyr synne: then shall I come and shewe the and bryng & thow to the middest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalt haue all & people of Israel, as the shepe withoute a shepherd: there shal not so much as one dogge bache agaynst the, for these thynges are thewed me, by & prouidence of God: & for so much as God is displeased w the, he hath set me to tel the & same

These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruauntes, which merueled at & wysdom: of her, & sayde one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon earth, in bewtye & discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hither be-foze thy people that thou mayst geue them into our handes. And for so much as thy praynysle is good, yf God persourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and & shal be excellent and great in the court of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shalbe spoken of in all the lande.

The. xii. Chapter.

Holofernes commaundeth that Iudith be well intertained, & he gawth licence to go out in the night season to praye, & openeth to her. As also in iust vnto her, so make her to come into Holofernes to a banquet, and she cometh. Holofernes to asurmen.

Ihen commaunded he her to go in where hys treasure laye, and charged that she shoulde haue her dwellinge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from his table. Iudith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it, as nowe (lest I displease my God) but wylly eate of such as I haue brought with me. Then laide Holofernes vnto her: Yf these thynges that thou hast brought with the sayle, what shal we do vnto the? And Iudith sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my Lozde thy handmayden shal not spende all this, tyl God haue brought to passe in my hand the thynges that I haue deuyled.

So his seruauntes brought her into the tent where as he had appoynted. And as she was goyng in, she despyed that she myght haue leaue to go forth by nyght, and befoze dape to her prayer and to make intercessyon vnto & Lozde. Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God thow the dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth into the valley of Bethulia, & washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp & besoughte the Lozde God of Israel: That he wolde pros-pere her waye, for the deliuerance of hys people. And so she went in, & remained cleane in her tente, tyl she toke her meate in the euening.

Upon the fourth dape it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruauntes, & sayde vnto Clagao hys chamberlayne: So thy wap, and counsell this be byuelle, that she may be wyllyng to consente to kepe company w me.
For it were asham vnto all & Assyrians that a woman shulde so laughe a man to scorn that he were come from hym vnnedled withal.

Then went Clagao vnto Iudith, and sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrapde, to come into my Lozde, & she maye be honoured befoze hym that she mape eat and drynke wyne, and be merre with hym. Unto whome Judith answered: Who am I, that I shoulde save my Lord naye: what so ever is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and looke what is his pleasure, that shall I thinke well done, as long as I live.

So she stode up, and drete her selfe with her apparell, and went in: and stode before hym. And holofernes herre was whole moued, so þe bent in the desyre toward her. And holofernes sayde vnto her: drynke now and lye downe and be merre, for thou haste founde sauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: My Lord, I wyl drynke for my mynde is merre to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and dydeate and dranke before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And holofernes was merre with her, and dranke moze wine, the euer he dyd afoze in all his lyfe.

The xiii. Chapter.

Holofernes slepyng for very dronkennes, and Judith cutteth off his heade: and partly therewith to her owne people of babilon she is receiued with ioye. They geue thanks vnto God for their deliuerance. Judith speaketh vnto Achybor: whiche maye map-lyd at her feate done vnto holofernes.

When it was late in the nyghte, his seruantes made hast eury man to his lodgyng. And Agao shutte the chambze doores, and wente dys wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for holofernes he laye vpon the bed al dronken, and of very dronkennes fell a slepe.

Then commanded Judith her mayden to stande wythoute before the doze, and to wayte. And Judith stode before the bed, makinge her prayer with teares, & moued her lippes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and haue a respecte vnto the wozhes of my handes in this ouer, that thou mayest let vp the cytie of Ierusalem, lyke as þu haste promysed. O graunte that by þy I may perfourme the thyng, whiche I haue deuysed thowow the belefe, that I haue in the.

And when she had spoken thus, she went to the bedstede, and lowed the sword that hangd vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she holde of the heary lockes of his heade, and sayd strengthen me, O Lord God in this houre and with that she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote off his heade. Then toke she the canapp away, and rolled the deade body asyde. Immedyately she got her foze, and deliuered the heade of holofernes vnto her mayden, & bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forthe together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye and so passed by the holte, and came thowow the valley vnto the porte of the cytie. And Judith cryed a lare vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates, saide she, for God is with vs, whiche hath shewed his power vpon Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytie together. And they came all to mete her: lyde and grete, yonge and olde for they thought not that she shoulde haue come so sone. So they lyghted candels, & gathered about her eury chone: but she went vp into an hye place & caused sepence to be proclaimed.

When eury manne nowe belde bys tonge, Judith sayde: O people the Lord our God for he hath not dyspyssed, nor forsaken them, that put theyr truste in hym, and in me his handmaiden he hath perfozmed his mercy, which he promised vnto þe house of Israel: per, in my hād this same nyght hath he slaine penyemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the heade of holofernes out of the wallet, & shewed it them sayng: Beholde the heade of holofernes the captain of þe Assirians, & this is the canapp, where in he laye in his dronkenesse: where the Lord our God hath slaine hym by þe hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord lyueth, his Angel hath kepte me goyng thether, remayninge there, and commingether againe from thence. And the Lord hath not suffered me his handmaiden to be despyled, but withoute any fylthynges of synne hath he broughte me agayne vnto you: and that with grete byrtowse, so that I am escaped, and deliuered. O geue thanks vnto hym eury chone, for he is gracious and dys mercy endureth for euer.

So they praised the Lord all together, and gaue thanks vnto hym. And to her they sayde The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thowow þe hath brought our enemies to naught. And O las the chiefe ruler of þe people of Israel sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lord þe dyspse God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lord, the maker of heauen and earth, whiche hath gypped the a ryghte to wounde and smyte of the heade of the captayns of our enemies. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy people shal neuer come oute of the mouth of men, whiche shall alwaye remembre the power of the Lord: sayng thou haste not spared thyne owne selfe, but put the in leoparde: consyderyng the angurth and trouble of thy people, and so haste helpe theyr fall before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achybor also was called, and he came. Then saide Judith vnto hym: The God of Israel vnto whome thou gauest wytnesse, that he wolde be aduenged of his enemyes, euen he hath thus nyghte thowow my hande: smytten of the heade of all the vnsaythfull. And that thou mayest se that it is so, beholde: this is the heade of holofernes, whiche in his presumptuous pryde: dyspyssed the God of the people of Israel, & threatened the with destruction, sayng: when the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause the also to be styete with the sword. When Achybor sawe holofernes heade, he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde, for very angurth & feare so that he souned withall.

But after þe was come againe to hym selfe he fell downe before her: and prayed her, sayng: Blessed arte þu of thy God, in al the tabernacles of Jacob: for al the people þe heare of thy name, shal praise þe god of Israel because of the

The conspoyse of Judith. And how byng an heathen man turneth to God. The Assyrians are escaped of the Jews.

Judith saide unto all the people: heere, heere, heere. And shee by the waye of the walles, & when the sunne was set, shee take euery man his weapon, & fall out violently: not as though he wolde go besyde them, but to runne vpon them with violence. When the souldiers in the tentes saw this, they that of necessity be compelled to fflye backward, & to rase vp the captaynes to the battayle. So when the captaynes come into Holofernes paillison, & fynde the deade bodye waspyed in the bloude, fearfullnesse shall fall vpon them, & when ye perceyue that they fflye, folow them without all care, for God shall deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achior seeing the power of God, whiche he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his heathenish belief, and put his trust in God, and let hym self be circumcised: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israel he and all his posterite vnto this daye.

Now allone as it was daye, they styct vp Holofernes head vpon the walles, & euery man toke his weapon, and so they went out with an horrible crye. When the spies saw this, they came vnto Holofernes tent. And they were within the tent, came before his chambrye, & made a greates rushing to wake hym vp, because they thought with noise to haue raised him. For there durst not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the captaynes and spyces: and all the chiefe in the hyng of the Assyrians hoste came together, they sayd vnto the chambrelaynes: Go your way in, and wake hym vp for the myse are crepte out of the holes, and dare pproche vnto the battayle.

Then went Agao into his chambrye, & rode before the bed, & clapped with his handes, for he thought he had be slepyng with Judith.

But when he had berkened perfectlye with his eares, and coulde perceyue no sterynge, he wente nyggher to the bedde, and lyfte it vp: and then sawe he the deade bodye of Holofernes lying there without a head, weltered in his bloud vpon the earth. Then cryed he with loude voyce and with wepyng rent his clothes, and went in to Judiths tent, and founde her not: And so he leper oute vnto the people & sayde: one woman of the Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people vnto thame. For loo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hath no heade.

When the chiefe of the Assyrians hoste heard that, they rent the clothes, and there fel an intolerable feare and tremblyng vpon them so that they myndes were soze afraid. And there was an exceeding great crye in the hole hoste.

The rv. Chapter.

The flight of the Assyrians. The pursuit of Israel after the Jewes had with theyr the spoiles of the Assyrians. Judith in prayer to Joachym and of the people.

Now when all the hoste heard that Holofernes was beheaded, they mynde a council fel from hym, and such a feare came vpon them that they undertoke to defende them selues by flyng away: one spake not to another but hanged downe theyr heades, lest al behynd them: and made haste to escape from the hebrues: for they heard, that they were hastnyng to come after with theyr weapons, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, & chozowal the fote pathes of the dales. And when the chyldren of Israel saw that they fled, they folowed vpon them, & went downe with trumpets blowyng, and making a great crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no order: and kept not them selues together, but fled theyr way. Neuertheless the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them with one company and order, & discomfited as many as they myght get. And Asias sent messengers vnto all the cyties & countreys of Israel.

So all the regions and euery cytie sent out theyr best men after the in barnes, & smote the with the sword, tyll they came to the vtmoste parte of the borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assirians and toke all, & they which fled had litle behynd them, and so they found great good. And they came agayne to Bethulia from the battayle, toke with them suche thynges as had bene theyr: there was no nombre of the cattell, and of the costlye Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hygheste, they were all made ryche of the spoiles of them. And Joachym the hygh priest at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders that they myght be Judeth.

Now when they came out vnto them, they beganne all to prasse her with one voyce, sayng: Thou worthy of the cytie of Jerusalem, & ioye of Israel, & honoure of our people, & haste done many, & thy heart is comforted, because thou hast loued cleynnesse & chastyete, & haste knownen no man but thine owne husband: therefore hath the hand of the Lord comforted the: & blessed shalt thou be for ever. And all people saide so be it, so be it.

In the xviij. dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vnto the spoiles of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, & had ben his, specially whether it were of golde, of silver, pyncious stones, clothyng, and all ornaments they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, both women, maydens, & yong people: with pypes and harpes.

When songe Judith the songe vnto the Lord: Begynne vnto the Lord vpon the tabrettes, synge vnto the Lord vpon the cymbales. O synge vnto hym a newe songe of thanksgyng, be ioyfull: and call vpon his name.

It is the Lord that destroyeth warres: euen the Lord is his name. Whiche hath ptyched his tentes in the myddeste of his people, that he myght deliuer vs from the hande of all our enemyes. Asur came out of the mountaynes of the north in the myltitudo of his strenght. His people ple stopped the water brokes, and they boxed covered y^e wallen. he purposed to haue dyent vp my lande, & slay my yonge men wth the sword.

B he wold haue caried away my chyldren & byrgens into captiuitie, but the Almyghtye Lorde bynded hym, and deliuered hym into y^e handes of a woman, which brought hym to charyson. For they myghte was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Tytan slue hym, neyther haue the great Spawntes set them selues agaynst hym: but Iudith the daughter of Merary wth her saye betwix bath discouered hym, & brought hym to naught. For she layde away her wydowes garment: and put on the parel of gladnesse to y^e reioysing of the chyldren of Israel. She annoynted her face, & bounde vp her heare in an houre to begyle hym. Her sylppers rauyned his eyes, her bewtye captiuatyd hym mynde, wth the swerde smote she of hym necke. The Pererians were astonysed at her stedfastnes, & the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Assyrians, when my symple appered, dnye of charyson. The sonnes of y^e daughters haue pearled them thow & slayn them as fugitiue chyldren: they perished in the battayle, for the verie feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs syng a song of thankesgiving vnto y^e Lord, a new songe of praisse w^{ch} we syng vnto our God: Lorde Lorde, thou art a great God, myghtie in power, whome no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shalbe ferue the: for thou spakest but the word, & they were made: thou sentest thy sperte, & they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountaynes shal moue from the foundacyons wth the waters, the sony rockes shal melt befoze the lyke wate. But they that feare the shalbe great wth the in all thynges. Woe vnto the people, y^e ryle vp agaynst my generacyon, for the Almyghtye Lorde wyll aduenge hym selfe of them, and in the day of Iudgment wyll he vyset them. For he shal geue fyre and wormes into they^e fleshe, that they may burne and fele it for evermore.

D After this it happened, that after the victory, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue praisse and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purifyed, they offered all they^e burnt sacrifices, & they^e promysed offerynges. And Iudith offered all holofernes weapons, and all the Jewels that the people had geuen her, and y^e canopy that she toke from hym bed, and hanged them vp vnto y^e Lord. The people was ioyfull as the vse is: & this ioye by reason of the victory, w^{ch} Iudith endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, every man went home agayne, and Iudith was in great reputacyon at Bethulia, & ryghte honourably taken in all the lande of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was chastyte ioynd, so that after her husbände Hannas, she neuer knewe man all y^e dayes of her lyfe. Vpon y^e solempne dayes she went out wth greute wozypppe. She dwelt in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yeres, and left her handmayden fre, and dyed: and was buried besyde her husbände in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her. vii. dayes. So long as she lyed, there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeres also after her death.

The daye wherein this victory was gotten, was solempne holden: and rekened of the Jewes in the nombze of the holpe dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of y^e Jewes euer sence vnto this daye.

The .x. Chapter, after the Latyn.

(The dream of Mordechus.)

Mordechus the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cisei of the tribe of Ben Jamin, a Jew whiche had his dwelling in the cite of Susa, a man of great reputacyon and excellent among all them that were in the kynges court. (Reuerchelelle, he was one of the pyloners, whome Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had caried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon wth Iechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the second yere of the reigne of great Artaxerxes in the fyfthe daie of the moneth Nisan, had this Mordechus such a dreame: he thoughte he heard a greete tempest bozryble thonderclappes, earthquakes, & great vpyoure in the lande, and that he sawe .ii. great dragons reby to fyght one agaynst another.

They crye was great. At y^e which roaryng and crye all y^e beathen were vp to fight agaynst the ryghteous people. And the same daye was full of darkenesse, and very vnclerefull of trouble and angurthe, yea: a great fearfulness was there in all the land. The ryghteous were amazed, for they feared the plage and euil that was deuyed ouer them, and were at a point w^{ch} them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: & while they were cryng: the lytle well grewe into a great ryuer: and into many waters. And w^{ch} that it was daye and the sonne rose vp agayne. And the lo wyly were exalted, and deuoured the glayous and proude.

Nowe when Mordechus had sene this dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastly in hym berre, what God wolde do, and so he desyred to knowe all the matter, and his mynde was there vpon, vntill the nyght.

The .xii. Chapter.

(Mordechus vnto the kynges court agaynst the lawe and in the case of Haman.)

The same tyme dwelte Mordechus wth Bagatba and Tares, in the kynges court, the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he hearde they^e denier, and had diligently conspyed they^e ymaginacyon graciously, he perceaued that they wēt about to lay their cruel handes vpon the kyng Artaxerxes: & so he certified the kyng thereof. Then caused the kyng to examen the, & grided wth toymes. And whe they had graunted it, they wer put to death.

This thing caused to be put in Chronicles for an euillastynge rememb^rance. & Warbocheus wrote vpon the same matter. So the kyng commaunded the Warbocheus shulde remaine in court, & for this faithfulness of his, he gaue him a rewarte.
But Aman & some of Amadab the Agagite which was holden in great honour & reputaciō in the kynges court vnder toke to hurt Warboche-us & his people because of his chamberlaines & were put to death. The xiii. Chapter.

The copye of the letters of Artaxerxes against the Jewes. The prayer of Warbocheus.

A great kyng Artaxerxes whych ragneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an C. & xxiij. landes, sendeth his frendly salutation vnto al the princes & debites of count-reys which be subiect vnto his dominio. Altho I was made lord ouer many people, & had subdued the whole earth vnto my dominio, my mynde was not wth cruelty & wrong to exalte my selfe by reason of my power: but purposed wth equi-tall way & gentleness, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction, & whole to set the in a peceable lōfe, & thereby to byng my hignome vnto traquillite, & men might safely go & reioyce on eu-ery syde, & to reuew peace agayne, which al men desire. Nowe when I asked my counsellors howe these thinges myght be brought to a good ende there was one by vs, excellent in wylde whole good wyl, truth and faithfulness hathe oft bene the wēd & p^roued (which was also the principal & nexte to the kyng) Aman by name: which certified vs howe that in all landes there was scatered abroade a rebellious folke, that made statutes & lawes against all other people: & haue al-waie dysp^rysed & disobeyed commaundemen-tes of kynges: & how that for this cause it were not to be suffered that suche rule shulde conty-nue by you and not to be put downe.

Ceinge nowe we perceauē the same, & this people alone at contrary vnto euery mā, vsing straunge & other maner of lawes, & withstand our statutes & doynges, & go about to stablysh theiweid matters, & our kyngdome shulde neuer come to good estate & steadfastnesse: Therefore haue we commaunded, & all they that are appointed in wyspyng & wēd vnto you by Aman, (whiche is ordeyned & set ouer all our landes) & the most principall next vnto the kyng, & in maner as a father, shall wth their wyues & chyldren be destroyed & rooted oute wth the swerde of theyr enemies & aduersaries, and there shalbe no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shalbe done the xiiij. daie of the moneth called Adar of this yere, that they whiche of olde (& nowe also) haue euer bene rebellious maye in one daie wth vpolence be thynne downe into the hell, to chintente that after this maner our empry maye haue peace and tranquillite.

But Warbocheus thoughte vpon all the woyces and noble actes of the Lord, and made his prayer vnto him, saynge: O Lord, Lord, thou valeaunte and Almyghty kyng (for all thynges are in thy power) & if thou wylt helpe & deliuer Israel, there is no man that can withstande or let the: for thou hast made heauē and earth, & what wonderous thynges so euer is vnder the heauen: thou arte Lord of all thynges; & there is no man that can resiste thy maiestie (O Lord.) Thou knowest al thinges, thou wottest Lord that it was never of malice, nor pre-sumpeon, nor for anye desyre of glorie, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor wold I pouder proude presumpuous Aman (for I wold haue bene contente, and that wth good wyl if it myghte haue done Israel anye good, to haue hys euen hys foote steppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not let the honour of aman in the steede of the glorie of God: & because I wolde showe none but only the my Lord, And thus haue I done in no pryde nor presumpeon.

And therefore O Lord thou God and kyng haue mercy vpon thy people, for they ymagyn howe they maye byng vs to naught: yea, they mynde & desyre is to destroye, & to ouerthrowe thy people, & hath ben euer thyne enheritaunce of olde. O by thyse not the porcion, whych thou hast deliuered & broughte oute of Egypte for thyne owne selfe. Heare my prayer, & be mercyfull vnto thy people whom thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complainte & sorowe into ioye, that we maye lyue, O Lord, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffer not the mouthes of them that praise the to be destroyed.

Al the people of Israel in lyke maner, cryed as earnestlye as they coulde vnto the Lord: for they death & destructione stode before their eyes.

The xiiii. Chapter.

The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of her people.

Quene Esther also being in the battayle of death, resorted vnto the Lord, laide a way her glorious apparel, & put on garments of serued for soryng & mourninge. In the fasting, & brought it very low. Al the places wher she was wont to haue ioye afore, those filled she also vnto the Lord God of Israel wth these wordes he greate king Artaxerxes, which I raygneth from India vnto Ethio- pia, ouer an hundred & ſeuene & twente landes, ſendeth vnto the bypnyces and rulers of the ſame landes, ſuch as loue hym, his frendly ſalutation. Ther be manye that for the ſondrye ſpyndeſſes & benefytes which are dyuerſly done vnto them for theyr worſhippe be ever the more proude & hye minded, and undertake not onely to hurte theyr ſubiettes (for plentiful benefytes maye they not ſuffer, & begyn to ymagine ſome thing agaynſt thoſe that do them good, and take not onely all vntouchfulneſſe aſwaye from men) but in pryde and preſumpcyon (as they that be vntouchful and vntouchful for the good deades) they go about to eſcape the iudgement of God, that ſeyth all thynges, whiche iudgemente hateth and puniſhethe all wycheſneſſe. It happeneth ofte alſo that they wyche be ſet in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the byſynneſſe and cauſes of the ſubiettes are committed to be handled, wage proude, and deſpyle them ſelues wth the adyng of innocent bloude, whiche bynges them to inſolentable hurte. Alſo they alſo wth falſe and deceptfull wordes and wth lyinge tales, diſcreue and betray the innocent goodneſſe of bypnyces.

With manysolde dyscace also hath he dyspyed to destroye Mardocheus our helper and preseruer, which hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocent Esther the lye partaker of oure kyngdome, with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken them oute of pwayne, and robbed vs of them) by thys meane to translate the kyngdome of the Percians vnto them of Macedonia, but we fynde that the Jewes (whiche were accused of the wyched, & they myghte be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vseresonable and ryghte lawes, and ythey be the chyldren of the mooste hygh lyving God by whome the kyngdome of ys and our pprogenitures haue bene well ordyed heretofore. Wherefore, as for the letters and commaundementes that were put forth by Xman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do wel, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that let them vp and inuented the, dangered at Sulus before the poyte, with all his kynned: and God, (whiche hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hys after his deservynge.

And vpon this ye shall publyshe and let vp the coppe of this letter in al places, that the Jewes maye frelye and wythoute byndsaunce hold them selues after their owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and p vpon the thie & twentye dayes of the twelue moneth Adar, they maye be aduenged of them, whiche in the tyme of theyr anguyshe and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to ioye the daye, wherein the chosen people shulde haue perished.

Moreover, amonge the hye solempne dayes that ye shal haue, ye shall holde thys also with all gladnesse, that now & in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good, for all such as loue the prosperitie of the Percians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those that be scheyuous vnto vs.

All cleyes and landes that do not this, shal bozryblye peryshe and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onelye be nomozed inhabited of me, but be abhorred also of the wyld beasts and foules.

The booke of wysdome

The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Doute the oughte to feare and requyre after God, and wys he that fynde hym. And the holy ghost. We ought to lye froun calyng and murmuringe. &c.

Set your affection vpon righte outnesse, ye that be Judges of the earth. Haue a good opinion of the Lord, & like hym in the synglenesse of hert. For he wyl be found of them that tempte him not, and appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in him. As for forward thoughtes, they separat fro God: but vertue (if it be allowed) reformeth the vntoysle. And why? wysdome shall not enter into a forward soule, nor dwell in the bodye that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy Ghost abhorreth fayed nourtour, and wythdroweth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are withoute vnderstandynge, & where wychednesse hath the upperhande, he flyeth from thence, for the sperte of wysdome is lowpynge, gentle & gracious, & wyl haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euell with his lippes. For God is a wytnes of hys raynes, a true searcher out of his hert, & an hearer of his tong. For the sperte of the Lord fylleth the round compassse of the world: and the same ppholdereth al thynges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

Wherefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges can not be hyd: neither maye he escape the iudgement of reprove. And why? inquisicio shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reprove of hys wordes shall come vnto God, so that this wychednesse shalbe punished. For the eare of gelousye heareth all thynges, & the nose of the grudgynges shall not be hyd. Wherefore beware of murmuringe, whiche is nothyng worth: and refrayne your tounge from slander. For there is no wayche so darcke and secrete, that it shal go for noughe, & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Like not your owne deatch in the erreour of your lyfe: destroye not your selues that owe the wayches of your owne handes. For God hath not made deatch, neyther hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyving. For he created all thynges, & they myghte haue theyr beinge: yea, all people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue healeth, & there shulde be no destruction in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vpon earth: for righte outnesse is enclaffynge & immoztall, but vnryghteousnesse byngeth deatch. Nevertheless, the vngodlye call her vnto them bothe wyth wayches and wayches: and woble they thynke to haue a frende of her they come to naughte: for the vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are wayche of deatch.

teyth vs but vayne persons, he wythdraweth spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

wylle they appeared to dye, and they ende is taken for very destruction. The waye of the righteous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffer payne be-foze men, yet is their hooue ful of immortalite.
They are punyshed but in fewe thynges, neuer-thelesse, in maner thynges shal they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and findeth them mete for him selfe: yea, as the golde in the fornace, doth he trye them: and recreaeth them as a buentoller, and when the tyme commeth, they shalbe lohed vpon.

The ryghteous shal wyne as the sparkes that runne thowoe the red dunde. They shal the people, and they: Lord shal raygne for euer.

They that put theys truste in hym, shal vnderstande the truth, and suche as be saythfull, wyl agre vnto hym in loue: for his chosen shal haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodlye shalbe punnyshed accordyng to theys ymaginacions, for they haue dyspyed þ ryghteous: & forsaik þ lord.

Wholo dyspytefull wyse dome and hartow rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, whiche with his bandes hath wryght no vnyghteousnesse, nor ymagyned wyched thynges agaynste God. For vnto hym shal be geuen the specyal gyfte of sayth, and the mooste acceptaible porcion in the temple of God. For gloryous is the fruyte of good labour, and the roote of wyse dome shal neuer fade away.

As for the chylidren of aduouters, they shal come to an ende, & the seed of an vnyghteous bedde shalbe rooted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shal they be nothyng regarded, and they last age shalbe without honoure. Yf they dye hastily, they haue no hope, neyther shal they be spoken to in the daye of knowlege. For por-

Qhowe saye is a chaste generacion with vertuer. The memoriall thereof is immortall, for it is knowe with God & with men. When it is present, men take example therat, and yf it go away yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honour, and towarde the reward of the vnderlyed batayle. But the multitude of vngodly children is vnpasseable: & the thynges that are planted in whoredome shall haue no hope to see, nor laye any fast foundacyon. Though they be grene in & branches for a time, yet they shall be shaken in the wynde: for they stand not fast, & the howe of vndermynde of the wynde they shall be rooted out. For & vnpurfect branches shall be broke: they frute shall be vnpasseable & slower to care, more for nothing. And why? al the chyldren are borne of & wicked, must beare recorde of & wychednesse agaynst they fathers & mothers when they be alked. But though & righteous be ouertaken with death, yet they shall be in rest.

Age an is honourable thyng: neuertheles it standeth not onely in the length of time, nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wysdome is the graine deare, and an vnderlyed lyfe is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued among synners, he translated him. * Pea, suddenly was he taken away, to the intent that wychednesse shoulde not alter his vnderstandyng and that hypocrisie shoulde not begyle his soule. For the crafty bewitchyng of lyen make good thynges darke, the vnderstandynge also and wychednesse of vnlustreous desire, turne asid the vnderstandyng of the symple. Though he was sone dead, yet fulfilled he muche tyme. For his soule pleased God: therfore basted he to take him a way from among the wyched. This the people se, and vnderstande it not: they lay not vpon luche thynges in theyr hertes: howe that the louyng fauoure and merce of God is vpon his saynctes, and that he hath respecte vnto his chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deade, condemneth the vngodly wyche as lyfynge: and the youth that is sone broughte to an ende, the long lyfe of the vngodly. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuysed for him, and wherfore the Lorde hath taken hym away. And why? they se hym and despyse hym, therfore shall God also laugh them to scoone: so that they them selues shall dye hereafter (but wythoute honour) pea, in shame amonge the deade for euermore. For wythoute anyr voyce shall he burste those that be putte vp, and remoue them from the foundacyons, so that they shall be layde waste vnto the dryghthe. They shall mourne, and their memoriall shall perishe. So they beynge afrayde, shall remember they synnes: and theyr owne wychednesse shall bewaie them.

¶ The constancie of the righteous before they perishe. The hope of the vngodly is vndermynde and waye. The blisshousse of the saynctes and godlye.

When shall & ryghteous stand in great straddles agaynst such as haue dealt extremly with them, and taken away theyr laboures. When they se it, they shall be vexed with horrible feare, and shall wondre at the hastynesse of the sodayne healeth: growyng for very destresse of mynde, and shall laye within them selues, haupynge inwarde sozow, & mournyng for very anguysh of mynde. These are they, whom we sometime had in dyscise, & rested vpon. We foolis thought their life very madnes: & their ende to be without honour. But lo, howe they are costed among the chyldren of God, & theyr voyce is among & saynctes. Therfore we haue erred fro the way of trouth, & light of righte ouerlye hath not shined vnto vs, & & of vnderstandyng rose not vpon vs. We haue wepyed oure selues in the waye of wychednesse and destruction. Ceduous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowe it.

What good hath oure pydd done vnto vs? ¶ What profyte hath the pompe of rycheles broughte vs? Al those thynges are passed away lyke a shadowe, & as a messenger runnyng before: as a shippe that passeth ouer the wanes of the water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace thereof cannot be founde, neither the path of it in the floudes. ¶ As a byrde that flyeth thowowe in the ayre, & no man can se any token where he is flowne, but onely heare the noyse of her wynges, beatyng the lyght wynde, passyng the ayre thowowe the vehemency of her goyng, and flyeth on shakyn her wiges, where as after ward no token of her waye can be founde. ¶ Like as when an arrowe is shot at a marke it parteth the ayer, whiche immediatly cometh together againe, so & a man can not knowe where it went thowowe. Euen so nowe in like maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to hie to oure ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wychednesse.

Whyche wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of the vngodly is lyke a dype chystle floure (or dust) that is blowne awaye with the wynde: lyke a chyne some that is scattered abroade with the stozme, lyke as the smooke whiche is disperfed here and there with the wynde, and as the remembraunce of a straunger, that carpeyth for a daye, and then departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermore: theyr reward also is with the Lorde: and theyr remembraunce with the hygheste. Therfore shall they receaue a glorious kyngedome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for with his ryghte hande shall he couer them: and with his owne holpe arme, shall he defende them. His gelousye also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall weapon the creatur to be aduenged of the enemyes. He shall put on ryghteousnesse for a brest plate and take sure Judgements in steade of an helmete. The inmyghthe shylde of equitye shall he take, his cruell wyche shall be warpen for a speare, and the whole compasse of the world.

shall fight with him against the unwise.
D Then shall the thunder boltes go out of the lyghtynge, and come out of the ragyne botte of cloudes to the place appoynted: out of the harde sonny indignacion, there shall fall chynne hailes, & the water of fether shall be wyth agaynst them, and the floudes shall runne rougher together. Pea, a mighty wind shall stand up against them, and a storme shall scatter them abroade.
 Thus f vnrightheous dealing of the shal bring all the land to a wyldernesse, and wretchednesse shall ouerthowe the dwellynge of f myghtye

The vi. Chapter.

The callinge of Hynges. Wyse and Iudges to be also appoynted to f myghtye.

Wysdom is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is moze worthy then one f is stronge. Heere therfore (O ye hynges) and vnderstande: O leaue ye that be Iudges of the endes of the earth. Geue eare ye that rule the multitudes, and deyle in much people. For f power is geue you of the Loide, & the strength from the hygher: whych shall trye your wozdes, and searche oute your ymagynacyon: howe that ye beyng officers of his kyngdome haue not executed true Iudgements, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnesse, nor walked after the wyll of God. Horriblye, & that ryghte sone shal be appare vnto you: for an hard iud-gement shal they haue that beare rule. Here-ce is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorite shalbe soe punysshed. For God which is Loide ouer all, shall except no mans person, neyther shall he stande in awe of anye mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small and greace, and carth for all a lyke. But the myghtye shall haue the sozer punysshement.

Unto you therfore (O ye hynges) do I speake that ye maye leaue wysdome, & not go amysse.
 For they that kepe hys ryghteousnesse, shalbe righteouslye iudged, and they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make an-swere. Wherfore, let your lust vpon my wozdes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourtoure

Wysdome is a noble thyng and neuer fadeth awaye: yea, she is calyfe lene of them C lone her, & fonde of luche as she her, she presenteth them f desyre her, & she maye first them her selfe vnto them. Whoso a waketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no greace to aple, for he shall fynde her sytting readye at his doores. To thynke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandynge, and who so waketh for her, shalbe safe: and that sone. For she goeth about, sekynge such as are mete for her, she wryth her selfe cherfully vnto them in theyr goynge, & meteth them wyth all diligence. For she wythpawd desyre of refozmacyon in her begynnyng: to care for nourtoure is loue, & loue is the hepyng of her lawes. Now the hepyng of f law is perfect, & an vncozrupt l: & an vncozrupt l: maketh a man familer to God. And so f desyre of wysdome leadech to D the kyngdome eternall. If your desyre be of the people) let your luste vpon wysdome, that ye maye ragyne for euermore. O loue the lyghte of wysdome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and howe she came by, I wyll tell you: and wyll not hyde the mysteries of God from you: but I wyll seeke her oute from the begynnyng of the natiuite and byng the knowlege of her into lichte, and wyll not kepe backe the truthe: Neither wyll I haue to do with consumynge enuye, for suche a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multitude of the wylde, is the welfare of the wozde, and a wylde kyng is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thowowe my wozdes, and it shall do you good.

The vii. Chapter.

Wysdom ought to be possessed aboue all thynges.

I myselfe am also a mostall m, like as all other, & am come of f earthye generacyon of hym that was first made, & in my mothers wombe was fashioned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes was I broughte together in bloude thowowe the seed of man, and the commodious appetite of slepe. When I was borne I crauchd like anye an other men, and fel vpon the carth (which is my nature) cryng and we-ping at the first as al other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, & broughte up to greace res. For there is no kyng f had any other begyn-nyng of birth. Al men then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge oute in lyke maner.

Wherfore I desired, & vnderstandynge was geuen me: I called and the spyrte of wysdome came vnto me. I set more by her then by kyng-domes & royall seates, and counted rychenesse in comparason of her. As for prepyous stone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, & syluer shalbe counted but clay before her sight. I loued her aboue welfare & bewtye, and purposed to take her for my lighr, for her lighr can not be quenchd. Al good thynges come to me with her, and innumerable ryche-nesse thowowe her handes. I was glad in the all, for this wysdome wente before me, and I knew not f she is the mother of al good thynges.
 Now as I myselfe learned vnlesynlye, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hyde her ryche-nesse from no man: for she is an infinite treasure vnto men, which whoso vse, become parta-kers of the loue & frendshyppe of God, and are accepted vnto him for the gyftes of wysdome.

God hath graunted me to talke wysclpe, & conueniently to handle the thynges f he hath graciouslye lente me. For it is he, f leadech vnto wysdome, & teacheth to vse wysdome aright.
 In hys hande are bothe we and oure wozdes: yea, al our wysdome, our vnderstandynge & knowlege of all oure wozdes. For he hath geuen me the true seynce of these thynges, so f I knowe, howe the wozde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the begynnyng, endynge, and myddeste of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, howe one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfilled, & course of the yere: the ordinaun-ces of the ces of the starres: the nature and kyndes of beastes: the furpousnesse of beastes: the power of þ wyndes: þ ymaginations of men: þ diuersities of yong plantes: the vertues of rootes, and all suche thynges as are secrete and not lohed for, haue I learned: For þ woiche master of al thin-ges hath taught me wysdome. In her is þ spet of vnderstandyng whiche is onyfe, manyfolde, one onely, subtyll, curteous, discrete, quicke, vnderfyled, playne, swete, louyng that is good, sharpe, whiche forþybbeth not to do well, gentile, kinde, redfast, sure, fte, haunyng al vertues cypumspete in all thynges: receauyng all spi-rytes of vnderstandyng, beyng cleane and sharpe. For wysdome is nymler then all nymlble thynges: she goeth thowme and attayneth to all thynges, because of her cleannesse. For she is the byrth of the power of God, and a pure cleane cypellunge of the cleanness of Almyghty God. Therfore can no vnderfyled thyng come vnto her: for she is þ bygyhtenesse of the euertllyng lyghte, þ vnderfyled myrroure of the ma-iesty of God and the ymage of his goodnesse.

 And for so muche as she is one, she maye do all thynges, þ beyng it selfe her selfe, she renueth all: þ amonge þ people conuertyth her selfe into the holye soules. She maketh Gods frendes þ prophetes: for God loueth no man, but hym in whome wysdome dwelleth. For she is moare deuysful then the sunne, þ geueth moze lyghte then the starres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vnto the daye cometh nyght.
 But wychednesse cannot ouercome wysdome:
 and folyschynesse maye not be with her.

C The viii. Chapter.

¶ The effectes of wysdome.

Wysdome teacheth frome one ende to another myghtely, and louyngly doth she orde al thynges. I haueloued her, and laboured for her, euen from my yowth vp: I dyd my diligence to marrye my selfe wyth her, such loue had I vnto her betwix. Who so hath the com-panye of God, commendeth her nobyltye: yea, the Lozde of all thynges hym selfe loueth her.
 For she is the scolemasteresse of the nouetoure of God, and the choler oute of his woordes. If a man wolde desyre rychesse in this lyfe, what is richer then wisdom, that woicherth al thynges?
 Thou wylte saye: vnderstandyng woicherth.
 What is it amonge al thynges, that woicherth moare then wysdome? If a man loue vertue þ righteounnesse, let him labour for wysdome, for she hath greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernesse and yndence, righteounnesse and strenght, whiche are suche thynges as men can haue nothyng moze profitable in their lyfe.
 If a man desyre muche knowlege, he can tell the thynges that are past, and dyscerne thynges for to come: he knoweth the subtyles of woordes, and can expounde darke sentences.
 He can tell of tokyng, þ wonderous thynges or euer they come to passe, and the endes of all tyme: þ ages. So I purposed after this maner

I wyl take her vnto my compaigne, þ comune louyngely wyth her: no doubte, she shal geue me good counsaile, þ speake comfortabily vnto me in my carefulesse þ greife. For her sake shal I be well þ honestly taken amonge the commens þ lordes of þ counsaile. Though I be yong, yet shal I haue sharpe vnderstandyng, so þ I shal be meruelous in the syghte of great men, þ the faces of prynces shal wonder at me, whē I holde my tounge, they shal abyde my leysure: when I speake, they shal loke vnto me, þ if I talke much they shal lape theyr handes vnto theyr mouth.

Moreover, by the meanes of her I shal obtayne immortalyte, and leaue behynd me an euertlastyng memorie all amonge the that come after me. I shal set the people in orde, and the nacions shal be subdued vnto me. Woiche tytauntes shal be asrayd when they do but heare of me, amonge the multitude I shal be counted good, and myghty in battayle. When I come home, I shal fynde rest wyth her: for her com-panye hath no bitternesse, and her felowshyppe hath no troyousnesse, but myghte and ioye.

Nowe when I considered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte, howe þ to be ioynd vnto wysdome is immortalyte, and greate pleasure to haue her frendshyppe, howe þ in the woordes of her handes are infini-tie richesse: howe that, whoso keperth company wyth her shal be wys, and that he whiche tal-keth wyth her, shal come to honour: I went about seking, to gather her vnto me: For I was alad of acipe wyte, þ had a good vnderstandyng.
 But when I grewe to moze vnderstandyng, I came to an vnderfyled bodye. Seuerthelesse, when I perceaued þ I coude not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me, (and that was a pointe of wysdome also, to knowe whole gyfte it was) I steyppd vnto þ Lozde: þ besought hym þ with my whole herte I said after this maner.

C The ix. Chapter.

¶ A prayer of Salomon to obtayne wysdome.

God of my fathers, þ Lozde of mer-cyes (thou that hast made all thynges wyth thy woide, and ordeyned man thow thy wysdome: that he shulde haue dominion ouer the creature which thou hast made: þ he shulde orde the world accordyng to equyte þ righteounnesse, þ execute iudgemente with a true herte) geue me wysdome, whiche is euer about thy seate, and put me not oute from amonge thy chyldren: for I thy seruante and sonne of thy handmayden am a feble person, of a shorte tyme, and to yong to the vnderstandyng of iudgemente and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte amonge þ chyldren of men, yet if thy wysdome be not with him, he shal be nothyng regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kynge vnto thy people, þ the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buyld a temple vpon thy holy mount, þ an alter in the cytie wherein thou dwellest: a feche of thy holpe tabernacle whiche thou hast prepared te om the begynnyng, and thy wysdome with the, whiche knoweth

The booke.

Knoweth thy works which also was with the when thou madest the world, and knewest what was acceptable in thy sight, and right in thy commandmentes. O sende her oute of the holy heauens, and from the throne of thy maiestie that she maye be with me, & labour with me: for I maye know what is acceptable in thy sight for she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thynges: and she shall leade me soberly in mye workes, & preserue me in her power. So shall my workes bee acceptable, & then shall I gouerne the people righteously, & be worthy to sit in my fathers seat. For what man is he that maye knowe the counsaile of God? Or who can thynke what the wyll of God is? For the thoughtes of mortal men are mesurable, & our foresytes are but vncertaine. And why? a mortall & corruptible bodye is heuyn vnto the soule, & the earthly mansion kepeth downe that vnderstanding that musteth vpon many thynges. Clergye hardlye canne we decerne the thynges that are vpon earth, & great labour haue we, or we can fynde the thynges whiche are before oure eyes: who wyll then seke oute the grounde of the thynges that are done in heauen? O Lord who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstandynge & meanynge except thou geue him wisdom, & sende thy holy ghost from aboue that the wapes of them whiche are vpon earth, maye be reformed: that men maye learne the thynges that are pleasaunte vnto the, and be preserued thowoe wysdome.

The .i. Chapter.

The benefites of the righteous cometh thowoe wysdome.

Wysdome preserued the firste man, whome God made a father of the world, when he was created alone broughte hym oute of vnsauynge toke him oute of the mould of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thynges.
When the vnyghteous wente awaye in vns-waryng from the wysdome, the vnyghteous perished thowoe the wythe of murther. Agayne, when the water destroyed the whole world, wysdome preserued the righteous thowoe a poore tree, where of he was gouernour her selfe Mozour, wher wickednesse had gotten the v-perhande so that the nacions were pulsed by with pyre the kynne the righteous, preserued hym saule: he vnto God, and layde vpon sure mercye of vnsauynge. He preserued the righteous, when he fled from the vngodlye that perished what tyme as the fyre fel downe vpon the fyue cyties: Lyke as yet this daye the vnsauynge waste, and smokynge lande geueth testymonie of the vnyghteous: per, the vnyghteous and vni-meyle frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembrance of the vnsauynge soule, there standeth a pillar of salte for all such as regarded not wysdome gat not oulye this hurte, that they knewe not the thynges whiche were good, but also lest they beynde them vnto men, a memoial of the vnyghteous foolye: so that in the thynges wherin they synned, they coude not be vnyghteous. But as for such as take heede vnto wysdome, she shall deliuer them fro sorow

* When the righteous fled because of vns-waryng, wysdome led hym the righte-wape, shewed hym the kyngdome of God, gaue hym knowledge of holpe thynges made hym ry-che in his labours, & brought to passe the thynges that he wente aboute. In discauntynge of suche as defrauded hym, she stood by hym and made hym ryche. She saued hym from the ene-myes, & defended hym from the deceauers. She made hym stronge in battayle, & gaue hym the victorye, that he myght knowe howe that wis-dome is stronger then all thynges. * When the righteous was sold, she forsoke hym not, but deliuered hym from synners. She wente downe with hym into the dongeon, & saued hym not in the bandes. * yll she had broughte hym the scepter of the realme, and powre agaynst those that oppossed him. As for them that had accused hym, she declared the to be lyars, & broughte hym to perpetuall wysdome.

* She deliuered the righteous people and saules lede, from the nacions that oppossed them she entred into the soule of the seruant of God & rode by hym in wonders & tokens agaynst horrible hynges. She gaue the righteous the warde of their labours, & led them forth a me-uelous way: on the day tyme she was a shadow vnto them, & a light of starres in the nyght season. * She broughte the thowoe the red see, & caried them thowoe the greate water. She drowned they enemyes in the see, & broughte them out of the depe. So the righteous toke the spoiles of vngodly, & prayled the holy name. O Lord & magnified the victorious hand whiche accorded. * For wysdome openeth the mouth of the domme, maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

The .ii. Chapter.

The myracle done for Israel. The benefites of the righte. The greate power and mercye of God.

She ordeined they workes in the ban-des of the holy prophete: so that they went thowoe the wyldernes that was not inhabited, & pyched they tentes in the waste deserte.

They stode agaynst they enemyes, and were aduenched of they aduerlaries. * When they were this pyche, they called vpon the, & water was geuen them oute of the moost pyroche, & they thirste was quenched oute of the bearde stone.
For by the thynges were thowoe they enemyes were punished, were the children of Israel helped in they nede, so thei comforte. For vnto enemies thou gaueste mans bloude in steade of pyunge water. And where as they hadde scarnesse in the rebuke, when the children were slaine, thou gaueste vnto thine owne a plenteous water vnto the: declarynge by the thynges that was at the tyme howe thou woldest byng thine owne vnto honoure, & slaye they aduerlaries.

* For when they were tryed and nourtured with fatherlye mercye, they knowledged howe the vngodlye were iudged & punished thowoe the wyrd of God. These hast thou reposed as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a vnyghteous hynges, layde harde to they change, & condemned the. Althether they were absent

were absente of plesente, they punyshement was alyke. For they grete was double: name-ly, mourning, & the remembraunce of thynges past. But when they perceyved that they punyshementes dyd them good, they thoughte vpon the Lozde, & wondered at the ende. For at last they helde much of hym, of whome in þout casting they thoughte scorne, as of an abiect. Nevert helesse, the righteous dyd not so when they were thursty: but even lyke as the thoughtes of the folye were, so was also they wyckednes.

¶ Where as certayne men now (thozow er-rour) dyd woithypp dome serpentes & vaine beas-tes thou sendest a myltitude of dome beastes vpon them for a vengeance, that they myght knowe, that loke wherewithal a mansyneth by the same also shal be punished. For vnto thy Almighty hande, that made the woilde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende among them an hape of beastes, of wood yong, of cruell beastes of a straunge kynde, suche as are vnknownen, of spoute fyre, of castre out a smokynge bryeth, of thore horrible sparkes out of their eyes which myght not only destroye them with bur-stynge, but also to kyl them with theyr horrible spght. Pea, without these beastes myghte they haue bene slaine with one wynde, beyng perle-cuted of theyr owne woikens, & scattered abrode thozow the bryeth of thy power.

¶ Nevert helesse thou haste ordred all thynges in measure, nombze & weyght. For thou haste euer had great strenght & myghte, & who may withstand the power of thyne arme? And why lyke as the smal thyng that the balauce wey-eth, so is the woilde before the: pea, as a droppe of the morning dewe, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Thou haste mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: & makest the as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, because they shulde amende. For thou louest all þ thynges that are, and hatest none of them which thou hast made: neither dydest thou ordeyne to make any thyng of euell wyll. Howe myghte a-nye thyng endure yf it were not thy wyll? Dy-dowe coulde anye thyng be perserued, excepte it were called of the? But thou sparest all, for all are thyne (O Lozde) thou louer of soules.

¶ The xii. Chapter.

¶ The mercye of God toward synners, the meeknes of God as unrepentable. God synners synners to repent us.

¶ Lozde, howe gracious & swete is thy spytte in all thynges? Forsoke chastenest þ them measurably that go wrong, & war-nest them concerning þ thynges wherin they offende: thou spea-kest vnto them (O Lozde) & exhortest them to leue their wickednesse, & to put theyr trust in þ As for those olde inhabytters of the holy land thou myghtest not awaye with them, for they committred abominable woikens agaynst the, as wyckednesse, forcery, & Idolatry. they slew theyr owne chyldren wythout mercy: they dyd eate vp mens howels, and deuoured the blood: pea, because of suche abominacions, misdele-uers, & offringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: þ the lande whiche thou louest about all other, myghte be a dwelling for the chyldren of God.

Nevert helesse, thou sparedest them also (as men) and sendest the forerunners of thine hoste euen honestes to destroye them out by lytle & lytle. For that thou wast vnable to subdue the vngodly vnto þ righteous in battayl: with cruell beastes, of wyth one rough woide to de-stroye them together: But thy minde was to dwyne them out by lytle & lytle, geuyng them tyme & place to amende: knowynge well, that it was an vngodly nacyon, & wycked of nature, & þ their thought myght neuer be altered.
For it was a cursed seide from the begynning & feared no man. Yet haste þ pardoned theyr syn-nes. For who wyl saye vnto the: why haste þ done that? Or who wyl stande against thy iud-gement? Or who wyl come before thy face an aduenger of vngodly men? Or who wyl blame the, yf the people peryshe, whome þ hast made: For there is none other God but thou? þ carest for all thynges: þ thou maist declare how that thy iudgement is not vngodly. Ther bare neither lyng, nor tyme in thy syght requyre acomptes of them whom þ hast destroyd.

For so muche then as thou arte righteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges righteouslye & and punyshest euen hym that hateth not de-uyl to be punished, & takest hym for a straunger and an alcaunt in the lande of thy power. For thy power is the begynnyng of righteousnesse and because thou art Lozde of all thynges, euer foze arte thou gracious vnto all.

When menne thynke the not to be of a full strength thou declarest thy power: and boldly deliuerest thou them ouer, that knowe the not.
But thou Lozde of power iudgeth quietly, and ordrest vs with great woithypp, for thou maist do as thou wylte.

By suche woikens now haste thou taughte thy people, that a man also shoulde be iuste and louyng: and haste made thy chyldren to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgeth, thou ge-uest rowme to amende from synnes.

For in somuche as thou hast punyshed, and with suche diligence deliuered the enemyes of thy seruantes, whiche were woithy to dye, (where thozow thou gauest them tyme & place of amendement þ they myght turne from theyr wyckednes) with how great diligence then punydest thou thyne owne chyldren vnto whose fathers thou haste swozne and made couenauntes of good promises? Do where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punydest our enemyes by urle waies, to the intent that when we punish-we shuld remembre thy goodnes: & wde we our selues as punished to put our trust in thy mercy.

¶ Therefore, where as men haue synned pguorantly and vngodlyly þ hast punished the foze, euen thozow the same thynges that they woithypped. For they went astray very long in the waye of erreure, and helde the beastes: (whiche euen their enemyes dyspyssed) for goddes luyng as children of no understanding. Ther-foze hast thou sent a scoynfull punishment emong the chyldren of ygnorance. As for such as wold not be reformed by those scoynes and rebukes, they felte the woorthy punishment of God. For the thynges that they suffered they bare them unpaciently, being not contented in them but unwilling. And when they perished by þe same thynges þey toke for goddes, they knowledged then, þe there was, but one true god whome also they wolde not knowe: therfoze came the ende of theyr dampnation vpon them.

The xiii Chapter.

All thynges be made, excepte the knowledge of God, Tholozes and Tholozes are made.

Roma. 1.

Vyne are all men, whiche haue not knowledge of God: as we they that out of the good thynges whiche are sene, knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is euery-thing. Neether toke they somuch regarde of the woikes that are made, as to know, who was the crafterman of them, but some toke the fyre, some the wynd of ayre, some the course of the starres, some þe water, some toke Sunne and Mone, or the lightes of heauen whiche rule the earth, for god. But though they had suche pleasure in their bewtie that they thoughte them to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowen, how muche more faynre he is that made them.

For þe maker of bewty hath ordeined al these thynges. Of þe theyr maruayled at the power & woikes of them, they shuld haue perceiued thereby, þe which made these thynges, is mightier then they. For by þe greatnesse and bewtye of þe creature, þe maker thereof may plainly be know-en. For withstanding they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, & wolde fynde hym and yet myse. And why for so muche as they gooe aboute in his woikes and seke after them, it is a token, that they regarde and holde muche of his woikes that are sene, howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For if theyr understanding & knowledge be so great: þe they can deserue the woide & the creatures, why do they not rather fynde oute the Lorde thereof?

Ex. xiii. 2.
Jeremi. 2. 2.

But vnhappy are they, and among the dead is theyr hope, that cal them gods which are but the woikes of mens handes, golde, syluer, and the thyng that is founde out by connyng, the similitude of beastes, or any wayne stone that hath bene made by the hande of olde. * O as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tree out of þe woode, and pareth of the bark of it connyngly, and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be used, and dyrecteth meate with the resydue. As for the other parte þe is left, whiche is profitable for nothing (for it is a crooked pece of wood and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thowme his vanite, and according to þe know-lage of his connyng, he geueth it some proportion, fastyoneth it after þe similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beaste, maketh it ouer with red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spottes is in it he casteth some colour vpon it.

Then maketh he a conueniente tabernacle for it, setteth it in a wall, & maketh it faste with pyon: prouidynge for it, lest it happe to fall: for it is well knowen, þe it can not helpe it selfe. And why? it is but an ymage, & must of necessity be deleied. Then gooeth he & offereth of his goodes vnto it, for his chyldren, and for his wyfe: he se-keth helpe at it, he asketh counsel at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it, & hath no soule: for health, he maketh his petycon vnto hym that is sicke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto hym þe is dead he calleth vpon hym for helpe þe is not hable to helpe hym selfe: & to sende hym a good iourney he prayeth hym that maye not goo. And in al the thynges that he taketh in hand (whether it be to obtayn any thyng or to woike) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

The xiiii Chapter.

The heretacyon and abhominacyon of ymagis. It cometh of thou, and of hym that maketh them. The curstnes that cometh of tholozes.

Ayne, another man purposing to sayle, and begynnyng to take his iourney thowme the ragynge le, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weaker then the tre that beareth hym. For as for it, courtousnes of money hath founde it oute, and the crafterman made it with his connyng.

But thy prouidence, O father gouerneth all thynges from the begynnyng: * For thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of the waues: declarynge thereby that thou hast power to helpe in al thynges, yea though a man went to the see withoute shippe.
Neuerthelesse, that the woikes of thy wysdome shulde not be wayne, * þe hast caused an Arke to be made: and therfoze do men comit their liues to a smale pece of woode, passynge ouer the see in a shippe, and are saued.

* For in the olde tyme also when the proude gynautes perished, he (in whome the hope was left to encrease the woide) went into the shippe whiche was gouerned thowme thy hande, and so left seide behynde hym vnto the woide.

For happye is the tre where thowme ryghteousnes cometh: but curst is the ydoll that is made with handes, yea both if þe be that made it. he because he made it: & it because it was called God, where as it is but a fraile thyng. * For þe vngodly & hym vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God. Cursed so þe washe and he þe made it also, shal be punished together. Ther-foze shall there a plage come vpon the ydollen of the heathen: for out of the creatures of God they are become abhominacyon, a temptacyon vnto the soules of men, and a snare for þe fete of the vniuersite. And why? þe schynge out of ydolls is the begynnyng of whoredome, and the byn-nyng up of them in the destruction of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnyng, neether shal they contynue for ever. The welthy ydelnes of men hath found them out vpon earth, therfoze shal they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne þe was taken a waie from hym, he made him an ymage (in al þe hast) of his

of his deade sonne: and so beganne to worship hym as a god, whiche was but a deade maune, and ordeyned his seruantes to offer vnto hym. Thus by pices of tyme & thowse an vnglacious custome, this error was kept as a lawe and tyrannies compelled men by violence to honoure ymages. As for those that were so farre of that men myght not worship them presently, they picture was brought from farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge, whome they wolde honoure) to the intent that wyth grete diligence they might worship hym which was farre of, as though he had bene presente.

Againe the synnguler cunning ofecraftesman gaue the ymaginante also a grete occasyon to worshippe ymages. For the woikman wyllyng to do hym a pleasure & set hym a woik, laboured with all his conyng to make the ymage of the best fashyon. And (so thowse the bewte of the woik) the comen people was deceyved, in so much & they toke hym now for a god, whiche a litle afoze was but honoured as a man. And this was & error of many lye, wher men (ether for to serue they owne affectyon, or to do some pleasure vnto the kynge) ascribbed vnto stones & stockes the name of God, whiche oughe to be geuen vnto no man.

Whereouer, thys was not ynough for them & they erred in the knowlage of God: but where as they liued in grete warres of ymaginace, those many and great plages called they peace. For ether they lye they owne children, & offered them, or yd sacrifice in the nyght season opels held vncreasonable watches: so that they kept neither lye nor mariage cleane: but ether one lye another to death maliciously, or elles greued his neyghboure with aduourtye. And thus were all thynges myxt together, bloud, manslaughter, thefte, dissimulation, corrupcion, vnfaithfulness, sedycion, perjury, disquyering of good men, vnechanchfulness, defyling of soules, chaungyng of byrth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage, misorder of aduourtye and vncleanness. And wher the honoueryng of abhominable ymages is the cause, & begynnynge and ende of all euill. For they that worshippe ydols: ether they demad when they be mercy, or ptophecie lye: or lye vngodlye, or elles lye dyce to swears them selues: For in so much as their truste is in the ydols (which haue nether soule nor vnderstandyng) though they swere falslye yet they thynke it shall not hurte them.

Therefore cometh a grete plage vnto them and & woithelp, for they haue an euell opinon of God, geuyng hede vnto ydols swearynge vnjustlye to deceyue, and despisyng ryghteousnesse. For they swearynge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euil wyth the offence of the vngodlye.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

¶ The wordes of the synnguler, warning the men of God for they graue sike they haue not pokes.

Bet thou (Oure God) arte swete longe sufferyng, and true, & in mercy ordeyned thou all thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strength. Yet we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the, is perfecte ryghteousnes. Pea, to knowe thy ryghteousnes and power is the rote of immortalyte. As for the thyng that men haue founde oute thowse their euill science it hath not deceyved vs: as the pryncyng of the pycture (an vnproffitable labour) and carued ymage, whiche coloures, whose synge entyleth the ignorant: so & he honoured & loured & picture of a deade ymage & hath no soule.

Reuerthelesse, they that loue synge euil thyn ges, are woithie of the death: they that trust in them, they & make them, they & loue them, and they & honoure them. The potter also taketh & tempereth softe earth, labourerth it, and geueth it the fashyng of a vessel, wharsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for scrupce, and some contrary. But where, to euery vessel serueth, & knoweth the potter hym selfe. So with his wayne labour he maketh a god of the same claye: thys dothe euil be, whiche a lytle afoze was made of earth hym selfe, and within a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to the earth again.

Notwithstandyng, he careth not the moze because he shall labour, nor because hys lye is waste: but stryue to excell goldsmithes, the syluer smithes and cooper smithes: and taketh it for an honoure to make vaine thynges. For hys herte is adys, his hope is but vayne earth, and his lye is moze vyle then claye, for so much as he knoweth not hys owne maketh, & gaue hym hys soule to woik, and bryeth in hym & bryeth of lye. They count our lye but a pastyme, and our conuersacion to be but a market, and that men shoulde euil be gettyng: and that by euell meanes. A owe he that of earth maketh traile vesselles and ymages, knoweth hym selfe to ofsende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of & people, and that holde them in subiection, are vntoyle, vnhappye, and excedyng proude vnto they owne soules: for they iudge all the ydols of the heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eye synge to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor synge: or handes for to grope: & as for they se, they are to flowe to gooe. For man made them, and he & hath but a borrowed spere, fashyoned them. But no man can make a God lyke vnto hym: for seying he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall & he maketh with vnrightheous handes he hym selfe is better then they whome he worshippe, for he lyued though he was mortall so dyd neuer they. Pea, they worshipped beastes also, whiche are mozte myserable: for compare thynges, that cannot fele vnto them, and they are woize then those.

Yet is there not one of these beastes, that wyth hys synge can beholde any good thyng, neyther haue they geuen prayse nor thankes vnto God.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

The booke.

In these and suche other thynges haue they suffered worst punishmente and thow the multitude of beastes are they coted out. In steade of which punishments thou hast graunted vnto thyne owne people and geuen them they desire that they longed for a newe and straunge tast, & preparing them quailles to be they meat: to the intent that by the thynges which were shewed and sent vnto them they that were so grevously omdrate, myght be withdrawen even from the desire that was necessary. But these within thowt tyme were brought vnto pouerte, and tasted a newe meat. For it was requysite that without excuse they shoulde come vpon those which used to rampe, and to shewe only vnto the other, howe they enemies were destroyed.

Sum. 23.

Sum. 23.

For when the cruell woodnesse of the beastes came vpon them, they perished thow the thynges of cruell serpentes. And withstanding they warde endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a litle season, & they might be reformed, hauinge a token of saluacion, to remembre the commaundement of thy law. For he converted, was not dealed by the thing he sawe, but by the, & saupoure of all. So in this thou the worst thine enemies, that it is, which deliuerest from al euil. As for them, when they were bittten with grethoperys and ayes, they dyed, for they were worthy to perysh by such: But neyther the teeth of dragons nor of venemous wormes ouercame thy chyldren, for thy mercy was euer by them, and helped them.

Exod. 13.

Therefore were they punished to remember thy wordes, but hastely were they healed again lest they shoulde fall into so depe forgetfulness, & they myght not vse thy helpe. It was nether herbe nor plaster prestoyed them to helpe, but thy worde (O Lorde) which healeth all thynges. It is thou (O Lorde) & haue power of lyfe and death: & thou ledest vnto deathes doore, & byngest vp agayne. But man thow we wekednes slayth his owne soule & when his sperte goeth for, it turneth not agayne, neyther may he call agayne the soule that is taken awaye. It is not possible to escape thy hande. For the vngodly that wolde not knowe the, were punished by the strength of thyne arme: to straunge waters, dayles and raynes were they persecuted, and thow to lyse were they consumed. For it was a wondrous thyng & lyse myghte doo moze then water which quenched all thynges but the word is the aduenger of & righteous. Some tyme was the spere so same, & the beastes which were sent to punish the vngodly, dynt not: and & because they shoulde se and knowe, & they wer persecuted to the punishment of God.

Deut. 32. 1. 2. 3.

And sometyme bynte the lyse in the water on euery lyde, that it myght destroy the vngodly nation of the earthe. Agayne thou hast fed thyne owne people with Angels food, and sent them byade redy from heauen (withoute they labour) byng very picaunte & a good of taste. And to shew thy riches & sweetnesse vnto thy chyldren, thou gauest every one they desire. For euery man might take what liked him best. But the snow and ple abode & bypolnce of the lyse and melted not: & they myght knowe, & the lyse burning in the dayle & raine, destroyed the frute of the enemies, the lyse also forgat his strength again: that & ryghereous myght be noryshed. For the creature & serueth the, whicher after the maker) is feare in punishing the vngodly, but it is easie & gentyle to do good, vnto such as put they trust in the.

Therefore byd all thynges after at the same tyme, & wer all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the nurse of all thynges, according to the desire of them & had neede thereof: & thy chyldren (O Lorde) whome thou louest, might knowe, & that it is not the nature and the growinge of frutes that sedeth men, but & it is thy worde, whicher pascueth them that put they trust in the. For loke what myghte not be destroyed to the lyse, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle. Summe beame, it melted: & all men myghte knowe & thankes ought to be geuen vnto & before the Summe rise, & that & oughtest to be woynipped before & day lping. For the hope of the vngodly shall melle awaye as the wynter ple and peryshe as water & is not necessary.

The xvii. Chapter.

The iudgements of God vpon the Egyptians.

Reate are & thy iudgements (O Lorde) & thy counsels can not be expressed therfore men do erre, & wyll not be reformed to thy wysdome.

For when & vngodly thoughte to haue thy holy people in subiection, they wer bounde with the bandes of darkness, & longe nighte, but vnder the rose, thinking to escape the euellastynge wysdome. And while they thoughte to be byd in the darkenes of they lynnes, they were scattered abode in the very midst of the darke couering of forgetfulness, put to horrible feare and wonderous vered: for the corner where they mighte not kepe them fro feare (because the sounde came downe and vered them) pre, many terrible and straunge visyons made them afrayed.

No power of the lyse myghte geue them lyghte, neyther myght the clere flammes of the starres lyghten & horrible myght. For there appeared vnto them a sodayne lyse, very dydefull. At the which (when they sawe nothyng) they were so afrayed, & they thoughte & theyng which they sawe, to be the moze fearefull. As for the sojerry and enchaunement & they vled it came to derisyon, & the proude wisdom was brought to shame. For they that promysed to byue awaye the fearefulness and byde from & weathe soules were speche for feare thein selues, and & with scozne. And though none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came vpon them, and at the bylling of the serpentes. In so muche that they trembling they sowned, and saide they sawe not the aye, whicher no manne yet maye escape.

Exod. 10. 1. 2. 3.

E For it is an heuy thyng, when a mans owne conscience beareth recozde of his wychednes & condemneth hym. And why? A vered & wondred conscience, taketh enee cruell thynges in hande. * Fearfulnes is nothing els, but a declaring that a man seeketh helpe and defence, to an swere for hym selfe. And loke howe much lesse the hope is within, the more is the vncertaintye of the matter, for þe which he is punished. But they that came in the myghte nyght, slept the slepe that fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue: sometyme were they afraide thezowe þe feare of the wonders, & sometyme they were so weake that they sowned dail: for an hasty and sodain fearfulnesse came vpon them.

D Afterwarde, yf anye of them had fallen, he was kepte and shutte in payson, but wpythout chaynes. But yf any dwelte in a vylage, yf he had ben an hearde of his bandeman, he suffered intollerable necessitye: for they were all bounde with one chapne of darkenesse.

Whether it were a blasfym wind, or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thyche bjaunches of the trees, or the vehemency of hasty runnyng water, or great noyse of þe fallyng doume of stones, or the playnyng & runnyng of beastes: whom they sawe not, or þe myghte noyse of roaryng beastes, or the sound þe aunswere again in the hye mountaynes: it made them lowne for verpfeare. For al the earth shined wclere light and no man was bynded in his labour. Only vpon them there fell an heuye nyght, an ymage of darkenesse þe was to come vpon them. Prea, they wer vnto them selues the moste denic and horryble darkenesse.

¶ The fyre lyght that the Iherusalem had in Egypt. The persecucion of the Iherusalem. The Lorde moote all the spere heuene of Egypt. The fyre of the people in the wyldernes. Aunswere that the people of the Iherusalem had to the Iherusalem.

N Euerthelesse, thy sayntes had a very great lyght: & the enemies heard they voice but they sawe not the fyre of them. And because they suffered not the same thynges they magnified þe: and they þe were vered afoze (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and besought the. D God þe there myght be a difference. * Therfoze had they a burning pyles of fyre to leade them in the vnknoen waye, & thou gauest them the summe for a fre gyfte without any hurte. Reason it was þe they shoulde wante lyght, and be put in the pyson of darkenesse, whiche kepte thy chyldren in captiuyte, by whome the vncorrupt lyghte of the lawe of the woide was for to be geuen. * When they thought to slawe the babes of the pygherous (one beynge layde out, and perserued to be leader vnto the other.) * þe broughte the whole multitude of the chyldren and destroyed the in the myghte water. Of that nyghte were oure fathers certified afoze, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myghte be of good chere. Thus thy people receyued the helpe of the righteous, but the vngodly wer destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurt our enemies, so hast þe promoted vs whom thou callest afoze. For the righteous chyldren of the good men offered secretly and obeyed the law of righteousness vnto vnite that the iuste shoulde receyue good and euell in like maner, syngyng praises vnto þe father of al men. Agayn, there was heard an vncouenient voice of þe enemies, & a ppytous crye for the chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruaunt wer punished in like maner. For they altogether had innumerable þe died one death.

* Neether were the lyttinge sufficiente to burpe the dead, for in the twynchyng of an eye the noblest nacyon of them was destroyed. As ofte as God helpe them afoze, yet wolde it not make them beleue: but in the destruction of the fyre bozne they knowlaged, that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges wer syl and when the nyghte was in the myddest of her course, thy almyghte woide (Lorde) leape doume from heauen oute of thy roiall throne, as a rough man of warre, in the myddest of the lande that was destroyed: the sharpe swerde performed they: strayer commandement standyng and fyllyng all thynges with death: yea it stode vpon the earth and reached vnto the heauen. Then the sygher of the euell dreames vered them sodenly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnto warre. Then laie there one here, another there, halfe dead, halfe quicke, & thewed the cause of his death. For the wysons þe vered them thewed them these thynges afoze: for they were not ignozant, wherfoze they perished.

Then tempracyon of death touched the pygherous also, and amonge the multitude in the wyldernes there was insurreccion, but thy wrathendured not longe. For þe blamelesman went in all the haste, and tooke the battayle vpon hym, brought for the the weapon of his mystryacyon: euen prayer and the censoures of reconfilyng: set hym selfe agaynst the wrath, & so broughte the myserye to an ende: declaringe thereby that he was thy seruaunt. For he ouer came not the multitude wyth bodelye power, nor with weapons of myghte: but w the woide he subdued hym þe vered hym, puttyng them in remembraunce of þe othe & couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deade were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddes, pacified the wrath, and parted the waye vnto the liuyng. * And why in his longe garment was all the betwy, & in þe soure rowes of the stones was the gloze of the fathers geauen, and thy maiesty was witten in fcoure of his head. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place and was afraid of them: for it was only a tempracyon wyth the of wrath.

For the cloude ouer shadowed theyr tentes, and the drye earth appered, where afoze was water: so that in the red see, there was a way without impediment and the great depe became a grene felde: where thowoe all the people wente that were defended with the hande saynge the wonderous and marvelous workes.

For as the doxes so were they fed, and leaped like lambs, praisynge the. O Lozde which haddest deliuered them: And why: they were yet mynde full of the chynge that happened while they dwelte in the lande: howe & ground brought forth theyr in the lande of catel: and how the ryuer scalded with the multitude of frogges in the deade offshores.

Exa. xlii. 2.
Exa. xlii. 2.

But at the laste they sawe a newe creature of bydes, what time as they were: decreued wth luste, and desyred delicate meates.

For when they were speakinge of theyr appetite, the quaples came vnto them from the see, and punishmentes came vpon the synners not without the tokens whyche came to passe afoze by the behemence of the streames, for they suffered wothely accordyng to theyr wickednes, they delt so abhominably and churly helpe wth strangers. Some receyued no unknowne gestes, some brought the strangers into bondage & did them good. Beside all these chynge there were some, & not onely receyued no strangers wth theyr wylls, but persecuted those also, and byd them muche euell, that receyued them gladly. Therefore were they punished wth byndenesse, like as they that were couered wth sodayne darkness at the doxes of the synners, so & every one soughte the entrance of his doxe.

Thus the elementes turned into them selves, like as when one tune is chaunged vpon an instrumente of musyke and yett all the residue heere theyr melodye, whiche maye easily be perceyued, by the syght of the chynge that are come to passe.

The drye lande was turned into a waterye and the chynge that afoze swamme in the water, wente nowe vpon drye grounde. The fyre had power in water (contrary vnto his owne vertue) and the water forgot his owne kynde to quench. Again, the flames of uop some beastes burte not the flesh of them that went wth them, neyther melted theyr the yfe, whiche elles melted lightly. In all chynge haste thou prouedest the people. O Lozde and brought them to honour: & haste not despised them but alway and in all places hast & stande by them.

The booke of Iesus, the sonne of Sirach / which is called in Latin Ecclesiasticus.

The prologue of Iesus the sonne of Sirach vnto his booke.

Many and grete men haue declared wysdome vnto vs oute of the lawe, oute of the prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which chynge I Irael oughte to be commended by the reason of doctryne and wysdome: Therefore, they that haue it: and reade it, shoulde not onelye them selues be wylle there thowoe, but serue other also wth teachyng and wytyng.

After that my graundefather Iesus had geuen dylygent labour to reade the lawe, the prophetes, and other bookes that were lesse vs of our fathers, & had well excerpced hym selfe therein: he purposed also to wyte some chynge of wysdome and good maners, to the intent that they whiche were wyllyng to learne & to be wylle myght haue the moze vnderstandyng, and be the moze apte to leade a good conuersacyon. Therefore, I exhorte you to receyue it louyngly, to reade it wth diligence, & to take it in good wozth though our wordes be not so eloquent as the famous orators. For the chynge & is wytten in & hebrewe tynge, soundeth not so well when it is translated into another spech. Not only this booke of myne, but also & the lawe, the prophetes, & other bookes soude far othervyse, then they do, when they are spoken in theyr owne language. Nowe in & xxxviii. yere when I came into Egypte in & time of Ptolomey Euergetes: & continued there al my life, I gat liberte to reade & wyte many good thinges. Therefore I thought it good & necessary, to bestow my diligence & trauaile to intreyse this booke. And consyderyng that I had tyme, I laboured and vnto my beste to perforce this booke, & to byng it vnto lyght: & the strangers also which are disposed to learne, myghte apply them selues vnto good maners and lyue accordyng to the lawe of the Lozde.

of Iesus the sonne of Sirach. Ecol. xxxij.

Ecclesiasticus.

The xijth chapter.

Wysdome proceedeth and cometh of God. A people of the state of God. Righteousness is a bag to come by wysdome.

Al wysdome cometh of God the Lorde, and hath bene euer with hym, & is before all tyme. Who hath nombred the sande of the see, the droppes of rain, and the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the depth of benen, the breadth of the earthe, and the depeneth of the sea? Who hath sought out the grounde of Soddes wysdome which hath bene afore all thynges? Wysdome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandynge of prudence from euery thyng. (Soddes woide in the begynne is the wel of wysdome, and the euerylastynge commaundementes are the entraunce of her.)

Unto whom hath the roote of wysdome bene declared? Who hath knowen her wyse? Unto whome hath the doctryne of wysdome bene discovered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her?

There is one: euen the hygheste the maker of all thynges, the Almyghyte, the kyng of power, of whom men oughte to stande greatly in awe, whiche syteth vpon his throne beyng a God of dominyon: he hath created her thow the holy ghoost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her, he hath powred her out vpon all his wyse, and vpon all fleste, accordyng to his gyfte: he geueth her rychely vnto them y lone hym. The feare of the Lorde is wysdome and tryumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. Whoso feareth the Lorde, it shall go well with hym at the laste, that in the day of his death he shal be blessed.

The loue of God is honourable wysdome looke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it for they se what wonderous thynges it doth. The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome, and was made with the saythefull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with y chosen women, and shal be knowen of the ryghteous and saythefull. The feare of the Lorde is the ryghte Soddes seruyce, that preseruet and susteyneth the hert, & geueth mirth and gladnesse. Whoso feareth the Lorde shal be happy, & when he hath neede of comfort, he shal be blessed. To feare god is wysdom y maketh eche, & byngeth all good with her. She filleth the whole house with her gyften, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace and helth. He hath sene her & nombred her: (both these are the gyftes of God) knowlage, and vnderstandynge of wysdome hath bene poured out as rayne, and theim that helde her faste, hath he broughte vnto honoure.

The feare of the Lorde is the roote of wysdome, and her braches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandynge and deuocyon of knowlage, but wysdome is abhored of synners. The feare of the Lorde dyspurteth oute synne, for he is without feare can not be made ryghteous, & his wyfull boidenes is hym owne destruccyon. A pacient man wyll suffer vnto the tyme, & then shal he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandynge wyll hyde bys wordes for a tyme, & manye mens lippes shal speake of his wysdome. In the treasures of wysdome is the declaracyon of doctryne, but synner abhoreth the word of God. Wysdome, yf thou desyre wysdome, kepe the commaundementes, & God shal geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wisdom & nuntour, he hath pleasure in sayth & louyng mekenesse, & he shal fyl the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde, & come not vnto hym with a double hert. Be not an yppocryte in the syght of menne, & take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall & byngne thy soule to dishonour, & so God discover thy secretes, & cast the doune in the myddel of the congregacyon: because thou dost not receyue the feare of God, & because thy herte is full of faynednes and disceyte.

The ii. Chapter.

He exhorteth the seruantes of God to ryghteousnesse, low, vnderstandynge, and patientie, & exhorteth hym that feareth God, to breue, to hope, and to loue, because God neyther confoundeth nor forsaketh them that truste in hym. A curse vpon the scelle, feare, and vnpatient of her.

Man sonne, yf thou wilt come into the seruyce of God, stande fast in ryghteousnesse and feare, and arme thy soule to temptacyon: sette thyne hert & be pacient, bowe downe thine eare, receiue the wordes of vnderstandynge, and bypynke not awaie, when thou art entised. Holde the fast vpon God ioyne thy selfe vnto hym, & suffre that thy lyfe may encrease at last. What soeuer happeneth vnto the, receyue it: suffer in heynesse, & be pacient in thy trouble. For lyke as golde & syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornaice of aduersite. Beleeue in God and he shal helpe the: order thy waye aright, & put thy truste in hym. Holde faste his feare and graue therein. O ye feare the Lorde take sure holde of his mercy: shrinke not away from him that ye fall not. O ye feare the Lorde, beleeue hym and pour reward shal not be emptye. O ye that feare the Lorde, put your trust in hym, and mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure. O ye that feare the Lorde, set your loue vpon hym, and your hartes shal be lychtened.

Consyder the olde generacions of men (O ye chyldren) and marke them well: was there ever any one confounded, & put his truste in the Lorde? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsaken? O whome had he euer dyspyle, & called saythefully vpon hym? For God is gracious and merciful, he for geueth synners in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them y seke him in the tyme. Woe be vnto them, that hath a double bert, wycked lypyes and enel occupied handes, & to the synner that goeth two manner of wayes. Alas be unto them y are loose of herte, whiche put not theyr trust in God, and therfore shal they not be defended of hym. Alas be unto them that haue lost pacyence, forsaken the ryght wayes, and are turned backe into fro ward wayes. What wyl they do when y Lord shal begynne to vylte them?

E They that feare the Lord wyl not mistrust his woide, & they that loue hym, wyl kepe his commaundemente. They y feare the Lord, wyl seke oute the thynges that are plea sant unto hym, & they y loue hym, shal fulfyl his lawe. They y feare the Lord wyl prepare theyr hartes, & humble their soules in his sight. They y feare the Lord, kepe his commaundementes, & wyl be pacient wyl they se hym selfe saynge. Better it is for vs to fall into the handes of the Lord, then into y handes of men: for his mercede is as great as hym selfe.

The .iii. Chapter.

To our father and mother ought we to give double honoure of the blessing and curse of the father & mother. No man ought to be curious to search out the secrets of God.

A The chyldren of wysedome are a congregation of y righteous, and theyr example is obedyence & loue. Heare me your father. O my dere chyldren, and do after that ye maye be safe. For y Lord wyl haue the father honoured of the chyldren: and looke what a mother commaundeth her chyldren to do, he wyl haue it keper. Who so honoureth his father, his synnes shalbe forgiven him: and he that honoureth his mother: is yke one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shal haue ioye of his owne chyldren: when he maketh his prayer he shalbe heard. He y honoureth his father, shal haue a longe lyfe: & he that is obedyent for the Lordes sake, his mother shal haue ioye of hym.

He that feareth the Lord, honoureth his father and mother, and doeth theim seruyce, as it were unto the Lord hym selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in woide and in all pacience, that y mayst haue goddes blessing, and his blessing shal abyde with the at the lasse.

The blessing of the father buyldeth up y houses of the chyldren, but the mothers curse roteth oute the foundacions. Keteyle not when thy father is reproued, for it is not honoure unto the but shame. For the woishippe of a mans father is his owne woishippe, & where the father is withoute honoure, it is the dishonoure of the sonne. My sonne, make muche of thy father in his age, & greue hym not as longe as he lyueth. And yf his vnderstandyng faile, haue pacience with hym, and despyse hym not in thy strength. For the good dede y thou doest unto thy father, shal not bee forgotten, & when y thy selfe wantest it shalbe rewarded the. & for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed wylth good, yee: it shalbe founded for y in epygrounles: & in the daye of trouble thou shalt be remembered: thy synnes also shal melte a waile yke as the yse in the saye warme therer.

He that forsaketh his father shal come to shame, and he that despyth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne perfourme thy woiches wylth louyng me hemesse, so shalt thou be beloved aboue of her men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy selfe (in all thynges) and thou shalt fynde fauoure in the syght of God. For greate power belongeth onely unto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

Make not oute the thynges the lasse about thy capacite, and search not the ground of such thynges as are to myghty for the. Make what god hath commaunded the, thynke yf al day and be not curious in many of his woiches. For it is not nedefull for the to see the synne eyes the thynges y are secret. Make not y much searce in superfluous thynges, & be not curious in many of his woiches: for many thynges are thewed unto the alre adre, which be aboue the capacite of men. The medlyng wylth suche hath begyled many a man, & tangled their wytes in vanyte. Now he y loneth parel shal perseye therein.

An harde harte shal face euell at the lasse, (and he that loueth daunger, shal perseye there in) an harte y goeth two wayes, shal not prosper: and he that is frowarde of harte wyl encre be worse and worse. A wycked harte shalbe laden wylth sorowes, and the vngodly synner wyl beape one synne vpon another. The council of the proude hath no health, for y plant of synne shalbe rooted oute in theim, and not knowen. The bert of hym that hath vnderstanding shal perceyue byr thynges, & a good care wyl gladly berken vnto wysdome. An harte yis wyl y hath vnderstanding, wyl abstaine from synne and encrease in the woiches of epygrounlesse. Water quengeth burnyng fyre, & mercede reconcyleth synnes. God hath respect vnto hym that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon hym against y tyme to come: so that when he fallerth: he shal fynde a stronge holde.

The .iiii. Chapter.

Almes must be done wylth all mekenesse. The study of vithomes and her feates, it wylde ought to be merciful. An exhortacion to charyte and to be good.

My sonne, & defraude not the poore y of his almes, and turne not awaye thyne eyes frome hym that darthe nede. Wylspye not an hongry soule and despye not the poore in his necessitye: greue not the herte of hym that is helplese, and wylthdrawe not the gyfte frome the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face from the nedye. Caste not thyne eyes asyde from y poore for any euell wyl, that thou greue hym none occasion to speake euell of the. For yf he complainyng of the, in the bytternesse of his soule, his prayer shalbe hearde, euen he that made hym: shal be are hym. Be curious vnto the companye of poore: humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy heade to a manne of woishippe. Lette it not greue the to bowe downe thine eare vnto y poore, but pay thy dette, & greue hym a frendly answer, and that to mekenesse.

Delyuer

Of Iesus the sonne of Syrach. Fol. xxxiii.

B * Deluyt hym that suffereth wronge from the hande of the oppressour, and be not saynt herced wban thou spritest in iudgement. Be merciful vnto the fatherles as a father, & be in feare of an husbnde vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an obedyente sonne of the hyst: & he shal loue the more then thy mother doth. Wisedom bieth her lyfe into her chyldren, receaueth them that seke her, & wyl go before them in the waye of ryghteousnes. He ploveth her, loneth lyfe, & they that seke her diligently, shal haue great joy. They that kepe her, shal haue the heritage of lyfe: for wher she encreth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honoure her, shal be the seruauntes of the holye one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so generh care vnto her, shal iudge the heathen, and he that hath respect vnto her, shal dwell safelye.

C He that belongeth her, shal haue her in possession, and his generacion shal endure: for wha he fallerh he goeth with hym, and closeth hym amonge the best. Feare, dyde, and temptacion shal the bynge vpon him, and tye hym in her doctryne, tyll he haue proued hym in his thoughtes, that he commit his soule vnto her. Then shal he stablye hym, bynge the ryghte way vnto him, make hym a glaoman, the w hym her secretes, & heape vpon him p treasures of knowlege, vnderstandyng of ryghteousnes. But yf he goo wronge, he wyl forsake hym, and geue hym ouer into the handes of his enemye.

D My sonne, make muche of the tyme, eschue the thyng that is euell, and for thy lyfe shame not to sape the truty. For there is a shame that byngeth synne, and there is a shame that byngeth wozshipp & sauouur: * Accept no personne after thyne owne wil, y thou be not confounded to thyne owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersitee, & kepe not backe thy counsell wban it maye do good, neyther hyde thy wysdome in her bewty. For in the tong is wysdome knowen, so is vnderstandyng knowlege and learnyng in the talkyng of the wyse and stedfastnesse in p wordes of ryghteousnes. In no wyse speake agaynst the woide of truty but be ashamed of the lyes of thyne owne ignorance. Whame not to confesse thyne error, & submyt not thy selfe vnto every man because of synne. Wythstande not the face of the myghtye and strue thou not agaynst the streame. But for ryghteousnes sake pame with al thy soule and for the truty strue thou vnto deathe, & God shal fynde for the agaynst thyne enemyes.

We not pastye in thy counge, neyther flache and negligencie in thy woiches. We not as a Lyon in thyne owne house, destroyng the howholde folkes, and oppressing them that are vnder the * Let not thine hand be stretched out to receaue, and shutte wban thou shouldest gone.

The .v. Chapter.

In thyselfe make not put any confidence. The vngardens of God ought to be feared and vngardens maye be not fowen.

Ruste not vnto thy riches, * and say not tute, I haue ynough for my life. (For it shal not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and temptacion.) Followe not the lust of thine owne herte in thy strength, and sape not: tute, howe haue I had strenght, or who wyl bynge me vnder because of my woiches: for doubtles God shal aduenge it. And sape not: I haue synned, and what euil hath happened me: For the Almyghtye is a payente rewarde.

* Because thy synne is forgiven the, be not therfore wythoute feare, neyther heape one synne vpon another. * And sape not: tute, the merye of the Lord is grete, he shal forgive me my synnes, be they neuer so many. * For lyke as he is mercifull, so goeth wazch, fridim also, & his indignacion commeth downe vpon synners.

Wake no tarping to turne vnto the Lord & put not of from daye to daye: for sodenly shal his wazch come, & in the tyme of vengeance he shal destroye the. * Trust not in wyched ryches for they shal not helpe the in the daye of punymente & wazch. Be not carped aboute to every wynde, and go not into eury waye: for so doth the sinner that hath a double tong. Stand fast in the waye of the Lord, be stedfast in thy vnderstandyng, abyde by the woide, & folowe the woide of peace & righteousnes. Be gentle to peere the woide of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, and make a true aunswere with wysdome. * Be slowe to heare, but slow & patient in geuyng answer. If thou haite vnderstandyng, haue thy neyghboure an answer: If no, laye thy hand vpo thy mouth lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete woide, & so confounde thy honre and wozshipp is a mans wyse talkyng but the tonge of the vndiscrete is owne deathecye. * Be not a pryce accuser as long as thou lyest, and vse no flaunder wtyd thy tonge. For shame and sorowe goeth ouer the cheste, and an euell name ouer him that is double tonged: but he that is a pryce accuser of othe men, shal be hated, enuyed and confounded. We that thou in thyse the small and greace a lyke.

The .vi. Chapter.

It is the properte of a sinner to be rust tonged. To desire and good counsell of the wyse to be emptye, wisdom shal be flachid for. The pryce of the wyse.

BE not thy neyghbours enemye for thy frendes sake, for who so is euil, shal be the herye of reuenge and dishonoure, & whosoeuer beareth enmye and a double tonge offendeth. * We not proude in the deuyce of thyne owne vnderstandyng (leake thy strengthe be hurte by foolybenesse, and) leaste thy leaues wyther, and thy fruyte be destroyed, and so thou belieste as a drye tree (in the wyldernesse.) For a wyched soule destroyeth hym that hathe it, maketh hym to be laughed to scoone of hys enemyes, (and byngeth hym to the poeyson of the vngodlye.) * A swete woide multiplieth frendes, and pacifyeth them that be at variance, and a shanke full tonge wyl be plentrous in a good man. Holde frendeshippe with manye, neuertheless haue but one counseller of a thousande.

If thou gettest a frende, * proue him fyrst, & be not hasty to geue him credence. For some ma is a fowde, but for a tyme, & wyl not abyde in the daye of

Come vnto her wyth thy whole herte, and kepe her wayes with al thy power. Seke after her, and she shal be shewed the: and when thou haste her, for sake her not. For at the last thou shalte synne rest in her, and that shal be turned to thy greute ioye.

Then shal her fetters be a stronge defence for the, and her pocke a glo: pous raiment. For the bewte of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the occupyng together of saluacion. Yea, a glo: pous raiment is it, thou shalte put it on, and the same crowne of ioye shalte thou weare.

Wy soune, yf thou wylte take heade, thou shalte haue vnderstandyng, and yf thou wylte applye thy mynde, thou shalte bewte. Yf thou wylte bowe downe thine eare, thou shalte receaue doctrine, and yf thou dryste in hearyng, thou shalte be wylle. Stande wyth the multitude of suche elders as haue vnderstandyng, and consente vnto the: wyse dome wyth thine hert: that thou mayest heare al godly sermons and that the wryth sentences cleape the not. And yf thou seyst a man of dycrete vnderstandyng get the soone vnto him, and let thy foote treade vnto the stappes of his dooies. * Let thy mynde be vnto the commandmentes of God, & be earnestly occupyed in his lawes: so shal he stablye thy hert, & geue the wyse dome at thine owne desyre, with the: remember that thou wast borne to to be them, and howe canst thou recompence them the thynges that they haue done for the?

D Feare the Lord with all thy soule, and honoure hys mynisters. Loue thy maker with all thy strength, * & forsake not his seruantes. Feare the Lord with all thy soule, and honoure hys ministers. * Gue them their paye of the fynde frutes & increase of the earth, lyke as it is commanded the: (and reconstyle thy selfe of thy ne-gyligence with the lytle flocke) geue them the shoulders, and they: appointed offerynges and fyrstlings: Reach thyne hande vnto the poore that God maye blesse the with plenteousnesse.
* Be liberrall vnto all men in gyltyng, * yet let not but do good euil vnto them: that are deede. * Let not them that wepe, be without comforte, but moune with such as moune. * Let it not greue the to vlsit the syche, for: I shall make the to be beloued, whatsoeuer thou takest in hande, remember the ende, * thou shalt neuer do amysse.

The viii. Chapter.

Agaynst the better is no feynynge. Of the death of thyne enemye mayest thou not reioyce, nor wyssh thy neighbour, nor the warden of the wyse.

Stryue not with a myghty ma, lest thou chaunce to fall into his handes * Make not variance with a rych man, lest he happen to vying vp an harde quarrell agaynst the. * For gold & siluer hath vndone many a man, per, euil p vntes of kynges hath it made to fall. * Deriue not with a man & is full of wozdes: and lape no stiches vpon his fyre. Kepe no companie with the vnlearned, lest he geue thy kynd an euil re-poyse. * Dispyse not a man & turneth him selfe awaye fro syn, & cast him not in teeth wythall, but remember that we are fraple euerychone.
* Chynche scoyne of noman in his olde age, for we waxe olde also. * Be not glad of the death of thyne enemy, but remember & we muste dye all & losse of vs, (a faine wolde we come into to y) * Dispyse not the sermons of such elders as haue vnderstandyng, but acquaynt thy selfe with wise sentences of the, for of them & shalt learne wydome and the doctrine of vnderstandyng, so howe to serue great men without complaint.
So not from the doctrine of the elders: for they haue learnid it of their fathers. For of the thou shalt learne vnderstandyng, so & thou mayest make answer in y time of nebe. Kynle not the coales of sinners, (whan & rebuketh them lest & be burnt in the fyre flammes of they: synes.
Resiste not the face of the blasphemers, & be la y not waite for thy mouth. * Lende not vnto him p is mightier then thy selfe: If thou lendest him count it but lost. * Be not surty aboute thy power: yf thou be: then chynche surely to paye it. So not to lawe is the Judge: for he wyl iudge accor-dyng to his owne honoure. * Trauayle not by the waye with him that is wyauelless, lest he do the well: for he foloweth his owne wyfullnes, and so shalt thou perithe thozowe his foly.
* Strype not with hym that is angyre and cruell, and go not with hym into wyldernesse: for bloude is nothyng in hys syght, and where there is no helpe he shall murder the.

* Take no counsell at foolen, for they loue nothyng but the thinges that please them selues * Make no counsell before a straunger, for thou canst not tell what wyl come of it. Open not thyne hert vnto every man, least he be vnto thank full to the, and put the to repoyse.

The ix. Chapter.

The wyrdnes of chastitee is to be exchord. An olde frende is to be preferred before a newe. The glorie and riches of sinners, wythouten man shalbe to gylt: Labour in thy chyn thing in a marshall, and wyldome in a payne.

Be not gelous ouer thy wyfe of thy bolome, that she shewe not some thywed poynt of wyched doctryne vpon the. * Geue not power of thy lif vnto a womā least she come in thy strength, & so thou be confounded. Loke not vpon a womā that is despyous of many men, lest thou fall in to her snares. * Use not the companie of a woman that is a playe and a dauncer, & deare her not, lest thou perithe thozowe her enspynge.
Beholde not a mayden, that thou be not hurt in her bewtye. * Cast not thy mynde vpon har-leottes in any maner of thyng, lest thou destroy bothe thy selfe and thyne herpage. * Go not a-boute gasyng in euery lane of the ctyte nethe wander thou abzoad in the strettes therof. *
Turne awaye thy face from a be wylful womā and looke not vpon the sapience of other.

* Many a man hath perythed thozowe the betwixt of women, for thozowe is the desyre is kyndled as it were a fyre. In aduoucerous woman shalbe trodden vnder fote as myze, of euerye one that goeth by the waye. * Wanye a man wondering at the betwixt of a strange womā hath bene cast ouer, for her wozdes kyndle as as a fyre. * Wyt not with another mans wyfe by any meanes, lye not with her vpon the bed, make no wozdes with her at y wyne, lest thine berte cosent vnto her & so thou with thy bloude fall into destruction. For as he not an olde frend for the newe shall not be lyke hym.

A newe frende is newe wyne: let hym be olde and thou shalt dyspyche hym wyth pleasure. Desyre not the honoure and rychesse of a synner, for thou knowest not what destruction is for to come vpon him. Welyte not thou in the thyng that the vngodlye haue pleasure in, beyng sure, that the vngodlye shall not be acce-pyed vntyll they: graue.

Kepe the from the man that hath power to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayed of death.
And yf thou comest vnto hym, make no fault lest he happen to take awaye thy lyf. Remember that thou goest in the myddelt of snares, & vpon the outwoches of the ctyte. Beware of thy neygbboure as nye as thou canst, * a medle

Let iuste men be thy gyltes let thy mynde be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy mynde, * & let all thy talyng be in the des of the craftsmen shal the wozches be com-

Wysdomme of theyr talkyng. A man ful of wozdes is parlous in hys cyte: and he that is rathe in hys talkyng, shal be abhorred.

The .x. Chapter.

Of hynges and bynges, wyse and unwyse men to be abhorred, and how to praye.

A wyse iudge wyl order hys people wth dyscretion: and where a man of vnderstandyng beareth rule, they goeth it well. * As the iudge of the people is hym selfe, euen so are hys officers: & loke what maner of man the ruler of the cite is, such are they that dwel therein also.

11. Reg. xlii. 2 * An unwyse kyng destroueth his people: but 11. Reg. xlii. 2 where they that be in authoryte are men of vnderstandyng, then the cyte prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God: and all iniquyte of the people is to be abhorred: & when his tyme is, he shal set a pryncyple ruler vpon it. In the hand of God is the power of man, & vpon the scribes shal he laye his honour.

1. Reg. xlii. 2 * Remember no wylde of thy neyghbour, & medle not thou wth no vnpryncyple wylde. Wyse is hatfull before God & man, & al wickednes of the heathen is to be abhorred.

1. Reg. xlii. 2 * Because of vnpryncyple draynge, wylde blasphemys, dyuers dyscretes, a realme shal be translated from one people to another.

There is nothing worse the a courtesous man. Why art thou proude, O thou earth & athen: Ther is not a moare wyched thyng, then to loue myse. And why: suche one hath hys soule to sell, yet is he but tyll the dounge wyle he lyeth.

And though the wyse syon shewe hys helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusyon it goeth after this maner, to haue a kyng, to moouwe beede. For when a man dyeth, he is the heye of serpentes, beastes, and woymes. The begynnyng of mannes wyse, is to fall a waye frome God: And why: hys herte is gone from his maker, for wyse is the oppynail of all synne. Who so taketh holde therof, shal be filled with cursynges, and at the laste it shal ouerthrowe hym. Therefore hath the Lord brought the congregacions of the wyched to dyshonoure, and destroued them to the ende.

God hath destroued the seates of proude prynces, & set vpon the meke in theyr steade: God hath wethered the rootes of the proude heathen & planted the lowly among them. * God hath ouerthrowen the landes of the heathen, and destroued them vnto the grounde. He hath caused them to wether away, he hath brought them to naught, & made the memorial of them to cease from out of the earth. (God hath destroued the name of the proude, & left the name of the humble of mynde.) Wyse was not made for man, neyther wylde for mens chyld. The seed of men feare God, shal be brought to honour, but the seed whych transgresseth the commaundementes of the Lord shal be named. He is the ruler amonge brethren, is holden in honour amonge them, and he that regardeth suche as feare the Lord. The glasse of the wyche of the honourable, and of the poore is the feare of God.

Dyspyle not thou the lust poore man, and magnifye not the ryche vngodly. Greater is the iudge and myghte in honour, yet is there none greater, then he that feareth God. * Vnto the seruante that is dyscrete, shal the free do seruice. * He that is wyse and wel nurtured, wyl not grudge when he is reformed, and an ignorant bodie shal not come to honour. Be not proude to do thy wylde, and dyspayre not in tyme of aduersite. * Better is he that laboureth and hath the plenteousnesse of all thynges, then he that is gorgeous, and wanteth weade.

By soune, kepe thy soule in mekenes, and geue her, her due honour. Who shal iustify hym & synneth agaynst him selfe: Who wyl honour him, & dishonoureth his owne soule: The poore is honoured for his faithfulness and truste, but the ryche is had in reputacio because of his good des. He that ordereth him selfe honestly in pouer, howe muche more shal he behaue hym selfe honestly in ryche: And who so ordereth himselfe dishonestly in ryche, howe muche more shal he behaue hym selfe dishonestly in pouer.

The .xi. Chapter.

Of the praye of humylyte. After the outward apperaynce oughte we not to iudge. Of pryde and rathe iudgements. Of the ryche in not without offence. All thynges come of God. All thynge are not to be brought into thyne house.

The wysdomme of hym is brought lowe, shal lyfte up hys heade and shal make hym to lyt among great men. Commende not thou a man in hys betwylde, neyther dyspyle a man in hys better apperaynce. The Be is but a smal beest amonge the foules, yet is her frute excedyng swete. Be not proude of thy rayment, & exalte not thy selfe in the dape of thy honour for thy wylde of hys only are wyldeful, glorious, secrete, & vnkowen are hys wylde. Many tyrauntes haue bene sayne to sit downe vpon the erth. * & the vnkowen hath wone the crowne. Many myghty me haue ben brought lowe, & the honourable haue bene deliuered into other mens handes. * Exempne no man before thou haue tryed out the matter, and when thou hast made inquisition, then reforme ryghteously. * Geue no sentence, before thou hast hard the cause, but fyrste let men tell oute theyr tales.

Stryue not for a matter that toucheth not thy selfe, & stande not in the iudgemente of synners. By soune medle not wth many matters: * and yf thou wylte be ryche, thou shal not get it: & though thou wylte be ryche, yet shal thou not escape. * There is some man & labourer & the more he wylde him selfe, the lesse he hath agayne, some man is stouthe, hath neede of helpe: wanteth strengthe, & hath greute power, and Gods eye loketh vpon him to good, seth hym vpon hys lowe estate, * and lyf. * seth vpon hys heade: so that manye men maruell at hym, and geue honour vnto God.

* Prosperite & aduersite, lyfe and deathe, pouer & ryche come all of the Lord. Wysdomme nurtoure, and knowlege of the lowe, are wylde God,

Of Iesus the sonne of Syrach. Fol xxxv.

God, lone and the wayes of good are with him Errours and darthenesse are made for synners (and they that exalte them selues in euil, ware olde in euil.) The gyfte of God remaineth for the ryghteous, and the good wyll shall geue prosperite for euer. Some man is ryche by lyuynge vnghardly, and that is hys porcion of his rewarde, in that he sayeth: * nowe I haue gotten rest, and nowe wyll I eate and drynke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he consydereth not, that the tyme draweth nye (and death approcheth) that he must leaue all these thynges vnto other men, and dye him selfe. Stande thou faste in thy couenaunte, and excepte thy selfe therein, and remaine in the woiche vnto thy age. Continue not in the woiches of sinners but put thy trust in God, & byde in thyne estate for it is but an easie thyng in the syght of God to make a poore man ryche, and yfodenye.

The blessing of God baltheth to frewarde of yf rychetrous, and maketh his frutes lone to his wyfe & prosper. Saye not what helpeth it me: & what shal I haue the while? Againe, saye not: I haue ynough, howe can I wante? When thou arte in welfare, forget not aduersyte, & what it goeth not wel with the, haue a good hope, that it shal be better. For it is but a smal thyng vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euerye man ac-cordinge to hys wayes. The aduersyte of an houre maketh one to forgette all pleasure: and when a man dyeth, his woiches are discouered wheate no bodye before hys deathe, for a man walbe knowen in hys chyldren.

Bynne not euerye man into thyne house, for the dysceatful layeth wayte dyuerly. Lyke as a paterch in a maunde, so is the bette of the proude: & like as a spyre that loereth vpon the fal of hys neyghboore. For he turneth good vnto euil, and flandereth the chosen. Of one sparke is made a great fyre, and of one dysceatfull ma is bloude increased: & an vngodlye man layeth wayte for bloude. Beware of the dysceatful for he pynagyneth wyced thynges, to bynne the into a perpetual shame. If yf takest an aleant vnto the, he shall destroye the in vnquietnes, and bynne the from thyne owne wayes.

Chapter. xii.

¶ Into whom we ought to do good. ¶ Synners ought to be rebuked.

When thou wyte do good, knowe to whom thou doest it, and so walte yf be greatly thanched for thy benefy-tes. * Do good vnto the ryghteous and thou shalt synde great rewarde though be not of hym, yet (no doubte) the lorde hym selfe shall rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alwaye occupied in euil & geureth no almes, for the byest hateth the synners, and hath mercy vpon them that shewe the woiches of repentaunce. Geue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receaue not a synner. As for the vngodlye & sinners, he shal recompence vengeaunce vnto them, & kepe them to the daye of wrauth. Geue thou vnto the good, & receaue not the synner: do well vnto him that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodly. Let not the breade be geuen hym, yf he be not myghty: then thy selfe therin. For so shalt thou receaue twise as much euil, in all the good that thou doest vnto hym.

And why? the bygest hateth synners, and shal rewarde vengeaunce vnto the vngodly. In prosperite, a frende shal not be knowne & in aduersitye an enemye shal not be byd. For when a ma is in weale, it geureth hys enemies, but in bewynnes, & trouble a man shal knowe hys frende.
Trust neuer thyne enemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth hys wickednes. And though he make much crouching, and knelynge, yet kepe well thy mynde and beware of hym. Set hym not by the nether let him syt at thy ryghte hande lesse he turne hym, get into thy place, take thy rowme & seke thy seat, & so thou art yf last remember my wordes, and be pitched at my saynges.

* Bynde not two synners together, for there shal not one be vnpanyshed. Who wyll haue pi-tie of the charmer, that is stinged of the serpent or of all suche as come nye the beastes: Euen so is it wyth him yf he peth company wyth a wy-ced man, & lappeth him selfe in his synnes. For a season wyll he hyde wyth the, but yf thou stom-ble, he tarperth not. * An enemye is sweete in his lipped, he can make many good wordes & speake many good thynges: Pre, he can weape wyth his eyes, but in hys herte he pynagyneth, howe to thowe the into the pyt: & yf he maye find oportuntye, he wyll not be satisfied wyth bloude.
If aduersyte come vpon the, thou shalt synde him therewith and though he pretend to do the helpe, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shal take hys heade, and clappe hys handes ouer the for verge gladnesse: and whyle he maketh manny wordes, he shal dysguyle hys countenaunce.

Chapter. xiii.

¶ The companyes of the proude & of the reue are to be shunned. The loue of God: lyke the charyte wyth the lyke.

Who so toucheth pyrch, shal be fylled wyth thall: and he that is samplare wyth the proude, shal clothe hym selfe wyth pyrch. He taketh a burthen vpon hym, that accompanieth a more honozable man than him selfe. Therefore kepe no familyartye wyth one yf he reuer then thy selfe. Howe agre the heret and the pot together: for yf the one be smitten agaynst the other it shal be broken. The ryche dealeth vngodlye oude, and threatheneth wyth all: but the poore beyng oppressed and wynged wyth deale wyth all, suffereth scarcenesse, and geureth saye wodes. If thou be for his profyte, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsaue the. As longe as thou haue anye thyng of thyne owne he shal be a good felowe wyth the: yet, he shal make the a bare man, and not be forye for the.

If he haue nede of the, he shal beschaunge the: and (wyth a pryue moche) shal he put the in an hoipe, and geue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? This shal be shame the in hys meate, vntyl he haue supped the cleane wyth wyse of thyse, & at the last shal he laughe the to scoyne. Afterwarde, when he seyth that that thou haste nothyng, he shal forsake the, & make his head at the. (Whiche thy selfe vnto God, and waite vpon his hande.)

Beware that thou be not dysceined and broughte downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wysedome: leest when thou arte broughte lowe, thou be dysceined thow we losse thy selfe. If thou be called of a myghty ma, ab sente thy selfe, so that he cal the to him: the more ofte. Dysceine not thou vnto hym, & thou be not oute. but go not so farre of, leest he forget & let the prayme not thy selfe from his speech, but beleue not his many wordes. For with muche communicaciō that he tempte the, & with a pye up moche shall he quest: of thy secretes. The vnnecessfull mynde of his shal marke the wordes, he shal not spare to do & hurt. & to put the in pyson. Beware & take good hede to thy selfe, for & walke in yarell of thy ouerthrowinge.

Nowe when thou hearest his wordes, make the as though thou werest in a dreame, & wake vp. Love God all thy lyfe longe, & cal vpon him in thy neede. Euerie beaste loueth his like, euen so let euerie man loue his neyghboure. Al the wyll reioyce to the: lyke, and euerie man wil hepe compaigne with such as be in him selfe.

But as the wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth the vngodly with the ryghteous. What fellowshipp shoulde an holpe man haue with a dogge? How can the ryche & the poore ager together? The wyld A lie is the lyons praye in & wyldernes, euen so are prynces & meat of the ryche. Lyke as the prynces may not away with lowlynes, euen so do the ryche abhorre the poore. If a rich man sal, his frendes let him vp againe: but when the poore falleth, his acquaintance forsake him. If a rich man sal into an crouche, he hath many helpers: he speaketh prynces wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is puny shed. pen. though he be speake wysely, yet can he haue no place. When the ryche man speaketh, euerie man holdeth his tongue: & looke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto the clowdes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What fellow is this? & yf he do anyse, they shall destruye hym. Ryches are good vnto hym that hath no synne in his conscience, & pouerte is a wyched thyng in the mouth of the vngodly: The herte of a man chaungech bys countenance, wherper it be in good or euil. A chearfull countenance is a token of a good herte, for elles it is an hearde thyng to knowe the thoughte.

The xiiii. Chapter.

The offyce of the conge. Man is but a vayne thyng: happye is he that conuertyth in wysedome.

Blessed is the man & hath not fallen to the wozd of his mouth and is no priched with the conscience of synne. happye is he & hath no benynes in his mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becommeth not a conetous man & a nigarde to be rich: & what shoulde a nigarde do to gold? he & wythall bys carefullnes beapeth together unryghteously, gathereth for other folkes, and another man shall make good cheate wyth his goodes. he that is wiche vnto him selfe, howe shuld he be good vnto other men? howe can such one haue any pleasure of his goodes? There is nothyng woyle, then whē one dissauogeth him selfe & this is a rewarde of his wychednes. Yf he do any good he doth it not knowyng the of, & agaynst his wyll, & at the laste he declareth his vngyacyousnes. A nigarde hath a wyched eye he turneth away his face, & dyspysch his owne soule. A conetous mans eye hath neuer ynough in the possey of wychednes, vntill the tyme & he wyther away, & hath losse his owne soule.

A wyched eye spareth byrd, & there is scarcenes vpon his table. Wyth one do good to thy selfe of & thou hast, & geue the Lozde bys due offerynges. Remember that death tarieth not, and howe & the couenaut of & graue is shewed vnto & for & couenaut of thys worlde that dpe the death. & do good vnto thy frend before & dpe, & accordyng to thy abillitee reach out thine hande & geue vnto the poore. Be not dysapoynted of & good day & let not & possey of & good day ouerpass & what & not leaue thy trauails & labours vnto other men? In the deuyng of the deuytage geue & take & sanctifye thy soule. Allege & ryghteousnes before thy death, for in the bell there is no meate to fynde. All flesh shall fade away like grasse, & like a flosyng leafe in a grene tree. Some growe, some are caste downe euen so is & generacyō of all fleshes bloude: one cometh to an ende, another is bozne. All tran sitory thynges shal fayle at & laste, & the woze her therof shal go withal. Euerie chosen woyle shal be iustified, & he & medled wythal, shal haue honour therein. She shall byynge hym to honoure amonge hys neyghbours, and in the myddes of the congregacyō shall she open his mouth. With the spere of wysedome and vnderstandyng shall she fill hym, and clothe hym with the garment of glory. She shall heape the treasure of mysh and loye vpon hym and geue hym an euerylastyng name to herstage. For the men wyl not take holde vpon her: but suche as haue vnderstandyng, wyl mete her. (For the men shall not se her,) for she is farre from pryde and dysceite. Men that go aboute wylles, wyl not remembere her: but men of truthe shall be founde in her, and shall prosper euen vnto the beholdyng of God. Pryde is not semely in the mouth of the vngodly, for he is not sent of the Loide. For of God cometh wysdome, and the pryde shall stande by the wysdome of God, and shall be plenteous in a faythfull mouth, and the Loide shall geue her vnto hym.

15 Wape not thou: it is the Loideys saute that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thyng that God hateth. Wape not thou: he hath caused me to do wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodlye. God hateth al abhomyng of erroure: & they that feare God wyl loue none such. God made man from the begynnyng and sette hym in the hande of his counsell. He gaue his commaundementes and pceptes: yf thou wylt obserue the commaundementes, & heere acceptable faythfullnes for euer, they shall pserue the. He hath set water & fyre before the, reache oute thyne hande vnto whiche thou wylt. Before man is lyfe and death, good and euill: loke what hym lyfeth, shall be geuen hym. For the wysdome of God is greete and myghtie in power and beholdeth all men conpnually. The eyes of the Loide are vpo them that feare hym and he knoweth al the woyses of man. He hath commaunded no man to do vngodlye, neyther hath he geuen any man space to synne.

¶ Of vnhappy and mych chyliden. No man shal byde hym selfe from God. An exhortacion to the resourcyng of his fructyon.

DElyte not thou in the multitude of vngodlye chyliden, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Truste not to theyre lyfe, & regard not theyre labours for one sonne that feareth God, is better, then a thousande vngodlye. And better is it for a man to dye wythout chyliden, then to leaue behynde hym such chyliden as are vngodlye. For by one that hath vnderstandyng, maye a whole cytie be vpholden, but though the vngodlye be many, yet shall it be wasted thowowe them. Many such thynges hath myne eye sene & greater thynges then these haue I hearde w myne eares. In the congregacyon of vngodlye shall a fyre burne, & amonge vnfaythfull people shall the wrath be kyndled.

15 The olde gyauntes opynned no grace for theyre synnes, which were destroyed, trustyng to theyre owne strengthe. Neither spared he them, amonge whome Loth wyph was a straunger, but smote them and abhoyred them: because of the pryde of theyre woyses. He had no ppyte vpo them, but destroyed all the people, that were so stoute in synne. And for so muche as he ouersawe not the fyre hundreth thousande, that gathered them selues together in the hardenelle of theyre herte: it were maruell yf one byynge hardnecked, shoulde be fre. For mercye and wraethe is with him: he is bothe myghty to forgyue and to powre out dyspleasure. Lyke as his mercye is great, euen so is his punishment also, he iudgeth a man accordyng to hys woyses. The vngodly shall not escape in his synne, and the longe paycyence of hym that sheweth mercye, shall not byde behynde. Al mercye shall make place vnto eury man accordyng to the woithynnes of hys woyses, and after the vnderstandyng of hys pylgrynage.

Wape not thou: I wyl hyde my selfe fro God for who wyl thynke vpon me, fro aboute I shal not be knowe in so great an heape of people, for what is my soule amonge so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yee, the heauen of heauens the depe, the earth, and all ptherin is walbe moued at his pcesence, the mountaynes, the bylles, and the foundacyons of the earth shall quake for feare, when God vpsytereth them. These thynges doth no better vnderstand, but he vnderstandeth euery beere, and who vnderstandeth hys wapes? A man seyth his sorowes, and the moste part of his woyses are secrete. Who wyl declare the woyses of his ryghteousnes? Who shall be able to abyde them? For p couenaunt is farre fro some, & tryng out of men is the ende. He that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon suche thynges: but an vntowse and erronpous man casteth hys mynde vpon fooly the thynges.

My sonne, hearken thou vnto me, & learne vnderstandyng, & merke my woyses wyth thyne herte. I wyl geue the a sure doctryne, & playnly shall I instructe the: marke my woyses then in thyne herte: for in ryghteousnes of the spere do I speake of the wonders that God hath shewed amonge his woyses (I am p begynnyng). And in truthe do I shew p knowledge of hym) God hath set his woyses in good order fro the begynnyng and part of them hath he sundred from the other he hath garnished his woyses fro euerylastyng and theyre begynnynges accordyng to theyre generations. None of them hyndreth another, neither was any of the dysobedys vnto hys woyses. After this God looked vpon the earth and fylled it wyth his goodes. With al maner of lyfynge beastes hath he conered the ground, and they shall be turned vnto earth agayne.

And he sayd vnto them: beware of all vn ryghteous thynge. He gaue euery man also a commaundement concernynge his neyghboure.

They wayes are euere before hym, and are not from hys eyes. * He hath set a rule vpon euerye people, * but Israel is the Lozdes porcion. All they wothes are as f sunne in the lyght of God and hys eyes are alwaye lohyng vpon they wayes. All they vnyghteousnesse are man- fesse vnto hym, and all they wychednesse are open in hys lyght.

* The mercy that a man sheweth is as it were a purle with him, and the grace that is gauen to a ma pferueth him as the apple of an eye. * At the last shall be awake, and rewarde euery man vpon his deed, and shall turne them together in to the nethermoste partes of f earth. * But vnto them that wyl repent he hath gauen the way of ryghteousnesse. As for such as be weake, he co- fforteth them, sustreth them, and leueth the the porcy of the verite. * Turne then vnto f Lozde, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the Lozde, do the lesse offence, turne agayn vnto the Lozde, forsake thyne vnyghteousnesse, be an vt- ter enemye to abhomynacyon, learne to knowe the ryghteousnesse & iudgements of God, stande in the porcion that is set for the for the and in the prayer of the mooste hyge God. So in the por- cyon of the holy woide wyth such as be lpyng and geue thankes vnto God.

* Who wyl praysie the Lozde in the hel? Thyde not thou in the erreure of the vngodly, but geue hym thankes before deathe. As for the deade, thankfulness perysheth from hym as nothyng. Geue thou thankes in thy lyfe: yea, while thou arte lpyng, and whole shalte thou geue than- kes, and praysie God, and reioyce in hys mercy. O howe grente is the lonyng hyndnesse of the Lozde, and hys mercifull goodnesse vnto suche as turne vnto hym: For all thynge, maye not be in man: and why? the sonne of man is not im- mortall and he hath pleasure in the vanyte of wychednes. What is moze cleare then f dūner yet shall it sayle. O what is moze wyched then the thynge that fliche & bloude hath ymagined: and that same shalbe repoyed. The Lozde seyth the power of the hyge heauen, and all are but earth and ashes.

The xliii. Chapter.

Of the mercurious wothes of God, the mystry and werts chednes of man. Agayne God ought us not to complaine, wyse must be continually.

He lyneeth for euermore, * made f all thynge together. God one- lye is ryghteous, and remayneth a vnyctuous hyge for euere. * Who shalbe able to expresse the wothes of hym? Who wyl seke out the grounde of hys noble ac- tes? Who shall declare the power of hys great- nes? O who wyl take vpon hym to tel out his mercede? As for the wonderous wothes of the Lozde, ther maye nothyng be taken from them nothyng maye be put vnto them, nether maye the grounde of them be founde out. But when a man hath done his best, he must begyne agayn and whē he thynketh to come to an ende he must go agayne to his laboure. What is man? What to is he wothe? What good of euell can he do? * Of the nomb: a mans dayes be almost an hundred yere as such.

Lyke as diappes of rayne are vnto the see, & as a grauell stone is in comparyson of the sand: * so are these fewe yeres to the dayes eueryla- styng. Therefore is the Lozde pacyent wyth the and pasheth out hys mercede vpon the. He lathe and perceaueth the thoughtes and ymagynacions of they herte, that they were euell, therefore hea- yed he vpon hys mercifull goodnes vpon the, and thewed the the wothe of ryghteousnes. The mer- cye that a ma hath, reacheth to his neyghboure: but the mercy of God is vpon all fliche. He cha- geneth, he teacheth and nourtoureth: yea, euē as a shepherde turneth agayne his floche, so dothe he all them that receaue chastenynge, nourtour, and doctryne. * Mercifull is he vnto them, that stande in awe of his iudgements.

My sonne, when thou doest good, make no grudgyng at it: and whatsoeuer thou geueste speake no byscromfostable wothes. What not the betwe coole the hete: euē so is a word better the a gyfte. * Is not a frendlye woide a good honest gyfte? but a gracious man geueth them bothe. * A foole shall calle a man in the tette, and that roughly, and a gyfte of the upgarde putteth out the eyes. Set f ryghteousnes before thou come to iudgements. Learne before thou speake, and go to physyke of euere thou be speche: * examen & iudge thy selfe, before the iudgemente come, and so shalte thou fynde grace in the syghte of God. Humble thy selfe before thou be speche, & in tyme of thy dyscalle thewe the conuersacion.

* Let not to praye alwaye, and stande not in feare to be reformed vnto deathe, for f rewarde of God endureth for euere. Before thou prayeste prepare thy soule, and be not as one that temp- teth God. Thynke vpon the watryfull indy- nacyon that shalbe at the ende, and the houre of vnyngance, whē he shall turne away his face. * When thou hast ynowge remembre the tyme of hunger: and when thou art ryche, thynke vpon the pon the tyme of pouertye and scarcenes.

D Frome the moynynge vntyll the euyngge the tyme is chaunged, and all such thynges are done in the syght of God. A wyse man feareth God in all thynges. In the dayes of trespasyng he kepeth hym selfe from synne. A dyscrete man hath pleasure in wysedome, and he that synneth her, maketh much of her. They that haue had vnderstandynge, haue dealeth wysely in woordes, haue vnderstande the truth and righteousnes: and haue soughe out wyse sentences and iudgements. * Kolo we not thy lustes, but turne from thyne owne will. For yf thou geuest thy soule her despyres, it shal make thyne enemyes to laugh the to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in greate voluptuousnes, and medle not so muche with all. Make not to great chere of the thyng that thou hast wonne by aduantage, lest thou sale into pouertye, and haue nothyng in thy purse.

E The. xix. Chapter.

Wise and vnderstandynge men to pouerte, in the wordes must thou be by thyselfe. The difference of the wysedome of God and man, whereby thou mayest knowe what is in man. For reueren must be vnto without angre.

Laborynge man that is geuen vnto dychonchennesse, shall not be wyche and he that maketh not muche of small thynges, shall fall by lytle and lytle. * Wyne and women make wyse men rennagates, and put men of vnderstandynge to reproue, and he that companyeth aduoucerers, shal become a wyched man. Woordes and woymes shall haue hym to heritage, yee, he shal be set vp to a great example, and his soule shal be roted out of the number. * He that is hasty to geue credence, is lyghtly mpyded, and dothe agaynst hym selfe. Whoso reioyseth in wychednes, shal be punyshed: he that hateth to be reformed: his lyfe shal be shortened, and he that abhorreth bawlynge of woordes, quencherth wychednes. He that offendeth agaynst his owne soule shall repente it: and he that reioyseth in wychednes, shal be punyshed.

Rechele not a wyched and churly the word wyse, and thou shalte not be vnderdred. Shewe thy secretes nether to frend nor foe, and yf thou hast offended, tell it not. For he shall herken vnto the and marke the, and when he findeth oppoortunite, he shal hate the, and so shal he be alway aboute y. * Yf thou hast heard a woide agaynst thy neyghboure: let it be dede withyn the and beure, thou shalt haue no herme thereby. A sole traunapeth with a word, like as a woman that is payned with berpnge of a chylde. Lyke as an arrowe shot in a dogges thygh, so is a woide in a foolles herte. * Tell thy frende his faute least he be ignozant, and saye: I haue not done it, or yf he haue spoken: that he do it no more. Reproue thy neyghboure that he kepe his tonge, and yf he haue spoken, that he say it no more.

Tell thy neyghboure his faute, for ofte tymes an offence is made, and geue no credence to euery woide. A man calleth he sometyme with his tonge, but not with his will. * For what is he, that hath not offended in his tonge, geue thy neyghboure warnynge, befoze thou threaten him, and geue place vnto the lawe of the Lorde. The feare of God is all wysedome, and he that is a ryghteous man, kepeth the law. As for the doctryne of wychednesse, it is no wysdome and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wychednesse and abhominacyon and blasphemynge of wysedome. A symple man of smal vnderstandynge: that feareth God is better then one that hath much wysedome, and transgresseth the lawe of the hyghdest. A craftie soile man can be wyse: but he is vnryghteous, and wyth gyfte he wasteth the open and manifest lawe. A wyched man can behaue hym selfe humbly, and can duche wyth his heade, yet is he but a disceuerer wythin he hideth his face: and dysguyleth it: and because he shuld not be knowne, he prouenteth the.

And though he be so weake that he can do no harme, yet when he maye finde oppoortunite he shall do some euell. A man maye be knowne by his face, and one that hath vnderstandynge maye be perceaued by the looke of his countenance. * A mans garment, laughter, and going declareth what he is.

E The. xx. Chapter.

Of the correction and repentance. Of the gyfte of the wyse man, and of the sonne, of synges.

Some man reioyseth his neyghboure ofte tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some man holdeth his tongue and he is wyse and dyscrete. It is much better to geue warning and to reprove, then to beate euell wyll: for he that knowlegeth hym selfe openly, shal be preserved from hurt and destruction. Lyke as when a gyled man chojowre desyre and luste despyeth a mayden, euen so is it with hym that vseth violence: and vnryghteousnes in the lawe. O how good a thyng is it, a man that is reprovod to the openly his repentance, for so shalt thou escape wyllfull synne.

Some man kepeth seclence, and is founde wise, but he that is not ashamed, what he sayth is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tongue, because he hath not the vnderstandynge of the language, and some man kepeth seclence, waiting a conueniente tyme. * A wyse man wyll holde his tongue tyll he se oportunitie, but a wanton and vndyscrete bodye shall regard no time. He that vseth many woordes, shall hurte his owne soule and he that taketh auctorytete vpon him vnryghteously, shal be hated. Some man hath ofte tymes proserpeth in wyched thynges. Agayne some man getteth much, and hath harme and losse. There is some gyfte, that is nothyng worthe. Agayne, there is some gyfte, whosere ward is double. Some man getteth a fall for beinge to proude, and some cometh to woorthynesse from lowe estate. Some man bryeth much for a lytle pryce, and some must paye for it leuen folde.

* A wyse man with his woordes maketh hym selfe to be loued, but the fauour of foolles, shal be poured oute. The gyfte of the vnwyse shal do the no good, for his eyes are leuenfold. * He shall geue lytle, and say he geueth much: he openeth with his mouth and cryeth out, as it were one that crieth out wynn. To day he leueth, so morrow he shall be agayne. and such a man is to be hated. The folke sayd I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for al my good dedes: yet, euen they that eate my breade, speake no good of me. O howe ofte, & of howe many shal he be laughed to scorn: he shall haue a more perillous fall by such wordes then if he fell vpon the ground: euen so shal the fall of the wyched men come hastily. In the mouth of hym that is vntaught: are manye vnconuenient and vnnete wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be allowed at the mouth of the folke, for he speaketh not in due season.

C Some man synneth not because he hath not wherewithall, and in his heart he shal be stinged. Some man ther is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwyse bodys sake destroyeth he it, & with accepting of perill shal he vndo hym selfe. Some man promyseth his frende a gyfte for verie shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for naught. A lye is a withed wom: in a man, yet shal it be eue in the mouth of the vnwyse. A thre is better, then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they both shal haue of struccyon to veritye. The conuycions of liers are vnbonest, and their shame is euer with them.

Styrpe and wrongous dealinge shal wast awaye a mans goodes, & thowre wyche a rych house shal be brought to naught so the ryches of the proude shal be rote out. * The praper of the poze goeth oute of the mouth: and cometh vnto the eares, and his vengeance (or defence) shal come and shal be hastily. Whoso hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodly personne, but he that feareth God, wyl remember hym selfe. A myghty man is knowen as a rof by his tonge, but he that hath vnderstandyng, perceaueth that he shal haue a fall.

Whoso buyeth his house with other mens cosse, is lyke one that gathereth stones in wynter. * The congregacion of the vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, their ende is a flamme of fyre. The waye of the vngodlye is set with stones, but in theyr ende is hel, darchenes, and paynes. He that keepeth the lawe, wil hold fast the vnderstandyng therof: and the ende of the feare of God is wysedome and vnderstandyng. He that is not wyse, wyl not be taught in good but the vnwyse man aboundeth in wychednes and where bytternes is, there is no vnderstandyng. The knowlege of the wyse shal flowe lyke water that renneth ouer, and his counsell is lyke a fountrayne of lyfe.

The herte of a foole is lyke a broken vessell he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstandyng heareth a wyse worde: he shal commend it, and make much of it. But if a voluptrous man hear it, he shal haue no pleasure therein, but cast it be bynde his backe. The talkyng of a foole is lyke an heuie burthen by the waye but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doubte is in the congregacion, it is asked at the mouth of the wyse, and they shal ponder his wordes in their hertes. Like as is a poult that is destroyed, euen so is wysedome vnto a foole. As for the knowlege of a vnwyse, it is but darthe wordes. Doctryne is vnto him that hath no vnderstandyng, euen as letters about his fete, and like manicles vpon his right hand. * A foole liffeth vpon his voyce with laughter, but a wyse man shal scarce laugh secrete.

Learnynge is vnto a wyse man a Jewell of golde, and lyke an armelet vpon his egebe arme. A folthe mans fote is lone in his neyghbours house, but one that hath experyence, shal be a shamed at the person of the mightie. A foole wil pepe in at the window into the house, but he that is wel nourtered, wil stand wyth out. A folthe man standeth herkenyng at the doze, but he that is wyse wyl be ashamed.

The lypes of the vnwyse wil be tellinge folthe things, but the wordes of such as haue vnderstandyng, shal be wayed in the balance. The bert of soles is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is their bert. When the vngodlye curseth the blasphemers he curseth his owne soule. * A praper accuser of other men shal defyle his owne soule, and be hated of every man: (but he that keepeth his tong and is discrete, shal come to honour).

daughter shall be lytle regarded. A wyse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she commeth to dishonour, byngeth her father in denynesse. A daughter that is paste shame, dishonoureth both her father and her husband, the vngodly that regard her, but they both shall dyspyle her. The playng of musycke is not mete wher heuines is: eue so is correction & doctrine of wysdome euer vnpleasunt vnto fooles.

B Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potcherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man oute of an heape slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, which speaketh to one that is a slepe. Whiche he hath tolde his tale, he saith: what is þ matter? When one dieth, lamentacion is made for hym: because the lyght fayleth hym, euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstandyng. Make but lytle wepyng because of the dead: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is worse then the death. Seuen daies doo men mourne for hym that is dead, but lamentacion ouer the vnwyse & vngodly shal endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

C Take not muche with a foole, and goo not with hym þ bath no vnderstandyng. Beware of hym lest it turne the to frenemye, and thou shalte not be despyled with his synne. Depart from hym, and thou shalte fynde reste and shalt not be dya wen backe into his foolishnes. What is deuyer then leade? And what shal be a foole be called ellys but leader. * Wande, salte, and a lumpe of yron is easie to beare, the an vnwyse foolyshe, and vngodly man. Lyke as the bande of woode bound together in the foundacyon of the house cannot be lowed, euen so is it woth þ herte that is established in the thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse shal neyther feare nor be offended at any tyme.

D Lyke as a fayer plastered wall in a wynter house, and an hye buildeyng, maye not abyde the wynde and froyme: euen so is a foolles herte a traype in his ymaginacyon, he feareth at enerye thyng, and can not endure. (A wauerynge herte in the ymaginacyon of a foole wyl not euer stand in a tye, but he that abideth in the commaundementes of God, wyl alway feare.) He þ nuyppeth a mans eye byngeth forth teares, and he that ppyketh the harte, byngeth forth meanyng and thought. Who so calleteth a stone at þ bydes frayeth them awayne: and he that blasphemeth his frende, byngeth the frende hyppre though thou dreyest a sword at thy frend yet dyspaire not, for thou mayst come again to thy frende. If he speake lowely, feare not for he maye be agreed together again, excepte it be þ thou blasphemest hym, disdain hym, open his secretes and wound hym trayterously for al such thynges shal dryue awayne a frende.

E Be saythfull vnto thy neygbboure in hys pouertie, that thou mayst reioyce with hym also in his prosperite. Forde thysalte vnto hym in the tyme of his trouble, that þ mayst be happy with hym in his heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the oven before the fyre euen so euell wordes, rebuke and threatenynge go before bloudsheddyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyl not hede my face fro hym though he shulde do me harme.

Who soeuer heareth it shal beware of hym. * Who shal set a watch before my mouth and a sure seale vpon my lippes, þ I fall not with them, and that my tonge destroy me not.

The xxiii. Chapter.

A prayer against the pythe, lecherie, glotony, & other vices, which are the vices of the body. And the vices of the mind. And the vices of the heart.

Lord, father and gouernoure of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymaginacyon and counsell. O let me not fall in suche reprofe. Who wyl kepe my thought with the scourge, & the doctrine of wysdome in myne herte: that he spare not myne ygnorance, þ I fall not with them lest myne ygnorances increase, that myne offences be not many in number, and that my synnes excude not, lest I fall before myne enemies and so my aduersary reioyce. O Lord: thou father & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymaginacyon. O let me not haue a proude looke but turne awayne all voluptuousnesse from me. Take from me the lustes of þ body, let not þ desires of vncleennes take hold vpon me, & geue me not ouer into an vnshamefast & obstinate minde.

Hear me (O pechylden) I wyl geue you a doctrine, howe you shal order youre mouthe who so kepeth it, shal not perper the thow his lippes, nor be hurte thow he wyched wordes. As for the synner, he shal be taken in his owne vanprie: he that is proude and cursed, shal fall therein. * Let not thy mouth be accustomed to swearing, for in it there are many failes. Let not the namyng of God be continually in thy mouth: (and medle not with the names of saintes, for thou shalte not be excused of them) for lyke as a seruant which is ofte punished cannot be wythoute some soore, euen so what so euer he be that sweareth & nameth God shal not be cleane pouged from synne: A man þ vseth muche swearing, shal be fylled with wychednes, and the plage shal neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his tante shal be vpon hym, if he knowlage not his synne, he maketh a double offence, and if he sweare in vayne, he shal not be founde ryghteous: for his house shal be full of plagis.

The wordes of þ sweater byngeth deeth (God graunte þ it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, eschewe all such, and lye not welterynge in synne. * Use not thy mouth to vn honest and fylthy talking, for in it is þ worde of synne. Remember thy father & thy mother when thou arte set among grea men: lest God forget the in theyr synne, & lest thou doynge in thy custome suffer rebuke, and wyche not to haue bene doane & so curse the day of thy natypte. * The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphempe, wyl neuer bee reformed all the dayes of hys lyfe. To synne compassed about with darchenelle, the waller couer me, no bodye seyth me: whome nebe I to feare? The highest wyl not remembre my syn nes. He vnderstandeth not that hye eyes see all thynges, for all such feare of men dyueth away the feare of God from hym: for he feareth only the eyes of men, and consydereth not y the eyes of the Lorde are cleere then the sunne, behol dyng all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lohyng euen to mens hertes in se cret places. The Lorde God knowe all thynges as euer they wer made, & after they be brought to passe also he loyeth vpon the all. * The same man shal be openly punished in the strettes of sy cye: and shal be chased abroade lyke a younge doke foale: and when he thynketh leaue vpon it, he shal be tak. Thus shal he be put to shame of every man, because he wolde not vnderstand the feare of the Lorde. And thus shal it gooe also with euery wyfe, that leaueh her husband and getteth enderptauce by a strange mari age. * Kysse he hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the hyghest. Secondely, he hath forsaken her owne husband. Thyrzoly he hath playde the whoze in aduouerie, and gotten her chylde by an other man. She shal be brought oute of the congregacyon, and her chylde shal be lokt vpon. Her chylde shal not take roote and as for frute, her brayches shal byng for none. A shameful repoze shal she leaue behynd her, and her dishonoure shal not be put oute.

And they that remayne, shal know that there is nothyng better then the feare of God: and y there is nothyng sweeter then to take hede vnto the commaundementes of the Lorde. A great wo wyffe is to folow the Lorde, for longe lyfe shal bee receyued of hym.

The xxiii. Chapter.

A praye of wyfdomes prayyng forth of the mouth of God.
for hye wyfdom and yf. as where she retyeth.

3 W yfdomes shal praye her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the myddeste of hye people: In the congregacyons of the hyghest shal she open her mouth, and tryumphe in the beholding of his power: In the myddest of her people shal she bee exalted and wondred at in the holyfultelle. In the multitude of the chosen she shal be commended, and among such as be blessed she shal be prayled, and shal saie: I am come oute of the mouth of the hyghest, lyfthe boone before all creatures. I caule the lyght that shal not to aryse in the heauen, & couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwelling is about in the hegyth, and my seate is in sy ller of sy cloude. I my self alone haue gone round aboute the compasse of heauen and pearced the grounde of the depe: I haue walked in the flou des of the sea, and haue stande in all landes: my dominyon is in euery people and in euery nac yon, and with my power haue I troden downe sy detes of all, both hye and low.

In all these thynges also I soughte reste, 23 and a dwelling in some enberptauce. So the creator of all thynges gaue me a commande mente: and he that made me, appointed me a ta bernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwelling be in Jacob, and thyne enberptauce in Israel, and roote thy selfe among my chosen. * I was created from the begynnyng, and before the woylde, and shal not leaue of vnto the woylde to come. * In the holpe habitacyon haue I set ued before hym, and so was I stablised in sy on. * In the holpe cytie rested I in lyke maner: and in Jerusalem was my power: I tooke roote in an honozable people euen in the porteyon of sy Lorde and in his herpytage, and kepte me in the fulnes of the dayntes. I am set vpon an hye lyke a Cedar vpon Lybanus, and as a Cyperes tree, vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted lyke as a Palme tree in Cadex, and as a Roole plante in Jericho. As a sapie Olive tree in the feld, & am exalted lyke as a Plantayn tree by the wa ter syde. I haue geuen a smell in the strettes, as the Cynamon and Raine, that hath so good a saoure: pea, a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Wyffe of the beste.

I haue made my dwellynge to smell as it were of Rosen, Galbanum, of Cloues, and In cense, and as Lybanus when it is not bewen downe, and my odoure is as the pure Balmie.
As the Terpynt haue I stretched out my brail ches, and my brayches are the brayches of ho noure and louyng saoure. * As the vyne haue I broughte forth fruite of swete saoure and my floures are the frute of honoure and ry ches. I am sy mother of bewtie, of loue, of feare, of knowlage, and of holy hope. * In me is all grace and lyfe and truethe. In me is all boope of lyfe and vertue.

O come vnto me all ye that be despyzous of me, and fyl y our seires with my frutes: for my syryte is sweeter then honye: & so is myne enber ptauce more then the honye combe: the reme dyance of me endureth for euer moare. They that eate me, shal haue the moare hunger, and they that dyslike me, shal thyrste the moare.
Whoso herkeneth vnto me shal not come to co fusyon and they that worke in me shal not of fende. They that make me to beknownen, shal haue euertlastyng lyfe. I

All these thynges are the booke of lyfe, the couenante of the hyghest, and the knowlage of the truth. * Moses commaunded the law in the preceptes of ryghteousnesse for an heritage vn to the house of Jacob, and committed the promp ses vnto Israel. * Oute of Dauid his seruau be ordeined to rayse vp a moost myghty hyng syryng in the seate of honoure for euer moare.
* This sylled with wyfdomes lyfe as the floud the newe fruytes are growynge.

Thys byngeth a plenteous understandynge lyke Euphrates: and fylleth it vp, as Joy dayn in the tyme of harvest. This maketh nurture to breake forth as the lyght, and as the water sydon in the harvest. The syde hath not knowen her perfectiye, no more shall the laste seke oute the grounde of her. For her thoughte is fuller then the sea, & her counsell is profounder then the greates deepe.

I wysdome have caste oute floudes. I am as a great waterbooke oute of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Dojre, and as a water condite am I come oute of the garden of pleasure. I sayde I wyll water the garden of my ponge plantes and syl ffrue of my birth: so my waterbooke became excedyng greates, and my ryuer appoyched vnto ffece. For I make doctryne to be vnto all men as light: as ffaire morning, & I shall make it to be euer ffecler. I wyll pearle thow all the lower partes of the earth. I wyll loke vpon all suche as be a slepe, and lighten al them that put theyr trust in the Loyde. I shall yet powre out doctryne, lyke as prophete & leaue it vnto suche as seke a ffeer wysdome, & their generacions shall I neuer sayle, vnto the helyeuerlastyng world. * Scholde how that I haue not laboured for my selfe only, but for all them that seke after the truth.

Eccl. xxi. Chapter.

Of the thynges whiche pleseth God, and of them whiche he hateth. Of vyce thynges that he hateth to be suspecte: and of the tyme, whiche of the malice of a woman.

These thynges there are, ffrim spyrte sanouret, whiche be also alowed before God and men. * The wyte of brethren: ffrone of neyghbours, * a man and wife ffragreed wel together. These thynges there be whiche my soule hateth, & I vetterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A poore man ffris proude. A rich man that is a lyer, and an olde body ffridote, and is vnchaste. If thou hast gathered nothing in thy yowth what wylt thou fynde the in thine age? How pleasant a thyng is it when grape headed men are discrete, and when the elders can geue good counsaile? How comelye a thyng is wysdome vnto aged men: pea, understandyng and counsell is a glayous thyng. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experyence & the feare of God in theyr mouth.

There be vyce thynges, whiche I haue indged in mye herte to be happye, and the tenebe wyl I tell forth vnto men with mye tongue. A man that wylle be luyth, in the hope of his children, and seeyeth the fall of his enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an housewyfe of understandyng, * and that hath not fallen with his tongue, and that hath not bene laine to seue such as are vnmyte for hym. Well is hym, that synneth a faythfull frende, and well is hym, whiche rather of wysdome to an ease ffrereth hym. Oh ow greates is he, that synneth wysdome & knowlanger. Per is he not adone hym, ffrereth the Loyde. The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto who it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shall he be lykened, ffrereth it fast: The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue and the begynnyng of faith is to cleane fast vnto it. The bruyelle of the herte is all the punishmet and the wickednes of a woman goth a boue of All punishment and plage is nothyng in cōparyson of the plage of the herte, euen so all wickednes is nothyng, to the wickednes of a woman.

Whattoeuer happeneth vnto a man is nothyng in cōparyson of it, that his cruel wylers do vnto hym: & all vengeance is nothyng to the vengeance of thine enemye.

There is not a more wyched head then the head of the serpent, and there is no wyath aboue the wyath of a woman. * I wyll rather dwell with a Lyon and Dragon, then to kepe house with a wyched wyfe. The wychednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, she shall muske her countenance as it were a beate, & as a lacke shall she thewe it among the neyghbours. Her husband is brought to shame among his neyghbours & when he heareth it, it maketh hym to fyge. All wickednes is but lytle to ffr wickednes of a woman, ffr porcion of ffr vngodly shall fall vpon her.

Lyke as to clime vpon a sandy way is to ffrere of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a ffr quyet man. * Loke not to narrowly vpon the bewte of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desire to ward her. The wyath of a woman is dishonoure and great confusyon. If a woman gett the mastery, then is she contrary to her husband. A wicked wyfe maketh a sojourn herte, an he upe countenance, and a deed wound. * Weake handes and feeble knees is a woman ffr her husband is not the better for. Of ffr woman came the begynnyng of synne: and thow her we all are deede. Seue thy water no passage, no not a litle: neither geue a wyched woman her wyl. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confound the in the lyght of thine enemyes. Cut her of the from thy flesh ffr she do not alway abuse the.

Of the pany of a man woman. Of the feare of the thynges, & of the feare of the thynges and the feare of the thynges that causeth ffrone, & of the feare of the thynges which moueth in the.

A pype is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nombre of his yeres shall be double. In honest woman maketh her houshold a topfull man, and she shall fylle the yeres of his life in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gyfte whiche shall be genen for a good porcion vnto suche as seare god: Whether a man be rich or poore he maye haue euer a merre herte, and a cherefull countenance. There be the thynges that my herte feareth, & my face is afrayed of the fourth. Treason in a cytie, a sedycious people, and noisome tonges, all these are deuyer then death. But when one is gylous ouer his wyfe, it byngeth payne and sorowe vnto the herte and a woman ffrereth out all thynges, is a scourge of the tongue. When one hath an euell wyfe, it is as when an onlye paye of Oren muste he aske forgeuenece of his synnes? If he that ter is the wrath, and the longer the stryfe endu-

* The flanderer and double tongued is curst, for many one þ her frendes setteche at varpauer. The thiede tonge hath disquered many one, and byuen them from one lande to another. Stronge cyties of the erthe hath it broke downe, and ouerthrowen the houses of greete men. (The strengthe of þ people hath it brought downe, and bene the decaye of myghty nations.) The thiede tonge hath caste out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their labours whoso herkeneth vnto suche, shall neuer fynde reste, and neuer dwell safelye. The stroke of the robde maketh adders, but the stroke of þ tongue smyteth the bones in sonder. There be many þ haue perished with the sword: but many more haue the tongue.

C Well is hym þy keeper from an euell tonge: and commeth not in the angre thereof, whiche hath weth not the yoke of such, & is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the yoke thereof is of pion, & the bande of it of kele. The death ther-of is a depe euell death: hell were better for oñe then suche a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not opprelle them that feare God. And the flamme thereof maye not burne them. Suche as for sake the Loyde, shall suffer therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to queneche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, & deuoure them as a leopard. Thou heddest thy goodes wth thones, why dost thou not rather make dozes and barres for thy mouth? Thou wapest thy golde and syluer, why dost thou not waue the wodes also vpon þy balauance? Beware that thou slyde not in thy tonge, & so fall before thine ene-myes, that lase waite for thee, (and thy fall bee incurable, euen vnto death.)

Chapter.

Of those who ought to lend our money, and efforts. Of a faithful man suffering for his friends. Of the nation's popularity.

Cho so wylly thebe mercede * let hym lende vnto hye neyghboure : and he that is able, let hym kepe the commaundement. Lend vnto thy neygh-boure in tyme of his nede, and pay thou thy neyghboure again in due season. Kepe thy wordes and deale faithfully with hym, and thou walste alway yefynge the thyng that is necessarye for the. There haue bene manye, that when a thyng was lente them, rekened it to be pounde, and made them trauayle and labour that had helped them. Whyle they receyue any thyng, they kille the handes of suche as geue them, for they neyghbours good they humble theyr voyce. But when they shoulde pay again they kepe it backe, and geue euell wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the tyme : and though he be able, yet geueth he scarce the halfe again, and rekeneth forther to be found. And if he withholde not his money, yet hath he an enemye of hym, and that vnderstond.

He paiteth hym with cursing and rebuke and geueth hym euell wordes for his good dede.

There be manye one whiche are not glad for to lende, nor because of euell, but they feare to lese the thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pacyence with the simple, and withholde not mercy from hym. helpe the poore for the commaunde mentes sake, & let hym not go emptye, from þ because of his needlite. Lese thy money for thy by order and neyghbours sake, and burpe it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth.

* Gather thy treasure after the commaundements of the hygheste, and so shall it bring the more profyte then golde: † Laye vpon thy almshouse in the hande of the poore, and it shall helpe the from all euill.

* A mans almshouse is as a purse with hym, & shall hepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye and after ward shall it arise and pay every man his rewarde vpon his head. It shall fyght for the agaynst thynne enemies, better then y^e wynde of a gyraunt, or speare of the myghtye.

A good honest man is suretye for his neygh-bour, but a wyched person letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshyppe of thy sure-tye, for he hath gruen his soule for the. The vngodly despycech þ good orde of his suretye and the vnhankfull and pgnorante leauech hys suretye in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neyghboure: and when he hath losse his honestye he shall forsake hym. Suretyeshyppe hath destroyed many a ryche man, and remoued them as the waues of the sea. Wychie people hath it dyen a wape, and caused them to wander in straunge countres. In vngodly man trafgressing the comaundment of the Lorde, shall fall into the suretyeshyppe: and though he force hym selfe to get oute, yet shall he fall into the iudgement. Helpe thy neyghbour out after thy power: and beware, that thou thy selfe fall not in such dette. * The chiefe thing that hepech in thy lyfe, is water, and breade, clothyng, and lodgyng

The booke.

lodgyng, to leaue thy name.

Better it is to haue a poxe luyng in a mans owne house, then delicate fare among straunge men. * We it lytle or muche that thou hast, holde the contente wechall, and thou shalt not be blamed as a vaga bounde: for a miserable lyfe is it to go from house to house: & where a man is strended, he dare not open his mouth. Though he one be lodged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vnwoorthy, and heare many bitter rough wordes, namelie thus: So thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy self and feede me also of that thou hast. A way, thou straunger, so that he regardeth his honoure no more, my brother cometh into my house, and so he telleth hym the necessitie of his house.
These thynges are heuy to a man, & bath vnder standyng: namelie, the forbidding of the house, and that the lender casteth hym in the teeth.

The xxx. Chapter.

*Of the correction of the chylde. Of the chastitee of both.
Worth is better then a forsworn lyfe. Of the chastitee of both.
Worth is better then a forsworn lyfe. Of the chastitee of both.*

Who so loneth hys chylde, & holdeth hym styll vnder correccion that he maye haue tope of hym afterwarde and p he grope not after his neygh-bours doers. * He that teacheth his sonne, shall haue tope in hym, and nede not to be ashamed of hym among his acquaintance.
Whoso enfourmeth and teacheth his sonne, gre-ueth the enemye: and before his frendes he may tope of hym. Though the father dye yet is he as though he were not dead: for he hath lefte one behynde hym that is lyke hym. In his lyfe he saue hym and had tope in hym, and was not sory in his death: neyther was he ashamed before his enemyes. For he lefte behynd hym an auen-ger against his enemyes and a good doer vnto the frendes. For the lyfe of chylde he shall bynde the woundes together, and hys herte is grieved at euery crye. An vntamed hysse will be heard, and a wanton chylde wylde wyfyll.
If thou byng vpon thy sonne deli-cately, he shall make the aspyde: and if thou playe with hym, he shall byng the to beuynesse. Laugh not with hym, lest thou wepe with hym also, & least thy teeth be set on edge at the laste.

Better hym no liberty in his pouthe, and excuse not hys folpe. Howe doth hys necke whyll he is yong, byt hym vpon the sydes, while he is yet but a chylde, lest he waxe stubburne, and geue homoz force of the, and so shalt thou haue beuynesse of soule. Teache thy chylde and be diligente therein, lest it be to thy shame.
Better is the poore byng hole and strong then a man to be riche & not to haue his belch: helth and wellfare is aboue all goide, and a whole body aboue all treasure. There is no ryche-esse aboue a sounde bodie, and no tope aboue the tope of herte. Wealth is better then a wyetched lyfe and eternal rest better then coriunall richenelle.
The good thynges are put in a close mouthe are ly he as when meate is laid vpon the graue.

Chat god doth the offeryng vnto an ydol
* For he can neyther eate, taste, nor smell. Curm so is he that is chased of the Lorde, and beareth the rewarde of iniquyte. He seeth with his eyes and groweth like a golden man, that lieth with a bypyn & lygeth. * Seue not ouer thy minde into beuynesse, and be not thy selfe in thyne owne counsaile. * The tope and cherefulness of the herte is the lyfe of man, and a mans gladnes is the ploggyng of his daies. Loue thine owne soule, and comforte thyne herte: as for sojowre and beuynesse, bypyn it farre from the. * For he uynelle hath slayne many a man, and byngeth no prosper. yrie, and anger wosten the dayes of the lyfe: carefulness and sojowre byng a ge-fore the tyme. Vnto a mery herte euery thyng hath a good taste that he eateth.

The xxxi. Chapter.

What oughte to geue deligence to beuynesse. Of them that take paine to geue a poyse. The poyse of a rich man without a faute. The poyse of a poore man without a faute.

Rauall and carefulness for riches teareth awaye the slepe, and maketh the fleshe to consume. When one lyeth and taketh care he awaketh euer vpon lyke as a great sychenes byetheth the slepe.
The ryche hath great labour in gathering his riches together, & then with the pleasure of his riches he taketh his rest, and is refreshed. But whoso labourerth, & prospererth not, he is poore and though he leaue of, yet is he a begger. He loneth ryche-esse, shall not be satisfied: & whoso foloweth corrupcion, shall haue ynough therof.
* Many one are come in greates mystfortune by the reason of gold, & haue founde their destru-cion before them. It is a tree of fallynge vnto them that offer it vpon, and all suche as be folpe fall therein. Blessed is the ryche which is found without blemish, and hath not gone after gold nor h: ped in money & treasures. Where is there suche a one, and we shall comende hym, and cal hym blessed: for great thynges doeth he among his people. Whoso is tryed and founde perfect in suche thynges, shall be comended and praised.
Whom y god offend, and hath not offended: Whom could do euell and hath not done it: The foze shall his good be stablished & the hole con-gregacion shall declare his almeses. If thou lye at a great mans table, open not thy mouth wide vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remembze that an euell eye is a wyetche.

What thyng created is worse then a wyet-ched eye: the foze wyetche it before euery mans face: Laye not thyne hande vpon euery thyng that thyne eye seeth, and styue not with hym in thy dill. * Wonder by thy selfe, what thy neighbour would saye haue, if hee by discrete in e-uery poynte. Eate the thyng that is set before the manerpe, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to much, lest thou be abhorred. Leauethou of spyt of al, because of neurtour, lest thou be be whome no man maye sacisfy, whiche maye turne to thy decaye. When thou lyest among many men, crache not thine hande out firste of all. * Howe well content is a wyet man with a lytle wynt: so that in slepe thou shalte not be syche therof, nor fele any payn. A sweete wbol-some some slepe shal ſuche a one haue, and ſele no inwarde grete. He riſeth vp by tymes in the morning & is wel at eaſe in him ſelfe. But an vni-table eater ſlepeþ vniquietly, & hath ach & payne of the body. If thou ſeaſteſt & thou haſt eaten to much aryle, go thy way, caſt it out of thy ſto-mache, & take thy reſt: and it ſhall eaſe the, ſo thou ſhalte haue no ſickenelle vnto thy body.

C My ſonne, heare me, and diſſpyſe me not, and at the laſt thou ſhalt ſynde as I haue tolde the. * In all thy woꝛkes be diligent and quicke ſo that there no ſpykenes happet vnto the. * Who ſo is lyberall in dealinge oute his meate many men ſhal bleſſe hym, and prayſe hym with their lyppes: and the ſame is a ſure token of hys loue and faythfulneſſe. But he that is vnfaythful in meate, the hole cꝛype ſhall complayne of him: & that is a ſure experience of hys infydelitye and wickedneſſe. * Be not thou a wyne bybber, ſo wyne hath deſtroyed manie a man. The ſpye proueth the hardy pꝛon, euſe ſo doth wyne pꝛoue the heres of the pꝛoude, when they be dꝛonken.

D * Wyne ſoberly dꝛonken, quencheth the lyfe of man. If thou drinckeſt it meſurably, & ſhalt be temperate. What lyfe is it that maye continue without wyne? (What taketh away lyfe: euery death.) Wyne was made from the begynnyng to make men glad, & not ſo dꝛonken nes. Wyne meſurably dꝛonken is a reſponſe of the ſoule & body. (A meſurable dꝛynkyng is helth to ſoule & body.) But yf it be dꝛonke with exceſſe, it maketh byternes and ſojoyneth vnto mynde. Dꝛonkenneſſe filleth the mynde of the ſo-lyſhe with ſhame & ruyne, minyſheth ſtrength and maketh woꝛdes. * Rebuke not thy neygh-bour at the wyne, and diſſpyſe hym not in hys myſte. Geue hym no diſſpyſefull woꝛdes, and pleaſe not vpon hym with contrary ſaynges.

The xxiii. Chapter.

Of the deſcription and prynciple of the preacher, and of the wyſe, of the ſure, ſayth, and conſideres in God.

X If thou be made a Ruler, & pryncipe not thy ſelfe therein, but be thou, as one of the people. * Take diſſygence care for them and looke well thereto: and when thou haſt done al thy dutye, ſet ſ downe, that thou mayeſt be mercyt wꝛth them, and receiue a crowne of honoure. Take wyſely and domeſtly, ſo wyſedome becommeth the ryghter well. Hynde not myſhye. Speake not where there is no audience: & poure not forth wyſedome oute of tyme, as an inpoſtunye. Lyke as the Carbuncle ſtone ſhineth that is ſet in golde ſo dothe a ſonge gaꝛn the wyne ſeaſte: and as the Amaraude that is ſet in golde, ſo is the ſweetneſſe of Gylſhe, by the myſte of wyne.
(Geue care and be ſtyll, and ſo thy good be-hauour thou ſhalt be loued.)

Thou ſonge man ſpeake that becommeth the, and that is profitable, and yet ſeaſte when thou art wyſe aſked. Cōſpꝛende muche with ſeue woꝛdes. In manye thynges be as one that is ignoꝛant: geue care and holde thy tonge all. If thou be amonge men of byer auerſyſe, deſpyſe not to compare thy ſelfe vnto them: and when an eldꝛ ſpeaketh, make not thou manie woꝛdes therein. Before the thonder goeth ſighteninge, and before nurloure and ſhamefaſhnes goeth lone and ſauoure. Stande vp by tymes, and be not the laſte: but get the home ſoone and there take thy paſſyng, and do what thou wilt ſo thou do none euell, and deſpyſe no man: but ſo all thynges geue thꝛanchies vnto hym that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

Who ſeaſteth the Loꝛde, wyl receiue his doctryne: and they that get them to him by tymes, ſhall ſynde grace, he that ſeeketh the lawe, ſhall be ſylled wꝛth all: As ſo hym that is but ſayned, he wyl be offended therat. They that ſeaſt the Loꝛde ſhall ſynde the iudgement and the righteſcouneſſe ſhall be kindled as a lꝑghte.
An vngodlye man wyl not be reſourmed, but can helpe him ſelfe with the example of oðer in hys purpoſe. A man of vnderſtandynge diſpi-ſeth no good counſail: but a wyld and proude bodye hath no feare. (Pece, euery when he hath dealt rathlye with another man, but his owne dopnges ſhall be hys rebuke.) My ſonne do no thyng without aduſement, ſo ſhall it not re-pente the after the dede. So not in ſ way where thou mayeſt fal, nor where thou mayeſt ſtumble agaynſt the ſtone. Geue not thy ſelfe into a laborious ſlyppery waye, and beware of thy chil-dien, (and take hede of them that be thine owne houſholde.) In all thy woꝛkes put thy truſt in God, ſet thy whole hert, ſo that is the heppynge of the cōmaundementes. Who ſo beleueth God-des woꝛde taketh hede to the cōmaundementes: and he that putteth hys truſt in the Loꝛde, ſhall want nothyng.

The xxiiii. Chapter.

The beſtowment of him that feareth God. The anſwꝛe of the wyſe. The lyke deſcription of a ſoule, what is in the hande of God: the earth is in the hande of the pꝛeſter. The wyſe not to bypꝛyde wꝛth ſerue to become ſubjects to oðer.

There ſhall no euyl happen vnto him that feareth God: but when he is in temptacion, the Loꝛde ſhall deſpyre him, and kepe him from euell. A wiſe man hath not the lawe, but an ypocrite is as a ſhip in ragynge water. A man of vñ-derſtandynge gꝛueth credence vnto the lawe of God, & the lawe is faythful vnto him. Be ſure of the matter, then take therof: Be ſyſte wel inſtructe, then mayeſt thou geue anſwꝛe. The hert of the ſolyſhe is lyke a cartewhele, and his thoughtes runne about lyke an aſel tree. Lyke as a wild boyle that neieth vnder euery one that ſitteth vpon him, ſo is it with a ſcoꝛneful frende.
Why doth one daye excell an oðer, ſeyng all the dayes of the yeaꝛe come of the Sunne? The wiſdome of the Loꝛd hath ſo parted them a ſondre, and ſo hath he ordeyned the tymes, & ſolem-ne feaſtes. Some of them hath he choſen & halowed before oðer dayes. And al men are made of the & grounde, and out of the earth of Adam.
In the multitude of ſcience hath the Loꝛde ſondred them, and made their wayes of diuers ſaſyngs. Some of the hath he bleſſed, made much of them, halowed them, & claymed them to hym ſelfe. But ſome of them hath he curſed, brought ſt them lowe, euen in good, and agaynst death is lyfe: so is the vngodly agaynst such as feare God. Beholde, these are the woordes of the highest, & these are euen the agaynst two, & one set agaynst another I am awaked by last of all, as one that gathereth after in harvest. In the gyftes of God and in his blessing I am increased, and have fylled my house with like a grape gatherer. * Behold howe I have not laboured onely for my selfe, but for al such as loue nourture and wisdom.

C heare me o ye great men of the people, and harden with your eare ye rulers of the congregacion. Gene not thy soune and wyfe, thy brother & frende, power ouer the wyse thou lyuest and geue not a way thy substance and good to another, lest it repent the: & thou be faine to beg therfore thy selfe. As long as thou lyuest and hast byeth, let no man chaunge the: For better it is that thy chyldren to pray the, then that thou shouldest be faine to lome in their handes. In all thy woordes be excellent, that thyne honour be nurtured & kept. At the tyme when thou shalte ende thy dayes, and synne the thy lyfe, distribute thyne endurtaunce. The fodder, the whyppe, & the vnten: a belongeth vnto the ass: Wheat, correction & woiche vnto thy seruaut. If thou let thy seruaut to labour, & shalte synne rest. But if thou let him go ydle, he shal seke liberte. The yocke & the whyp wyl be downe the harde necke but tame & thy euell seruaut with bondes and coerced. Send him to labour & he go not ydle For ydelnes, byngeth muche euill. Wer him to woiche, for & belongeth vnto him, and becommeth him well. If he be not obedient, bynde his fete: but do not so much vnto hym in any wyse, & without discrecion doo nothyng. * If thou haue a faythful seruaut, let hym be vnto the as thyne owne soule: increat hym as a brother so; in bloude hast thou gotte hym. If thou haue a seruaut, holde him as thy selfe: for thou hast neede of hym, as of thy selfe. If thou increat hym euell, and lipest hym harde, and makeste hym to be proude and to runne awaye fro the, thou canst not tell what waye thou shalte seke hym.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

1. Cor. 11. The people of the world are in the hands of the Lord, and he will do with them as he will.

2 Whye people begyle the selues with vayne and disceitful hope, and foolen the in dyaumes. Whoso regardeth dyaumes, is lyke him & wyl take hold of a shadowe, and folowe after the vynde. Cal-lo is it with the appetynge of dyaumes. Befor the face, is the lykenes of a face. Whoso can be-lieue of the vncleane: O what truth can be spoken of a lyer: doth sayng, doth sayte, looke and dyaumynge is but vanyte: lyke as when a woman traueleth with chyldre, and hath many fantasies in her herte. Wher as such a vyson come not of God, let not thine herte vpon them For dyaumes haue dysceined many a man, and taped them that put theyr trust therein.

The lawe shal be fulfilled wythoute lyes, & and wysdome is sufficient to a faythful mouth Whar knowledg hath he & is not tried: A wise man & is wel instruct, vnderstandeth much, & he that hath good experyence can talke of wysdome he that hath no experyence knoweth lye, and he that erreth, caueth much wychednesse. He & is not tryed, what thynges knoweth he: Whoso so foloweth no rule is full of wychednesse.

Whil I was yet in erreure, I learnede muche also: pre, I was solearned & I could not expresse it all, and came ofte in perall of death therfore, till I was deliuered from it: (thow we the grace of God.) Nowe I se, that they which feare god haue the right sperte: for their hope standeth in him, & can helpe them. And the eyes of the Lord are on them, that loue hym. Whoso feareth the Lord standeth in a we of no man, and is not a-frayed for the Lord is his hope and comfort.

Blessed is the soule of him that feareth the Lord: In whome putteth he is truste: Whoso is his strenght: * For & eyes of the Lord haue respect vnto them, that loue him. He is their might ie protection, & strong grounde: A defender to the heat, a refuge for the hote noone daye. A succours for a stumblinge, and an helpe for falling he setteth vp the soule and lighteneth the eyes he geueth lyfe, and blessing. He that geueth an offeryng of vnyghteous goodes, hym offeryng is refused: and the scoynfull dealing of the unryghteous please not God: (the Lord is the ryght only, that paciently abide him in the way of the truth, and of ryghteousnesse. The hyest dothe not allowe & gyftes of the wicked.) And, God hath no better in the offerings of the vngodlye neither maye synne be recompyed in the multitude of oblations. Whoso byngeth an offeryng out of the goodes of & poore, doth euen as one & hyllety the sonne, before the fathers eyes.

The bread of the needfull is the lyfe of the poore: he & defraudeth hym shereof, is a man of bloude. Whoso robbeth hym neyghbour of hym liuing, doth as great sin as though he slew him to death. * He & defraudeth the labourer of hym hye, is a bloude shedder. When one buydeth & another byketh downe, what profit haue they the but labour: Whil one payeth & another cur-seth, whose voyce wyl & Lord hear: * He & waldeth him selfe because of a deere body, & toucheth the deere agayne, what doeth hym walpyng: * So is it with a man & taketh for hym synnes, & doeth them agayne: who wyl heare his prayer O what doeth hym sayd yuge helpe hym?

thankofferynge. God hath pleasure when one depaereth from synne, and to forsake vnyghe outnes, reconceyleth vs woth hym.

Thou shalt not appeare empty before the Lord, for all such is done because of the commaundemente of God. * The offerynge of the ryghteous maketh the altar fat, and a sweete smell is it before the highdest. The offeryng of synners is acceptable vnto God: and shall neuer be forgotten. Gueve God hym honoure with a chearfull herte, and hepe not backe the spylling of thy handes. * In all thy gyftes shewe a merciful countenance, and paye the thynges vnto God with gladnesse. Gueve vnto God accordinge as he hath enriched and prospered the: and looke what thyne hand is able, geue with a chearfull eye: for the Lord recompenseth, and giveth the seven tymes as muche agayne.

Gueve no vnygheous gyftes, for such wyl be not receiue. Beware of wrongfull offerynges, for the Lord is a ryghteous Judge: and regardeth no mans person: he accepteth, not person of the poore: but he heareth the prayer of the oppressed. * He dispiseth not the desire of the fatherles, nor the widow, when she pouereth out her prayer before him. Doth not God be the reuerer, that riseth downe the cheakes of the widow? He heareth he not the complaine ouer such as make her to wepe? For from her cheakes do the teares go vnto heauen, and the Lord which heareth the doth accepte them. Whoso serueth God after his pleasur, shall he accepte: and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. * The prayer of him that humbleth hym selfe, goeth vnto the cloudes, tyll he come vnto. He wyl not be comforted, nor goo her wepe, tyll the highdest God haue respecte vnto her, geue true sentence and persourne the iudgemente. And the Lord wyl not be slacke in commyng, nor tary longe tyll he hath synne ten in sonder the backes of the vnnmerciful, and aduenged hym selfe of the heathen: tyll he haue taken away the multitude of the cruell, and broken the scepter of the vnyghteous, tyll he geue euery man after his wayes and rewarde them after theyr doinges: tyll he haue deliuered his people, mayntened theyr cause, and reioysed them in his mercy. O howe saye a thyng is merce in the tyme of anguysh & trouble. It is lyke a cloude of rayne, that cometh in the tyme of a drought.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

A prayer to God in the passion of all synners, full men: by the people of a good woman.

In mercy vpon vs O Lord, thou God of all thynges. Haue respecte vnto vs. Shewe vs the light of thy mercyes, & sende thy feare among the heathen & straungers, whiche seue not after the, that they may knowe howe that there is no God but thou. & that they may shewe thy wonderous woiches. Like vnto the heade ouer the outlandyshe heathen, that they may learne to knowe thy myght, and power. Lyke as thou arte halowed in vs before them, so byng to passe, that thou mayest be magnified also in the before vs: that they may knowe the, lyke as we knowe the. For there is none other God but onely thou. O Lord, Renue the tokens, and chaunge the wonderous woiches. Shewe thyne hande, and thy ryghter arme gloriously. Raise vp thy indignacion, and powere out thy wrath. Take awaye the aduersarye and synne the enemye. Make the tyme shorte, remember thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous woiches maye be praised. Let the wrath of the fyre consume them that lyue so carelesse: and let them perishe that doth the people hurte. Shew in sonder the heade of the paynces that be our enemyes, and saye there is none other but we.

Gather all the tribes of Jacob together agayne, that they maye knowe howe that there is none other God but onely thou, that they may shewe thy wonderous woiches: and be thou thy peoples herpage, lyke as frome the begynnyng. O Lord, haue merce vpon the people, that haue thy name, and vpon Israel, whom thou haste lykened to a fyre boze sonne. O be mercifull vnto Jerusalem the cytye of thy sanctuarie. * the cytye of thy rest. I will dwell on woth thy vnspeakable vertues, and thy people with thy glory. Gueve with vs vnto thy creature, whome thou madest from the beginning and raise vp the prophetes that haue ben dwelled in thy name. Rewarde them that wayte for the, that thy prophetes may be founde sayth full. O Lord, heare the prayer of thy seruantes, accordinge to the blessinge of Aaron ouer thy people: & sayd thou vs in the wape of righteousness: & that all they which dwell vpon the earth maye knowe that thou arte the Lord the eternall God, whiche is from eternall tyme.

The hely denouereth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Like as the tounge tasteth vnyforme, & so dothe an herte of vnderstandyng in marche false wordes. A frowarde herte geueth beuynesse, but a man of experyence lyfeth hym vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better then another. A saye wyfe reioyseth her husbnde, and a man loueth nothyng better. If she be loupynge and vertuous wyfely, then is not her husbnde like other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him a helpe, and pyller where vpon he resteth, where no hedge is, there the goodes are spoyled: & where no housewife is, there the frendles mouneth. Like as there is no credde given to a robber, that goeth from one cytye to another: so is not the man beleued, & hath no neste: and must turne in, where he maye abyde in synne.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Howe a man shalde haue frendes and comfession, and seache the company of a holpe man.

Ierpe frende sayth: I wyl be frendlye vnto hym also. But there is some frende, which is onely a frende in name. Remayneth there not heynesse vnto death when a companion and frende is turned to an enemye? O moste wretched presumption, from whence art thou sprung vnto couer & earth. All is with falshe

The booke.

• Chap. xii. With falshed and disceate. • There is some company on whiche in prosperitey enioyeth with his frende: but in the tyme of trouble he taketh parte agaynst hym. There is some companion that mourneth with his frende for his helpe: but when trouble cometh he taketh holde of the wynde. For get not thy frende in thy mynde and thynke vpon him in thy richesse. Make no counsaill at thy kynsmans, and take thy counsaill from suche as beate the no good wyll. • Every counsailler bynggeth forth his counsaill. Fewer thelesse, there is some that counsaileth, but for his owne profit: Beware of the counsailler, and be aduysed afore whereto thou wylte vnto hym, for he wyl counsaill for hym selfe. Lett he calle the lot vpon the and saie vnto the: Thy wape and purpose is good, and afterwarde he stande agaynst the, and loke what shall become of the.

B Take no counsaill at hym, that suspecteth the for an enemy, and hyde thy counsaill from suche as hate the. Take no counsaill at a woman conceyning the thynges that she longeth for: nor at a leachfull and sapient herted body, in mat ters of warre: or at a marchaunt, how heare de wyl cheape thy wares towarde his: or at a bier of selleng: or at an enuyous man, of chanches greuyng: or at the vnmerefull, of louyng kind nes: or at an vnbonest man of honesty. • or at the slouthful, of woorkyng. • or at an byselyng which hath no house, or profyte, of welthe. (An ydle body wold not gladly beare speake of much labour.) Take no suche folkes to counsaill: but be diligente to seke counsaill at a veruous ma that feareth God, suche one as thou knowest to be a heper of the comaundementes, which hath a mynde after thyne owne mynde, and is sope for the when thou stumblest. And hold thy counsaill fast in thine herte: for there is no ma moze faith full to hope in: then thou thy selfe. For a manes mynde is some tyme moze disposed to teile onte, then seuen watchmen that sit aboue in an hygh place lohyng aboute them. And aboue al thyng praye the byest that he wyl leade thy wape in faithfulness and truth. Besoie al thy woorkes at the counsaill fyrst: and euer thou doest any thyng, be wel aduysed. Ther be four thynges I declare a chaunged hert, wherout chere spynggeth euell and good: deathe and lyfe, and a matterfull tonge that vablen muche. Some ma is apte and wel instructe in many thynges, and yet very vnpro fitable vnto him selfe. Some man there is, that can geue wise and prudent counsaill, and yet is he ha tred, and continueth a begger: for grace is not ge uen him of God to be accepted. Another is rob bed of al wysdome, yet is he wys vnto him selfe and the frute of vnderstandyng is commendable in his mouth.

D A wysse man maketh his people wysse, and the frutes of his wysdome caple not. A wise ma shall be plentifully blessed of God: and all they that se hym shall speake good of hym. The lyfe of man, standeth in the number of dayes, but the dayes of Ieremil are innumerable.

A wysse man shall obteyne saythfulness and reuerence amonge his people, and his name shall be perpetual. My sonne, proue thy soule in thy lyfe: and if thou se any euell thyng, geue it not vnto her. • For all thynges are not profyta ble for al men, neither hath euery soule pleasure in euery thyng. Be not greedy in euery eating, and be not to hasty vpon al meates. • For excelle of meates bynggeth syknes, and gloryng cometh at last to an vnumerable deate. • Thou shalt sur fer haue many one perished: but he that dieteth hym selfe temperatly, prolongeth his lyfe.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

• If a dyscyple in synnes ought me to pray, and to fynde a dys cyple which heareth by prayer. The besyng of synners. And me, by synners, dysciples at confession.

Oncur the dyscyple, honour him because of necessity. God hath crea ted hym (for of the dyest cometh medecyne) and he shall receiue gyf tes of the kyng. The wysdome of the dyscyple bynggeth hym to great woorthip and in the syght of the great men of this world he shall be honourably taken. The Lozde hath created medecine of the earth, and he that is wyle wil not abhorre it. • Was not the bitter water made swete with a tree, I men myghte learn to know the vertue therof? The Lozde hath ge uen men wysdome, and vnderstanding, that he myght be honoured in his wonderous woorkes. With such doth he heale men, and taketh away theyr paynes: Of suche doth I potecary make a consecryon yet can no man perfourme al his woorkes. For of the Lozde cometh prosperous welth ouer all the earth.

My sonne, despyse not thys in thy synches but praye vnto the Lozde, and he shall make the wyle. Leane of from synne, and oger thy handes a ryght, cleanse thyne herte from al vne hednesse. Geue a swete sauoured offering, and the synne flour for a token of remembraunce: make the offering fatte, as one that geueth the fyfte frutes, and geue rowme to the dyscyple. For the Lozde hath created him, let him not go from the, for thou hast ned of hym. The houre maye come: that the synche maye be helped tho rowe them, when they praye vnto the Lozde, and he maye reconer, and get helth to lyue longer. He that synneth before his maker: shall fall into the handes of the dyscyple.

My sonne, byng forth thy teares ouer the herd: and beginne to mourne, as if thou haddest suffered great harme thy selfe, and then couer thy body after a conuenient maner and despyse not his burial. Enioye thy selfe to wepe and prouoke thy selfe to moune, and make lamentacion ex pediently, and that a day or two, lest thou be euell spoken of: and then comforte thy selfe because of the heuynesse. • For of heuynesse cometh the death, the heuynesse of I heret byeaeth strenght heuynesse and pouertie groweth the hert in temp tacion and offence. Take no heuynesse to hert, dyue it awaye, and remembre the laste thynges: Forget it not, for there is no turning agayne. Thou shalt do hym no good, but hurte thy selfe Remember his iudgement, thine also: albe like wyle: vnto me preter daye vnto the to daye.

11. Reg. 11.8

* Let the remembrance of the derde cease in hys rest, and comforte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, seynge his sperte is departed from hym. The wysedome of the scrbye is at conueniente tyme of reste: and he that ceaseth from exercise and labour shalbe wyse.

D he that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in ploddyng, and bypynge the oxen, and goeth about wyth such wozeches, he can speake of oxen: he setteth hys herte to make sowes, and is diligent to gyue the hyne fodder. So is euery carpenter also and wozechemaster that laboureth stylly nyghte and daye: he carueth, graveneth, cutteth oute, and hys desyre is in sonnyng conynge thynges, hys herte ymagineth howe he maye conynge cast anymage, hys diligence also and watchyng perfourmeth the woche. The ymagine, in lyke maner bydeth by hys syde, and dothe hys bypynge to labour the yon. The vapour of the fyre burneth hys fleish: he muste fyghte wyth the heate of the foznace. The noise of the hammer soundeth euer in his eares, & his eyes loke stylly vpon the thyng that he maketh. He hath set his mynde thereupon, & he wil make out of his woche, & therfore he watcheth, howe he maye let it out, & byng it to an end.

E So doth the potter byt by hys woche, he turneth the whele about wyth his fete, he is diligent and carefull in al doynges, & his labour and woche is without nombre. He sayth vnto the claye wyth his arme, & wyth his fete he tempereth it. Hys herte ymagineth howe he maye make it pleasaunte, & his bypynge is to cleue the ouen. All these hope in their handes, & euery one thyngeth to be conynge in hys woche. Without these may not the cities be mayntayned, inhabited, nor occupied: and they come not bye in the congregation, neither sit they vpon iudgment seates: they vnderstande not the counsaunte of the lawe: they cannot declare equite & iudgement: they cannot finde out the darthe sentences, but thowow them that the creature of the woche be mayntened, they praye for conseruacyon onely the woche and labour of conynge.

¶ A wyse man. The woches of God. Vnto the good, good thynges possyble, but vnto the euil, and good thynges are euil.

I that applyeth hys mynde to vnderstandyng the lawe of God, dothe bypynge lyke oute the wysedome of them of the olde tyme, and exercyseth hym selfe in the prophetes. He kepeth the saynges of famous men, & prelateth to vnderstandyng of darthe sentences of wysedome. He scheth oute the mystrye of secrete saynges, and exercyseth hym selfe therein continually. He doth seruyce among great men and appereth before the prynce. He goeth into a strange countrey, & traunpleth thowow it: loke what good & euil is amonge men, he pyneth it & scheth it out. He purpoiseth in his herte to reioyce eache vnto the Lord that made hym & to praye before the hygh God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & praiseth for his synnes. Vnto the great Lord, wyll, he shalbe fylled wyth the sperte of vnderstandyng that he maye then put out wise sentenys, & geue thankes vnto the Lord in his prayer. He shal order his deuyce, & leade by his knowledge a ryght & geue hym vnderstandyng of secrete thynges. He shal shew forth the science of his learnyng, and reioyce in the countenance of the lawe of the Lord. The whole congregacion shal commend his wysdome & it shal neuer be put out. The remembrance of hym shal neuer be forgotten, & his name shal continue fro one generacyon to another. His wysdome shal be spoken of among the people, & the whole congregacion shal openly declare his praise, while he liueth he hath a greater name then a thousand bysides: & after his death, the same name remaineth vnto hym. Pet wyll I speake of moomen of vnderstandyng. For I am ful as the mone.

Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chyldren) bypynge forth the scrpte, as the Rose that is planted by the byokes of the felde, & geue ye a swete smel as Libanus. For as the Rose gardyn synge a songe of prayse. Geue thankes vnto God ouer all his woches. Geue glozpe and honoure vnto the Lord, Geue hys prayse wyth your lippes. Pee, even wyth the songe of your lippes, wyth harpes, and playnge, and ingeynyng thankes vnto hym, save after this maner. ¶ All the woches of the Lord are exceeding good, and all hys commaundementes are mete and conueniente in due season.

A man nede not to saye: what is this? what is that? For at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundement the water was as a wall, & at the word of his mouth the water stode stylly. ¶ In his commaundemente is euery thyng acceptable & reconcyed, and hys healt cannot be mynyshed. The woches of all flethe are before him, & there is nothyng hyd from his eyes. He seyth from euerlastyng to euerlastyng & there is nothyng to wonderfull, or hye vnto hym. A man nede not to saye then, what is this? or that? For he hath made al thynges to do good vnto man. Hys blessing shal renne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earthe lyke a floude of water. Like as he maketh water for dyouth so shal his wrath fall vpon the heathen.

His wayes are playne & ryght vnto the lust but the vngodlye stobbe at them. For the good are good thynges created from the begynnyng & euil thynges for the vngodly. ¶ All thynges necessarye for the lyfe of man are created from the beginning: water, fyre, ayre, salt, meale, wyte and honny, mylke, and wyne, oyle, and clothyng. All these thynges are created for the best to the faythfull. But to the vngodlye shal all these thynges be turned to hurt and darthe. There be spertes that are created for vengeaunce, and in theyr rigourousnes haue they fastened their toymentes. ¶ In the tyme of the ende they shal put out theyr strength, & pacifye the wrath of him that made them. ¶ Fyre, hayle, hunger, and deathe: all these thynges are created for vengeaunce. The teeth of wilde norfome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the swerde are created also for vengeaunce, to the destructio of the vngodly. ¶ They shalbe

* My chyldren kepe wysdome in peace for wysdome that is hyd: and a treasure that is not seie, what profyte is in them both. A man that hydeth his foolysheenesse, is better then a man that hydeth his wysdome. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges & alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth mult pious and measure it. Be ashamed of whozdom befoze father and mother: Be ashamed of leasyng befoze the pyynce & men of aucthorite: Of synne befoze the Judge and ruler. Of offence befoze the congregacion & people: Of vnyghte outnes befoze a companyon and frende. Of thefte, befoze thy neighbours. * As for the feare of God and his couenaunte, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thine elbowes vpon the breste: Be ashamed to looke vpon harlottes: Be ashamed to turne a way thy face fro thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue. Be ashamed also to looke vpd another manes wyfe, and to make anye trisyng wordes with her maiden, or to stand by her bedsyde. Be ashamed to vbydyde thy frende wpen thou geuiste anye thyng, caste him not in the teeth withal.

¶ Chastite maye not be opened. The lode of God muste be taughte. A daughter, if woman, God knoweth at thynge, sum the secretes of thy herte.

Reache not a thyng twyse, & disclofe not the wordes, & thou hast hearde in secreete. Be shamefast & well manered in dede, so shal every ma fauoure the. Of these thynges be not ashamed, & accept no persone to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the couenaunte of Judgement to hyng & vngodly fro his vngodlines vnto ryghte outnes: & to make him a good ma: to deale faithfully w thy neighbour & companyon: to distribute the herpage vnto thy frendes: to be dysligente to kepe trewe measure and weyght: to be contente whether thou gettest much or lytle: to deale trulye with temporal goodes: in byng & seylng, to byng vpon chyldren with dysligence, to correcte an euil seruante, to kepe thyne is from an euil wyfe to set a loche wher many bades are: what thou deliuerest and geuest oute to be kepte, to tell it, & to wepe it: to wyte vp all thy oute geuyng & receayng: to ensourme the vnlarned and vnwylle: Of the aged, that are iudged, of the yong. If thou be dysligent in these thynges, truly thou shalt be learned & wyse and accept of al men.

The daughter maketh the father to wathe secretly: and the carefullnes & be hath sayd her, saith awaye his slepe: yea, in the yowthe lest she shalde ouer growe hym: And when she hath an husbnde, lest she shalde be hated: lest she shalde be despyled or rauyshed in her vyrgynyte, or got ten with childe in her fathers house: Or when she cometh to the man, lest she behaue her selfe not ryghte, or contynue vnfructfull. * If thy daughter be wanton kepe her straitly, lest she cause thine enemies to laugh the to scoone, & the wyfe le cite to geue the an euil reposte, & so thou be sayne to heate thy name of euery man, & be confounded befoze al the people. * Beholde not euerye bodys bewte, and haue not to muche dwellynge amonge women. For lyke as the woman & mother commeth oute of the clothyng & so doth wycheuylle come of women.

It is better to be with an euill man, then with a frenchie wife that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyl remember the wordes of the Loyde, and declare the thynges that I haue seie. In the wordes of the Loyde are his wordes. The sunne ouerlooketh all thynges with hys wyne, and all hys wordes are ful of the clearnesse thereof. hath not the Loyde brought to passe that his sayntes shulde tell oute all his wonderful wordes, whyche the Almyghty Loyd hath stablished: Al thynges endure in his gloze. He sekerth out the grounde of the deepe, & the herte of men, & he knoweth all their ymaginacion and wysdome. For the Loyde knoweth all seynter, and he looketh into the token of the tyme. He declareth the thynges that are passe & so to come, & dyscloseth thynges that are secreete.

* No thoughte maye escape hym, neyther maye any word be hid from hym. He hath garnyshed the hye excellent wordes of his wysdome, & he is from euerylastyng to euerylastyng. Vnto hym maye no thyng be added neyther can he be minished, he hath no nede of any mans counsell. O howe amiable are all hys wordes, and as a sparke to looke vpon. They lye all, & endure for euer: and when soeuer nede is, they are all obedyente vnto hym. They are double, one agaynst another: he hath made no thyng that hath faule or blemyshe. * He hath stablished the goodes of euerye one: and who maye be satisfied with his gloze, when he seyth it.

¶ The summe of the creation of the worldes of God.

The gloze of the hyght, is the saye & and cleere firmament, the bewte of the heauen is hys glazious clearnesse. The sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in the going out of it, a marvelous worke of the hyest. At noone it burneth the earth & who maye abyde for heat thereof: Who so heareth an ouen when it is hote the times moze doeth the sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, wher it bzyetheth out the fyre beames & thyneth w the dysghenes of it, it blinderth the eyes. Great is the Loyde & made it, & in hys commaundement he caueth it to runne hastly.

* The Moone also is in al, and at conuenient season it sheweth the tymes & is a token of the tyme. * The token of the solemne feast is the den of the Moone, a lyght & minisheth & increaseth agayne. The moneth is called after & moneth it groweth wonderoulye in her chaungyng.

The army of heuen also is in the hyght in the firmament.

The sorrowe of men is in theyr bodye: but the name of the vngodlye shal be put out. * Laboure to get the a good name, for that shal contynne suerly by the, then a thousande greates treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nobylte of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

* Wy chyldezen kepe wysdome in peace for wysdome that is byd: and a treasure that is not leue, what vyolence is in them both. A man that byderth his foolys benefite, is better then a man that byderth his wysdome. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges to be alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth must proue and measure it. Be ashamed of whosdome before father and mother: Be ashamed of leaslyng before the prynce & men of authorite: Of sinne before the Judge and ruler. Of offence before the congregation & people: Of vnpryncedness before a companion and frende. Of theste, before thy neighbours. * As for the truth of God and his conuaince, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thine elbowes vpon the breste: Be ashamed to looke vpon bare lottes: Be ashamed to turne a way thy face fro thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue. Be ashamed also to looke vpo another manes wyfe, and to make anye trisyng wordes with her maiden, or to stand by her brest. Be ashamed to vphylde thy frende when thou geueste anye thyng, cast him not in the teeth withal.

Secrets maye not be opened. The lynes of God muste be caught. A daughter, a woman, a womanly at thynges, men the secrets of thy dyce.

Rebearse not a thyng twyse, & disclose not the wordes, & thou hast hearde in secretes. Be shamefast & well manered in dede, so shall every man fauoure the. Of these thynges be not ashamed, & accept no person to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the conuaince of Judgement to byngge & vngodly fro his vngodlines vnto ryghteousnes: & to make him a good man: to deale faithfully wth thy neighbour & companyon: to distribute the heritage vnto thy frendes: to be diligent to kepe trewe measure and weyght: to be contente wherher thou gettest much or lytle: to deale trulye with temporal goodes: in byngge & sellyng, to byngge vphylde with diligence, to correcte an euil seruante, to kepe & thynge is from an euil wyfe to set a locke wher many handes are: what thou deliuerest and gruest oute to be kepte, to tell it, & to wepe it: to wyte vp all thy oute greuyng & receayng: to enforme the vnclearned and vndolse: Of the aged, that are iudged, of the pong. If thou be diligent in these thynges, truly thou shalt be learned & wyse and accept of al men.

The daughter maketh the father to wathe secretly: and the carefullnes & he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yea, in the poynte lest she shoulde ouer growe hym: And when she hath an husbnde, lest she shoulde be hated: lest she shoulde be despyled or rauphed in her byrgynnes, or got ten with childe in her fathers house: Or (when she cometh to the man) lest she behaue her selfe not ryghte, or contynue vntrustyfull. * If thy daughter be wanton kepe her straitly, lest she cause thine enemies to laugh the to scoyne, & the whole cite to geue the an euil repoyte, & so thou be sayne to heare thy shame of euery man, & be confounded before al the people. * Beholde not euerye bodys bewtye, and haue not to muche dwellyng amonge women. For lyke as the woman & mothe cometh oute of the clothynge & so doth wychednesse come of women.

It is better to be with an euill man, then with a frendly wife that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remember the wozyches of the Lorde, and declare the thynges that I haue seene. In the wordes of the Lorde are his wozyches. The Sonne ouerlooketh all thynges with his synne, and all his wozyches are ful of the cleauesse thereof. Hath not the Lorde brought to passe that his sayntes shoulde tell oute all his wonderous wozyches, wherby the Almyghty Lorde hath stablished: Al thynges enouche in his gloze. He seeth out the grounde of the deepe, & the herte of men, & he knoweth all their ymaginacion and wysdome. For the Lorde knoweth all science, and he looketh into the token of the time. He declared the thynges that are passe & for to come, & discloseth thynges & are secretes.

* No thoughte maye escape hym, neyther maye any worde be hid from hym. He hath garnished the hye excellent wozyches of his wysdome, & he is from euerylastyng to euerylastyng vnto hym maye not byngge be added neyther can he be minished, he hath no orde of any mans counsell. O howe amiable are all his wozyches, and as a sparke to looke vpon. They lye all, & endure for euer: and when soeuer orde is, they are all obedyente vnto hym. They are double, one agaynst another: he hath made not byngge that hath faule or blemyshe. * He hath stablyshed the goodes of euerye one: and who maye be satisfied with his gloze, when he seeth it.

The humme of the creation of the wozyches of God.

The gloze of the bryght, is the saye & and cleere spymament, the bewtye of the heauen is his glozous cleauesse. The Sonne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in the goyng out of it, a maruelous wozyke of the hyest. At noone it burneth the earth & who maye abyde for & heat therof: Who so kepeth an ouen when it is hote the times moze doth the sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, wher it byetheth out the fyre beames & syneth wth the bryghtnes of it, it blindeth the eyes. Great is the Lorde & made it, & in his commaundement he causeth it to runne hastily.

* The Moone also is in al, and at conuenient season it bedeth the tymes & is a token of the tyme. * The token of the solempne feaste is the daye of the Moone, a lyght & minisheth & increaseth againe. The moneth is called after & moneth it groweth wonderously in her chaungyng.

The army of heuen also is in the bryght in the firmament

The booke.

Pyramente of heauen: it gethe a cleare and glozyous wyne. This is the clearenesse of the starres, the dewyfull apparell of heauen, the apparel that the Lord lighteth in the dewyght.
In his holie wache they conuene in theyr order, and not one of them faileth in his wache.

Gen. 1. 16 & Loke vpon the rayne howe, and prayse hym that made it: very bewtiful is it in his time. He compasseth the heauen aboute with his cleare nesse and gloze, the handes of the hyghest hath bended it. Thowoe hys commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thunder of his iudgemente to smyte hastily. Thowoe his comaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes he as the fowles. In hys power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and wroght the hayle stones. The mountaynes melte at the syght of hym the wynde bloweth accordyng to hys will. The sounde of his thoder beatech the earth and so both the frowme of the floze: the whoyle wynde also lyghteth downe as a serbered foule casteth out and spredeth the snowe abrode: and as the grethoppers that destroy al, so fallerh it downe. The eye maruelerh at the bewtye of the withnesse thereof, and the herte is affrayed at the rayne of it. He poureth oute the frosh vpon earth lyke salte, and when it is frozen, it is as sharpe as the pyche of a thysle.

When the colde floze the wynde bloweth, harde chysall cometh of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynges togerber of water, and putteth on the waters as a breast plate he deuourerh the mountaynes, and burneth the wyldernes: & looke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medecyne of all these is whil a cloude cometh hastily: & when a dewe commeth vpon the heate it shalbe refreshed agayne DIn hys wache he stylerh the wynde: In hys cou-necel he setteth the depe, and (the Lord) he thus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of the perelles and harmes thereof, and when we heare it with oure eares, we maruayle thereat.

For there be strange wonderful waches, by uerle maner of nyce beastes & whalyshen. Thorothe hym are al thynges set in good order, & par-fourmed, and in hys wache all thynges endure.

I speake muche, but I cannot suffycently attayne vnto it, for he him selfe onely is the perfection of all waches. We shulde prayse the Lord after al our power, for he is grete in al hys waches. The Lord is to be feared, yee, very grete is he, & maruelous is hys power.
Prayse the Lord, and magnifye hym as muche as ye may, yet doth he farre exceede al prayse. O magnifye hym with al your power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able, suffycent ly to prayse hym. Who hath seene hym, that he myghter tell vs?

Psalm 113 Who can magnifye hym so greatlye as he is. For there are byd yet greater thynges then theise be: as for vs, we haue seene but fewe of hys waches. For the Lord hath made all thynges and geuen wysdome to such as feare God.

The xliiii. Chapter.

Gen. 12. 1 The word of our Lord, when he called Abram to saye.

His commendeth the noble famous men, and the generacyon of our forefathers. Many moze glorious actes hath the Lord done, and showed hys grete power euer sence the beginning. The noble famous me ragged in theyr byngedomes, and bare excellent rule.

In theyr wysdome and vnderstandyng, they folowed the counceil shewed in the prophetes.
They led the folke thowoe the counceill & wyle-dome of the scribers of the people. Wyle sentences are found in their instruction. They sought the swerues and melody of musyke, & broughte forth the pleasaunte songes in scriptur. They were ryche also, and coude comfort and pacify those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honourable men in theyr genera-cions, and were well reposed of in their times.
These haue left a name behynde them, so that theyr prayse shal alwaye be spoken of. Afterwarde, there were some, whose remembraunce is gone. They came to naughte and perished as though they had neuer bene: and became as though they had neuer bene bozne: yea, & their chyliden also with them.

Neuertheless, there are the lounge men, whose ryghteousnesse shal neuer be forgotten but conuene by theyr prosperyte. Theyr chyliden are an holie good verpage: Theyr seed endureth fast in the couenaunte. For theyr sake shal theyr chyliden and seed continue for euer, & theyr prayse shal neuer be put downe. Their bodies are buried in peace, but theyr name lyueth for euer moare. The people can speake of theyr wysdome, and the congregacyon can talke of theyr prayse. Enoch walked ryghte and acceptably before the Lord: therefore was he translated for an example of a mendeunte to the generacyons. Noe, was a stedfast & ryghteous man, and in the time of wyath he became a reconsoylunge. Therefore was he left a remnaunte vnto the earth, when the floude came.
In euerlastyng couenaunte was made with him, that all fleshe shulde perishe no moare in the water. Abraham was a grete father of many people, in gloze was there none lyke vnto hym. He kepte the lawe of the hyghest, and came into a couenaunte with him. He set the co-uenaunte in hys fleshe, and when he was proued, he was founde saythfull. Therefore swoze God vnto hym, with an othe, & he wolde blesse all people in hys seede, that he wolde multiplie and increase him as the duste of the earth, and to exalte hys seede as the starres: yee, and that hys seede shulde haue the possession, an inheritaunce of the lande from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the world.

Gen. 22. 1 With Isaac byd he stablye the same couenaunt, for Abraham his fathers sake. Yee, that gracys blesyng, and heith of all men & couenaunte byd he stablye with Isaac, and made it rest vpon the heade of Jacob. He blesse hym in that he prospered hym so wel and rygh-ly, and gaue them an heritage and sundryd hys posseyon by it selfe, & parted it amonge the twelue

the lue trybes. Mercyfull men brought he out of him, which found favour in sight of all flesh.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The playe of Moses, Aaron, and Pharaoh.

Moses beloved of God and menne, whose remembrance is in his praise hym that the Lord made lyke in his glorie of the sayntes, and magnified hym, so that the enemies stood in awe of hym, sheweth hym wonders he dyd great wonders. He made hym great in his sight of kynge, gave hym commaundement before his people, and shewed hym his glorious power. He stablyshed hym with sayntshynesse and mekenesse, and chose hym out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and belied hym in the darke cloude, and there he gaue hym the commaundementes, yea, the lawe of lyfe and wyldeome that he myght teache Jacob the covenants and Israell his lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of the trybe of Leuy, exalted hym, and made hym suche lyke. In everlasting covenant made he with hym, and gaue him the pte of the people he made hym glorious in bewtyfull aray, and clothed hym with the garmente of honour. He put perfecte loye upon hym, and girded hym wth strenght. He deckt hym with syde clothes, and a tunicke, with an ouerbodye cote also and a gyrdle. Rounde about made he hym bellies of gold, and that many: when he went in, the sound myght be heard, that they might make a noise in the Sanctuary, and geue the people warning. The holy garment was wrought and brydged with golde, yelow sylke and purple. And in the brestplate there was a goodlye woike, wherein was fastened lyght and perfectnesse.

Upon the same also there was a woike fastened, and set wth costlye pteous stones, all bounde with golde: and this he broughte in his ministracion. The stones were fastened for a remembrance, after the nombre of the trybes of Israell. Upon his myter there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes a famous and noble woike, garnished, and pleasant to looke upon. Before hym were there sene no suche saynt ornaments, and these he bestowed hym alway to vse. There myghte none other put them on, but onely his chyldren and his chylders chyldren perpetuallie. Daily persoumed he his buente offerpuges two tymes. Moses fylled his handes, and anoynted hym with holye oyle.

Thys was now confirmed hym wth an everlasting covenant, and so hym seide, as the dapes of heauen, namely that his chyldren should alway minister before hym, and persourme the office of the Priesthode, and wth the people good in his name. Before all men luyng chose he hym so he shoulde offer incense before the Lord and make obours for a sweete sauour and remembrance that he shoulde reconcile the people of the Lord with hym again. He gaue hym auctoritie also in his commaundementes and in the covenante that he shoulde teache Jacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enfourme Israell in his lawe.

Therefore there stood by certayne agaynst hym, and had enuye at hym in the wilderness, namely they that were at Dathan, and Abiram side and the furious congregacyon of Choz. This the Lord sawe: and it displeased hym, and in his wrathfull indignacyon were they consumed. A greete wonder dyd he upon them, and consumed them with the fyre. Besyde this, he made Aaron yet more honourable and glorious. He gaue hym an heretage, and parted the fyre trutes vnto hym. Vnto hym specially he appoynted the breade for sustenance, for the Priestes dyd eate of the offerpuges of the Lord: thys gaue he vnto hym and his seide. Elles had he no heretage nor pozepon in the lande, and wth the people. For the Lord hym selfe is his pozepon and enderptauce.

The chyd noble and excellent man is Phylas the sonne of Eleazar, whiche pleased the God of Israell, because he had zeale and feare of the Lord. For when the people were turned backe, he put hym selfe for the ryghte soone, and that wth a good wyll, to pacifye the wrath of the Lord towards Israell. Therefore was there a covenant of peace made with hym that he shoulde be the pyncepal among the ryghteous and the people, that he and his posteritie shoulde haue the office of the Priesthode for ever. Lyke as there was made a covenante wth Dauid of the trybe of Juda, that from among his sonnes onely there shoulde be a kynge. And that Aaron also and his seide shoulde be the heretage, to geue vs wyldeome in our hert, to ludge his people in ryghteousnesse, that his goodnes shoulde not come into forgetfulness, and that their honoure myght endure for ever.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The playe of Josue, Caleb, and Samuyl.

Manlye and stronge in battayle was Jesus the sonne of Naue, whiche in steade of Moses the prophet was geuen to be a Capteyne of the people, whiche accordyng vnto his name, was a great saupoure vnto the electe of God to punyssh the enemies that rose up agaynst Israell, that Israell myghte obtayne their enderptauce. How great, noble and excellent was he, whiche he sette up his hande, and drew out his sword agaynst the cyties. Who stode so manly before him? For the Lord him selfe brought in his enemies. Stode not the Sunne still at his commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two? He called vnto the hyghest and mooder myghte, when the enemies preaked upon hym on ererte syde, and the Lord hearde hym with the hable stones. They smote the heathen the people myghtely, and in the falling downe they stee all the aduersaries, so that the heathen knewe his hoste, and all his defence, that the Lord hym selfe foughte agaynst them for he followed vnto the myghte men of them.

In the tyme of Moses also, he and Caleb the sonne of Iephune, dyd a good woike, which

Da. xviij. Robe agaynst the enemyes, withhelde the people from synne, and spyled the wycked murmuring. * And of syx hundred thousande people of foote, they also were preferred to bring the into the verytage, namely, a land that floweth with mylke and honey.

Jos. viij. c. * The Lozde gaue strengthe also vnto Caleb whiche remayned wyth hym vnto hys age, so that he went vp into the hygge places of the lande and his seldre conquered the same for an verytage, that all the chyldren of Israel myghte see, how good a chyng it is, to be obedyent vnto the Lozde. And the Judges of rulers (euerie one after his name) whose hert went not a whoyring, nor departed from the Lozde, and that for soke not the Lozde vnsaythfully, whose remembrance hath a good reposit.

For they bones shalpe out of theyr place, and they names shall neuer be changed, (but honoure remayneth tyll wyth the chyldren of those holpe menne).

1. Reg. 3. a. and 3. b. C Samuel the prophete beloued of the Lozde hys God, ordeyned a kyng, and anoynted the princes ouer the people. In the laste of f Lozde he iudged the congregation, and the Lozde had respect vnto Jacob: The Prophete was found diligent in his saythfulness: yea, he is known saythfull in his wordes, because he sawe the God of lyghte. * He called vpon the Lozde Almyghty, when the enemyes pleased vpon hym on euery syde, what tyme as he offered the lyching lambes. And the Lozde thundered from heauen, and made his voyce to be hearde wyth a greate noyse. He discomfyted the Dyners of Tyre, and all the rulers of the Doylytynes.

2. Reg. 1. b. * Before hys laste ende he made protestacion in the syghte of the Lozde, and hys annoynted that he took the neyther substance nor good of any man, no, not so much as a shoe, and no man myght accuse hym. After this he tolde, that his ende was at hande, and shewed the kyng also hys ende and deathe, and from the earthe lyfte he vp his voyce in the prophete that the vngodlye people shulde perpe.

The xlviii Chapter.

Of the prophete Nathan, Dauid, and Salomon.

2. Reg. 1. b.

Afterward in the tyme of kyng Dauid there rose vp a Prophete called Nathan: For lyke as the fat is taken awaye from the offeringe, so was Dauid chosen oute of the chyldren of Israel. He took hys pastyme wyth the lions, and wyth hyddes and wyth beeres, lyke as wyth lambes. * He was not a Gyante when he was yet but yonge, and took awaye the rebuke fro his people: what tyme as he toke the stone in his hande, and smote Doune proude Goliath with the syng: For he called vpon the highest Lozde whiche gaue hym strengthe in his ryght hande, so that he ouerthrew the mighty Gyante in the battayle that he myghte set vp the doine of his people again.

2. Reg. 1. b.

* Thus brought he hym to weythypp a-boue all Dyners, and made him to haue a good reposit in the prayse of the Lozde, that he shulde were a crowne of glorye. * For he destroyed the enemyes on euery syde, rooted out the Doylytynes hys aduersaryes, and brake theyr dyne in silber, lyke as it is broken yet this day. In all his wythes he praised the hyggest and holpest, ascribed the honoure vnto hym.

2. Reg. 1. b. * Wyth hys whole herte byd he prayse the Lozde, and laud God that made hym. * He set synners also before the altire, and in their tyme he made swete songes.

He ordeyned to kepe the holpe dayes woorthfully, and that the solempne fraste shoulde the whole peere shulde be honoably holden with praisynge the name of the Lozde, with synnyng by tymes in the moynynge in the sanctuary.

2. Reg. 1. b. * The Lozde took a way his synners, and exalted his home for euer. He gaue hym fcomment of the kyngdom, and fthone of woorthynesse in Israel. * After hym there rose vp the wyse some called Salomon, and for hys sake he dyone the enemyes awaye farre of. This Salomon reined with peace in hys tyme (for God gaue hym rest from hys enemyes on euery syde that he myghte buyld hym an house in his name and prepare the Sanctuary for euer) like as he was wel instruct in his youth, and fylled wyth wyddome and vnderstandynge, as it wer with a water floude: he couered and fylled the whole land with symilitudes & wyse prudent sentences.

Hys name wente abroade in the Illes, because of his peace he was beloued. All landes Dmarueled at his songes, prouerbes, symilitudes, and at hys peace, and at the name of the Lozde God, whiche is called the God of Israel.

2. Reg. 1. b. * He gathered golde as tyme, and he had as muche spuer as leade. * He was moued in moodynatyone towarde women, & was overcome in affection. He stayned his honoure & woorthynesse, hys posterite defiled he also in hyngnyng the wyse of the Lozde vpon his chyldren & sorrow after his ioye: so that his kyngdome was decayed, and Ephraim became an vnsaythfull and vncoustant kyngdome. * Neuerthelesse, God forsoke not his merce, nethe was he utterly destroyed because of hys wythes, that he shulde leaue hym no posterite. As for the seed fcame vpon hym, whiche he loued, he brought it not utterly to naught but gaue yet a remnaunt vnto Jacob, & a roote vnto Dauid out of hym.

2. Reg. 1. b. * Thus reued Salomon with his fathers, and oute of his seide he lefte behynde hym a very foolishnes of the people, and such one as had no vnderstandynge. * Euen Roboam, whiche turned away the people thow his counsell, & Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, whiche caused Israel to synne, & the wed Ephraim fway of vngodlynes: In so much that they synnes & mysedes had the vpper hande to soze, & at the laste they were dyspenn out of the lande for the same: For, he soughte oute and brought vp all wythednes, tyll the vengeance came vpon them.

The xlviii Chapter.

Of the prophete Eliah, Elise, Elisha, and Elie.

Then

Of Iesus the sonne of Sirach. Fol. xlvi.

When Iode up * Eliah the prophete as a fyre, and his worde bent lyke a tresser. he broughte an hunger vpon them, and in hys zeale he made them feare in nombre. For they myghte not awaye with the commandmentes of the Lorde. Thow so woode of the Lorde he quete the heauen. and the tymes broughte he the fyre downe. Thus became Eliah honorable in his wonderous dedes. Who mai make his boast to be lyke hym? One that was deere rapted he vp from deathe, and in the woode of the hest he broughte hym oute of the graue again. He cast doune kynges and destroyed them and the honourable from theyr seate. Upon the mount Syna he harde the punishmente, and vpon Hozeh the iudgement of the vngauancer. He prophesied recompensing vnto kynges. * of dapedd prophetes after hym. He was taken vp in the strome of fyre, in a charet of hoises of the Lorde. He was ordeined in the reppounynges in tyme to pacifye the wraethe of the Lorde, to turne the hertes of the fathers vnto the chylde and to set vpon the trybes of Jacob agayne. Blesed were they that sawe the, and were garnished in loue, for we lye in lyfe: (but after deathe we shall haue no such name.)

* Eliah was couered in the strome, but he lyfous was fylled with his sperte. Whyle he lyed he was afraied of no dyner, and no man myghte overcome hym. There coulde no woode discerne hym, * after his deathe his body prophesied. He dyd wonders in his lyfe, and in deathe were his workes maruelous. For al this the people amended not, neyther departed they from their synnes: tyl they were caried away pylaners out of the lande, and were scattered abroad in all countreys so that of them there remayned, but a very lytle people, a piyner vnto the house of Dauid. howbeit some of them dyd ryght, and some deaped vpon vngodlynes.

* Hezechias made his eyer stronge, conueyed hym in water into it, bygged hezowne the stonnyr rocke with yron, and made vpon a well by the water syde. * In his tyme came Sennacherib vp, and sente Rabshakeh, lyfte vpon hys hande agaynst Syon, and despyled them with greute wyde. Then trembled theyr hertes and handes so that they folowed lyke a woman traueylng wyth chylde. So they called vpon the Lorde whiche is mercifull, and lyfte vpon theyr handes before hym. Immedyately the Lorde heard them oute of heauen: he thoughte nomore vpon their synnes, nor gaue the one to their enemies: but deliuered them by the hand of Esay. * He smote the hoste of the Assyrians, and hys Jengel destroyed them. For Hezechias had done the thing that pleased the Lorde, and remayned stedfastly in the waye of Dauid hys father. As Esay the greute and faithfull prophete in the syght of God had commaunded hym. * In his tyme the sonne went back ward: he lengthened the kynges lyfe. Alies a ryghte prophete prophesied he, what shoulde come to passe at the laste, so to such as were so ioyfull in syon: he gaue consolacyon, wherwith they myght comforte them selues for evermore. He shewed theynges that were for to come, and secreete, as ever they came to passe.

The xlii. Chapter.

Of Iosiah, and his sonnes, and his wyfe, and his seruaunts, and his people.

He remembraunce of * Iosias is lyke as when the Apotecarpe maketh many precious sweete smelling thynges together. His remembraunce shal be sweete as honny in all mouthes and as the playng of Mullyche at a banker of wyne. He was appointed to turne the people agayne, and to take awaye all abhominacyons of the vngodly. He dyected his herte vnto the Lorde, and in the tyme of the vngodly he set vpon the woithyppe of God agayne. All kynges (except Dauid, Hezechias and Iosiah) commyted wyche dwelle: for euen the kynges of Iuda, also forsoke the lawe of God. For they gaue theyr hoyme vnto other, theyr honour and woithyppe also to a straunge people.

Therefoze was the elect cytie of the Sanctu arpe hente with fyre, * and the stretes thereof lay desolate & wast in the hande of Jeremy, for they entreated hym euell, whiche neuer beleffe was a prophete ordeyned frome hys mothers wombe, that he myght roote oute, breake of, and destroye: and that he myghte buyde vp, and plant agayne. * Ezechiel sawe the glozys of the Lorde in a vision, which was shewed hym vpon the charet of cherubins. For he thought vpon the enemyes in the rayne, to do good vnto such as had ogyzed theyr wayes aryght. And the bones of the twelue prophetes layed from out of theyr place for they gaue comforte & consolacion vnto Jacob, and deliuered the faithfully. * Howe shall we praise Jobabael, which was as a ryng in the ryght hande?

* So was Iesus also the sonne of Ioseder: these men in theyr tyme builded the house, and set vpon the Sanctu arpe of the Lorde agayne: whiche was prepared for an everlastyng woithyppe. * And Achemias is alwaye to be commended, which set vpon for vs the walles that were broken downe, made the postes and barres agayne and buylded the houses of the newe. * But vpon the rarethe is there no man created lyke Enoch, for he was taken vp from the earth. * And Ioseph whiche was Lorde of his brethren, and the vpholder of his people: hys bones were couered and kepte. Meth and Sem were in greute honoure among the people: and so was Adam aboute all the beastes when he was created.

The i. Chapter.

Of Iosiah the sonne of Iosiah.

Ymou * the sonne of Onias the hye pester, whiche in his lyfe set vpon the house agayne, & in hys dayes made fast the temple. The drygth of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldyng and the hye walles of the temple. In his dayes the welis of water flowed out, and were exceeding full as the sea. He toke care for his people, and deliuered them from destruction

The booke.

Struccyon. he kepte his cytie, & made it stronge that it shoulde not be besieged. he dwelt in honoure and magnyfyed among his people, and enlarged the entrance of the house, and f court he gaue lyght as the mounyng starre in the myddest of the cloudes, and as the Moone whē it is full. he shined as the Sonne in the temple of God. he is as hyghter as the raynbow in f sayre cloudes, and as the founteyne and roles in the spring of the perr, and as lyues by the ryuers of water. Lyke as the bryanches vpon the mount Libanus, in the time of Somer as a fyre and incense that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornamente of pure golde, set with all maner of pccious stones, and as an Olive tree that is frutefull and as a Cypresse tree, whiche groweth vpon hye.

25 When he put on the garment of honoure and was clothed with all bewe: when he went to the holie aulter to garnyssh the coneruyng of f sanctuary: when he tooke the poeyons out of the dysailes hande, he hym selfe stood by f hartbe of the aulter, and his brethren round about in order. As the bryanches of Cedre tree vpon the mount Libanus so stood they round about hym. And as the bryanches of the Olive tree, so stood all the sonnes of Aaron in theyr glorie, and the oblacions of the Loyde in theyr handes before all the congregacion of Israel. And that he myghte sufficiently perfourme his seruyce vpon the aulter, and garnyssh the offering of the best God, he stretched out his hand and tooke of the brynkoffyng, and poured in of the wyne, so he poured vpon the botome of the aulter a good smel vnto the best wyne.

C Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to syng and to blowe wyth trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce & prayse vnto the Loyde. Then were all the people afrayed and fell downe to the earth vpon theyr faces to worshippe the Loyde theyr God & to geue thanke to the Almighty God. They song goodly also with theyr voyces, so f there was a pleasant noyse in the great house of f Loyde. And the people in theyr prayer, besought the Loyde the myghtest, that he would be merciful tyll the honoure of the Loyde were perfourmed, thus ended they theyr ministracion and seruyce. Then went he downe & stretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shuld geue prayse and thanke out of theyr lippes vnto Loyde, and to reioyce in his name. he beganne yet once also to praye, f he mighte openly shew the thankesgyuyng before f hyghdest, namely thus: O geue prayse and thanke ye all vnto the Loyde our God whiche hather done noble & great thynges: whiche hath increased our dayes from our mothers wombe, and deliuered us accordyng to his mercy: that he will geue vs the topfulnesse of heire, & peace for our tyme in Israel. Whiche sayd he fully hepyth his mercy for vs enenmoyst, and alwaye deliuereth vs in due season.

D There be two maner of people that I abhorre from my herte: as for the thyrd whome I hate, it is no people. They that syt vnder f mountayn of Samaria, the wholy synners, and the loo lythe people that dwell in Sichym.

I Iesus the sonne of Symach Eleazarus, of Ierusalem, haue tokened vp these informacions and documentes of wisdom & vnderstandyng in this booke, and poured out the wysdome of my herte. Blessed is he that extrecteth hym selfe therein: and who so taketh such to herte shalbe wys for ever. If he doo these thynges he shalbe stronge in all. For the lyghte of the Loyde leadeh hym.

Chapter.

A prayer of Iesus the sonne of Symach.

I will thanke the O Lord and hyng and prayse the, O God, my sauour I will yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper and hast preserued my bodie from destruction, from the snare of trapperous tounge, and from the lippes that are occupied with lyen. Thou haste bene my helper, from suche as stood vp against me, and hast deliuered me after the multitude of thy mercye, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast deliuered me from f roaring of them that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of the handes of such as sought after my lyfe: from the multitude of them that troubled me and went about to sette fyre vpon me on euery syde, so that I am not brente in the myddes of the fyre: from the depe of hell, from an vnclene tonge, from lyng wordes, from f wyched hyng, and from an vnryghteous tong. My soule shall prayse the Loyde vnto death, for my lyfe he reue myghte vnto hell downeward.

I They compassed me rounde about on euery syde, and there was no man to helpe me. I looked aboute me, yf there were any man f wolde socour me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercye, O Lord, and vpon thyn actes that thou haste done euery of olde: namely, f thou deliuerest suche as put theyr trust in the, and riddest them out of the handes of the heathen. Thus lyfte I vp my prayer from the earth and prayed for deliuerance from death. I called vpon the Loyde the father of my Loyde, that he wold not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, and in the tyme of the psonde: I will prayse thy name conynualy, yeldyng honoure and thanke vnto it: and so my prayer was heard. Thou saudest me from destruction and deliueredest me from f vnryghteous tyme. Therefore, will I acknowledge and prayse the, and magnifye the name of the Loyde.

C When I was yet but yonge, or euery I went astraye, I besyde wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the temple, & sought her vnto the laste. Then layd she vnto me as a grape that is some tyme. My herte reioyced in her, then went my foot to the ryghter way: yet fram ponth she vp, soughte I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receyued her. I found me muche wysdome: and woldered greatly in her. Therefore will I ascribe the glayre vnto hym that graeth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do the.

do thereafter. I wil be gelous to cleare vnto þe thing that is good, so that I not be confounded. My soule hath wept with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupied in her. I lift myne handes on hye, the was my soule lyghened the row wyse dome, that I knowlaged my fooly thynge. I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one herte from the begynning, and I found her in clenness. And therfore that I not be forsaken

D My hert longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Therfore her the Lord hath geuen me a newe song, wherewith I wil praise hym. O come vnto me þe velle arned & dwell in þe house of wyse dome: withdrowe not your selues from her, but tolke and comune of these thynges, for your soules are very thyrstye. I opened my mouth and spake: O come & by wyse dome with out any monye, bowe downe your necke vnder her poke, and your soule shall receiue wyse dome. He is hard at hand, and is content to be found. Behold with your eyes, how that I haue had but lytle labour, & yet haue found muche rest. O receiue wyse dome, and ye shal haue plenteousnes of siluer & gold in possession. Let your mind reioyce in his mercy, and be not ashamed of his praise. Wote he his worke by thynges, and he shal geue you your reward in due season.

E The ende of the booke of Iesus the sonne of Ierach: which is called in Latyne, Ecclesiasticus.

The booke of the prophet Baruch.

The fyrste Chapter.

Baruch wrote a booke during the captivity of Babylon, which he sent before Jeronias to all the people. The Jewes sent the booke much money into Jerusalem, so they might be kept: so the king sent that they should pray for them.

Ad these are the wordes of the booke, which were wyrtten by Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasias, & sonne of Sedechias, & sonne of Belchias, at Babylon, in the fiftie yere, and in the vii. day of the moneth, what tyme as the Chaldees tooke Jerusalem, and byente it vpon hye. And Baruch dyd reade the wordes of this booke, & Jeronias the sonne of Joachin kyng of Iuda myght heare: & in the presence of all the people that were come to heare the booke: yea, and before all the noble kynges sonnes, before the Lordes of the council and elders: and before the hole people, from the lowest vnto the hiest: before al them that dwelt at Babylon by the wat. r of Shodp. Whiche when they herd it, wepte, fasted, & praid before þe Lord.

B They made a collection also of money, accordyng to euery mans poure, and sente it to Jerusalem vnto Joachin the sonne of Belchias the sonne of Malon priest, with the other priests and to all the people whiche were with hym at Jerusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornaments of the temple of the Lord: & were taken a way out of Ierusalem: that they myght bying them agayne into the lande of Iuda. the tenth daye of the moneth Syban: namely, syver vessels (which Sedechias the sonne of Joachin kyng of Iuda had made) after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had taken Jeronias, & all his wynges, lordes, & all the people, & led them captiue from Ierusalem vnto Babilon.

And they sayde: Beholde, we haue sent you money, to buy you burnt offeringes & incense withall: make you vniuened breade, and offere for synne vpon the altare of the Lord our God.

And pray for the prosperite of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, & for the welfare of Balthazar his sonne: that they daies may be vpon earth, as the daies of heauen: & God also maye geue vs strength & lighen our eyes, & we maye lyue vnder the defence of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, & vnder the protection of Balthazar his sonne: & we may longe do them seruice, and fynd sauour in their syght. Pray for vs also vnto the Lord our God, for we haue synned against the Lord our God: vnto this day, is not his wrath turned yet a waye from vs. And se that ye rede this booke (whiche we haue sent to you to be reded in the temple of þe Lord) vpon the hye daies, and at tyme conuenient.

Thus shall ye saye. The Lord oure God is ryghteous, but we are woorthy of confusyon, and shame: lyke as it is come to passe this daye vnto all Iuda, and to euery one that dwelleth at Jerusalem: to our kynges, wynges, priestes, prophetes, and our fathers. We haue synned before the Lord our God, we haue not put our trust in hym, nor geuen hym credence, we haue not obeyed him, we haue not harkened vnto the voice of þe Lord our God, to walke in þe commandementes that he gaue vs. Whys þe day that he brought our forefathers out of þe land of Egypt vnto this present day we haue bene ever a mulbe leuing & an vnfaithfull people vnto the Lord our God: destroyng our selues vnterly, & synnyng backe, & we shuld not heare his voyce.

Wherfore, there are come vpon vs greate plagues and dyuers curtes. Lyke as the Lord demed by Moyses his seruante: which brought our fathers oute of the lande of Egypt, to geue vs a lande that floweth with mylke & honye, lyke as it is to se this daye. Neuerthelesse, we haue not harkened vnto þe voice of þe Lord our God, accordyng to all the wordes of the prophetes, whome he sent vnto vs: & to our rulers: but euery man folowed his owne mynde & wicked ymaginacion: to offer vnto straunge gods & to do euell in the syght of the Lord our God.

The ii. Chapter.

The Jewes confesse that they suffer justly for their synnes. The king confesse that they have synned. The Jewes desire to have the mercy of God turned from them. The Lord sayeth that he shal be mercifull vnto them, though they be euill. The Jewes pray that he shal call agayne the people from captiue, and geue them a newe and an amending testament.

The booke.

EOR the which & cause the Lozde oure God hath perfourmed his deuyce whereof he certified vs, and oure head: what ruled in Ierusalaim, and our kynges, our pynces with all Israel & Iuda. And such plagues hath the Lozde brought vpon vs, as neuer came to passe vnder the heauen, lyke as it is fulfilled in Ierusalem, & accordyng as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses: that a man shoulde eate the fleshe of his owne sonne, & the fleshe of his owne doughter. Whereouer, he hath deliuered them into the handes of all the kynges, & are rounde about vs (to be confounded & desolate) and sca-tered them abrode in al landes & nations. Thus are we brought beneth and not aboue, because we haue synned against the Lozde our God, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce. * Therfore the Lozde our God is ryghteous, and we with oure fathers (as reason is) are brought to open shame, as it is to se this daye. And as for these plagues that are come vpon vs already, the Lozde hath deuyced them for vs: yet wolde we not praise vnto the Lozde our God: & we myght turne euery man from his vngodly waies. So the Lozde hath caused such plagues to come vpon vs: for he is ryghteous in all his wordes, whiche he hath commaunded vs: whiche we also haue not done, nor hardened vnto his voyce: for to walke in the commaundementes of the Lozde that he hath geuen vnto vs.

and serue the kyng of Babylon, so shall pre-fathers. * If ye wyl not do this, nor heare the voyce of the Lozde your God, to se: ne the kyng of Babylon: I will destroye you in the cytyes of Iuda: within Ierusalem & wythoute, I wyl also take you from the voyce of mythe, and the voyce of ioye, the voyce of the hydegrome and the voyce of the hyde, & there shal no man dwel more in the lande. But they wolde no hearken vnto thy voyce, to do the kyng of Babylon ser-uyce: & therefore hast thou perfourmed the wodes that thou spakest by thy seruantes the prophetes: namelye, that the bones of oure kynges and the bones of oure fathers shoulde be translated out of theyr places. And lo, now are they layed out in the heat of the sunne, & in the cold of the nyght, & dred in great misery, with hunger, with sword with pestilence, & are cleane cast forth. As for the temple wherein thy name was called vpon, thou hast laide it waste, as it is to se this daye: & that for the wyckednes of y house of Israel, & y house of Iuda. O Lozde our God, thou hast incited vs after all thy goodnes, & according to al that great louyng mercy of thyne, lyke as thou spakest by thy seruant ayolers, in the day when thou didest comande him, to writ thy lawe before the chyldren of Israel, sayng: * If ye wyl not hearken vnto my voyce, then shall this grete multitude be turned into a verye small people, for I wyl scatter them abrode. Notwithstandyng, I am sure y this folke wyl not heare me: for it is an harde-necked people, but in the lande of their captiuite, they shall remember them selues, and learne to know, that I am the Lozde their God, wher I geue them an herte to vnderstand, and cares to beare. Then shall they praise me in the lande of their captiuyte: and thynke vpon my name.

Then shall they turne them from theyr harde backes, and from theyr vngodlyncle. Then shal they remember the thynges, that happened vnto they: for fathers, which synned agaynst me. So I wyl hyng them agayne into the lade whiche I promysed with an oth vnto they: fathers: Abraham, Isahar, & Jacob, & they shall be lozdes of it: yee. I wil increase them, and not mynyche them. * And I wyl make another couername with them: such one as shal endure foreuer, namely, that I wyl be theyr God, & they shalbe my people: and I wyl nomore dyspue my people the chyldren of Israhell, oute of the lande that I haue geuen them.

Loide Almyghthe, thou God of Israel.

Hear now the prayer of the deere Israelites and of the children, which have sinned before the, and not hardened unto the voice of thy Loide thy God, for the which cause these plagues hang now upon vs: O Loide, remember not the wickednes of our forefathers, but thynke vpon thy power and name now at this tyme: for thou art the Loide our God: & the (O Loide) wyl we prayse. * For thou hast put thy feare in our hartes, to the intent that we shoulde call vpon thy name, and prayse the in our captivity: and that we myght turne from the wickednesse of our forefathers, & synned before the.

B Scholde, we are yet this daye in our captivity, where as thou hast scattered vs, to be an abhominacyon, curse, and syn: * lyke as it hath happened vnto our forefathers also, because of the: wickednesse, and departing from the.

O Israel, heare the commandementes of lyfe: ponder them wel with thynne eares, that I mayst learne wysdome. But how happeneth it Israel, that thou art in thynne enemies lande thou arte wazen olde in a strange countrey, & despyled wyth the deade. Why art thou become lyke them, & goo downe to theyr graues: Euen because thou hast forsaken the wel of wisdom: For if thou haddest walkyd in the way of God frulpe, thou shouldest haue remained styll safe in thynne owne land. * I learne then where discrecyon is, where vertue is, where vnderstanding is, that I mayst knowe also from whence cometh longe lyfe, a necessary luyng, the lychte of the eyes, & quietnes. Who euer found out her place: & who euer came into her treasures.

C Where are the wysnes of the heathen become, & such as ruled the heathen vpon the earth: They that had theyr passyng wyth the foules of the ayre, that boorded vpon siluer & gold: where in men trust so much: & made no ende of theyr gathering: What is become of them & copned syluer, and were so carefull, & could not byng theyr wothes to passe: They be rodd out, and gone downe to hell, and other men are come vp in their steades. Yong men haue sene lycht, and dwelte vpon earth: but the waye of refoymacyon haue they not knowen, nor vnderstande the pathes therof: neether haue they children receyued it: yea, righte farre is it from them. It hath not bene heard of in the lande of Canaan, neether hath it ben sene at Cheman.

D The Agarenes soughte after wysdome, but that which is earthly, lyke as the marchauntes of the lande do. They of Cheman are conyng also, and they laboure for wysdome and vnderstanding: but the way of true wysdome they knowe not: neether do they thynke vpon the pathes therof. O Israel howe greate is the house of God: and how large is the place of his possession: * Great is he & hath no ende: per, & vnderstande. What is become of those famous Spanyes, that were so great of bodies, and so docthyr men of warre: Those had not thy Loide cholen, neether haue they founde the waye of refoymacyon, therfore wer they deltroied, and for so muche as they had no wysdome, they perished because of theyr foolyshenes.

Who hath gone vp into heauen, to take wyf & dome there and broughte her downe from the cloudes: Who hath gone ouer the sea, to synde her, & hath cholen her aboue gold, & so broughte her hither: A man knoweth the waies of wysdome, neither is there any that can seke out her pathes. But he that woteth al thinge, & knoweth her, and he hath founde her oute with his sojkenowlage. * This same is he which prepared the earth at the begynnyng, and fylled it with all manner of foules and beastes. * When he sendeth out the lycht, it goeth: and when he calleth it again, it obeyeth hym with feare.

The starres kepe theyr watche, and geue theyr lycht: yea & that gladly. When he calleth them they saye: here we be. And so with cheerefulnes they shewe lycht vnto hym that made them.

* This is oure God and there shall none other be compared vnto hym. It is he that hath founde oute all wysdome, and hath geuen her vnto Jacob his seruante, and to Israel his beloued. * Afterwarde byd he shewe hym selfe vpon earth, and dwelle among men.

The iiii. Chapter.

The reward of those that hope the lawe, & the punishment of them that despise it. A comfortyng of the people being in captivity. A complaint of Jerusalem & vnto the synners of the church. A consolacyon & comfortyng of the same.

In this is the booke of the commandementes of God, and the lawe that endureth for euer. Al they that kepe it shal come to lyfe: but suche as forsake it, shal come to deathe. Turne the, O Jacob, take holde of it: walke by thy waye: thow shalt see his byghnes and thynne. Gene not thynne honoure to another, and thy wyf, thynne to a strange people. O Israel, howe happyr art we, seing that God hath shewed vs suche thynges as are pleasant vnto hym: Be of good cheere, thou people of God, O thou auntyent Israel. * Nowe are ye solde among the heathen, howbeit, not for your better destruction: but because ye prouoked God the Loide to wrath and dyspleasure, therfore were ye deliuered vnto your enemyes: for ye displeased the euerlastyng God that made you offeryng vnto deuyls & not to God. Ye haue forgotten hym that broughte you vp, and your nurse haue ye greued, O Israel.

When he sawe that the wrath of God was conyng vpon you, he layde her hen. O ye & dwell abouts vpon, for God hath broughte me into great heynesse, and whyr I se the captivity of my people, of my sonnes & daughters, which the euerlastyng God wyl byng vpon them. With hope byd I noyde them, but nowe must I leaue them with wepyng & sorrow.

Let noman reioyce ouer me wyddowe, and forsaken: which for the synnes of my children am desolate of every manne. For whyr they departed frome the lawe of God: they woulde not knowe his righteounesse, nor walke in the way of his commandementes: & as for the pathes of strength & godlynes, they had no last to go in the

The booke.

C Ope dwellers aboute Syon, come, and let vs call to remembraunce the captiuitie, that I euerlastyng God hath broughe vpon my sonnes and my daughters. * He hath broughe a people vpon them from farre, an vncircumsised people and of a straunge language which they regard the olde, nor yette the yonge.

These haue carryed awaye the dere beloued of my wyddowes, leaueing me alone, both desolate and chydlesse. But alas what can I helpe you? Nowe he that hath broughe these plagis vpon you, deliuer you also from the handes of your enemies.

Go your way (O my chyldren) go your way for I am desolate & forsaken. * I haue put of I clothynge of peace, and put vpon me the sackcloth of prayer, & for my tyme I wyll cal vpon the most hyeste. Be of good chere: O my chyldren, crye vnto the Lorde, and he shall deliuer you from the power of I princes, your enemies.

For verely, I haue euer a good hope of your prosperous helth: yea, a very gladnesse is come vpon me from the holy one, because of I mercie that ye shal haue of our euerlastyng louour.

D With mouening and weping dyd I let you go from me, but with ioye & perpetual gladnesse shal the Lorde bring you again vnto me. Like as the neighbours of Sion sawe your captiuitie from God, Euen so shal they also se howe they your helth in God, whiche shal come in you w great honoure and euerlastyng worship.

O my chyldren, * suffer patiently I wrath that shal come vpon you. For the enemye hath persecuted the, but howe they shal se his de struccyon, and shalte treade vpon his necke.

My darlynges haue gone rougher harde wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is scattered abrode with the enemies. But be of good comforte (O my chyldren,) and crye vnto the Lorde: For he that led you away, hath you yet in remembraunce: & lyke as ye haue been mynded to swarne from your God: so shal ye now endemour youre selues ten tymes more, to turne again and to seke hym. For he I hath broughe these plagis vpon you shal bring you euerlastyng ioye again, with your helth. Take a good bert vnto the O Ierusalem: for he whiche gaue I the that name, exhorteth the so to do.

Jm. l. a. f. 4. * The wyched doores that now put the to trouble shal perper, and suche as haue reioysed at thy fall, shalbe punished. The cytys whome thy chyldren seue, and that haue carryed away thy sonnes, shalbe correct. For lyke as they be now glad of thy decay (& reioyce at thy fall) so shal they mourne in their owne destruccyon. The ioye of they: multitude shalbe taken away, and they: chere shalbe turned to sorrowe. For a fyre shal fall vpon them from the euerlastyng God longe to endure: and it shalbe inshyperd of deuils for a grent season.

The .v. Chapter.

A Ierusalem is now in the hands of the king of the Babylonians, and the king of the Babylonians is now in the hands of the king of the Babylonians.

Jerusalem, loke aboute the tow- ward the East, and beholde the ioye that cometh vnto the fro God. For lo, thy sonnes whome thou hast forsaken, & that were scattered abrode, come gathered together, from the east and west, reioysing in the word of I holy one, vnto I honoure of God.

Put of thy mournynge clothes (O Ierusalem) and thy sorrowe, & decke the with the worshippe and honoure, that cometh vnto the from God, with euerlastyng gloire. God shal put the garmente of righteounesse vpon the, and sette a crowne of euerlastyng worshippe vpon thine heade, for vpon the wyl God declare his hyghenes, & is vnder the heauen. Per, an euerlastyng name shalbe geuen the of God, w peace of righteounesse, & the honoure of Gods feare.

25 Arise, O Ierusalem, stand vp an hye: loke a bout the toward the East: & beholde thy chyldren gathered from the East, vnto the west which reioyse in thy holy woide, hauing God in remembraunce. They departed from the on foot, and were led away of their enemies: but nowe shal the Lorde bring them carryed w honoure as chyldren of the kingdome. For God is purposed to bring downe all stoute mountaynes: yee and all hye rockes, to fyll the valleyes, & so to make them euen with the grounde: that I Israel maye be dilygente to lyue vnto the honoure of God.

The woodes and all pleasaunt trees shal ouer shadowe I Israel, at the comaundement of God. For herder shal God bring I Israel w ioyfull mirth, and in the light of his mayesty: w the mercie and righteounesse that cometh of hym selfe.

The .vi. Chapter.

A copy of the ppele that Ieremy sent vnto the Iewes, which were taken away prisoners by the king of Babylon: wherein he settesth them of the thyng that was comaunded hym of God.

Because of the synnes, that ye haue I doone agaynst God, ye shalbe ledde awaye captiue vnto Babylon, euen of Nabuchodonosor, the kyng of Babylon. So when ye be come into Babylon, ye shal remayne there manye yeres, and for a longe season: namely seven generacions, and after that wyl I bring you awaye peaceably from thence. Nowe shal ye se in Babylon goddes of golde, of syluer, of woode, and of ston, bozne vpon mens shulders, to caste oute a fearfulness before the heathen. But looke that ye do not as the other: be not ye a frayde, & let not the feare of them overcome you.

Therefore when ye see the multitude of people worshippyng them beynde and beside, say ye in your hertes: O Lorde, * it is thou I oughtest onely to be worshipped. Wyne anngell also shalbe wyth you, and I my selfe wyl care for your soules. As for the symber of those goddes, the carpeniter hath polished them: yea, gilted be they, and layde ouer with syluer: yet are they but vaine thynges, and cannot speake. Lyke as a wench I loneth paramours in synfully dect, euen so are these made and hangid with golde. & rounes of gold verely haue their God des goddess upon their heads: so the priestes them selues take gold and syluer from them: and put it to theyr owne vses: yea, they geue of þe same vnto harlottes, and trimme theyr whores with al: againe, they take it from their whores, and decke theyr gods there with. * Yet cannot these gods deliuer them selues from rust and mothes i: when they haue couered them with clothyng of purple, they wyppen theyr faces for the dust of the temple, wherof there is much among them.

One hath a scepter in his hande as though he were Judge of the countrey: yet can he not slay suche as offende hym. Another hath a swerde or an axe in hym hande, for all that he is neyther hable to defende him selfe from battayle, nor fro murderers. By this ye maye vnderstand, that they be no gods: therfore se that ye neyther woꝝ shyp them, nor feare them. For lyke as a vessel that a man vsyth, is nothyng woꝝth when it is broken, euen so is it with their gods. Whil they be set vp in the temple, theyr eyes be full of dust thowse the fete of those þe come in. And lyke as the doores are shut in rounde aboute vpon him that hath offended the kynge: so as it were a dead bodye kepte besyde the graue. Euen so the priestres kepe the doores with barres and lockes least theyr gods be spoiled with robbers. They set vp candels before them (yea, verely and that manye) wherof they cannot se one but euen as blockes, so stande they in the temple. It is sayd that the serpentis and wyrmes, whych come of the earth, knowe out theyr hertes, eatynge the and their clothes also, and yet they feele it not.
Theyr faces are black thowse the smoke that is in the temple. The oules, swallows and byr-des, fly vpon them, yea, & the cattes runne ouer their heades. By this ye maye be sure, that they are not gods, therfore feare them not. The gold that they haue, is to make them be wyfull: for all that, excepte some bodye byght of theyr rust they wyll geue no thynge: & when they were cast into a founne, they felt it not. They are bought to money and haue no byeth of life with in them.
* They muste be hozne vpon mens shulders, as those þe haue no fete: wherby they declare vnto men, that they be nothyng woꝝth. * Confoũ-ded be they then that woꝝshyp them, for yf they fall to the grounde, they cannot rylle vp againe of them selues. Yea though one helpe them vp & set them ryghte, yet are they not able to stande alone: but must haue pꝛoppes set vnder the like dead men. As for the thynge that is offred vnto them, theyr priestres sell it, and abuse it: yea, the priestres wyues take therof: but vnto the sicke and poore, they geue nothyng of it: the women with childe, and the menstruous lape handes of theyr offerynge. By this ye maye be sure that they are no gods, therfore be not ye assayde of them. Frome whence cometh it then, that they are called gods? The women sit before the god-des of syluer, golde, & woode, & the priestres sit in their temples, hauing open clothes, whose hebes & berdes are shauen & haue nothyng vpo their heades: rooyng, and crynge vpon theyr gods as men do at the fraile when one is deade.

The priestes also take awaye the garmentes of the ymages and decke theyr wyues and chyldren withall. Whether it be good or euell that any man do vnto the, they are not able to recõpense it: they can neyther sette vp a kynge nor put hym downe. In lyke maner they may neyther geue ryches, nor rewarde euell. * Though a man make a vowe vnto the and kepe it not, they wyll not requyre it. They can saue no man frome deathe, neyther deliuer the wreake frome the myghtye. They can not restore a blynde mā to hym syghte, nor helpe anye man at hym nede.
They can geue no iudycy to the wyddowe, nor do good to the fatherlesse. Theyr goddesses of woode, stone, golde, and syluer, are but euen as other stones, that be betorn of the mountayne.
They that woꝝshyp them, shalbe confounded.
Howe shulde they than be taken for goddesses?
Yea, howe dare men call them goddesses? And though the Caldees woꝝshypp them not, hearing þe they were but dōme & coulde not speake: Yet they the selues offe vnto Bell, and wolde sayne haue hym to speake: as who saye, they coulde fele, that may not moue. But when these men come to vnderstandynge, they shal forsake the, for their goddesses haue no helyng. A grete sorte of wemen gyde with coardes, sette in the streets, & burne olue beries. Howe yf one of the be chyned awaye, & lye v anye such as come by: he casteth her neyghbours in the teth, because she was not so woꝝthely reputed, nor her coard broke. What forer is done for the, it is but in vayne and lost. Howe maye it then be sayde or thought, þe they are goddesses? Carpenteris & gold smithes make them, neyther be they anye other thynge but euen what the woꝝkeman wyll make of them. Yea, the goldsmithes them sel-ues that make them, are of no longe contyn-uance. Howe shulde then the thynge that are made of them, be goddesses? Clapne therfore are the thynge (yea, verely same is it) that they leane behynde them for theyr pꝛosperitie. For as soone as there cometh any warre or plage vpon them, then the priestes ymagine, wher they maye hyde them selues wyth them. Howe can men thynke then, þe they be goddesses, whiche neyther may defende them selues frome warre, nor deliuer them frome misfortune? For seynge they be but of woode, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people and kynge shal knowe hereafter that they be but vayne thynge: yea, it shalbe openly declared, that they be no goddesses: but euen the very woꝝkes of mens handes, and that God hath nothyng to do with them. (It is manifeste then that they are no goddesses, but the woꝝkes of mens handes, and no woꝝke of God in them.) They can set no kynge in the lande, nor geue raine vnto men. They can geue no sentence of a matter, neyther defende the land frome wyonge. For they are not able to do so moche as a crowe, that flyeth betwixt heauen and earth.

When there happeneth a fyre into the house of those goddesses of woode, and syluer, and of golde, the priestes wyll escape and saue them

selues, but the goddes burne as the barked they in. They cannot withstande any kynge as bat- tell: howe may it then be thoughte as graunted, that they be goddes? Wojsouer these goddes of woode, of stone, of golde, and syluer may ne- ther defende them selues frome theues nor rob- bers: yee, the very wyched are stronger the they. These strype them oute of they apparell, that they be clothed withall, these take they golde & syluer from them, and so get the away: yet ca they not helpe them selues. Therefore it is moche better for a man, to be a kynge, and so to haue his power: as is a profitable vessel in a house, wherein be that ower the it, myghte haue plea- sure: yet, as to be a doze in a house, so hepe such thynges safe as be therein, the to be such a wayn god. The sunne, the moone, & all the staries, leynge they geue they: theyne and lyghte, are ob- dyent, and do men good. Whan the lyghte- nyng glistereth, all his cleare. The winde blo- weth in euery countre: and whan God comma- deth the cloude to go rounde aboute the whole worlde, they do as they are bydden, whan the fyre is sent downe from aboue & commaunded, it burneth up hylles and woddies. But as for those goddes, they are not like one of these thynges, neyther in be wyche, neyther strength. Alde- rase, men shoulde not thynke nor saye that they be goddes, sayng they can neither geue sentence in iudgemente, nor do men good. For so muche nowe as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare the not. For they can neyther speake euell nor good for kynges. They can the we no tokens in heauen for the heathen, neyther theyne as the sunne, nor geue lyghte as the moone: yee, the vnrasonable beastes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the rose, and do them selues good. So can ye be certified by no maner of meanes, that they be goddes: ther- fore feare them not. For lyke as a scarowe in a garden of herbes kepeth nothyng, euen so are they: goddes of wodge, of syluer and golde: and lyke as a white thorne in an orchard, that euery byrde sytteth vpon: yee, lyke as a dead bodie that is cast in the darthe: Euen so is it with those goddes of wodge, syluer and golde. By the purple and scarlet wyche they haue vpon them, and soone saydeth away: ye maye vnderstande, that they be no goddes: yee, they them selues shalbe consumed at the laste, wyche shalbe a great confusyon of the lande. Blessed is the godlye man, that hath no yma- ges, and worshipp- perh none, for he shalbe saue from trespasse.

chyldren, whiche were put into the hote bren- nyng ouen. The comen translatyon tradeth this songe in the thre Chapter of Daniel.

As they walked in the midst of the flame prayng God and magnyfied the Lozde. A- saras stode up, and prayde on this maner. Euen in the myd- dell of the fyre opened he his mouth & sayde: Blessed be thou

(O Lozde God of our fathers) ryght woorthy to be praysed and honoured in þe name of thine for euermore: for thou arte righteous in al the thynges that thou hast done vnto vs, Pre, sayd full are all thy woiches, thy wayes are ryght, & all thy iudgements true. In al þe thynges that thou hast by- gyfte vpon vs, and vpon the holy cytle of oure fathers (euen Jerusalem) thou hast ex- cuted true Iudgement: yee, accordyng to ryght and equite hast thou byoughte al these thynges vpon vs because of oure synnes.

For why we haue offended and done wy- chedye, departyng frome the: In all thynges haue we trespassed, and not obeyed thy comma- dementes, nor kept them, neither done as thou hast bydden vs, & we myght prosper. Alde- rase, for all that thou hast broughte vpon vs, and euery thyng that thou hast done to vs, thou hast done them in true Iudgement: As in deliuer- ing vs into the handes of oure enemyes, among vs godlye and wyched ymagynacions, and to an vnyghteous kynge, yee, the mooste frowarde vpon earth. And nowe we maye not open oure mouthes, we are become a shame & reproche vnto thy seruantes, and to them that worshippe the. Yet for thy names sake (we beseeche) geue vs not up for euer, breake not thy couenant, & take not away thy mercy from vs, for thy be- loued Abraham sake, for thy seruante Isaac sake, and for thy holy Israels sake. To whom thou hast spoken and promysed that thou woldest multiply their seed as the sterres of heauen & as the sande & lieth vpon the see shoore. For we (O Lozde) are become lesse then any people, & be kept vnder this dape in all the worlde because of oure synnes: So that now we haue neither prin- ce, prophet, burnt offering, sacrifices, oblation, incense, nor Sanctuary before the.

Remember the, in a contrarye herse & an hum- ble sytete, let vs be receaued, that we maye ob- tayne thy mercy. Like as in the burnt offering of Hammes & bulloches, & lyke as in thousan- des of fat lambes so let our offerings be in thy syght this day, that it may please the, & for ther is no confusyon vnto them that put there trust in the. And nowe we folowe the wyth all our heart, we feare the & like thy face. But vs not to shame, but deale with vs after thy louyng kind- nes, and accordyng to the multitude of thy mer- cies. Deliuere vs by thy myracles (O Lozde) & get thy name an honoure, that all they whiche do thy seruantes & euell maye be confounded.

The story of Susanna

lon cometh from the elders (that is) from the judges, which seme to rule & people. These cam oft to Joachims house, and all such as had any thing to do in & law came thither vnto them.

S Now when the people came againe at after none, Susanna went into her bussharden orchard, to walke. The elders seynge this that she went in dayly, and walked, they burned for lust to her: yet, they were almost out of their wittes and cast downe their eyes, that they shoulde not se heauen, nor remember that God is a righteous iudge. For they were booth wounded with & loue of her, neither durst one shewe another his greife. And for shame, they durst not tel her their inordinate lust, that they woulde faine haue to do with her. Yet they laied wayt for her earnestly from day to day, that they might (at the last) haue a sight of her. And yone saied to the other: Alas, let vs go home, for it is dinner time. So they went their way from her.

When they returned againe, they came together, enquiring out the matter betwixte them selues: yee, the one tolde the other of his wicked lust. Then appointed they a time when they might take Susanna alone.

C It happened also that they spied out a convenient time, whē she went forth to walke (as her manner was) and nobody with her, but ii. maydens, and thought to walke her self in the garden, for it was an hoer season: And ther was not one parson ther, except the two elders that had bid them selues to beholde her. So they laied to her maidens: go fet me oyle and soope, and shut y orchard doze, that I may walke me. And they bid as they had them, and shut the orchard doze and went out them selues at a back doze, to fet the thyng that they had commaunded: but Susanna knew not, that the elders lay there hyd with in. Now when the maidens wer gone forth, the two elders gat them vp and came vpon her, sayyng: now to the orchard dozes at thus, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therfore consent vnto vs, and lye with vs.

P If thou wilt not, we will bypnyng a testimony all against the, that ther was a yong feloe with the, and that thou hast sent a way thy maidens from the for the same cause. Susanna sigded, & saied: Alas, I am in trouble on euery side. I thought I foloe your mynde, it will be my death, and yf I consent not vnto you, I cannot escape your handes. Well, it is better for me, to fall into your handes without the dedde doyng then to synne in the sight of the Lord: and with that, she cried out with a loud voyce: the elders also cried out against her.

Then came ther one to the orchard doze and smote it open. Now when the seruantes of the house heard the cry in the orchard they rushed in at the backe doze, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruantes wer greatly ashamed, for why: ther was neuer such a report made of Susanna. On & morow after, came the people to Joachims her bussharden, and the two elders came also, full of impious pynagration agaynst Susanna, to byng her vnto death, and spake thus before the people: Send for Susanna the daughter of helchias Joachims wife. And immediately they let for her. So she came with her father and mother, her chyldren and all her kynred. Now Susanna was a tender perfit and marvelous saype of face. Therfore the wicked men commaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered) that at the last they myghte so be satisfied in her bewtie. Then her frendes: yee, and all they that knewe her, began to wepe.

These two elders stood vp in the myddest of the people, & and laied their handes vpon Susanna, which wept and loked vp toward heauē for her hert had a sure trust in the Lord. And the elders saied: As we wer talkyng in the orchard alone this woman came in with her two maidens whome she sent awayne from her, and spured the orchard dozes: with that a yong feloe (whiche there was hid) came vnto her; and lay with her. As for vs, we stode in a corner in the orchard. And when we saw this wickednes, we came to her: and perceiued that they had medled together. But we coude not holde him, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened the doze and gat him awayne.

Nowe when we had taken this woman, we asked her what younge feloe this was: but she woulde not tell vs. This is the matter, and we be witnesses of the same. The comen sort beleued them: as those that were the elders and iudges of the people, and so they condemned her to deathe. Susanna cried oute with a loude voyce and saied: O euerglasing God, & thou searcher of secrettes, thou that knowest all thynges afore they come to passe: thou wotest, that they haue doyne false wytnesse agaynst me, and behold, I muste dye, where as I neuer dyd suche thynges as these men haue maliciously inueterd agaynst me. And the Lord heard her voyce. For when she was led forth to deathe, the Lord raised vp the spyrte of a younge chyld, whose name was Daniel, which cried with a loude voyce: I am cleane from this bloude. Then all the people turned them toward hym, and saied: What meane these wordes, that thou hast spoken? Daniel stood in the myddest of them and saied: Are ye such fooles, O ye chyldren of Israel, that ye can not discern nor knowe the truth? Ye haue here condemned a daughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the truth: wherfore, go sit on iudgement again, for they haue spokē false wytnes agaynst her.
